The Society, in presenting this brochure to the Meeting, directed the attention of the Meeting to an error which the General Committee of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Madras has fallen into similar to the one lately made by the Bombay Agricultural Society. The Madras Society consider that the Agricultural Society of India receives an annual donation from the Government of 2,675 a year, whereas it only receives 1000 rupees.

6. A Pamphlet on the cultivation of Flax in India Presented by Alexander Rogers, Esq.

MUSEUM AND NURSERY.

1. A specimen of Cotton grown in the Mymensing District, presented by Mr. Hudson, Deputy Collector.

Note.—Mr. Hudson, in a note to Dr. Spry, mentions that the sample now submitted was the one he originally designed for the Museum and not the former sample, condemned by the Society as bad, which was nothing more than the padding of his elephant gaddes and sent by the mistake of his servant. The Cotton now submitted is short in staple but a useful Cotton.

2. A few Bontan Walnuts, the produce of Aleutitis triloba, Presented by Lieutenant James Wemyss.

3. A specimen of Brown Muscovado Sugar, manufactured from Cane, grown in the Sonderbunds. Presented by Mr. A. G. Hurris.

4. Twenty-five bags of Brazil Cotton Seed; presented by Mr. C. J. Richards. Particular allusion was made to the value of this contribution of Mr. Richards, and Dr. Spry stated that he had already forwarded a quantity of it to Turhoot, Chittagong and Kishnaghur.

5. A small supply of acclimated Mauritius Black Bean, ("Pois noire") an excellent fodder for cattle; grown in the Society's Nursery.

6. A bunch of grapes, from a vine growing in the garden belonging to the Vicarage of the Roman Catholic Church at Moorgheshutta. Presented by Mr. Crow, on behalf of the Vicar.

7. A Squash, grown from American seed, in the garden of Mr. Win. Storm.

8. A specimen of Tobacco from Sandoway, and a quantity of Cashew Nuts from Hudgelee, presented by Dr. Spry.

9. A few Capsules of the Rock plant, (a species of Didymocarpus) presented by Captain William Barnett.

This elegant little flower is indigenous to the cold range of the Himalayas; during no season but the rains are then visible. Their cultivation, Captain Barnett writes, would repay any trouble to an enthusiastic person. This plant has been named by Dr. Wallich in his list of Nepal plants. The climate of Bengal is uncongenial to its growth.

This being the first Meeting after the completion of the different Reports by the Standing Committees on the different specimens of staple Agricultural produce submitted for the Society's Medals, the President called attention first to that of the Silk Committee.

The Committee in this Report state, having made a careful inspection of all the samples (twelve in number, submitted by six candidates) and selected what they deemed the best; they then broke the seals of the different letters which accompanied the parcels, and found that Mr. Rose, of Ramnaghur Factory, in the district of Moorshedabad, was the successful competitor for the gold medal, but the letter which accompanied the sample entering into few of the details which are required by the 4th Rule of the Conditions, the Committee did not feel themselves justified in recommending that an award should be made, and that whatever the nature of the sample of Silk sent in may be, that unless the quality of the soil in which the Mulberry trees grew, the precise mode of cultivation, manufacture and cost of production be given, so that the public may be instructed, the competitor ought not to be distinguished by the grant of a medal. From a like cause, coupled with the ordinary character of the other five competitors' samples, the Committee did not consider the specimens of a character to merit any medal from the Society. Of the five, and next to that of Mr. Rose, the Committee regarded the sample submitted by Mr. F. W. Campbell, residing at Commercally, as the best. Adverting to the very beautiful specimen of Silk submitted by Mr. Rose, who was awarded the Society's gold medal last year, and to whom the gold medal would be justly due, now for a second time, had he entered into more details, the President proposed, Colonel McLeod seconded, and it was resolved, "That Mr. Rose have the gold medal awarded to him, on his furnishing the requisite information to the satisfaction of the Silk Committee."

AWARD OF THE GOLD MEDAL OF THE SOCIETY TO MR. BALESTIER, AMERICAN CONSUL AT SINGAPORE, FOR THE BEST SAMPLE OF SUGAR.

But one specimen of Sugar had been sent in to compete for Society's Medals. This was from Mr. Balestier, the American Consul at Singapore, whence sugar for prizes by all the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, is now excluded, as the Straits at present possess an Agricultural Society of their own; but by a special resolution of the Meeting, held on the 12th September, 1853, Mr. Balestier was declared to be entitled to be a competitor for premia offered for the best samples of Sugar under existing conditions.

The Committee deem the sample submitted as a strong, grained, useful sugar, which would answer well for refining; and that it might be classified "as brown to good brown." Notwithstanding therefore only one sample was offered, the Committee recommended that the Society's Gold Medal should be presented to Mr. Balestier, as an encouragement to the manufacture of this useful Sugar.

Dr. Spry mentioned that the paper on the mode of preparation, and other details of a practical character, which accompanied this Sugar, was deemed of so much value by the Committee of Papers, that it had been printed in the volume of the Transactions which had just appeared.

NURSERY—FORTHCOMING DISTRIBUTION OF SUGAR CANES.

A report by the Nursery Committee next followed, wherein the Committee state that they had, during the previous month, visited the Society's Nursery at the Botanical Garden, and that in deference to the suggestion of several Members offered at the last Meeting the period of the annual distribution of canes, should commence on the 1st of October. Moreover, the Report mentions that the entire stock of the last year's growth had been distributed, amounting in number to no fewer than forty two thousand. That as a rule of guidance in future, every Member of the Society be permitted to claim 250 canes for his own use, and any number beyond that to be paid for at half an anna each.

The Committee allude particularly to the luxuriance of the Guinea Grass cultivation, and Mauritius black bean, and also allude to the healthy and promising condition of "Nopalera," with the late importation of Cacti with the Cochineal insect alive on them. The extent of nursery is increased by upwards of an acre since last year, and altogether amounts to six acres of land. Mr. Fergusson considered that Members so wishing, should be supplied with cases at an earlier period than the 1st October, and it was decided that power should be given to the Committee to distribute them earlier if practicable.

INTERCHANGE BETWEEN ASIA AND EUROPE OF THE TREES AND PLANTS, THE PRODUCE OF EACH OTHERS SOIL.

The above reports having been disposed of, the President stated, that he had much pleasure in calling the attention of the Society to a most important despatch from the Court of Directors, which he held in his hand, connected with the interests of the empire of British India, and it was one which it required should be read in full to the Meeting.

To H. H. Sney, Esq., M. D.

Secretary to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society:

Genl. Dept. } Sir.—I am directed to transmit to you the accompanying Copy of a letter No. 1, of 1839, from the Hon'ble the Court of Directors in the Public Department, dated the 13th February, and of its enclosures on the subject of the interchange of Vegetable productions of India and Europe, and to observe that the Seeds, and lists of Plants, referred to therein, have not reached this Presidency. On their arrival the necessary steps will be taken to give effect to the Court's Orders.

I am, your obedient Servant,

H. T. PRINSEP,

Secy. to the Govt. of India

Council Chamber, the 22d May, 1839.

PUBLIC DEPARTMENT, No. 1 OF 1839.

Our Governor General of India in Council,

Letter from General Department, dated 16th August, 1838.

Forwarding copy of Circular addressed to Officers in charge of Districts in or near the Himalayan range, relating to the collection of Plants for transmission Home; and calling attention to the interchange of the vegetable productions of India and Europe.

1. We are sensible of the importance of the subject to which, in the letter under reply, you have directed our attention, and we have resolved on gradually furnishing you with the means of carrying on extensively, experiments for naturalizing in India, useful and desirable plants indigenous in other Countries.

2. We have forwarded to the Government of Bombay, some varieties of Seeds (sixteen in number) with instructions to transmit them as rapidly as possible to the Superintendent of the Garden at Seharanpore. We shall continue, at the proper seasons, to send supplies of the other varieties, and it is our wish that the greatest care should be bestowed, with a view to their naturalization for the benefit of the Country. Our future supplies will consist of the Seeds of Plants of more rare and curious character—some of these now forwarded are however highly important, either as affording articles of food or as possessing medical virtues, and they will deserve all the attention that can be afforded to them.

3. We have also forwarded some Cotton seed from Naples, furnished by Dr. Royle, and which he thinks deserving of being made the subject of experiment.

4. With regard to the collection of seeds for transmission to this Country, we are of opinion that the expediency of bearing in mind the nature of the climate to which they are to be exposed, should be impressed upon those to whom the task is to be committed. Dr. Lindley, (copy of whose letter forms a number in the Packet) has pointed out a very good test of capacity to bear an English climate, in the occurrence or non-occurrence of the Deodar Cedar. His observations on the kinds of plants to which attention should principally be directed, appear to us especially valuable, and though we would not entirely prohibit the transmission of seeds of plants of a more delicate habit, it will be desirable that they should form a small proportion of those hereafter forwarded, and that they should be regarded as being of secondary importance.

5. In addition to the letter of Dr. Lindley, we enclose copy of two from Dr. Royle, which form a number in the Packet.

We are, &c.

PROFESSOR LINDLEY'S LETTER.

Horticultural Society of London, January 16, 1839.
J. W. MALVILL, Esq. &c. &c. &c.

SIR,—With reference to your letter of the 20th ult., and my acknowledgement of it of the 22d, I beg now to state that I have very carefully examined the seeds which have been received by the Honorable Court of Directors, by the overland conveyance from Bombay, and that I shall with pleasure undertake the duty of distributing them, provided the Court approve of the manner in which I propose to do it.

The collection in question consists of about fifty Packets of various sizes, containing seeds of plants inhabiting the hot plains of India: a part of these are species of no importance whatever, viz. Hiza, Ovella,^{*} Amaranthus, Santana,^{*} Gypsophila perfoliata, Stachytarpheta mutabilis; a few are Medicinal plants, viz. Butea frondosa, Cassia fistula, Cinchona excelsa, Mimosa Arabica, Suicetonia febrifuga, Stereulia urens, Mimosa Cateshu, and the remainder with the exception of a bag of seeds of the Teak, are hot-house plants of no known use, but some of which are objects of ornament, and all of which have, I believe, been long since introduced from India to the gardens of this country. The whole appear to be in good condition. The quantity of each kind of seed is generally small, and in some instances will not bear to be divided: in others there is sufficient for several persons. But as there is little in the collection sufficiently rare or curious to interest those private individuals who are cultivators of store plants for the sake of their beauty, it does not appear to me desirable to offer them to any except public botanical institutions. I would therefore advise the Honorable Court to direct the distribution to be made as follows.

The Seeds of Medicinal plants to the Garden of the Society of Apothecaries of Chelsea.

Duplicates of the foregoing, where any can be divided, and the remainder of the collection to be sent to the Botanic Gardens of Kew, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Cambridge and Oxford. After these institutions have been supplied, there will still remain a small quantity of several kinds. These might be useful in some of the British Colonies in the West Indies, and as a Society has lately been established in the Bermudas, for the express purpose of improving the resources of those Islands, it might be advisable to place them in the hands of Lieut. Colonel Reid of the Royal Engineers, who is now about to proceed to the Bermudas as Governor. In the event of a further surplus a small supply might be forwarded to the Bahamas, where the Government is also anxious to obtain the plants of other Countries.

It will be obvious from the statement already made, that no part of the present collection is of that degree of importance which could justify my recommending to the Hon'ble Court a further despatch of such seeds by the overland conveyance to this Country. It appears to me that the introduction of plants which are mere objects of curiosity, or only useful in distant Colonies should be left to the ordinary and private modes of communication, unless they are made a subject of special requisition. And as the species found in the tropical climates of India are all of this description, the general rule might be adopted of excluding all such plants from the overland despatch. There is no hope of their being naturalized or made in any way to conduce to public advantage in this Country, for they are without exception uncultivable except in hot-houses. It is the more desirable to limit the supplies of Seeds from India to those which come from the cold Provinces, because in those Districts there is a great abundance of species, the introduction of which is an object of national importance. The similarity of the climate of Great Britain and of many parts of the Himalayas is well known, and has been very particularly illustrated by Professor Royle, late Superintendent of the Hon'ble Company's Botanic Garden, Saharunpore, in his "Illustrations of the Botany of the Himalaya Mountains" and consequently it has always been expected, that the noble vegetation of the North of India, might be successfully transferred to this Country. That this opinion was well grounded has lately been proved by the effects of the severe winter, in 1837-8, when a large proportion of all the Himalayan trees and other plants now in this Country, exposed suddenly and under very unfavorable circumstances to a temperature of from $4\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ to $12\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ Fahr. resisted the intensity of the frost as well as our native species. The Deodar and other Himalayan Coniferous plants in particular, are evidently as hardy as the Larch and the Spruce Fir. I would therefore advise that the authorities in India be directed to confine themselves to the transmission by the overland despatch, of the ornamental and useful trees and other plants inhabiting the districts in which the climate resembles that of England.

It is difficult at this distance to define with any precision the limits of such districts, but perhaps a good, and certainly a very simple guide, may be found in the Coniferous tribe, of the habits of all which, we have sufficient information. The Deodar Cedar, is hardy, the Pinus longifolia not. It therefore might be directed that all those Districts in which the Deodar occurs, or which have a colder climate, should generally furnish the supplies to be forwarded by the overland conveyance, that the species belonging to the Pinus longifolia regions should be either excluded, or at least form a subordinate object, and that all plants from yet warmer districts should be entirely excluded.

In the Deodar region and colder localities are numerous species of Birch, Alder, Chesnut, Pyrus, Sycamore, Oak, &c. &c., valuable timber trees; and a profusion of herbaceous plants, and bushes strikingly beautiful. Of course there is also an abundance of plants of no beauty nor any known use, all which should be omitted, as they are only interesting to systematical Botanists, who may be safely left to discover for themselves the best method of procuring them. It is unnecessary to give any more precise directions than this, except in the following cases. The Prangos Hay Plant, which furnishes valuable food for sheep in cold and barren situations, should be a special object of importation. The Rheubarbs called Rheum Webbiana spicatum, and Moorcroftianum, are also much wanted, and it is most desirable that constant supplies should be forwarded of the seed of the Deodar Cedar, of the Hutton and Pindron fir, and of the Neza Pine; none of which can be expected to bear cones in this Country for a great many years and which, must therefore remain confined to the possession of a few persons, unless supplies of seed are forwarded in abundance from their native places. The nurserymen contrive indeed to multiply such species by grafting, but the plants so procured will probably be short lived, and are not suited to the purpose of forming woods.

With regard to the Seeds which can be transmitted, with the best hopes of success, from England to India, for distribution to public officers and other residents in the Himalayan range of Mountains, it is impossible for one who is personally unacquainted with the Country, to advise the Honorable Company with so much confidence as another person might who has himself resided in the Provinces referred to—I would therefore take the liberty of suggesting to the Honorable Court, the propriety of obtaining a report upon the subject from Professor Royle, who was so long in the Himalaya, and who must be intimately acquainted with the wants and wishes of the residents there. In the mean while as the Governor General has been pleased to do me the honor of signifying his wish that I should be consulted upon the subject, I beg leave to lay before the Court the following general Memoranda.

There can be no doubt that the fine varieties of European fruit trees of all descriptions are desirable objects of export; but as the varieties cannot be propagated with certainty by seed, and as trees are too bulky for the overland route, it is necessary to ascertain whether cuttings will travel with any prospect of success. This experiment is now in course of trial, a packet of small Gooseberry, Currant, and Raspberry plants having been sent some weeks since to Simla, at the particular desire of Lord Auckland, and the overland route having been used by permission of the Right Hon'ble the President of the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India. Should this experiment have, as I expect it will, a good result, there will then be no doubt that all our European fruit trees may be readily conveyed to the Himalaya Mountains. But it will be previously necessary that the Saharunpur Garden should be provided with stocks, on which to bud or graft them; if such stocks do not already exist there, they should be provided, the wild pears, plums, quinces, and crabs, of the country will answer this purpose as well as those of Europe.

European Vegetable seeds, are, in general, objects of importance in India, where many of the races soon degenerate, but they would probably be thought too bulky for an overland despatch except in a few cases.

England can, I fear, contribute in no great degree to the introduction of other plants to India, unless it were thought advantageous to procure our forest trees and natural shrubs—what seem the most desirable, are those which inhabit Countries warmer than our own, and which are too impatient of a Northern winter to produce seeds with us. In order to procure them, it would be necessary to communicate specially with persons stationed in many different places; perhaps the British Consular Agents could be employed for the purpose. Supposing that the Hon'ble Court thought fit to take such measures, it is difficult to estimate too highly the advantages that would accrue to the Natives of India. Among the plants of which seeds should be procured, I would particularly name the following.

The Carob tree, Cercis Siliquesstrum, a native of Syria, and the hottest parts of the South of Europe. This forms a large tree, which bears in abundance, pods seed with a nutritious substance. It is tenacious of life in a singular degree, and seeks its nourishment far from the surface of the ground, on which account it suffers little from the long continuance of drought. The pods are a common article of food in the Countries where the tree is found, and are by some supposed to be the "locusts" on which St. John fed in the Wilderness; they are sometimes sold in the fruiterer's shops of London. During the Peninsula War, the pods were found of great value as food for Cavalry horses, and I entertain no doubt that if the tree could be extensively introduced into the milder parts of Northern India it would render the famines we read of almost impossible. Seeds of this might be obtained conveniently in Egypt.

From the same Country, at the same time, the Egyptian Wheat, which succeeds in dry and sterile soil and the Cassia Acutifolia or Alexandrian Senna, might be procured.

Scammony is a drug which is consumed in large quantities in Medicine. All that comes to the market is obtained from Smyrna and Aleppo, and is so much adulterated as to be materially diminished in value; seeds of this plant could be procured from either place, along with the seeds of the valuable tobacco of Latakia.

Colonel Chemev found at Suvaria, at the mouth of the Orontes, Silk Mulberries of a finer quality than any which he had seen elsewhere; these could be easily procured. Cotton Seeds should be procured from every country where the Cotton of the West is of superior quality. Botanists know that the varieties of this plant are extremely numerous; and it is hardly to be doubted that however great the influence of climate may be upon the quality of this substance, special peculiarities in particular varieties are also deserving of the most careful investigation. The Hon'ble Company's Botanical Officers in India have I presume already made numerous reports of their experiments upon this subject, but still it is one of such great commercial importance, that further investigation is most desirable on an extensive and varied scale.

The Olive, for which there is not a sufficient substitute in India, must be obtained from the Olive districts of Italy, rather than from those of Spain.

From North America the Magnoliaceous plants are well worth introduction, not only for their beauty but because of their Medicinal importance; the same part of the world might be made to supply the Hickories, Black Walnuts, and other valuable forest trees, and most especially the seeds of Acer Saccharinum or Sugar Maple, the Sugar of which is of good quality, and which Dr. Royle thinks "might be a valuable gift to the people of the hills who are too poor to buy sugar." These and all other North American seeds should be bought at New York as early in the season as possible, and forwarded by a Steamer. Upon their arrival in England they should be opened and carefully repacked according to their several natures, and immediately afterwards despatched to India. Such precautions are necessary, because in most cases the seeds of North American trees retain their vegetating principle for but a short time, and the very early, as well as quickly.

With regard to the introduction to India of American and African Medicinal plants, it would be necessary to make a special report upon that subject, in case the Hon'ble Court should be of opinion that it deserves to be considered; and it would embrace a large range of details which some of the officers of the Company will readily furnish.

I believe I have nothing further to add, except that from the great extent of the British Possessions in India, and the infinite modifications and combinations of soil and climate to be found within them, there can be no doubt whatever, that almost every production of every climate, except the Arctic, may be so completely naturalized, that where they are of any importance as objects of cultivation, they may be brought to all the perfection of which they are susceptible in other countries, provided proper skill and care are shown in the selection of their situations.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your very obedient Servt.

PROFESSOR ROYLE'S LETTER.

To J. C. MELVILL, Esq.

Secretary to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors of the East India Company.

SIR. — In acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 20th ultimo, informing me that the Governor General of India with a view to the introduction of the "useful and ornamental plants of England into India," had suggested to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors the propriety of my being consulted on the subject, allow me to express my gratification at the honor that has been done me. The subject is one upon which I have frequently expressed and published my opinions, and feel well assured that great benefit would accrue to India by the judicious introduction into it of the various useful plants and even animals of different countries which are suited to its various climates and wide spread territories.

Engaged as is the Committee of Commerce and Agriculture of the Royal Asiatic Society in making some of the Natural Products of India known to the manufacturers of Europe, it will be highly gratifying to those interested in the prosperity of India, to know that the other great branch of the subject included in the attempt to improve the resources of India, is to be prosecuted under the auspices of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors and of the Governor General of India. With the necessary attention to principles as well as to details, success in a great variety of instances is as certain as will be the eventual benefit, and the expence need be but small with two such establishments as the Hon'ble Company's Botanic Gardens at Calcutta and Saharunpore, situated at opposite extremities of the Great Gangetic Plains, with 1,000 miles of intervening territory and with considerable difference of climate.

The subject is not a new one, though it does not appear in recent times to have been prosecuted with the zeal it merits. But numerous useful Plants have been introduced into India by the Calcutta Botanic Garden, and others by that at Saharunpore. More might have been introduced into the former from the new world, had there been more frequent direct communication with different parts of S. America, Africa and India, and the Northern Garden might have acclimated many S. of Europe and N. American plants, had it not been remote, both from Calcutta and Bombay.

But as different ages of the world have been memorable for the different routes of commerce, as well as for the interchange of the useful plants of different countries, so may the present time be distinguished by the more numerous introduction into India of useful plants, in consequence of the facilities afforded by Steam Navigation. The Romans, we know, introduced into Europe many of our fruit trees from Armenia and Persia, as the Peach, Apricot, Nectarine, Quince, Cherry, &c., while the Turks introduced plants into Constantinople, which thence spread over Europe, as the Lombardy Poplar, Thorn Apple, Hyacinth and others;—so the discovery of America and of the passage round the Cape of Good Hope, introduced into India, many of the productions of the new world, as the Tobacco, Capsicum, Indian Corn, and more recently the Potatoe, now also universally diffused, together with such fruits as the Custard and Pine Apples, Guava and Passays. But few plants have been introduced from the North into India. The Peach and Pomegranate must, no doubt, however, have travelled South, as probably did also the Poppy, now so extensive an object of culture in the cold season of India. In the North of India, therefore, much may be done, and here Steam Navigation proceeding from the S of Europe to Bombay, and thence overland for seeds, or up the Indus for plants, affords every desirable facility.

I, therefore, confine myself in the following observations to "the introduction into India of the useful and ornamental plants of England," begging leave, however, to substitute Europe for the latter, and including in my summary some of the plants of N. America. On account, however, of the peculiarity of N. of India climate, it is hardly possible to mention these without some notice of the Indian plants, which may be, and are cultivated with them.

The Southern Province of India, including Bengal and the Lower Provinces, with much of the Peninsula, being of a tropical nature in climate, with little cold weather, are chiefly suited for the cultivation of the plants, whether annuals or perennials, of the intra-tropical islands and of the warm parts of America and Africa. As the tropic-like rainy season however extends over all India, its peculiarities of a tropical climate, heat and moisture, with considerable uniformity of both, prevail over a great extent of territory for a few months in the year, and, therefore, in the most northern parts we have the cultivation of Rice, Sorghum, Indian Corn, and other tropical grains, in the very same fields where in the cold weather months, we have Wheat and Barley, with Peas and Beans. This double climate and double culture, it is necessary to notice, in order to have a complete view of the nature of the country and climate of N. India.

The mean temperature of the year at Saharanpore is 30° of N latitude is about 73°, and of the months of Jan, Feb, March, April, May, June, July, Aug., Sept, Oct 5, 55, 67, 78, 85, 90, 85, 83, 79, 74, Nov, Dec.

From the middle of October to the middle of April, the various useful and ornamental plants of European climates may be successfully cultivated. The minimum of temperature in January is 25°, Fahr, and the maximum 105° in June.

The nursery which I established at Mussooree in the Himalayas at 6500 feet of elevation, though 80 miles distant is very convenient for the introduction of European plants. Mussooree has a minimum of only 25°, and a maximum of 80° of Fahr, showing, that the equability is greater than in the neighbouring plains. The mean temperature is about 57° and of the months of

Jan, Feb, March, April, May, June, July, Aug, Sept, Oct 42, 45, 53, 59, 66, 67, 67, 66, 64, 57, Nov, Dec., 50, 43,

The season for cultivation in the Mussooree climate is from March to October. But between the Saharanpore Garden and Mussooree Nursery, a complete year of moderate climate may be obtained for the germination of seeds of temperate climates.

At Saharanpore in

Nov., Dec., Jan., Feb., March, April,
61, 55, 52, 55, 57, 59,

At Mussooree in May, June, July, Aug, Sept, Dec.

66, 67, 67, 66, 64, 57,

The climate having been proved favourable, little difficulty will be experienced with the soil or with irrigation as far as the experiments are concerned. The subsequent distribution of plants which have succeeded in the Depot Garden, must of course be determined by various circumstances, but the first should only be sent to favourable localities, as failure is apt to discourage further attempts. The next subject of attention, and for which the preceding observations are only preparatory, is the kind of plants best suited to the northern parts of India and the Himalaya Mountains. Here we must be guided, not only by the nature of the plants with respect to vicissitudes of temperature, but also their usefulness—their annual or perennial nature, and in noticing the climate into which we wish to introduce them, take care to compare it with that from which they are to be introduced. The plants to be introduced may be considered with respect to their usefulness or to their fitness for different kinds of climate. In the former case we should arrange them under the heads of Food for the inhabitants or Fodder for their Cattle, such as are likely to be useful to any of the ordinary arts of life, or those which may afford products likely to become articles of Commerce. Merely ornamental plants should not be neglected, nor those remarkable for their colour, as both gratify the senses, and offer inducements to many to pay attention to gardening, when other more useful plants are necessarily introduced, and with little additional expense. Fruit trees might appear to many as not included among useful plants, but independent of their increasing the proportion of excellent matter in a country, they might become sources of considerable commerce between the plains and mountains of India, as is now the case with Cashmere.

There is another class of plants to which I paid considerable attention when in India, and which form the chief objects of my present duties, and that is Medicinal plants. I was first requested to do so by the Medical Board of Bengal, and I cultivated many articles which were pronounced after trial in the General Hospital at Calcutta to be of the best quality. Dr. Falconer, the presentable Superintendent of the Saharanpore Botanic Garden, writes me that Extract of Henbane which I first cultivated and manufactured, still continues to be supplied from the Saharanpore Garden to the Hospital Dispensary. In the same situation, and in the Hill Nursery many other medicinal plants now sent from this country, might there be successfully cultivated, and thus be not only more cheaply produced, but also prescribed in a fresher state.

Keeping these several objects in view, I have thought it preferable for practical purposes, that in the operations of horticulture, and the selection of sites for the experiments, to arrange those plants I have as yet been able to think of, in three separate lists, according to the selection for which they are suited.

1 Annuals fit for cultivation in the Plains of India in the cold weather, and in the summer of the Himalayas.

2 Perennials probably suited to the Plains of N. W. India.

3 Perennials suitable to the Himalayas. Besides the plants mentioned in the respective lists, I have long thought it a very interesting subject of enquiry to ascertain by experiment, whether the grains, the people of India possess in common with Europe, are of the same degree of goodness and equally prolific—as for instance their Wheat, Barley, Rapes and Mustard seeds, &c. Some of the plants which I have included in my lists, are intended to be useful for their products, which may become objects of Commerce, but this involves another subject of enquiry, and that is, whether the analogous substances which India naturally possesses, are superior or inferior in quality to those cultivated in other parts of the world.

It is probable that some of those enumerated in the accompanying lists may not be suited to the localities indicated, and a still greater number that might be suited to them, for I am well aware, entirely omitted. But this has been for want of time to give the subject the full consideration it deserves, but as this, to be successful to any great degree, must necessarily be carried on for a few years, I shall be happy to return to the subject, if required, and point out the plants suited for cultivation in different parts of India.

Though failure may attend some, I am well satisfied that success will attend the majority of instances, and feel the utmost confidence in stating that if the subject of the introduction of useful plants, suited to the different parts of India, be continued, and the principles which should guide their attempts not be neglected, that very beneficial results will in a few years be evident to all, and that if this be combined with an investigation of, and publication to the manufacturing world of the very varied natural products of India, an increase of the commerce and resources of that empire will ensue, to an extent anticipated by few, but of which after long attention to the subject, I feel well assured, and hope to be able to prove to the sceptical.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient humble servant.

DEAR SIR—In forwarding the accompanying seeds and specimens of fine Cotton grown in Naples, allow me to state that I think it is very well suited for export, and will arrive in India at a very good time for ensuring a successful experiment. I do not myself think that the species is distinct from the Upland Cotton of the Americans—but the subject is so uncertain that nothing but authentic specimens can enable one to give a decided opinion.

I hope these seeds may be sent by the Overland conveyance with the others, if the Court determine upon the measure. I forgot to mention in my letter, but which I stated to the gentleman who called on me from the India House, that I did not recommend all, or indeed any great proportion of the seeds and plants, enumerated in my list, to be sent at once, as they would only confuse and prevent the experiment being carefully made. I would select the seeds of some of those useful as food—others as Medicinal articles and some for their Commercial value. To the last I would add the common Spanish Chestnut, which seems well suited to Northern India, and the Himalayas—and would yield an additional article of food to the inhabitants of the Mountains who are sometimes forced to subsist upon Acorns and bitter Horse Chestnuts.

I have, &c.

H T. PRINSEP, Secy. to Govt. of India.

At the conclusion of the reading of the above important communication, the assistance of the Society in aiding the intentions of the Home Government in so useful and philanthropic an undertaking, was fully accorded, and the despatch with its accompanying documents, were ordered to be printed in full, while Mr. Fiddington gave notice of, and Mr. Robinson seconded, the following motion

That in reference to the communication now read from the Hon'ble the Court of Directors of the East India Company, and with the view of aiding as far as possible, the intentions therein expressed, and the labours of those scientific gentlemen at home who have so kindly interested themselves in the subject,—a Committee be formed for the purpose of selecting such plants and trees as may be thought desirable for introduction into India, and those that have been furnished in return, and that the Committee be instructed to obtain communications from the Branch Societies and other available sources throughout India.

As an instance of what may be done, Dr. Spry cited the Cephalotaxa family of plants, and stated that there were no fewer than twenty two species of the Oak, common in the Himalayan range, that have never yet been seen in England. Dr. Spry further mentioned, that it had occurred to him some time since to write to Colonel Lloyd at Darjelling on the subject of these Oaks requesting that he would be so obliging as to have collected, as abundant a supply of acorns of every sort as possible and that if young trees could be forwarded at the commencement of the cold weather, they might be brought through the plains of Bengal with little risk, and sent on board ship for conveyance to England.

A SUMMARY OF THE SOCIETY'S ENDEAVOURS TO INTRODUCE THE SUPERIOR KINDS OF COTTON INTO INDIA.

The President next called attention to a Summary of what had been done by the Society from its institution, to improve the Cotton cultivation of India, which the Secretary had prepared in answer to the communication read at the last Meeting, from the Bengal Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Deane recommended that as the subject was no equally interesting to the Glasgow Chamber of Commerce, and many other similar institutions in Great Britain, that the information embodied in this Summary should be printed in the form of a pamphlet, and it was at length determined that after transmitting a Manuscript copy to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce for the Manchester Chamber, that the Summary should be printed in the monthly Proceedings of the Society, and that one hundred and fifty copies extra should also be printed for circulation throughout Great Britain.

REPORT OF THE BENGAL GOVERNMENT TO THE APPLICANT IN RELATION TO THE DISCRIMINATING DUTIES ON LUGAR AND RUM.

To H. H. SPRY Esq., M. D.

Secy to the Agri. and Hortl. Society.

SIR—I am directed by the Hon'ble the President in Council to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 8th instant, and in reply to state that a reference has already been made by the Government to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, at the instance of the Chamber of Commerce of Calcutta, pointing out the expediency of obtaining from the authorities in England, an equalization of the duties levied on Tobacco, the growth of India, when imported into England with those fixed for the same article when produced in other Colonies in possession of Her Majesty.

With respect to Rum, the question is more complicated, but His Honour in Council will be glad to learn that the representation submitted by you to the Home Authorities will be effectual in obtaining an equalization of duties on this article also, when conveyed from India, not only to Europe but to all the Colonies and Possessions of the Crown of England. This subject has likewise been brought by the Government to the notice of the Home Authorities.

I have, &c,

FLORA OF CALCUTTA.

The Secretary next submitted to the Meeting a portion in M. S. of the Flora of Calcutta which had been forwarded to him, for presentation to the Society by Mr. Masters, late head gardener at the Hon'ble East India Company's Botanic Garden, Calcutta.

The title which Mr. Masters gives to the work is "Calcutta Flora, containing a synopsis of Plants indigenous to, or cultivated in, the vicinity of Calcutta—arranged according to their natural families, with observations on the properties and manner of cultivating some of the most interesting."—and in his letter to the Secretary, Mr. Masters states, that, for a period of three years, he has been employed, more or less, on the preparation of the work. Mr. Masters designed this only as the first part. The second to contain—

1st.—General observations on the cultivation of plants. 2d.—List of the most approved fruit-bearing plants, with their scientific and local names, and a description of the most successful mode of propagation. 3d.—List of ornamental flowering plants, habits, time of flowering, &c. 4th.—List of medicinal and spice-bearing plants; their propagation and culture. 5th.—Culinary vegetables, best modes of culture, &c. 6th.—Miscellaneous list, best suited to field culture. 7th.—Timber trees and such plants as yield articles of commercial value. 8th.—Domestic and commercial articles, the produce of Indian plants. 9th.—A Calendar of monthly operations; and 10th.—A copious index.

Mr. Masters states, that omitting mosses, mushrooms, lichens, and sea weed, of which he is not able to give any account, there are probably about 3973 species of plants in and about Calcutta. This, Mr. Masters states is a greater number than can at present be found in the Company's Garden. Mr. Masters' own catalogue when he left the Botanic Garden in September last year (1838) contained 1158 genera and 3609 species.

Just as Mr. Masters had finished page 44 he was suddenly interrupted by receiving an appointment, and states that he has therefore been compelled to give up all idea of completing the work at present. He hopes, however, to find leisure hereafter to carry his undertaking to completion.

CONSIGNMENT OF VALUABLE CASHMERE AND OTHER FRUIT TREES FROM THE HON'BLE COMPANY'S GARDEN AT SAHARUNPORE.

Dr. Falconer, in a letter to the Secretary, mentions having despatched from the Botanic Garden at Saharunpore on the 24th March "several very choice varieties of Cashmere Apples and Pears, and the Muska Sahiba and Kishmishae Grapes, which are excellent and likely to prove new to Calcutta." The consignment in all amounts to 19 boxes containing 81 plants. The boat is daily expected.

COTTON AND INDIGO SEEDS FROM EGYPT.

A letter from Mr. Waghorn's House at Cairo was read intimating their gratification at being able to promote the interests of the Society, and their intention "to attend forthwith with respect to the Cotton and Indigo seed," requested by the Society.

ACCLIMATISATION OF THE FLORICULTURE OF EGYPT IN THE VALLEY OF DEHRADUN—AN IMPROVED MODE OF PROTECTING SUGAR CANE FROM THE RAVAGES OF ANTS—TEA PLANTATION AT KHOTE.

A communication, through Dr. Wallis, from Lieut. Kirke, Resident at Dehradun, was next read to the Meeting. The letter was one of great interest as setting forth the success, which has attended Lieut. Kirke's efforts to introduce the European cultures into the congenial climate of the sub-Himalayan range, and affords a convincing proof of the capability of our Northern soil for naturalizing the productions of the Western world. Lieut. Kirke states, that he has white broccoli growing in his gardens, measuring 14 inches in diameter, and as white as those in England. The Parsnip thrives in great perfection, as well as the Mangul Wurzel and numerous other things in the vegetable way, the seed from which, Lieut. Kirke hopes to be able soon to send to the Society. The whole of the American seeds grow beautifully, and Lieut. Kirke considers them to be certainly superior to the Cape seeds. Hops are growing famously and their success is certain.

Among the items in this interesting communication is the announcement, that the Sugar Cane has been successfully grown by dipping each piece of Cane into common white wash and a little quicklime sprinkled over the surface in the trenches. By pursuing this method, Lieutenant Kirke states that every eye grew and a white ant has not yet attacked them. The day before writing his letter, Lieutenant Kirke had the curiosity to examine an entire bagah, and he found that not a single slip had been touched, although the plant had been in the ground for upwards of six weeks. In the same land, last year not a single cane could be grown. Canes dipped into very thick white wash on Xmas day, appeared above ground in six weeks from that time, and not a single cane was touched by white ants. Many experiments Lieutenant Kirke mentions having tried, to protect canes from the ravages of the white ants; but nothing he has ever tried has ever proved so successful as the white wash, and he desires particularly that the fact may be brought to the notice of the Members of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society.

Lieutenant Kirke mentions that the best of all canes is "Sleeman's Mauritius Cane." The strength of the juice from Sleeman's, Colvin's and indigenous cane was tried by the Saccharometer, and that obtained from Sleeman's cane, had 2½ degree more saccharine matter than the native, and 4 degrees more than Colvin's, besides which Lieutenant Kirke states that the latter (Colvin's) does not ripen well in the Dehradun valley. Lieutenant Kirke mentions that the Tea plantations at Khote are thriving splendidly—that a great quantity of seed has been sown this year at the plantation, while that sown at Churjura and Barcher has failed. In four years, Lieutenant Kirke thinks, the cultivation could be made to pay a handsome revenue. The place moreover is calculated for the Hop cultivation.

In the Floricultural Department, Lieut. Kirke has his garden stocked with numerous very beautiful things, such as double anemones, double ranunculus, both in full bloom and of every colour, double dahlias of 30 or 40 different sorts, double carnations, jonquills, daffodils, hyacinths, both double and single, proteas, and calendulas, all of which Lieut. Kirke thinks very few if any, in this country have besides himself in such perfection. The heart's-ease plants are superb skyanthus seed, esobochloa californica, and focea are to be sent down shortly, and there are three mounds of Dahlia roots lying in the verandah of Lieut. Kirke's house, ready for any member who wishes for them on application to that gentleman.

For all the foregoing presents and communications, the thanks of the Society were awarded.

THE SOI-DISANT RAJAH PERTAB CHUNDER.

SENTENCE.

Extract from the proceedings of the Presidency Court of Nizamut Adawlut, under date the 13th June 1839.

Present W. Braddon and C. Tucker, Esquires Judges.

Read letter No. 39 dated the 23d January last, from the Session Judge of the Zillah Hooghly, the proceedings held on the trial of Alak Shah alias Rajah Pertab Chunder, son of Rajah Puz Chunder alias Kistololl Pauree Bramacharree and others, charged the prisoner first named, viz.

"Alak Shah, alias Rajah Pertab Chunder, alias Kistololl Pauree Bramacharree, charged with gross fraud and imposture, in falsely and fraudulently assuming the name of the deceased Maharajah Dheraj Pertab Chunder, Bahadoor, formerly zemindar of Burdwan, and pretending, in various places, during the last two years, to the great disturbance of the general peace and quiet of this country, that he is in verity the aforesaid zemindar of Burdwan, and that the zemindary of Burdwan belongs of right to him; and in obtaining money from various individuals and more particularly from one Radlinkissen Bysack, dewan of the Government Treasury in Calcutta, by means of these and such like false pretences. 2nd count. And charged further with having, in furtherance of the fraudulent pretences aforesaid, instigated and prevailed on divers subjects of the British Government, and others, to the number of 300 and more, unlawfully and tumultuously to assemble, at or near the town of Culna, in the district of Burdwan, such proceeding being intended or eminently calculated to produce a most serious breach of the peace, and with having there remained, at the head of this unlawful assembly, from the 13th of April, 1838 corresponding with the 2d of Bysack 1245, up to the 2d of May 1838, corresponding with the 21st of Bysack 1245, and with having, during that period, on various occasions, by the display of superior force, resisted, and set at defiance, the constituted authorities of the district, he the said Alak Shah, alias Rajah Pertab Chunder alias Kistololl Pauree Bramacharree, having previously, on the 4th August 1836, been convicted of a similar offence, before the Sessions Court of this District of Hooghly."

The court having duly considered the proceedings held on the above trial, and the fatwa of the Law Officer thereon, pass the following sentence :

The fatwa of the Law Officer of the Nizamut Adawlut declares, that false personation for one's own advantage, is an offence under the Mahomedan law; that no specific punishment is laid down for such offence, but the punishment is at the discretion of the Hakim, with a view to restrain the offender, respect being had to the circumstances of the offender, and the character of the offence, which of itself is apparently of a trivial nature.

The Court convict the prisoner Alak Shah, alias Rajah Pertab Chunder, alias Kistololl Pauree Bramacharree, of so much of the first count, as charges him with gross fraud and imposture in falsely and fraudulently assuming the name of the deceased Maha Rajah Dhe Raj Pertab Chander Bahadoor, formerly Zemindar of Burdwan and pretending that the zemindary of right belongs to him. They acquit him of the other of offences with which he stands charged, and sentence the said Alak Shah, alias Rajah Pertab Chunder alias Kistololl Pauree Bramacharree, to pay a fine to Government of one thousand rupees, and in default of payment to be imprisoned in the Jail of Zillah Hooghly for the period of six months.

The Court observe that the remaining prisoners, Radakistno Ghosaul, Hazif Fatoohoolah, Sagur Chunder Dher, Callypersaud Sing, Joomun Khan, and Rajah Nurrohur Chunder, have been acquitted and released by the Session Judge.—Hutaru, June 17.

True Extract.

(Signed) J. HAWKINS, Registrar.

TO THE JUDGES OF THE PRESIDENCY COURT OF NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.

The petition of Maha Rajah Dhe Raj Pertab Chund Bahadoor, sued under the alias names of Alak Shah and Kistololl Pauree, Bramacharree.

HUMAN V SHAWARA.—That your petitioner is aggrieved by the proceedings and sentence of this Honourable Court, under date the 13th day of June last, and he earnestly prays that the said sentence may be taken into reconsideration, for the following reasons:

I. Because the said sentence appears to have the effect of deciding for ever the question of the civil claims, advanced by your petitioner, which your petitioner was about to submit to solemn investigation in the civil tribunals of this country, both of her Majesty and of the Honourable Company, and which your petitioner had already brought before Her Majesty's Supreme Court, in a certain action of ejectment at present pending, and suspended only during the progress of the protracted criminal proceedings, first instituted against your petitioner upward of a year ago, before the authorities of Hooghly.

II. Because, even if the said sentence has not the effect of so deciding such civil claims, your petitioner is advised that he cannot safely venture to bring forward the said claims in any Civil Court of Justice whatsoever, without being liable to a second prosecution for the alleged crime of "personation for his own advantage;" and for the same reason, your petitioner is doubtful whether he may not be now rendering himself liable to certain pains and penalties for contempt of Court, and for a repetition of his supposed offence, by presenting this humble petition in the name and title which he assumes to belong to him of right.

III. Because notwithstanding the great length to which the late criminal proceedings against your petitioner extended, there has been yet nothing approaching to a fair, complete and satisfactory trial of the question of your petitioner's identity, in proof of which position, he craves permission to submit the following reasons, to which he entreats the serious attention of this Honourable Court.

1stly. That a variety of heterogeneous charges being preferred against your petitioner, including the committing of tumultuous assemblies, personation, riot, and the obtaining of money on false pretences, your petitioner's advisers were distracted by their number and multifariousness, and devoted their attention only to procuring the acquittal of your petitioner upon such part of the charges as appeared to involve criminality; whereas your petitioner being now acquitted of all of the said charges, except that of personation alone, his advisers would now be able to devote their whole attention to meeting the said question of identity, and that alone.

2dly. That your petitioner being during the whole progress of his trial, closely immured in prison, without liberty of bail, (although offered to any required amount) necessarily laboured under the most serious disadvantages; whereas he would now have an opportunity, as in justice and fairness ought to be allowed to him, of communicating with his friends and advisers from time to time during the progress of the enquiry, and, personally superintending and directing the management of proceedings in which he is so vitally interested.

3dly. That your petitioner's legal advisers having been always under the firm conviction that "personation" of a deceased person, without proof of some specific ulterior consequences, could never amount to a tangible crime, inasmuch as there is nothing whatever in the Regulations or in Hindoo law, (your petitioner being himself a Hindoo) to make it criminal, and there is manifestly a difference of opinion whether it be criminal or not according to Mahomedan Law,—only went into that part of their case under solemn protest, reserving material evidence on the point of identity until the contemplated civil trial should take place; which said reserved evidence would now be produced, your Honourable Court having been pleased to decide, that such question is cognizable in this Court, although a tribunal of Criminal Judicature.

4thly. That an additional reason why certain evidence was voluntarily reserved, was, that your petitioner's advisers, considered, that at all events it was sufficient to succeed in throwing a doubt upon the question of identity, instead of going fully into the matter before a Criminal Court; and your petitioner submits that it would have been highly unreasonable to require him to open up the whole case of his civil claims in a mere criminal proceeding, where, even if he were acquitted, the sentence could not possibly have availed him as evidence of his right, but he would have been left afterwards to establish that right as he best could, before a civil tribunal.

5thly. That besides these voluntary reasons for withholding part of his evidence, there existed causes, quite beyond your petitioner's control, inasmuch as your petitioner applied for Perwannahs for several witnesses, necessary and material for his defence, and in support of his claim to the title of Rajah Pertaugh Chunder; which witnesses were not produced, the Magistrate and Sessions Judge openly declaring that the Sessions Court, sitting as a Criminal Court, had no power to compel the attendance of witnesses for the defence; and your petitioner sheweth that the Perwannahs for the prosecution were made out in heavy penalties, and that the attendance of the prosecution's witnesses was enforced by attachment and seizure of their property, and that the Perwannahs issued for the attendance of the witnesses for the defence contained no such penalty, and the attendance of such witnesses was not enforced by any compulsory process.

Your petitioner therefore sheweth, that he is ready and willing, and hereby undertakes to deposit immediately the said fine of Rs. 1000, and (this Honourable Court having now decided that it has power to take cognizance of the bare question of identity,) to go into full evidence on that point alone, and to abide by the result of the inquiry, provided that the presiding Judge shall be duly invested with full power and authority to compel and enforce the attendance of all witnesses subpoenaed for the defence as well as for the prosecution, and your petitioner submits that upon the deposit of the full amount of the said fine, no failure of justice and no injury to the public can possibly accrue by granting a new trial, as to so much of the charge against your petitioner as relates to the mere question of his identity; and he confidently submits to the consideration of this Honourable Court, whether the said want of opportunity of giving full evidence and producing all his witnesses, is not of itself an amply sufficient reason, even if no other existed, for the granting of such new trial.

Your petitioner therefore humbly prays that, upon depositing the said fine of Rs. 1000, this Honourable Court will be pleased to review, or set aside, or suspend so much of the said sentence as relates thereto, and to grant a new or further trial of so much of the said charge as relates to the said question of your petitioner's identity, with liberty to produce further evidence, if necessary both for the prosecution and the defence, and with full power vested in the presiding Judge to enforce the attendance of all the witnesses subpoenaed, and with such other directions, and upon such other conditions and limitations, as to this Honourable Court shall seem fit and just. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.—Hark. June 20.

SUPREME COURT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1839.

THIRD TERM OF 1839.

Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Selon.

Their Lordships came into Court at half past eleven, but no business was done except the taking of common motions.

James Hume, Esq., of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law, was sworn in, and admitted to practice as an Advocate in the Supreme Court.

RAJAH GOPERMOHUN DEB V. THE EAST INDIA COMPANY AND THE LOTTERY COMMITTEE AND OTHERS.

This case, in which the argument last term occupied about a week, and in which judgment was postponed, was mentioned this morning by being able to deliver their judgment on the first day of term, but unfortunately we are not yet prepared to do so, although all the Judges have been occupied in little else throughout the vacation, than in carefully and anxiously examining the very voluminous pleadings and evidence in this cause. We are not yet prepared to say that the complainant is entitled to relief on this side of the Court, but we are all unanimously of opinion that he is entitled to compensation and relief either at law or in equity. We are of opinion that there has been a great deal of irregularity of proceeding on both sides; that there has been very much of useless prolixity; and that a great amount of quite unnecessary expence has been incurred. The Court have now certain suggestions to offer for the consideration of the counsel on both sides. Either that a reference should be made to the Master, by consent, to inquire whether the complainant is entitled to any and what compensation, distinguishing the right in which he may be entitled, with liberty to find facts specially, the Report to raise all the questions of law and to find the facts upon which those questions are to be raised, distinctly. This is for the ascertainment of the facts, and for removing the difficulties which are now in the way, from the uncertainty of boundaries and the like, the Court of course would ultimately decide the questions of law. The other alternative which we would suggest, is a reference out of Court, but still the facts must be found specially, for it is not likely that either party would be satisfied with the award of a private arbitrator upon matters of law, without the confirmation of the Court's decision. If the suggestion be adopted, we think that up to this time each party should pay their own costs—the future costs to be at the discretion of the Court. Each party is much to blame. The defendants were guilty of most oppressive conduct in filing their double sets of answers, interrogatories, and pleas, and they were rightly punished by being compelled to pay the extra costs, but the complainant's proceedings had led to it, for he had adopted a system unheard of in equity practice,—he had gone into the examiner's office, and taken voluminous evidence on the plea on a question of parties, and then after getting a decision in his favour at vast expense, by which it was determined that the parties were not necessary he had amended his bill and added them!—For the reasons I have mentioned, we think that the reference to the Master now, would save expense and be for the advantage of both parties. Even if the Court pronounced their decision there must be a reference to the Master, and many expensive proceedings, probably the trial of issues at law to decide questions of fact. And if either party carried home the question on appeal, at any stage, which would very likely be the case, this could not be done without a very great amount of expense. We therefore throw out these suggestions, when claim the serious attention of counsel. Of course it is not necessary to return a definitive reply immediately.

The Advo-ate General begged to be allowed to observe, that Government never denied that something was due for compensation, the only question was how much.

Mr Clarke requested permission to say one word, in justice to himself and his two learned friends, his juniors in the cause. All three had now come into the case, long after the pleadings had been drawn and they were in no way responsible for the irregularities in the course of the proceedings.

Sir E. Ryan disclaimed all intention of attributing blame to any Counsel individually.

Mr Clarke said that in justice to his learned predecessor Messrs Comp and Furton, he might be allowed to remind the Court, that at the very time of overruling the pleas, it was intimated that, although the parties were not necessary to be added, the addition was advisable, and indeed it was specially recommended by Chief Justice Gray.

Sir E. Ryan said, that inconsistency was inconsistency, even if it had been at the Court's own recommendation. But all the unnecessary expense which he had repudiated, had been already incurred.—Hark June 17.

MONDAY, JUNE 17, 1834.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. IV. Steton.)

RAJAH CHITTEMOHUN DEB L. THE E. I. COMPANY AND OTHERS.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J., further observed, with reference to the suggestions of the Court upon Saturday, that in the event of a reference to the Master being consented to, much expense and delay would be saved, if it were understood that it should not be necessary for either party to file formal exceptions to the Master's Report, if satisfied therewith.

Mr Clarke suggested, that either party might be at liberty, upon the making of the Report, to present out objections to the Master who might make a de novo consideration, and dispose of before finalizing his report.

Sir E. Ryan, approved of the suggestion on the part, therefore, might so object to the necessity of filing any exceptions or objections, and with liberty to take any objections afterwards at the hearing.

W. ALEXANDER, ASSOCY C. S. IN CHIEF AND OTHERS.

Mr Prinsep moved to enlarge the time for taking the answer of Major Cape in England. The Advo-ate stated that the answer was now prepared, and was ready to be sworn and transmitted, except that it was absolutely necessary first to inspect certain important documents referred to in the answer, and upon which the claim of the defendants rested. The originals of these documents had been taken home by Mr Major Cape Wyborn, who died at Cosser on the overland route. Upon his death a box containing his papers was seized by the consul, and transmitted to the Foreign Office but upon inspection the papers in question were not found among them. The personal representatives of Wyborn had however been admitted, that the documents in question were in their possession, and as they refused to give them up, on the ground of an alleged lien, a bill had been filed against them in the Court of Chancery in England. It was expected, that in a couple of months upon an inspection being obtained, the answer would be sworn and transmitted. The delay, in fact, was to the prejudice of the defendants themselves alone, for they were the plaintiffs at law in an action of ejectment to restrain which by a perpetual injunction, was the prayer of this very bill.

The Advo-ate General opposed the application. The defendants were not the sole parties prejudiced by the delay. The prayer of the bill was in the alternative, to decree and declare, either that the defendants in equity, who claimed as mortgagees, had been already satisfied, or that, upon the equities of the case, they ought to be postponed to the insolvent incumbrancers, Cluttons, Mackillop and Co., the assignees of whose estate was the complainant Now, until this claim of Major Cape could be got rid of it was impossible to sell the property and wind up the affairs of this insolvent firm. This was altogether a mere deluding of the Court by false pretences. The former applications for time were made on the alleged ground that Major Cape had a dimness of vision which was not surprising in a man between 80 and 90 years of age, and now a new story was trumped up about certain missing documents. The nature of them was not stated, and the Court could not to acquiesce in the vague assertion that they were essentially material to the case of the defendants.

Sir E. Ryan said, that when the former application for time was granted, the Court had declared that they would only allow further time upon new facts being disclosed. New circumstances now appeared, and most material it true, but it was really for the benefit of the complainant himself, for if a decision were now taken pro-confe it must be opened again should the answer, which it gives, disclose a complete defence.

Commissioners enlarged the first day of next term, on payment of costs.

M. H. COCKERELL AND OTHERS V. JADUBHUNDUR BEAL AND ANOTHER.

Mr. Clarke moved, upon the affidavit of Mr. Preston, the defendant's attorney, to set aside the verdict for the plaintiffs, on the ground of irregularity, in not giving sufficient notice of trial. The cause was set down on the first day of last sittings, and notice given on the same day for the next day but one. The notice ought to have been as usual four days before the sittings, and the short notice was only excused on the alleged ground that the cause was a remanet. But this argument was quite untenable, because, although the cause had been once entered on the board, and had been tied up for some time by a notice of injunction, yet two terms and a sittings had been successively allowed to elapse without mentioning it at all.

Rule granted.

SHEEMUTTY TARRAMONY DOWSE V. SHEEMUTTY DONA FOORNAN DOWSE.

Mr. Leith moved for a rule to shew cause, pursuant to leave reserved at the trial in the last sittings, why the verdict for the plaintiff should not be set aside, and a nonsuit entered. The action was Trover for jewels, and the ground of objection was insufficient proof of conversion.

Rule granted.

SHAKS AUMOOT'DOVEN AND OTHERS V. PEEB ALI Y.

Mr. Clarke applied for a month's further time to file the answer, three weeks having been once previously granted. The bill arose out of a commissariat contract, between two eminent purveyors, and the accounts sought for were most voluminous. The bill was 200 folios, and a most extraordinary affair it was, having occupied (as he was informed) two counsel of ingenuity seven months. He had no affidavit of special circumstances.

The Advocate General opposed the application. Three weeks had been once granted, and now they required a month, and would probably grow in their demands, until they at last asked for three months! He would consent to a fortnight, or if the Court were pleased to grant a month, he hoped it would be on the condition of the bill being taken pro confesso, on the answer not being filed then.

Mr. Clarke protested against such hard conditions.

Sir E. Ryan, however, said that he should not grant the application at all, except as an application consented to by the other side, and that the stipulated condition must be imposed. The Court had extended by the 14th Equity Rule the time formerly allowed, and this was done in accordance with Lord Brougham's rule, and they had come to a resolution never to allow additional time, except on special grounds set forth by affidavit, or unless upon consent. In the present instance, there were no special circumstances whatsoever.

Time allowed on terms.

The caveats stand for Thursday. The issue case will probably occupy all to-morrow (Tuesday) at the least.—Hark. June 18;

TUESDAY, JUNE 18, 1839.

There were very few motions this morning, and the Court was occupied the whole day in trying the following case, which was a particularly uninteresting issue case.

SPLDASU SAIN D. BREEMUTTY SUDAMONEY DOWSE, WIDOW, &c.

The issue was directed in order to ascertain the genuineness of a certain warrant of attorney to confess judgment for a sum of no great amount, (between Rs. 1,800 and Rs. 1,900) alleged to have been executed by the defendant, the widow and representative of Bustomchurn Addy, but the execution of which was positively denied by her. There was the usual amount of cross-swearings upon the occasion.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep appeared for the plaintiff in the issue.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Osborne for the defence.

At about 5 o'clock, the case not being nearly closed, the Court adjourned. It will probably occupy the whole of to-morrow.—Adjourned—Hark. June 19.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 19, 1839.

SODARUN SAIN VERSUS SUDAMONEY DOWSE.

This issue case, adjourned from yesterday, was taken again this morning, and occupied the entire day. At a late hour the Court found a verdict for the plaintiff thus establishing the genuineness of the warrant of attorney.

Verdict for the plaintiff.—Hark. June 20.

THURSDAY, JUNE 20, 1839.

HANNER BHEENY COWARLE V. HOOKER AND HULL—ORDERS (GOPOORFAH).

This was a motion upon notice, for the appointment of a Receiver in the Equity suit instituted by the Rinner, for the rents and profits of a Bazar and premises in Calcutta, claimed by her. But before the affidavits were opened, and the merits of the case gone into, several preliminary objections to the complainant's affidavit, which was the only affidavit in support of the application, were started by

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Sandes) for the defendants. In the first place, it does not appear that the interpreter, Mr. W. N. Heilger, was sworn to interpret correctly and faithfully. This gentleman is not one of the sworn interpreters of the Court, but the mere solicitor of the complainant, and the jurist ought to express that the interpreter's oath was administered to him. In the second place, it is objectionable that the solicitor of the complainant should be the person to interpret and explain. The attorney of the party cannot be the commissioner, and he ought not to be the interpreter. In the third place, it does not appear that any person was sworn to identify the deponent, who being a Hindoo lady of rank, was not viable to the Commissioner, when taking the affidavit. It merely appears that an affidavit was taken by some person behind a purdah, but whether the deponent was the complainant, or a person substituted for her, is uncertain. The complainant could not be indicted upon this affidavit, because it does not appear that she was really the person who made affidavit, and the interpreter could not be indicted because it does not appear that he was sworn at all. [Cited King v. Wright, in Clarke's Rules, and Grant's Chancery Practice.] It is quite clear the irregularity is fatal.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep appeared. The first objection would be applicable to all commissions to swear affidavits, for they are always executed in this manner. It is not the practice to state expressly in the jurat that the interpreter's oath was taken before the explanation and interpretation of the deponent. With respect to both of the first objections, the argument is conclusive, as an answer, that the Court will not presume the imperfect execution of the commission, but will rather presume, where nothing appears to the contrary, that everything has been regularly and formally done. The third objection has no weight at all. A commissioner is very different from an interpreter. As to indicating the parties for perjury, of course the fact might be supplied by extrinsic evidence, necessary, on such a proceeding.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J. It is by no means so clear, as the counsel for the defendants have contended, that the omission in the jurat will not be supplied by inference. In Rose v. Solliers 4 B. & C. the jurat of an affidavit of debt, sworn by a foreigner, did not express that the deponent understood the language, in which it was stated to have been interpreted, or that the interpreter was sworn to interpret with truth and fidelity, but as there was a memorandum setting forth that the affidavit was duly interpreted, and the deponent duly sworn, it was held sufficient.

Abbott, C. J. said, "I think we are bound to trust the officer of the Court, and to suppose that he exercises a sound discretion in the discharge of his duty." And see Murzetti v. Jouffroy, 1 Dowl. P. C.; and Achbold's Practice, p. 1232, where the authorities are collected. With respect to the other objections, there is nothing in them. The Court will presume that the deponent was properly identified, and it need not appear.

In Murzetti v. Jouffroy, the attorney was the interpreter, and the objection though once taken, was given up.

The Advocate-General said, that this Caveat stood for to-day, but there was a probability of an arrangement being made among the parties, and it was requested, therefore, that it might be allowed to stand over until Monday.

Two common law causes are on the board for tomorrow. — Hark, June 21.

FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1889.

RAMMOHUN MULLICK V. NUBBISORE SEAL AND OTHERS.

Mr. Clarke moved for a commission of rebellion against one of the defendants, who was in contempt for non-appearance to the process of subpoena in equity to appear and answer. The complainant had proceeded as far as sequestration, but there being no property which could be seized under the writ, a motion had been made for an alias writ of attachment, which had been granted. Under this writ it had been found impossible to seize the defendant, who was believed to have locked himself up in his own house. The commission of rebellion was, therefore, now moved for because under that writ the doors and locks might be broken open, and the defendant to avoid such extremities, would probably surrender voluntarily. The necessity for this motion arose from the new practice, which prevented the party from proceeding further than the writ of sequestration, when the defendant had not entered an appearance, whereas formerly he could have obtained an order at once for taking the bill pro confesso.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the Court were of opinion that the application could not be granted; but the point might be mentioned again. The complainant had proceeded at first under the old practice, exhausting the whole process as far as the writ of sequestration. It was perhaps irregular to grant the alias attachment, because that was going back to a certain stage in the process, and commencing a new series; at all events they certainly could not now proceed still further, and leap over the intermediate stages.

RAMES BUNANT COOMARKEE V. BOODEN COOFOOREAH AND ANOTHER.

The point argued yesterday, relating to the alleged defect in the return of the commission for taking the complainant's affidavit, was mentioned again this day.

Sir E. Ryan said that he himself entertained some doubt upon the point, but the impression of his learned brethren was, that the return was sufficient, and that the affidavit ought to be received. The commissioner certainly did not specifically certify; but there were the words "explained and interpreted by me, W. N. Hedger," and then to the whole there was the signature and authentication of the Commissioner, which it might be presumed would not have been unless the commission had been duly executed.

The objection was overruled.

J. PITT AND OTHERS V. MOOTHRONAUTH MULLICK.

This was a common-law action, which stood for trial this morning. The plaintiffs are better known as Messrs. Cook and Co. Upon the action being called on.

The Advocate-General stated, that it had been referred by consent to the arbitration of John Farley Leith Esquire, one of the counsel in the cause.

Referred.

WASOO MUTTYLOLL, SEAL V. MENLEY AND OTHERS.

Before this case, which stood on the common law board, was called on.

Mr. Clarke rose and moved for a rule nisi to stop the trial, under special circumstances. The action was brought to recover a balance alleged to be due upon admissions on merchants' accounts mutually taken between the parties. Now a bill in equity had been filed for an injunction to restrain the proceedings, and the affidavits had been already sworn verifying the material allegations in the bill which disclosed the equitable grounds on which the injunction was to be applied for; but the notice was only served yesterday, and as it was a four-day notice, the injunction could not be moved until Monday. It was hoped, therefore, that the Court would grant the rule nisi, tying up the trial, until the motion for an injunction was disposed of.

Sir E. Ryan said, that this application was quite out of the question. The defendants might stay execution afterwards, if sufficient circumstances were disclosed on moving for the injunction on affidavits, to induce the Court to grant the injunction prayed for; but there was nothing before the Court now, and the trial must proceed. Here was the cause set down for trial, and the trial actually about to take place; and the defendants move, to put it off upon a mere suggestion, because they have not served their notice of injunction in time. The delay was their own, and the present application could not be listened to.

The Advocate-General, with Messrs. Prinsep and Leith, conducted the plaintiff's case, which was very shortly proved by the production of certain accounts recognised by the defendants themselves, and upon which there was an express admission of a considerable balance due.

Mr. Clarke, for the defendants, admitted, that he had no sort of answer at law.

The Advocate-General said that the sum gone for by the plaintiff was Co.'s Rs. 16,298, for which he should take a verdict.

Verdict for the plaintiff for Rs. 16,298.—Hark, June 22.

ADMIRALTY SIDE.

THOMAS McDONNELL v. THE BRIG PYEN BOON.

Mr. Prinsep moved, upon a petition, supported by affidavit, that a warrant on the Admiralty Side be issued, directed to the Marshal of the Court, commanding him to make seizure of the brig Pyen Boon, her tackle and furniture, in order to make satisfaction or to give security for satisfaction to the petitioner as sailor. From the affidavit it appeared, that the brig Pyen Boon, was in distress at the mouth of the river, and was saved by the exertions of the petitioner, who was a pilot in the pilot-service, and upon that occasion in command of the brig Julia. The vessel saved was stated to have been in very great danger, with eight feet water in the hold, and it was alleged that if it had not been for the exertions of the petitioner, the vessel would soon have been totally lost. The Pyen Boon was at present in the port of Calcutta, and about to sail to Rangoon. Under these circumstances the learned Counsel applied for a warrant to detain the ship to answer the claim. It had been decided in this Court, that a Government steam-vessel had no claim for salvage where the act was only in discharge of the ordinary duty of the vessel, but it was apprehended that this decision was not intended to negative the general right of Government steamers and pilot vessels to salvage in every case that might arise.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J., said, that it was a serious matter to prevent the sailing of a ship upon an ex parte application, and he enquired what security would be required.

Mr. Prinsep mentioned the sum of Co.'s Rs. 1000.

The Court granted the warrant as applied for, the discharge of which would be conditional on giving security in that sum.

Warrant granted, bailable in Co.'s Rs. 1,000.

BOODHARUN SAIN v. LOCKENAUTH MULLICK.

Mr. Clarke moved for a rule to shew cause why the verdict for the plaintiff for Rs. 3,000, in the action for criminal conversation, tried in the last sittings, should not be set aside, and a nonsuit entered instead. The learned Counsel referred to the works of Macnaghten, Colbrooke and Strange, to shew that, according to Hindoo Law, adultery was criminally cognizable, but was never treated as a civil offence for which damages were recoverable. No authority certainly could be cited to show that the action could not be sustained by a Hindoo in a Court of English law, but there was no authority the other way, and the onus of the argument was rather on the other side. The case in this Court in the year 1778 proved nothing; because the plaintiff was there, nonsuited for want of evidence of the marriage, so that it became unnecessary to determine or even to raise the point. To hold that the action was sustainable, was contrary to the spirit of the Charter. Hindoos suing in this Court were to be regarded as foreigners, and ought to bring their own law into the Court with them.

The Court granted the rule.

Rule Nisi.

MOHA RANEE SUNDAY COOMARRER v. ROOVEDER COOPPOORAH AND ANOTHER.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep were heard in support of the motion for a receiver, and for an injunction to restrain the defendants from collecting the rents of the China Bazar. The suit was originally instituted against Muddenmohun Cooppoorah, the father of the defendants, and upon his death the bill was not revived, but a new bill was exhibited against his sons. The bill (and the affidavit in support of the motion) stated that the Bazar was purchased by Rajah Tezchunder, the husband (now deceased) of the complainant, for the sum of about 3 lakhs, and that indentures of lease and release were executed to the complainant as Sahib or trustee of a certain charity. The complainant had appointed the deceased, Muddenmohun, manager and collector of the bazar, and the bill against him charged a misappropriation and prayed an account. His defence was that the conveyance to the complainant was benames, and that he held an authority from the party really entitled, and was therefore unaccountable to the complainant. This defence, even if tenable on the part of the original defendant, (which was doubtful because a benames "trustee" appeared to be unmeaning) was not applicable to his sons, the present defendants, because they had no authority whatever from any one. These defendants had entered, unauthorizedly, upon the death of their father, and seems they had applied for the appointment of a receiver, but at the date of their answer it had not been granted. It was submitted, therefore, that the present defendants had no authority at all, and no answer to the present application.

The Court stopped Messrs. Clarke and Sandes for the defendants.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the application was out of the question, upon the complainant's own shewing. A receiver was usually granted where the title was in dispute. Now here the defendants had not a shadow of right or title, and a receiver was wholly unnecessary.

Mr. Clarke begged to refer to a statement in the affidavit, which was fatal of itself to the application. The affidavit positively swore, "that the complainant was in possession of the premises, and the rents and profits." What more did she want?

Sir E. Ryan said, that the Court had decided in favour of the defendants, and it was rather superfluous for the Counsel for the defence to argue in support of their case.

The Advocate-General hoped the injunction at least would be granted.

Sir E. Ryan. Certainly not. You have made out no case in equity. The complainant has a legal title, and her legal remedy by ejectment.

Discharged with costs.

This causé was argued at considerable length, but the Court postponed their decision. A report will appear hereafter.—Hark, June 25.

BULLARDOS AND OTHERS v. MULLODHUR CHOWDARY.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings. The plaint was in assumpsit, and the plea the general issue.

The Advocate-General stated the case for the plaintiffs. The transaction out of which this action arose was of a peculiar nature, peculiar perhaps to this country, where benamie contracts, unknown elsewhere, were of so common occurrence. The contract was entered into on the 19th of April last, for the purchase of ten chests, of opium at the rate of 490 rupees per chest, the plaintiff agreeing to procure that quantity of opium at the then next ensuing Company's sale on the 22d of April, and to sell it to the defendant at such price contracted for. The defendant had not signed the agreement in his own name, but in the name of one Muddosooden Paul, but the whole of the instrument was in his own hand writing, and the contract was entered into on his own account and for his benefit. As the value of opium had been lately considerably lowered, from the operation of circumstances with which possibly the Court were not wholly unacquainted, the defendant chose to repudiate the contract, and to deny all knowledge of the transaction. The only plea being the general issue, it was apprehended, that the whole case which it was necessary to establish for the plaintiff, was the execution of the contract upon which the action was brought.

Two native dalols or brokers were then called for the plaintiff, both of whom were present at the making of the contract, and one of whom was the subscribing witness. They proved that the whole instrument was written out by the defendant himself, and that he signed the name "Muddosooden Paul" in lieu of his own. Upon an objection being taken to this, the defendant answered, that he was in the habit of entering into contracts benamie, and that one name would serve as well as another. The sum of Rs. 202 was given soon after by way of earnest money.

Mr. Prinsep (with whom was Mr. Leth) addressed the Court for the defence. He had heard of many benamie contracts, but none the parallel of the present case. To allow this action to succeed, would be establishing a most dangerous precedent, especially at the present juncture, when speculators in opium would be but too happy to fasten their losing bargains upon others! The story told by the plaintiff's witnesses was most improbable. It was not usual for a native merchant to draw up instruments of agreement with his own hand, and that he should sign another person's name in his own handwriting, was extremely improbable, and without any assignable motive. The witnesses about to be called for the defence, would prove, that the handwriting was not that of the defendant, but of Muddosooden Paul himself, and that the defendant was in no way concerned in the transaction. The contract itself, whether benamie or not, was certainly not a transaction which deserved the favourable consideration of the Court. It was a gambling agreement, resembling in its nature the time-bargains in the stocks, where no money really passed, but where one party or the other, according to the rise or fall by the day when the contract was to be completed, was entitled to recover the difference. But there was also a ground of non-suit.* There was no proof of damages sustained by the plaintiff. The action was for "not accepting," and in such form of action, the proper measure of damages is the difference between the market price, and the price contracted for. See Boorman v. Nash, 9 B. and C. Reports. Now, here it did not appear what price was given, or might have been obtained for the opium.

Witnesses were then called, servants of the defendant, who attempted to shew, that the handwriting of the agreement was not that of the defendant, and (inferentially only) that he had nothing to do with the contract at all. Muddosooden Paul was not produced, but his absence was attempted to be accounted for, by showing, that a subpoena had been taken out, of which the defendant had been unable to procure the service.

The Advocate-General in reply, contended, that the case had not been touched by the evidence for the defence. If the whole proceeding on the part of the defendant was a contemplated fraud from the first, if he originally intended to wriggle by the agreement, should it be profitable, and to repudiate it in the event of its turning out a losing bargain, he would naturally adopt a feigned hand, and the witnesses, in stating, that the hand-writing was not like his, might have spoken the truth and yet proved nothing. With respect to the non-suit, it was out of the question. The only issue raised upon these pleadings was, whether the contract was executed or not. The plaintiff was entitled to recover the whole amount of the purchase-money, and the defendant had his counter-remedy in an action of trover, if the opium was not delivered. In the case cited, there had been a re-sale, and of course the vendors were only entitled to recover the difference.

Sir E. Ryan, after some deliberation on the bench, said, that the Court had agreed to give a verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed, but with liberty to the defendant to move to enter a verdict for nominal damages. There was certainly perjury somewhere, for it was impossible to reconcile the conflicting evidence. The general issue under the new rules, only put in issue, the question, whether the contract had been entered into, and as the Court were disposed to give credit to the witnesses for the plaintiff, there must, in any case, be a verdict for them; but the amount of damages was a different question. Upon this point, therefore, the defendant might move, that the verdict be reduced to nominal damages.

Verdict for the plaintiff for Rs. 4,698.—Hark. June 26.

GREENUTTY TARRAMONEY DASSER VERSUS DONAPOORVAH DABBE AND ANOTHER.

Mr. Clarke shewed cause against the rule obtained by the defendant, for entering a non-suit. The action was trover for certain jewels of considerable value, the property of the plaintiff, alleged to be wrongfully detained by the defendants. At the trial, the plaintiff's property in the jewels was clearly proved, and the possession of the jewels by the female defendant, who was the plaintiff's mother; but as there was no evidence of the jewels ever having been in the possession of the other defendant, a verdict was given for him, and the plaintiff obtained a verdict against the female defendant, with liberty to move reserved. The rule to set aside this verdict for the plaintiff, was obtained on the ground, taken at the trial, of insufficient proof of a wrongful conversion of the property, as the original possession by the defendant was admitted to be legal. Upon the point of conversion the evidence was, first, a formal notice to deliver up the property, directed to both defendants, but served upon the male defendant only, and produced by their joint attorney in Court. This, it was contended, was prima facie evidence, at least, of a demand upon the female defendant, and refusal by her also, because the defendants were executors, and, therefore, one person in the eye of the law.

Sir Edward Ryan. Although the defendants are stated to be executor and executrix in the plaint, that amounts to nothing, and must be rejected as mere surplussage. Trover cannot be brought against executors as such!

* It can only be a ground for nominal damages, not for non-suit.

Mr. Clarke then proceeded to the second point of evidence of the conversion, which consisted of proof of a quarrel between the plaintiff and her mother, shortly before the plaintiff left the residence of her mother, and ceased to reside there. Upon this occasion the plaintiff herself demanded the jewels, and the answer returned by the defendant, was, "that she did not know where they were." Now this reply, coupled with the proof that the jewels were, in fact, in her own custody and possession amounted to a refusal.

Mr. Leith argued in support of the rule. First, as to the formal notice. In torts, the act of one executor does not bind the other, and this action, being ex delicto, is not brought against them in their executorship capacity.

The Court stopped the learned Counsel upon this point, as they were quite clear upon the subject already.

Mr. Leith then proceeded to consider the second point. The answer returned by the defendant to the plaintiff's demand, must be taken altogether, and as she rested the non-delivery of the jewels in compliance with the requisition, upon the allegation that she was ignorant where they were at the time, this must be assumed to have been the fact. Nor did it actually appear that she was then in possession of the property, although her subsequent possession was undoubtedly established. But even if the answer returned was false, this was insufficient to prove actual refusal and a consequent conversion, for, it had been held that a false or evasive answer did not amount to refusal. Smith v. Young, 1 Camb. 441.

Mr. Clarke then begged to refer to a part of the evidence from which it appeared that part of the jewels were actually in pledge! No evidence of conversion could possibly be stronger. McCombie v. Davies, 6 East 538.

Mr. Leith confessed that this took him by surprise, as it appeared to have done their lordships also. Without doubt pledging the goods, it must be admitted, amounted to a conversion. But he should now contend that the defendant was not bound to deliver up the property at all. As the mother of the complainant, who was but a young girl, she was her natural guardian; and according to Hindoo law, the complainant had no right, without some very cogent reason, to leave her family-house, and demand that her separate property should be given up to her. No reason, such as ill-treatment or the like, had appeared in evidence, to justify her voluntary departure.

Sir E. Ryan, said that the rule must be discharged, and the verdict must stand, with the usual proviso, that it be reduced to nominal damages upon the restoration of the specific property. It was quite clear that a pledge of the property amounted to conversion, and although it only appeared here that the pledge was of a portion, it was presumptive proof of the conversion of the whole, and rendered complete and conclusive the evidence which was imperfect before. The Court could not recognise the doctrine contended for, that the mother might retain her daughter's property on the plea of guardianship. The law and justice of the case appeared to concur in allowing the verdict for the plaintiff to stand.

Rule discharged.

The case of the E. I. Company v. Govinchunder Donnerjee stands for trial to-morrow on the Common-law board; and Bhowanipersaud v. Copantoll and others, on the equity side, stands for hearing on further directions on the Master's Report. — Friday, June 28.

FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1839

IN THE GOODS OF ASTURACHATER MALCOLM MANUK.

This was a petition on the part of one Mariam Vardom wife of S. M. Vardom, that administration of the goods, of the deceased be granted to her as sister and next of kin, and that the letters of administration granted in February last to the Ecclesiastical Registrar be revoked. A caveat was entered by the Registrar. From the affidavits it appeared that the administration had been granted to the Registrar with the consent of all of the next of kin, and that the husband of the petitioner had at first approved of it himself, although he had since withdrawn his consent. All of the rest of the next of kin were still anxious that the administration should remain with the Registrar, and the affidavits set forth circumstances, which (if true) tended to show that the petitioner was an unfit person to be entrusted with the administration. The amount of property was estimated at about Rs. 1,60,000.

A question arose, upon the Rules 9th and 10th on the Ecclesiastical side, whether affidavits in reply came within the 9th Rule, which required that the affidavit in support of the caveat shall be filed within eight days after the entry thereof, and that no affidavit shall be filed after the expiration of the eight days, without special leave.

Sir E. Ryan said that the 9th Rule, of course, applied only to affidavits in support of the caveat in the first instance, which were required for the purpose of shewing some prima facie ground. The 10th Rule shewed that the affidavits in reply might be afterwards filed. The same point was ruled in Shamloll Tagore's case.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith were heard (on Monday) in support of the caveat entered by the Registrar. The learned Counsel first commented upon the evidence of the unfitness of the petitioner.

Sir E. Ryan observed that the question at present seemed only to be between the Registrar and the next of kin who made this application, and against whom his caveat was entered.

Sir J. P. Grant. If we allow this caveat, it cannot be said to be in favour of any of the other next of kin, (though it may be true that they are more fit to be entrusted with the administration) because their petition is not before the Court.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith submitted that this caveat must be considered the caveat of the next of kin themselves, because they gave their support to the Registrar; and there had been cases in this Court, where a caveat had been allowed, although there was no other petition before the Court. But secondly, the petitioner was bound by his consent once given, and could not now demand that the letters of administration granted to the Registrar should be recalled. The 21st sect. of the 39th and 40th Geo. III. c. 79 was conclusive.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Clarke for the petitioner, contended that their client, being the only next of kin who applied for the administration, was entitled to it as matter of right, and that the Court had no discretion to refuse it. She was not absolutely bound by the verbal consent of her husband once given; unless indeed the Registrar had proceeded to a material extent under the administration granted to him. It might perhaps have been different if the citations had been personally served, but this had not been done, and was probably never done in any case.

The Court took time to consider, and this morning (Friday) delivered their judgment, dismissing the petition.

Sir E. Ryan. The only question is whether the caveat of the Registrar against the petition of this next of kin, is to be allowed. We are of opinion, putting aside most of the matters disclosed by the voluminous affidavits, that this party is not entitled under the circumstances to recall the letters of administration granted to the Registrar, and that the caveat must be allowed. The whole question turns upon the 21st and 22nd sections of the Statute cited.

Now the Statute, in giving the administration to the Registrar, reserves only the right of those "absent in Europe or elsewhere," and even if the party were absent, he must make his application within a reasonable time. But in the present instance, he has once absolutely given his consent. The usual advertisements have been inserted, and the citations have been posted, in usual which is sufficiently for we are of opinion that they need not be personally served. No analogous case can arise at home, because such a capacity as ex officio administrator is not known in England.

Sir J. P. Grant considered the point one of considerable importance. With the question of unfitness it had nothing to do, as the case stood. The sole question was whether under the circumstances, the administration granted to the Registrar was revocable, or not. His Lordship was clearly of opinion that it was not revocable.

Sir H. W. Seton concurred.

Caveat allowed.

BULLVADORS AND OTHERS V. BULLVADORS CHOWDRY.

Mr. Prinsep moved for a rule to reduce the verdict to nominal damages, in this action tried last Tuesday. As the court had given him liberty to move, he apprehended that the rule nisi would be granted without any cases being cited in support of the argument for the reduction.

Sir E. Ryan. Oh, no! Mr. Prinsep. We should prefer having an authority or two, if you please!

Mr. Prinsep was not at present prepared with any other case than the one cited at the trial; he would therefore, with the court's permission, mention it now, merely in order to save the four days, and he would move it on Monday.

Stood over.

BHOWANNIPERSAUD, EXECUTOR &c. V. GOPAULLOL AND OTHERS.

This cause was called on for further directions on the Master's Report, but as it appeared likely to occupy more time than was expected, and as both Court and Counsel seemed to have only a dim recollection of the proceedings had when the decretal order of March 1838, was made in the cause, it was postponed until Tuesday next.

THE EAST INDIA COMPANY V. GOVINDOOR UNDER BONNERJEE.

Mr. Cochran opened the pleadings.

The Advocate General stated the case. The action was brought upon a promissory note for Rs. 18,500 given by the defendant for certain Opium bid for by him at the Company's sales, and made payable to Mr. Samuel G. Palmer, Secretary to the Board of Salt and Opium. There was also a count in the plaint upon an account stated; and evidence would be called to establish, not only the original contract and consideration, and the promissory note declared upon, but also subsequent acknowledgments on the part of the defendant, which would be available under the account stated. What defence could be set up to such a case as this, it was difficult to conjecture, but that there was some defence to be attempted, was certain. Every difficulty had been thrown in the way by this defendant; for upon a former occasion he had pleaded a demurrable plea, and now he had put the plaintiff upon proof of jurisdiction, by giving notice of intention to dispute it, although it was as clear as day that he was a party subject to the jurisdiction of the Court. Like some other purchasers of Opium, the defendant was anxious to get rid of contracts, which now threatened to be losing bargains.

Evidence of the jurisdiction was first given. The execution of the note was proved, and the consideration, as stated in the opening. The defendant too had afterwards acknowledged his liability, and promised to pay. It appeared that upon the default of the defendant in completing his contract, the Opium was resold at a loss, but the amount of loss was not specifically shown.

Mr. Prinsep for the defence, submitted that the plaintiff must be nonsuited, and that the verdict ought to be for nominal damages only on the second count. With respect to the promissory note, it was clear the plaintiff could not recover, because there was a fatal variance, the instrument being not in the name of the Company, but in the name of Mr. Palmer! Then with respect to the account stated, there was evidence of a resale afterwards, and it did not appear, therefore, what damages had been sustained.

Sir E. Ryan said, that upon the plea of the defendant to the note "denying the making," the only question was whether the note was his or not. It clearly was made by him, and there must be a verdict against him on the first count.

Verdict for the Plaintiffs. — Hark. June 29.

It should seem that the defendant ought rather to have gone for a verdict on both counts, and that the argument with respect to the count on the note, ought to have been, that "no person can be a party to a bill or note, unless his name appears in some way or other upon it," which is an elementary rule upon the law of bills and notes. See Chitty Bills p. 31. Eighth Edition. And with respect to the second count, the objection seems to be fatal, that after a resale, the action for the value must be a special action for the difference of price, which would be the measure of damages. See 4 Bingh. 722; Peake 42 (note); 1 Stark. N. P. C. 430; 6 Taunt. 166, 167.

There being no opposition, the insolvent was sworn as to the correctness of his schedule and discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF H. C. CHINNERY.

The insolvent was questioned as to a gun and a musical clock said to have been in his possession. The gun, he said, was the property of his brother, and as to the clock, he never had one. Discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF W. NISBITT.

No opposition. The insolvent discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS.

The insolvent had presented a petition, on which Sir H. W. Seton proceeded to make several observations, previous to entering on other business connected with the case. He first remarked, that the fact set forth in the petition, of the insolvent's having given into the hands of the solicitor, the title deeds of all the property in his possession, for the purpose of having them included in his schedule, would exempt him from a charge of fraud on that point, as it was all that he could do.

Mr. Strettel, the insolvent's attorney, took upon himself the blame of having neglected to participate in the trust property of Mrs. Jacobs, and stated that he had omitted to do so, on the supposition that it was one and the same with the insolvent's own possessions.

The Court remarked, that there was a second allegation in the petition, setting forth that certain receipts for property in the possession of other parties, had been given up to the creditors as securities. This would, if correct, also tell favourably for the insolvent.

The third point noticed, was a statement regarding the salary received by the insolvent as organist of St. Andrew's Church. It appeared, that this salary being a precarious one, and dependant on the will of the church-officers, was one on which the creditors had no claim.

The Court pointed out the danger of the practice of omitting such items in the schedule, on the supposition that the creditors had no claim upon them; and observed, that much trouble would have been spared by inserting this salary in the schedule as it now was in the petition.

The fourth and last statement of the petition remarked upon, that touching the sale of certain machine organs, said to have been disposed of to unknown individuals on the river. Sir H. W. Seton said, that he had endeavoured to inform himself as to the traffic on the river, and the result of his enquiries was, that though much trade might be carried on at the large stations, yet he thought it very unlikely that such a sale could be effected in the part mentioned by the insolvent. He had, therefore, extreme difficulty in giving credit to the statement.

The insolvent was then examined, and stated, that the shop and godowns in Durrumtollah, had, since his incarceration, been in the possession of Mrs. Jacobs.

The lower part was occupied by a Mr. Bartlett, a cabinet maker, who had carried on business there since August last. Mr. Bartlett, he said, had not hitherto paid any rent for the premises.

Mr. M. Johnson produced various papers, and was examined at great length relative to the title deeds of Mrs. Jacobs's trust property; and detailed the various proceedings connected with it since it was purchased. His evidence went to show, that the property had ever been regarded and treated as being truly property held in trust for the insolvent's wife. The result of the examination appeared to be in favor of the insolvent, in exonerating him from the charge of an attempted fraud.

Sir H. W. Seton, addressing Mr. Strettel said, that the schedule must be amended in the necessary particulars, with regard to this property. As to the organs, it would be very important to the insolvent to give some clue by which to trace the sale. He would therefore wish to give him an opportunity of making such enquiries as might throw some light on the transaction.

The insolvent was accordingly remanded for a fortnight, to make such enquiries, and to amend schedule.

IN THE MATTER OF R. PARKER.

An order was applied for, setting aside (as the court thought) the award of an arbitration concerning a certain estate in Java.

Order refused.

IN THE MATTER OF T. MORAN.

This insolvent was examined with respect to certain Company's papers which had gone into the hands of his brother.

Thomas Moran, the brother of the insolvent, and who was in custody for contempt of Court, underwent a long and strict examination, the result of which did not redound much to his honour, proving him guilty of the grossest frauds upon his brother.

In pursuance with the subpoena duces tecum, he produced Company's papers to a large amount, some of them held under fictitious names, and part of which, to the amount of 18,000 rupees, he had obtained from his brother, by a most ingenious device. It appeared that his brother had given him a power of attorney, authorising him to sell these papers, which power of attorney he had endeavoured to use by having the papers transferred to himself. On applying at the Treasury for that purpose, he was informed, that the power of attorney was considered insufficient to authorise the transfer, and that it would be necessary to procure his brother's endorsement before such a transfer could be effected. To stifle the suspicions of his brother, and to give plausibility to his application for this endorsement, he recommended him to take the advice of counsel on the propriety of the measure. He then drew up a fictitious case, to suit his own views, and laid it before Mr. Cochrane, who, guided by that statement, advised the endorsement. On the question being put to him as to the truth or falsehood of the case submitted to Mr. Cochrane, and as to his object in procuring the opinion of counsel thereon, he refused to answer, protesting against such questions being put to him—an interested party. The Court, however, informing him, that he must answer the questions, he finally acknowledged, that the case was false, and that his object in putting it was to deceive his brother, and induce him to make, over the securities in question.

On being asked, if he was willing to re-endorse these papers back to his brother, from whom he had thus unfairly obtained them, he replied "of course not," and made a similar answer with respect to a watch which his brother had entrusted to his care when he went to prison.

The Advocate-General expressed his readiness to withdraw his opposition to the release of the insolvent, Francis; but remarked, that with regard to the witness Thomas, he should be justified in moving for an attachment, and having him sent back to prison till he could learn to answer more satisfactorily. He would, however, propose a more lenient measure, namely, that the Court should retain possession of the Government Securities which the witness had laid before it.

Sir H. W. Seton said, that the Advocate-General acted very properly in declining to press the matter against the insolvent, who had already suffered enough, having been nearly three years in prison; but with respect to the motion to retain the papers, he should be happy to be convinced that the law allowed him such a power, as the exercise of it would materially further the ends of justice.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith argued, that according to the practice of this country, the Court was fully authorised to act on this point, and after a little consideration, Sir H. W. Seton observed, that as there appeared to be so strong an impression that such was the practice of the Court, he would put the witness to apply for the papers produced.

The insolvent was discharged, and application was made for the release of the witness, he having fulfilled the commands of the Court, for contempt of which he had been in confinement. He also was accordingly discharged.—Hark, June 3.

SATURDAY, JUNE 22, 1839.

(Before Sir H. W. Seton.)

Mr. Clarke presented a petition from Thomas Moran, who was examined at the last sitting in the matter of his brother Francis Moran, an insolvent, praying for the restitution of certain Government securities, which he had then produced under a subpoena of duces tecum, and which had been retained by the Court.

The Advocate General opposed the prayer of the petition, on the ground of the paper in question having been fraudulently obtained by the petitioner, and was of opinion that the Court ought still to retain possession of them, as securities, in case of any prosecution, which might arise out of the transactions connected with them.

Sir H. W. Seton, however, did not think the Court was, under the circumstances, authorized to detain the property any longer, and therefore directed that it should be surrendered.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS.

Mr. Strettell, the Insolvent's Attorney stated, that he had just received a note from his client, informing him, that he was unable to attend, in consequence of a severe headache which had confined him to his bed all night, and requesting Mr. Strettell to apply for the postponement of the case until Tuesday, or such other time as the Court should think proper.

Mr. Clarke objected to the postponement, saying that he believed this alleged illness was only a feint to elude examination. He had, he said, subpoenaed two witnesses whose evidence was of great importance, in affording a clue to the discovery of the organs said to have been sold by the insolvent upon the river, and he requested that, either the insolvent, who could produce no medical certificate of his inability to attend, should be sent for, or that he (Mr. Clarke) should be allowed to proceed with the examination of these witnesses. To the latter course Mr. Strettell agreed, and after Mr. M. Johnson and Mr. Robert Bartlett had, on the motion of Mr. Clarke, been ordered out of Court, the examination was commenced.

Mr. Charles Gould stated, that he was formerly an apprentice to Mr. Jacobs, and had been in his employ altogether about five years. He was with the Insolvent at the time the latter went up the river, but had quitted his service somewhat less than a month before he went to gaol. He did not know what had become of the organs which were in the possession of the Insolvent about that time. The witness himself had removed two of the five to his own residence about three months before Jacobs went to prison, but, on discovering that he was about to take the benefit of the Act, he had sent them back, being unwilling to undergo any risk through having them in his possession. He had previously removed a quantity of music to a house in North Endally, which had been engaged by Mr. Jacobs; but in which he believes, neither he or his family ever resided. By whom the other three organs had been taken away he cannot tell, having been in bed at the time of their removal. He did not know why the property had been so removed, but he believed that Mr. Jacobs was in difficulties at the time. He (the witness) had taken the two organs to keep them for Mr. Jacobs, and they were in his keeping about two or three months. Jacobs was in gaol at the time when they were returned, but, he believed, Mrs. Jacobs and others of the family, lived in the house at the time. He knew Mr. M. Johnson, who was a friend of the family, but was not aware that he removed the organs. The three organs which were removed without the witness's knowledge, as well as those which he himself took in charge, were all taken away before Mr. Jacobs went upon the river.

Mr. Clarke expressed his satisfaction with the manner in which Mr. Gould had given his evidence, which had thrown new light upon the subject, and hoped that the other witnesses might be equally candid and explicit.

Mr. Robert Bartlett, a carver and gilder, said, that he occupied the lower apartments of Mr. Jacobs's premises, which he used as a shop. He took possession when Mr. Jacobs went to prison, but had previously occupied the adjoining premises. He paid no rent for the shop he now has, nor was any rent looked for from him. He knew that some property of the Insolvent had been removed to a house in Endally, but had been brought back after Jacobs went to prison. As to the organs in question, he disclaimed all knowledge of them. He had, he said, been offered a bribe to induce him to give information as to where they were, but he had, even then, denied that he knew anything of them. Though on friendly terms with the Insolvent's family, he never talked about or interfered in their private affairs.

It had been stated by the Insolvent, that one Seebo, a sinner in his employ, had taken away certain invoices, which were of great importance in the absence of a stock-book which the Insolvent had neglected to keep. Mr. Clarke questioned both the last witness and the former, concerning this man, but though they both had heard of such a person, they knew nothing of him.

Mr. Clarke regretted that the Insolvent was not in attendance that he might have examined him on certain points in Mr. Gould's evidence, before he could become aware of what that witness had deposed. He moved, therefore, that as it was pretty clear that his illness was all a pretence, he should be sent for forthwith.

Sir H. W. Seton, however, thought that such a proceeding would be irregular, and that as the Insolvent's Attorney had not opposed the examination of witnesses in his absence, the evasive intention was not very clear. He therefore ordered that the case should stand over to the next sitting of the Court.—Hark, June 24.

CALCUTTA.

THE HON'BLE COL. MORRISON.—The Hon'ble Colonel Morrison, vacated the Deputy-Governorship of Bengal on the 15th instant, and is to be succeeded by the Hon'ble T. C. Robertson. Sir W. Cassamart will occupy the vacant seat in the Council.

FIVE PER CENT. LOAN.—It is said that a five per cent. loan will be opened immediately as a consequence of the abolition of the opium trade with China.

POLICE FINES AND FEES.—The amount of fines and fees realized at the Police Office during the year 1858, is rupees 13,629 6, averaging rupees 1,135-12 6 per man-month.

NEW CIRCULATING LIBRARY.—A number of natives have established a cheap Circulating Library of English books, in order to afford their countrymen an opportunity of enlightening themselves by reading.

FALL OF CANDAHAR.—A royal salute was fired from the ramparts of Fort William on the 3rd instant, in honor of the fall of Candahar.

THE COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER.—Mr. Fenwick has resigned the editorship of the Commercial Advertiser. His successor, Mr. Kirkpatrick makes his debut in a very improving guise.

COMPREHENSIVE STEAM COMPANY.—The comprehensive Steam Company progresses. On the 1st instant, the number of shares taken, and first instalments thereon paid, amounted to 1809 or 9,45,000 rupees; during the week the total doubtless reached ten lakhs, which will give a paid up first instalment of one lakh of rupees.

REPORT OF THE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.—It is asserted by a respectable authority, that the statement about the presentation of the report of the Municipal Committee to Government is unfounded, and that this Committee has again commenced its sittings.

DEPARTURE OF A SAILING VESSEL WITH MAIL.—Government has taken up the clipper Water Witch for eight thousand rupees, to convey Overland Mails in July from Calcutta to Aden, whence they will be conveyed to Suez by the steamer Atlanta. The clipper will leave Calcutta on the 15th proximo at day night, and will be towed out by Steam.

A NEW SCHOOL.—The inhabitants of Bursabatalah, a populous village, about six miles to the north of Allipore, feeling the want of an English school, have determined upon establishing one at the instance of Baboo Brijomohun Haldar, who, to further the object in view, intends applying to the Committee of Public Instruction for aid.

ASSAM TEA COMPANY.—The Government has declined to afford the Assam Tea Company the co-operation so essential to its establishment, and has merely offered that degree of sanction to its preliminary proceedings which, to be useful, ought to be followed up.

IRON STEAMER.—The iron steamer which left Allahabad on the 5th instant, got aground on a lee shore in a hurricane, and broke her paddles. She was obliged to return to repair and started again on the 9th instant.

TICCA BEARERS.—Among the statistical reports is one which shows the number of ticca bearers in and about Calcutta. From the registry in the Police office it amounts to no less than ELEVEN THOUSAND FIVE HUNDRED, which being divided by four, gives the aggregate number of Palankeens, viz. TWO THOUSAND EIGHT HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FIVE.

PARTAUD CHUND.—It is said that the sei diant Partaud Chund has been found guilty of faux personation only, and been sentenced to pay a fine of a thousand rupees.

On the above case, the sei diant Partaud Chunder, one presented a petition to the Nizamut Adawlat soliciting another trial, on the simple question of identity alone, as he conceived the above to have been an unfair one.

DR. CAMPBELL.—Dr. Campbell, Residency Surgeon and Political Assistant at the Court of Nepal, has been appointed Political Agent at Doringlung, in the room of Colonel Lloyd, whose services have been placed at the disposal of the Commander of the Forces.

DR. MACKINNON AND MR. OLDFIELD.—The investigation of the charges preferred by Dr. Mackinnon against Mr. Oldfield, the judge of Tirhoot, closed on the 20th instant. Mr. Samuels, the prosecutor on the part of the Government, and Mr. Lee Warner, who was charged with the investigation of the charges, may be expected down in a few days, the former to resume his magisterial duties in Hoogly, and the latter to take his seat in the Sudder.

NEW CATHEDRAL.—A new Cathedral is to be erected on the Esplanade, nearly opposite the late Chowringhee Theatre. The Bishop himself gives a lakh of rupees towards the building, which is to be commenced upon forthwith. Contributions from the public, are requested to be sent to the Rev. J. H. Pratt, the Bishop's Chaplain, or to R. Molloy, Esq., Registrar of the Archdiocese, "the sooner the better, as the amount of probable support may materially affect the detail of the Bishop's plans."

MEDICATED INSURRECTION.—It is said that some residents of Oude have been engaged in going round the Jaunpore district, enlisting strong men, to assemble after the rains at Goruckpore, where they will be armed, and the object of their being collected told them. The men are to get six and eight rupees per month, and at present two rupees per man is given, and an oath administered that they shall not fail to keep their appointments.

A POLICE THANA ROBBERY.—On the night of the 10th instant, some audacious burglars broke into the Jann Bazar Thana and carried off money and goods to the amount of about 300 rupees. The thieves effected an entrance by making a hole in the wall on the side of the premises, opposite that on which the Thana-dar and his subordinates were sleeping. No traces have yet been discovered, likely to lead to the apprehension of the bold plunderers, who will, doubtless, by this unprecedented feat, win immortal fame among their predatory brethren.

OMPTAH.—Captain Taylor, the new partner of the firm of Carr, Tagore and Co., while on a visit to their coal depots at Omptah, gave a bungalow of theirs to be used as a school-room. But it seems that the parties in the neighbourhood are not able to raise a sufficient fund for maintaining a school; and as there is not a public or private school within twenty-four miles of the place, it would be a great boon to the inhabitants if the where-withal could be supplied.

ENGLISH BURIAL GROUND.—It is said, that Government have purchased the piece of land, comprising about four biggahs, on the east side of Circular Road, once the property of Mr. J. Richardson, Branch Pilot, together with the lower-roomed houses thereon, for the purpose of converting it into a burial ground, in connection with the present English Burial Ground in Park Street, which is already sadly overcrowded with graves and monuments.

LIGHTNING.—On the night of the 20th instant, Calcutta was visited by a severe thunder storm, by which a cargo brig, containing rice, &c. to the amount of twenty-five thousand rupees, was struck and burnt to the water's edge. One of her crew was severely injured by the bolt. The house of Baboo Kally Gopio, at Cuthbuddunge, was also struck—a part of it thrown down, and two children and a woman killed. At Tallygunge four men, who were sleeping in a hut, were killed by it. A house was struck at Goomghar, but received very little injury. At Chowringhee three men were killed, and at Hallyghat three more men and a cow. A native doctor's house at Jorasanko was destroyed by the electric fluid and two children and a woman killed. This is a fearful loss of life from lightning, and, we believe, unprecedented in Calcutta.

INDIAN PROSPECTS.—A letter from the Nulder district states, that the planters in that quarter have a very fair prospect before them this season. The October crop is said to be a splendid one, and manufacturing operations have already commenced in some factories, and by the 15th of the present month, it is expected, that every factory on the Nulder river will be in full work. The spring crop was also doing well, though some parties complained of want of rain, and others that they had either had enough or too much, so very partial have the showers been this year. The river was rising gently.

The hopes of the planters in several parts of the country, however, have been considerably damped, by the quick rising of rivers and the consequent loss of indigo plant from inundation. The river Kosee and little Gunduck have come down with such force, that the Kosee rose three feet in one night, and much timber has been carried away or buried by this sudden and unexpected rise. Many thousand bhegams of plant have been swept away, and the great bend at Rajshahi has burst and inundated the whole country. Part of Purneah and much of Malda, it is feared, must have suffered heavily.

DARJEELING.—Bad accounts have been received from Darjeeling. Poor David Wilson has met with a sad accident in the falling of a tree which has broken his leg, and totally incapacitated him, for the present, from continuing his efforts for the completion of the hotel. He had been generously received into the house of Mr. Hampton, of Dinagore, where every attention that kindness and humanity could suggest, was being shown him; but there was little prospect of his recovering soon enough to prosecute his labors, in time to be of any service this year to the pausing public of the Lower Provinces.

CIVIL AND UNOCCUPANTED SERVICES.—With the view of working out economical arrangements, a considerable reduction in the number of appointments to the civil service is in contemplation, and the offices are to be filled, as vacancies occur, by the unoccupied. The service of the latter is to be advanced in the important particulars of rank and salaries.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND.—It will be interesting to the Members of the Bengal Civil Service to learn, that private letters received by the last Overland Mail mention, that the Court of Directors have at length determined upon allowing a limited number of annuities to be granted annually at a quarter of the value thereof, so long as the assets of their Annuity Fund will bear it.

ALLIANCE INSURANCE COMPANY. The second half yearly meeting of the Alliance Insurance Company, was held on the 21st inst., at the office of the Secretaries, Messrs. Muller and Co., Lyon's Range. There being no business of importance for its consideration, the usual formal resolutions were passed, and the meeting broke up.

MCHANIC'S INSTITUTE.—The members of the Mechanic's Institute assembled at the Town Hall on the night of the 12th instant, to hear Mr. Middleton's second lecture on Astronomy. The lecturer commenced with a history of the science, and proceeded on to a discourse on its leading features and fundamental doctrines. There were very few auditors present on the occasion.

CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE.—It is said, that at a meeting of the late proprietors of the late Chowringhee Theatre, held at the private residence of one of the party, it was resolved to dispose of the ground upon which the house stood and of all the property which was saved on the occasion. Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore accordingly at once became the purchaser for fifteen thousand rupees, and a contribution of two hundred rupees from each shareholder, engaging to exonerate them from all future responsibilities. It is not the intention of the baboo to rebuild the theatre on its original site, but to rent thereon a couple of handsome residences. It is whispered, however, that measures will be taken for raising a theatre worthy of Calcutta in a more eligible part of the town; and in the mean time an effort will be made by another party, to provide us with a temporary temple to Thalia and her graver sister.

THE TRADE ASSOCIATION—RELIEF OF OFFICERS IN THE MILITARY SERVICE.—A Memorial has been presented by the Trade Association, to the Supreme Council, and is now under consideration. It has for its object the relief of those of the military service who labour under pecuniary difficulties, and to obviate a resort to the Insolvent Court; a measure which has hitherto been attended with an accumulation of evil to the insolvent, and loss to the creditor. With a view to aid the exertions of officers anxious to act in fairness towards their creditors, the Trade Association would gladly interpose their influence and good offices in effecting a fair compromise between a debtor and creditor; but in the absence of any guarantee or security, they have found it very difficult to make permanent arrangements affording protection to each party. With a view to remove this bar, the memorial suggests to the authorities in council a regulation or order sanctioning the registry of pay drafts by paymasters, an act which will answer the proposed end, will secure to the army the services of its officers with their regiments, uninterrupted by the assailant of civil process, and secure them from a resort obnoxious to every gentlemanly mind.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—A very numerous meeting of the Members of the Chamber of Commerce, took place on the 4th instant, in pursuance of a requisition signed by a respectable portion of that body, for the purpose of reconsidering the vote at which the Chamber arrived on the 31st of May, not to express any opinion on the expediency or otherwise of doing away with the system of drawbacks and substituting that of bonding for all imported articles intended for exportation.

The following resolution was proposed and adopted on the occasion;—

That the Chamber views with satisfaction any proposal to reduce the burdens on the trade of the port, and therefore approves of the abandonment of the one-eighth of the duty hitherto reserved on re-export.

That if it be desirable to confine this to goods which may have been bonded, or which may have been shipped without being removed from the Custom House, within three months at present allowed for payment of duty, the Chamber desires, that it be left optional with importers to land their goods and thus lose the privilege of free Export or to pay the duty and receive only on re-export, because it will be more advantageous to many parties to adopt the latter course, even with the forfeit of one-eighth of the duty, and loss of interest, than to be compelled to use the Bonded Warehouses.

UNION BANK.—The following resolutions were passed at a meeting of the Proprietors of the Union Bank, held on the 5th instant.

1.—That the new Bank Deed, as provisionally approved at the Special General Meeting held on the 4th May last, be, and the same is, hereby finally adopted.

2.—That in pursuance of the resolution just carried the Directors be instructed to take immediate measures to have the new deed engrossed, and signed by the proprietors; and that they do also cause a sufficient number of copies to be printed.

3d.—That it is expedient to increase the Capital of the Union Bank to one crore of rupees.

4th.—That the additional Capital be raised by the creation of 2,000 new shares of 1,000 each.

5th.—That such new shares be disposed of as follows: viz. each holder of four shares on the day of the next Half Yearly Meeting in July 1839, to be entitled to one new share at par.

6th.—That it is expedient to create a reserved fund to meet casual losses, instead of trenching upon the dividends.

7th.—That Resolution No. 6, be rescinded, and that the subject be reserved for consideration at the next Half Yearly Meeting.

8th.—That such shares as cannot be taken off in the manner provided for by the next foregoing and 10th following Resolutions, because many shareholders hold numbers of shares not divisible by four, be put up at par and sold by Auction, and the profits of premium, applied for the exclusive benefit of those proprietors not enabled for the cause above mentioned to obtain new shares at par.

9th.—That the shares be paid for as follows: viz. one half for each share in cash in six months from the next Half Yearly Meeting in July 1839, and the remaining half in six months from the 1st January 1840.

Proprietors who prefer it may pay up in cash in full at once and previous to January 1840, and thereupon they shall be entitled to receive dividends from date of payment. Those who pay up one half shall receive interest at the rate of 4 per cent., or whatever may be the rate of interest given on fixed deposits.

10th.—That the period within which absentee proprietors, meaning thereby those out of India, must pay up for their additional stock, be six months in addition to that allowed to residents in India, and for those in India above 15 days date from Calcutta, a reasonable period, to be fixed by the directors, in addition to that allowed to residents of Calcutta.

11th.—That all shares not taken up and paid for pursuant to the foregoing Resolutions, by wilful neglect of the Proprietors, be sold for the benefit of the Proprietors at large.

ERROR CORRECTED.—The Editor of the Englishman having been more than once twitted in private circles, with his having in a letter from Fernzapore, conferred the dignity of Baronet on Mr. W. H. McNaghten, he thinks it right to say that he is perfectly innocent of such an assumption of the Royal Prerogative. He never called the Envoy with Shah Soojah any thing more than plain "Mister," or his lady any other than "Mistress;" but the then Editor for the time being (the Sub-Editor in fact,) having learnt from the Calcutta Courier that Mr. McNaghten was either a Baronet, or deserved to be one, took upon himself at once to bestow the dignity in print. The matter is of little moment, only it is as well that when blunders are perpetrated, the burden should be put on the proper ass.

MEDICAL COLLEGE.—A very important question relative to the expediency of continuing the stipendiary system in the Medical College, is now under the consideration of Government.

COLLEGE HOSPITAL.—The building attached to the Medical College, and intended to be appropriated as the College Hospital, is nearly completed. It affords accommodation for eighty patients, and will be in the charge of some qualified alumni of this noble institution under the immediate supervision of the learned professors. This useful establishment has two objects in view. One is to impart a practical knowledge of anatomy and surgery to such students as have acquired a proficiency in theory, and the other is to relieve, as far as possible, the immense number of the distressed sick that abound in this populous city.

BAROO NOBIN CHUNDER MITTER.—The appointment of Bahoo Nobin Chunder Mitter, one of the four passed students of the Medical College, to the situation of Medical Attendant in the family of the Rajah of Moysadol, on a monthly salary of one hundred rupees, besides conveyance allowance, as announced in the Hurkaru sometime ago has not taken place. The offer was actually made to the young practitioner, but, in consequence of the expence, it was subsequently withdrawn.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.—Capt. Russell, who left Calcutta in the Lord William Bentinck, on an experimental voyage to explore the Jennai, and to convey coal to some eligible depot in Assam, proceeded by the usual Sunderban route to the junction of the Barroa with the Herringotta, some miles below Commercolly. He thence proceeded to Jaffiergunj, and ascended the Jennai to within a few miles of Jumalpara, which place he was unable to reach from the shallowness of the stream. He then proceeded up the Burrampooter to Dewangunj, and thence very nearly to Bugwah, where he cast off the coal boat he had in tow, and directed it to proceed to Gowalpara, Gowhatty and Jeypore.

Having thus far performed his outward trip, he returned down the Burrampooter and Jennai, until he reached the large mart of Surajgunj. Here, to his surprise, he found an entirely new river, leading to the south-west, but not marked in any map; and being assured that there was plenty of water, he judiciously resolved to attempt tracing its course. He accordingly descended the stream, and, after a rapid and nearly direct course, found himself in the Ganges at Pubna. He found that this new river had not less than six feet water the whole way, with a current less rapid than that of the Jennai, and with fewer eddies and whirlpools. Pubna is now eight or nine miles from the Ganges, while in all the maps it is marked as close upon the river's bed.

THE FAVOURITE.—H. M. S. Favourite has proceeded from Diamond Harbour, on her voyage to Rangoon, to resume her station off that town, for the protection of British interests, which, it is surmised, may be placed in jeopardy, when the news of the Chinese doing shall reach Amersapora.

THE WELLSLEY.—H. M. S. Wellesley is likely to go direct to China. Indeed there seems no possible motive for the Admiral's coming to Calcutta. The Bengal Government has distinctly intimated, in reply to a communication from the Chamber of Commerce, that it possesses no jurisdiction in regard to British residents or property at Canton; but that a copy of the Chamber's letter, urging the adoption of measures for the protection of both, should be sent forthwith to the Admiral, to act upon according to his own discretion.

THE ELIZABETH.—The Elizabeth, which lately left this port, was caught in the gale issuing from the South, and was struck by a heavy sea, which tore in her stern. The wind then chopped round and blew from the West, and the vessel scudded before it. When the gale subsided the vessel anchored as being too much injured to remain at sea, and sent her boat to look for a pilot. The boat returned after four days, unable to find a pilot, upon which the Captain weighed anchor, and the vessel soon after struck somewhere off the mouth of the Roymantab river, and went to pieces, and the crew took to the boat and, making land, came up Sandy Creek, without knowing where they were, until they met a native, who piloted them to Calcutta.

SHIPWRECK.—There is a general impression abroad, that some vessel has been lost during the late gales at the sand-heads. The Gentoo reported the hull of a vessel in Balasore Roads, and the Bengal passed a lower-mast and top, on her return. Several other spars and signs of wreck have been seen by other inward-bound ships; and it would be advisable that one of the pilot schooners should proceed to the spot where the Gentoo saw the sternpost and counter-timbers of a vessel in twenty fathoms water, and endeavour to ascertain whether she has recently foundered.

In reference to the late gales, which seem to have swept from East to West over the head of the Bay, it strikes us a very excellent opportunity is now afforded of testing the merits of the theories broached as to the force, direction, and continuance of gales of wind, in an ingenious article in a late number of the Edinburgh Review. Not less probably than 10 to 12 ships, from different parts of the world, scattered from the Arracan Coast to Ganjam, were caught in the gales of the 3rd, 4th and 5th inst., and a comparison of the state of the weather drawn from their respective logs, in varying degrees of longitude and latitude, would be doubtless, very interesting, and bear with some weight on the accuracy or otherwise of opinions, generally, it must be admitted, considered as fanciful.

A NEW NATIVE SCHOOL.—The foundation stone of a Patabala or School for the instruction in literature and science in the Bengali language, upon an improved principle, under the auspices of the Managers of the Hindoo College, was laid in the ground opposite the College at half-past five o'clock P. M. of the 14th instance.

The peculiarly appropriate honor of laying the first stone, of the contemplated building, was assigned to Mr. D. Hare, who may with truth and with justice be denominated the Father of Eastern Collegiate education. The object of the new College will be to convey instruction in Literature and Science, in the Bengallie tongue, adopting and naturalizing technical and scientific terms, which we imagine may be done with as much facility as a Greek, Latin, or French term or combinations of all, are adopted and naturalized into the English language. Under such auspices, the new Institution has every prospect, of the success we heartily wish it.

Mr. D. Hare, in the presence of Sir Edward Ryan Messrs. Millet, J. Young, Halliday, Capt. Birch, Drs. O'Shaughnessy and Goodeve, Dwarkanath Tagore, Mutty Lall Sait, Radansuth Deb, (Raja) &c., &c. and a numerous assemblage, &c., laid the stone. There was an inscription in English and Bengalee, stating the date of the foundation, &c. &c. There was also a bottle containing newspapers of the day, coins, and a plan of the Hindoo and Medical Colleges, the names of the principal professors and teachers in both these schools. Mr. David Hare addressed the meeting, congratulating the Hindoo community on the establishment of the institution for the improvement of the vernacular tongue, now so necessary, that the Persian language is abolished. Sir E. Ryan spoke, expressing his full concurrence in Mr. Hare's views of the importance of this school. He stated that after all the improvement of the vernacular language, it was that to our English education in India turned, and that he regarded the English instruction, but as a means through which the Natives might be approached, through which the knowledge acquired by a few in English might be spread among the many in their vernacular language, and he concluded by paying a feeling and appropriate tribute to the services and virtues of our philanthropic fellow citizen, Mr. Hare, the father of English education in India. Sir Edward was followed by Prasannocomar Tagore, who addressed the assembly to the same purport in choice and classical Bengali.

MORUELL.

HANSI.—A very interesting ceremony took place at Hansi on the 17th of May, viz. The Investiture of Mirza Fuzul Beg, Rissaldar Bahadur, of the 2nd Local Horse, with the 2nd Order of Merit of British India.

DEHRA DHONN.—Owing to blight, the wheat crop in the Dehra Dhonn has this season failed to a serious extent, the grain being in some places so damaged, as not to be worth reaping.

LONA.—The official returns of the Magistrate's office shew, that during the months of April and May, there were carried off by wolves 144 children, 49 in April, and 55 in May! The number of wolves destroyed was for the same period 17, being 6 and 11 for the months respectively.

ASSAM.—The following is an extract of a letter from Assam.—The party of the insurgent Khamties has been entirely dispersed. After the recent expedition of Captain Hensley, about 400 Khamties came in to Sadeya and threw themselves on the mercy of our Government, and amongst them was a Chief of some consequence who had been an active leader in the attack on our Troops at Sadeya. This Chief, to reconcile himself to our authorities, volunteered to lead a party against the Rebels, and his offer being accepted by Capt. Vetch, a party under Subadar Byjunath Sing, was sent out under the guidance of the Khamties Chief. The Subadar seems to have conducted his expedition in a very gallant and soldier-like manner. But, unfortunately, he failed in surprising the rebels, who, as before, had been apprized of the movements of our Troops just in time to effect their escape. One of the Khamti guides was shot by one of the rebel Chiefs as he was climbing into the stockade, which constitutes our only loss from the enemy, but, unluckily, a sepoy of the Arracan Light Infantry was drowned on the Dehong. The Chiefs of the Khamties, with about 25 of their followers, were pursued from hill to hill by the Subadar, until further pursuit at this season in such jungles appeared useless. The Subadar burnt the villages of the Meshmees who had entertained the rebels and destroyed their granaries. It is reported that from 8 to 900 Khamties and others have taken is the opportunity to Sadeya and make their submission to the Political Agent. Most of the men now come in are persons who were forced to join the insurgents; amongst those who have thus escaped is the son of Mullook Poshun, who was sacrificed by the Khamties on the night of the attack on our lines, for refusing to fight against our Government. It is to be hoped something handsome will be done for the son. His mother was also rescued, but, unfortunately, she died of small pox on the way. This disease has been virulent for some time on so return the eastern district of Assam. From motives of policy, as well as from want of grain, we understand Captain Vetch proposes sending all the Khamties down below Sadeya and settling them in different villages of the Suchempore Zillah. The Subadar on this occasion has penetrated into the hills, by the line of the Dibong River, further than has ever been previously explored by any of our people, even by the Surveyors—who reported the river impracticable twenty miles below the point assisted by the Subadar. This Native Officer is a gallant soldier, who has often distinguished himself, and who is worthy of some mark of the favor of Government; on the present occasion he succeeded in dispersing the enemy and giving them such a fright as will most probably render them averse to repeat the visit.

CORNET CHAPMAN.—The following extraordinary epistle has been published in the columns of the Agra Ukhbar, with a view to extenuate the conduct of Cornet Chapman:—

Sir,—May I request the favour of your giving publicity to the following facts through the medium of your paper, viz. That Cornet F. Chapman, did not leave Nusseerabad without having sent in his resignation of the service, accompanied by a certificate from Captain Jones, the Deputy Pay Master, of there being no claims against him in his office. This went through the regular channel, about eight or ten days before the departure of Cornet Chapman from Nusseerabad; he also on the day of his departure sent in his resignation direct to the Adjutant-General of the Army, mentioning the cause of his departure. It was not (as stated in your paper) "because an officer was going to send in charges of swindling and forgery against Cornet Chapman;" but the reason was, that had not Cornet C. left the station, he would have been imprisoned for debt in the Ajmere Jail. I was formerly a friend of Cornet C.'s and am still his friend. Although he is in some measure to blame, he is not so much to blame as has been laid to his door. It has been through the villany of another that he has been placed in this situation. A full account, together with the confession of the person, shall appear in a short time. Cornet Chapman has followed the person, a Mr. Urquhart, to Philadelphia, where he cannot escape the Cornet's just vengeance. They met each other in Bombay, and the next day a letter was left at my house for Cornet C., which we opened, and it contained a few lines to tell Cornet C. to know him, (Urquhart) as his destroyer; that all had come about through his and his brother's agency in England, under the name of (Cameron). "You now know how well I have kept the vow I made in presence of your friend, Captain Archibald, (late of the 8th Bengal Cavalry.) Know me as your destroyer,—as having forged your own name, your brother's name, and your mother's. The bills were sent by me under your brother's name. You cannot touch me. I shall have sailed for Philadelphia before you receive this, and all attempts to take me will be unavailable." Cornet Chapman has, however, found out his assumed name, and pursued him in a Portuguese vessel bound to Philadelphia, and it is to be hoped he will meet with the fate he well deserves.

Yours obediently,

A CONSTANT READER AND LOVER OF JUSTICE.

Bombay, May 17th, 1839.

NATIVE STATES.

JEYPORE.—Major Forster has been desired by Major Ross, the Political Agent of Jeypore, to proceed with his brigade and invest the fort of Bechooa, where Meg Sing has fortified himself with a large force. Thakor Luchmun Singh, of Jeypore, is afraid to attack them, as the fort is said to be a strong one. Colonel Sutherland was expected at Jeypore daily. Captain Ludlow remains at Joudhpore, where it is said he is to act as Political Agent.

JEYPORE.—Major Foster arrived with his Brigade within two kos of a place called Doodao, when the insurgents (about 4,000) all gave into Major Ross. These men had before declared to Luchmun Singh Thakor, that they never would submit, and Luchmun

Sing was quite afraid to attack them. Major Ross has acknowledged the services rendered by Major Forster and Brigade in a very handsome manner. The affairs of Jeypore are now, by proclamation, entirely taken out of the hands of the Panch, who will nominally act as Council. Colonel Sutherland is in hopes of settling the Jeypore affairs, without calling out troops.

UKHAT.—A rumour has been spread, that the Hazarees, in considerable force, were before Herat and eager to hurry on to the assistance of Dost Mahomed.

A letter, dated Peshawar, 18th May, states, that our Sikh Auxiliaries were behaving very ill. The Sikh Goorkha Corps with four guns, had marched out of Colonel Wade's Camp, declaring they would not assist to re-establish the power of the Afghans. Several Rajahs too were unmanageable and mutinous, without any effort being made to reduce them to obedience, though not Nihal Singh, General Ventura, and other leaders, were present. Such are the advantages of a union with a set of barbarians.

LABORE.—Mr. Clark reached Labore on the 5th ult., and on the subsequent day had an interview with Runjeet, who was very weak, but much improved in health.

Among some presents sent on this occasion to Uzazoon-Duen, principal physician to the Rajah, by the Governor General, was a copy of the Koran.

Our negotiations at Labore have been crowned with complete success, and we have every reason, therefore, to suppose that all political matters are now favorably arranged to meet the daily looked-for event of Runjeet's decease. The mission has been partly engaged in arranging some matters connected with the navigation of the Sutledge. So anxious are the merchants of Umrutsir, Loodiana and Unbulla to commence a traffic on that line, that were there but boats enough, the river would be alive with trade; Runjeet also has been found sufficiently reasonable and has very much modified the rate of duty on boats passing his territories, which, by the clumsy agreement of 1833, was fixed at Rs. 500 per boat, without reference to size. On Mr. Clark's paying a visit to Umrutsir, the merchants turned out in a body and expressed their gratification and thanks, for what had already been done and asked him to use his exertions in procuring them one hundred boats of 800 maunds each to be despatched from Ferozepore immediately.

NAVIGATION OF THE SUTLEJ.—The following public notice has been issued, by the Political Agent at Loodiana, dated 4th June.

"It is hereby notified to the public, that five Indus boats, of 300 maunds each or upwards, prepared to carry passengers or packages will be despatched from Ferozepore Ghaut in progress to Bukkur, twice a month, commencing from the 1st instant. For particulars or for passage freight, application to be addressed to Captain Lawrence, Assistant Political Agent at Ferozepore.

JOUDPORE.—A letter from Erinpoorah, dated 7th June, says, "Rajah Maun Sing, of Joudpore, has refused to accede to the terms offered by Colonel Sutherland. The latter officer has therefore struck his tents and marched towards Beawar, the station of the Mharwarrah Battalion. Unless Rajah Maun Sing gives in, and recalls Colonel Sutherland, we have no alternative but war."

LUCKNOW.—Within the short period of a fortnight, two instances of the most glaring attacks of gang-robbery were committed, one on the person of a poor unfortunate widow who, on proceeding to Cawnpore with her family, was plundered of all her property, even to her wearing apparel. And the other, on an officer high in the mili-ary service of the Honourable Company, while in progress to the Hills, on leave of absence.

BOMBAY.

THE EARL OF CLARE.—On the 22d of May the Earl of Clare was struck with lightning. The electric fluid passed from one of her maids along the deck, and killed an officer and two lascars.

THE PARSER TUMULT. The tumult created by the Parsers, in consequence of two of their number being converted to Christianity, has been allayed, and the fire-works are again at peace.

CORNET CHAPMAN.—Some six weeks or two months ago it was announced in the Agra paper, that an officer of one of the Queen's Regiments had disappeared from Neemuch, under peculiar circumstances. The same person was recognized at Bombay, and placed under close arrest in Fort St. George. This officer managed to make his escape, by giving the sentinels some drink in which he put opiate.

THE NEW GOVERNOR.—Sir James Rivett Carnoo, the new Governor, arrived at Bombay on the 31st May.

PRIZE MONEY.—The Government Gazette intimates, that steps are taking for the immediate payment of the prize money due on account of the last Burmese war.

FAMINE AT KATTIAWAR.—Famine still continues to desolate the province of Kattiawar; and the inhabitants are dying in great numbers, and parents selling their children for a few measures of grain.

THE ROBBERS WHO ATTACKED THE MALWAN TREASURY.—The robbers who, some time ago, made an attempt upon the Malwan Treasury, have been brought to trial; five are condemned to be hanged, eighty-five to be transported for life, and some others to minor punishment. Eight yet remain to be tried, who were so badly wounded, as to be unfit to be brought up for the present.

THE GULPH.—Intelligence has been received from Karachi to the 9th of May. Allapogee had been peremptorily refused, by the Persian Government, for the insult offered, by its officers, to the British Resident at Bushire, and, it is feared, that there is little prospect of concession from that quarter. Reports have been busily circulated, and universally credited, around the shores of the Gulph, that our power was rapidly declining, and that of Russia increasing in the same proportion. The departure of the resident was regarded as a flight, and our passively looking on at the encroachments of Mehemet Ali was considered as wholly proceeding from our weakness. The Shah is said to have an army of 60,000 men and 1200 guns; he was about to move in May, but no one seemed to know in what direction.

POONAH.—Letters from Poonah state, that tranquillity is restored in the neighbouring district, at least for the present, though there is little doubt that there are still many turbulent characters ready for another outbreak. The conspirators were to be tried towards the end of the present week, and it is supposed that some severe examples will be made. That indefatigable Officer, Lieutenant Rudd, commanding the Poonah Police Corps, had returned from his expedition. Some parts of the country he had found in open insurrection, the poor deluded riots having been persuaded, no doubt, by professed emissaries of disorder, that our "raj" had actually terminated. Many of the patells had begun to take security bonds in the name of "the new government!" There is little doubt that the ex-Peshwa, Bajee Row, is connected with these proceedings.

AMMAN.—The following is an extract of a letter from Sattarah dated 8th June.

"We have had a beautiful season here, and the rains have set in very favorably. We are all quiet just now, although a different opinion, I am told, prevails in Bombay. The Rajah's brother is in Camp with his retainers, and, I suppose, likely to remain."

BRIGADIER VALIANT, R. H.—On the 11th of June Brigadier Valiant, R. H., arrived from Kurrachee, landed under a salute, of 11 guns, and took command of the garrison.

CONTROL AND AUDIT OF THE STORE ACCOUNTS OF THE INDIAN NAVY.—The Control and Audit of the Store Accounts of the Indian Navy, have been transferred, from the Military Auditor General, to the Military Board, and Lieutenant Robinson, of the Indian Navy, has been appointed Assistant Secretary to the Military Board, for the Indian Naval Department.

INSURRECTIONARY DESIGNS.—The insurrectionary designs, entertained by many persons in and about Poona have already been noticed. Subsequent proceedings have revealed the extent and character of this conspiracy. On the 4th June a lascar of the Horse Artillery communicated to his Commanding Officer, that his seduction had been attempted by an Arab, and a pensioned Monashee, who had promised him great rewards for communicating to them the precise situation of the arsenal, ammunition, guns, pickets, &c. In the course of the interview, they apprized him that four thousand men, within the city, were prepared for an attack upon the camp, and that they were to be supported by an equal number from another quarter. It was arranged, by the authorities, that a second interview should take place between the parties, and that a guard, under Lieutenant Brett, should, at a given signal, rush in and seize the whole assemblage. The plan was completely successful, and the conspirators are now in the custody of Lieutenant Rudd. The proper military preparations had been made for the immediate suppression of the revolt.

BURMAH.

RANGOON.—21st April.—All was perfectly quiet at Rangoon, and the Woodouk had proved more civil and courteous than he has long known to have been. A body of about 1,000 soldiers had arrived from Ava, bringing, it was said, orders for the recall of the Woodouk, who is to be succeeded by the Woongyee (oonnyo), the same man, who, one and a half year ago, was stationed at L'oung ngoo for a few months. The Rangoon Woodouk is said to have lost very much of the King's favour, owing to his expressed desire not to excite the English to a war, and to the fear and alarm which he evinced on the occasion of the late rebellion. The man who succeeds him is an old robber chief, and not much versed in the arts of civil government, but is, generally of mild and moderate manners. He is one of the King's numerous fathers-in-law.

MERGUER.—A new coal field has lately been discovered in the province of Merguer, yielding coal of the same excellent description (cannel coal) as the former discovery and of infinitely superior access, being situated on the banks of the Tenasserim river, about two days pull from the old town of that name, and to which boats of considerable size can at all times of the year proceed.

MAULMAIN.—An individual has made his appearance in Maulmain, who has caused considerable excitement among the Burmese population, among whom the idea has some how or other got abroad, that he is the Tsekya Meng, or late Heir Apparent to the Burmese throne, in disguise. He is a young man about 25 years of age, speaks Burmese with a Chinese accent, and gives out the following story.

His father, he says, was the Tsau-bwa of Kau-sau-bee, a Shan principality, which he describes as situated to the N. E. of Ava and on the borders of China. His father died about ten years ago, when an uncle usurped the throne. He was kept concealed by his mother, and about a year and a half ago, succeeded in quitting the country and finding his way to Ava, where he joined the Tao-kyä Meng, with whom he was well acquainted, having, when a boy, been frequently taken to the Burmese Court by his father and placed in the Prince's household. He was with the Prince when he was put to death, and fearing for his own life, he became a priest, and in that garb, has gradually found his way here, having been several months at Shoay Tounng and two months at Biling, detained by illness.

AVA.—The accounts from the Residency at Ava extend to the 10th of April. The acting Resident, Captain McLeod, does not appear to have seen the King again, but is said to have exchanged presents with some of the Princes and Ministers, by whom he was civilly enough received. We suppose, however, that all these visits were in a measure of a private nature—that is, that it was not the Resident and representative of the British Power that paid these visits, but merely an English officer. It does not appear that the Earthquake caused much superstitious alarm at the capital, but great fears existed there at one time, for the Kingdom, which was reported to have been overwhelmed by a large wave from the sea. The King is said to have been very angry about this report, when it was found to have been utterly false, and the propagators of it having been laid hold of, His Majesty threatened to have molten lead poured down their throats. The effects of the earthquake are said to have been more severe at Tounngou than in any other part of the Kingdom.

CHINA.

Intelligence to the 11th of May, has been received from China during the week, and is of great importance. The Commissioner, Lin, had intimated his intention to re-open the legal trade on the same footing as formerly, so soon as the whole of the 20,280 chests were delivered; yet Captain Elliot, on the other hand, had expressed an intention of stopping the trade in toto, after the dispatch of the ships then loading at Whampoa, until the instructions of H. M. Ministers shall be received. Seventeen thousand five hundred chests of the Opium had been delivered over to the Chinese; but, despite the desperate state of affairs, several attempts had been made to effect sales outside. Orders had been issued for the withdrawing the boats and guards surrounding the factories, permitting the ships at Whampoa to receive and discharge cargo, and the passage boats to resume running under certain restrictions—the communication to and from outside being open to all foreigners in Canton, excepting sixteen individuals specified by name as being the chief parties concerned in the Opium traffic. A general intention is expressed among foreigners, to retire from Canton for a season; and every house in Singapore, having business relations with Canton, has received instructions not to forward goods of any description to their correspondents there, a precaution which proceeds from the anticipated measures of Captain Elliot, as it would scarcely seem to be called for by the language held by the Commissioner regarding the reopening of the general trade. The Commissioner had, it appears, required the Portuguese government at Macao to deliver up three thousand chests of opium and on being informed that there was none in the place, had required that the forts at Macao should be put into his hands, a requisition which it is said the governor of that settlement had replied to by calling upon the Commissioner "to come and take them." It is also reported that the Macao government had received assurances of assistance from Commodore Read, of the U. S. frigate Columbia, in resisting any aggression on the forts. A deputation had, it appears, been appointed from among the foreign residents at Canton, to proceed home in the Ariel, to enforce the claims of the owners of the opium surrendered for indemnity by the British Government. It is said to consist of Messrs. Inglis, Matheson and Lindsay—the latter gentleman having already been for some time on his way home.

ARMY OF THE INDUS.

The following are extracts of letters from the Army of the Indus.

SHIKARPORE 11TH MAY.—A wing of the 5th Regiment of Bombay Native Infantry, under Capt. Smees, had just taken a small fort from the Beloochees, with the loss of three men killed and several wounded, one of the latter being a European officer, Lieut. Stanley. Forty-eight of the enemy were killed on the occasion. On the 8th of May a marauder of high caste was hanged, very much to his own and his neighbours' astonishment. Three more were to share the same fate; and if they should not happen to have left off their plundering tricks by the time Mr. Ross Bell and Lieutenant Brown reach Shikarpore, the examples of summary punishment are likely to be very numerous. Our silver and gold are proffered to them, as more agreeable to all parties than the steel bayonet and the hangman's hemp, but they do not seem ready to engage in our service. Some few had come in, and one chieftain had had guaranteed the road from Sukkur to Shikarpore, but nothing had been done to ensure safe travelling to Dadur, and thence to Quetta.

13TH MAY.—Intelligence had been received at Shikarpore, that two of the Candahar Sirdars had been secured, but the report is not authenticated. The same letter communicates some particulars of interest. The party escorting 22 lacs of treasure to the Army, (consisting of a Regiment of Native Infantry with 600 of the 2nd Regiment of the Shah's Horse under Captain Anderson, and a detail of Artillery with a nine pounder gun,) entered the Bolen Pass on the 6th May. The Horse Artillery of the Shah's Forces, under Capt. W. Anderson, had preceded this party from Dadur, which place it had left on April 25th, and had got safely through the Pass. Detachments from the Bombay troops left at Shikarpore, went out a few days ago to attack a small fort, in which a party of Beloochees had taken refuge with some camels stolen from us. The fellows would not give in, and defended themselves well,—but the place was soon taken. One of the officers was wounded in the leg, a Subadar and 2 sepoy were killed,—four or five sepoy wounded, 40 or 50 of the Beloochees were killed, 14 wounded, and the rest (46) in the fort taken prisoners. This affair will have a good effect.

6TH JUNE.—A melancholy event occurred lately. Lieutenant Corny, Her Majesty's 17th Foot, and forty-nine Europeans, started from Buckhur for Shikarpore. He, with twelve of the men, lost their way and remained under a tree all day. Natives were sent out to look for them, and in the course of the day seven Europeans were brought in dead. Lieutenant Corny died the following day. Two of the party were not found, but of course they died—the remaining three were brought in such a state as to require there being sent to Buckhur immediately—the sun killed them all. Lieutenant Chalmer's, 43d N. I., Mr. Jervis, 42d, a Subadar and nine sepoy died in one day somewhere on this side Bagh, from the same cause. The heat is described as dreadful, 115 in tents and 100 in a house with tatties. Two Native Officers of a small detachment of B-Troops, sent against a small neighbouring fort, concealed themselves behind a wall and would not go on, calling out, we are carried on to be butchered by the Balonchees. I—of the 48th, brought into Camp only 1800 maunds of grain out of 8000. He is ordered to join his corps.

14th JUNE.—The river has risen sufficiently high to fill "the Sinda Nuddee" canal, and to our surprise, we saw the other morning the masts of fifty boats in our neighbourhood. They had come up during the night, and were laden with grain and other supplies for the Army. I rode down in the morning to see them, and found about six feet of water in the canal.

A large convey, with treasure and grain for the grand Army, started from this the night before last. A Wing of the 23rd Bombay Native Infantry came up from Bukkur and joined by the 42nd Native Infantry, and all the Detachment of Cavalry composed the escort. Captains Manning, of the 16th, Seaton, 35th, and Lieutenant Chalmers, 43rd, joined and accompanied the Detachment to proceed to their Corps. They will have a most trying march.

We have not been annoyed by the Belonchees lately. I dare say the attack on the Fort of Jani Dera has kept them quiet. Seth Mull, the Ex-Governor of Shikarpore, lately heard of the Amiers' intention to remove him, so he has walked off without waiting for his successor; and it is supposed he has gone to join the Shah. He is, however, a man of no family or importance out of office.

We have now only a Detachment of Bombay Infantry and a Company of the 52nd Bengal Infantry beside a Corps of Shah Soojah's levy, under Lieutenant Codrington, 200 strong.

We have more grain, &c. here than the Commissariat Officers know what to do with, and great quantities must be spoiled.

JUNE 20 MAY.—"A letter notifying the fall of Kandahar, was received here this morning from one of the Envoy's Secretary's and immediately after, a salute of 21 guns, announced the same to the world of Shawl.

The Chiefs, with the exception of Hajikan, who came over to us with a body of horse, amounting to 400, on the 20th ultimo, fled towards Meshid, with only 200 followers.

The Shah entered Kandahar on the 25th, with his own troops, and was most noisily welcomed by the people. Salutes appeared to have no end. It appears the Chiefs have latterly made themselves very unpopular.

Now is the time for speculations. What will come next? Will you move West or East first? or will you have a force sufficient to move to both points or one point?

Our Cavalry horses have suffered dreadfully for want of grain. A month's rest at Kandahar will soon bring them round.

By some mis-arrangement the 31st and 42d N. I., are, for all we know, still at Dadu, also 3 Companies of the 37th, under Major Gullith. When they come up, it is supposed the 21 Brigade will move on to Cabool, 11 marches.

Rank smelling doombahs, questionable attah chupatties*, and water, that will do our business, should we remain much longer, without wine or spirits of some sort, is our daily fare—not a single bottle of liquor in Camp.

The crops are said to be very fine and nearly ripe for the sickle. Wheat had fallen from ten to six seers the rupee. Every thing plentiful, though dear.

* Cakes of unleavened bread.

The inhabitants returned immediately to their avocations."

13th MAY.—Here we are still and here we may remain, for any thing we can learn to the contrary, until the tri-annual Relief of the Bengal Troops in the year 1842-43!

"Till lately we were from hand to month; the last few days grain has been more abundant and the cranking of putting us upon half rations again appears to have sunk into oblivion. The grain, i. e. wheat and barley, remains at 3 seers the rupee, and if the present style of things is to remain, this price will remain.

"The natives say Sir Alexander Burnes will not return to Kabul. Major Todd, they say, is to be sent to Herat, Major Leach to Kabul, and Sir Alexander is to accompany Mr. MacNaghten to Cabul, from whence the same said Sir Alexander is to be sent to Bokara or elsewhere. They feed us on rank smelling doombah mutton, bad chupatties, and worse water!

"The 31st N. I., under Major Weston, will march in to-morrow morning."

MAY 17.—There can be no doubt of the existence of a regularly organized system to destroy our dawks, for whilst private letters, drafts, &c. are generally, untouched, all the public ones with large sales, such as from the Commander-in-Chief, MacNaghten and others, are carefully torn to rags. The public service must suffer great injury from these proceedings, not to mention the endless misery and anxiety it causes to private individuals. The 31st Regiment N. I., with Captain Anderson's corps of horse, arrived here two days ago, escorting 22 lakes of Rs. for the use of the army; after a short rest they will proceed on to Candahar. There is no accounting for the flocks of these mountain robbers who infest the pass, for whilst the former detachment, consisting of the Horse Artillery of the Shah's and 42d N. I. were tied upon and annoyed the whole way, this last most valuable convoy of all, has been allowed to come through quite unscathed. We have now a large force in Shawl, in addition to the detachment just arrived; General Nott with the Head Quarters of his brigade, the 43rd Regiment N. I. Right wing 42d N. I., three companies of the 37th N. I., the Shah's 2 troops of Horse Artillery, Captain Bear's Regiment of Local Horse, a field hospital of the Bombay Army, &c. We are anxiously waiting for orders to proceed against Kelat, which, if not more than six marches from this, I do not anticipate any resistance from; for by all accounts Mehmud Khan, knowing the hopelessness of his cause, is packing up his traps, and getting ready to make his exit, as soon as he heard of our approach.

By the last accounts from Candahar, grain still continued very scarce, but the principal mahajans of the city had promised to furnish 1,000 maunds a day, which is about the quantity required for the use of the army. In consequence of the difficulty of procuring grain, the force cannot yet move towards Cabool, although Sir John Keane is most anxious to push on, on account of the European troops, who are beginning to suffer from the excessive heat, the thermometer during mid-day standing at 110 in their tents. The troops still continue on half rations, and the camp followers on quarter; and horses in spite of their rest are falling off more and more every day, as the Commissaries are unable to furnish them with grain; but the new crops, are very nearly ripe, and as soon as they are cut, it is to be hoped, every thing will go on well. A party, under the control of Major Todd, was on the point of starting for Herat to escort the guns destined for Kanran Shah. Letters have also been received from the Governor-General, directing several experienced engineer officers to be sent on to Herat, to assist in fortifying the place, and putting it in a state of complete defence; but we hear Kamran is somewhat indisposed to allow our troops to enter his city, and intends sending out a party to meet them half way, and relieve them of their charge.

Pottinger, since our approach, has become all powerful in Herat; he is said to exercise unlimited control both civil and military, over the whole resources of the state.

The Persians are said to be gradually withdrawing their troops towards their own frontier, heartily disgusted with the result of their attempt on Herat, and cursing their folly in having allowed themselves to be deceived by promises of Russian assistance.

The Candahar Chiefs still continue with some 200 followers about 35 miles from Candahar; they have written to Burnes, a most penitential letter, expressive of their sorrow for incurring our displeasure and their wish to come to terms with the British; but as they seem disinclined to venture in, a party was about to start at night, and by making a forced march, to attempt to surround them and bring them in. The inhabitants of Candahar are quite delighted at the change of masters; they are astonished at our discipline and warlike bearing, but much more so at our inexhaustible supply of cash. They have not had such a harvest for many years, and are only afraid we will leave the country again. This is truly their golden age; a crore of John Company's will soon be in circulation among them.

We have not yet any direct communication with Cabul. Dozens of reports come in daily and one that reached mentions, that the chief has followed the example of poor Miss Butthe, and put an end to himself, others that he has defeated Timor Shah, or that Timor has defeated him, and is advancing on Cabul with an Army of 30,000 men. The proportion of truth is like the bread to Jack Falstaff's cups of sack; but I believe the boy has got to the west side of the Kybur pass, and is shaking his shillelah at Dost Mahomed, but you will hear about this from Peshawur.

In my last of the 10th instant, I gave you an account of the march of the Horse Artillery of the Shah's and the 42nd Regiment through the pass, they had a regular fight the whole of their last march. Several of our men were killed and numbers wounded; among the latter the gallant Mosstrooper, 3 companies of whose corps, the 37th N. I., accompanied the party. The men of the 37th on this, as on several other occasions behaved with the greatest coolness and bravery, and but for them, the Mosstrooper, severely wounded as he was, would never have reached his party again.

26th MAY.—Intelligence has been received from Candahar to the effect, that on Brigadier Sale's arrival at Ghisk with the detached force, he found the chieftains had flown to Meshed or Persia. Other letters, on which equal reliance may be placed, state, that it has been ascertained that the King of Persia's army cannot be moved from Teheran to the Eastward again (if it moves, or is intended to move at all) before the end of May. The fact is that Russia cannot supply the money which Persia requires to carry on operations.

We do not want for the actual necessities of life, and are well off, compared to the unfortunate camp followers and poor people of the country. The latter, unable to buy grain at the enhanced prices, are living on what fruits, roots, &c. they can pick up, and are dying in numbers from sheer starvation. In a former letter I mentioned, that six Companies of the 31st Native Infantry had arrived at Quetta, with Treasure for the Army, they had scarcely got out of sight of Dadur, when a heavy firing was heard in that direction. It now appears that, as soon as the six Companies were fairly off, some hundreds of Beloochees came down upon the two Companies left behind, and attempted to carry off the store entrusted to their care. Captain Saurin, however, who commanded the party left behind, pitched into them in regular good style, and drove them off after killing 14 or 15 of them. The next day they were more successful, for they pounced down from the hills on a hundred and eight sepoy, guarding the camels out at graze, and succeeded in carrying away the whole of them, but not till the sepoy had killed several of the Beloochees. By some mistake the post of Dadur has been left with much too small a force, and the Commander-in-Chief, is very justly annoyed at some of the detachments ordered to remain there, for the protection of the public stores, coming through the Pass without his leave. He has just poured out his vials of wrath on Major Griffiths of the 37th, by ordering him to proceed back to Dadur, and take Command of the two Companies of the 31st at that place. When you know that the thermometer now stands at Quetta at 50 in the morning and 80 at mid day, and at Dadur only 70 miles off at 120 at 2 p.m. in tents, you will be able to appreciate the severity of the punishment.

Letters received of the 28th instant state, that Captain Paton, of the Quarter Master General's Department, had accompanied the detached force to Ghisk; that Capt. Ptole, of the 37th, was to march with the companies of that regiment to Quetta, as Major Griffiths had been sent back;—that officers of the Engineers and Sappers had been sent to Herat, to fortify that place and assist Lieut. Pottinger, who is all powerful there;—that Colonel Stoddart is and has been for three months, a prisoner in Bokhara;—that the troops at Bakkur are to be reinforced to enable them to resist the constant attack of the Beloochees; that Ghisk is to be occupied and maintained by the Shah's troops;—that the most acute misery prevails at Candahar;—and that the whole of the poetry which vested the campaign with a particular charm, has vanished, inasmuch as there is nothing but uncertainty before the army, desolation around it, and wastes, passes and Beloochees behind.—All are anxiously looking out for Timor Shan to get through the Kyber Pass,—for Brigadier Sale to come back from Ghisk,—and for the wheat to ripen and fall to the sickle.

CANDAHAR, 19th APRIL.—The Army will remain at Candahar for a month, when they will proceed on to Cabool. The troops continued in high spirits, and most lavish praise is heaped upon the climate, which is stated to be delightful and conveying to the European portion, all the heaven of their own bracing skies. Provisions were procurable, but dear. Wheat flour was selling at from three to four seers per rupee, and the productions of the country, such as raisins, apples, pears, &c., &c. dearer than at Agra. Sheep were plentiful, selling as seers of flour, three or four doombah* being had for one rupee.

The following is from the letter of an intelligent Native Officer, himself an old campaigner.

"We arrived with the first advance, Shah Sorjah's two Battalions and horse before Kandahar, on the 19th. About 12,000 Kandaharies, with their Chiefs, were drawn up about two coss on this side of the City, we formed line and advanced upon them. When we got within shot, they fled and went off towards Herat. We entered the town, and the gates of the fort were immediately opened to us. The Company's libat is so great, that nobody dare oppose us. Our troops are arriving daily, grain only one seer for the rupee, but we got from the godown † 15 seers of ottah‡ for a rupee, only $\frac{1}{2}$ of a seer for a soldier, and $\frac{1}{3}$ a seer for followers. No grain for horses, they have been without it since we left the Bolau Pass, and they are very much knocked up and dying daily. All the sahib log are without tents, feeding like the soldiers."

* Broad tailed sheep.

† Store room.

20TH APRIL.—All the villages were deserted on our arrival; but, by conciliatory measures, we have induced nearly all of the inhabitants to return already. We have quantities of lucerne, clover, &c.

10TH MAY.—The Bengal Cavalry has suffered greatly. Not less than 400 horses had died of starvation, and the remainder are so weak, as to be almost unserviceable, or, as the writer emphatically says, "could not come a gallop." The 2d Cavalry, one of our finest regiments, had been particularly unfortunate, and did not expect to take 200 horses to Cabool. The Camp followers were on 3 seer ofatta, which was selling at 3 seers for the rupee. Tea was 16 rupees and sugar-candy 4 rupees the seer, and all other articles with the exception of vegetables equally expensive. The heat at day was excessive, 102 and 103 in the tents; but the nights were cool. Dysentery prevailed among both Europeans and natives.

The inhabitants are described as cool and indifferent and the Shah, as having no influence beyond the fear of our arms produced. He had been indulging his taste for playing royalty, and had been isolated with 101 guns, on being resealed on the guldere. This tomfoiery is quite in keeping with our noble Ally's character.

Had the Candahar Chiefs not quarrelled among themselves, or could they have trusted their followers, it was thought they might have proved very ugly customers, in the condition our troops, particularly the Cavalry were in after getting through the last pass. Indeed never was silver shot more useful than on this occasion.

It was thought the Chiefs would defend themselves in Girsuk as long as they possibly could.

I now come to his Majesty's entry into the city this morning, which is, without exception, the most heart-stirring scene I have ever beheld. There could not have been less than sixty or seventy thousand people assembled. The balconies were crowded with women, the streets lined with men, and from all quarters the universal shout of welcome proceeded. The general tone of exclamation ran thus—"Candahar is ruined by the Barukzyes." "May your power endure for ever." "We look to you for protection." "May your enemies be destroyed." "Son of Fumour Shah, you are welcome!" Succeeding these, flowers were thrown at His Majesty, and in several instances loads of bread were cast before him, and became the spoil of the beggars in attendance. After passing through the City, the King descended from his horse and proceeded to the shrine containing the shirt of the prophet, and offered up thanksgiving. From thence he went to the tomb of his grandfather and prayed, and on both these occasions he took the British Officers with him. The party returned through the City with the same demonstrations of loyalty and respect, on the part of the populace, and this eventful day has passed off without an accident."

15TH MAY.—At Deh-i-hadji, the Political received intelligence that the Candahar Chiefs had fled to Girsuk, and that the people of the town would receive the King, so the Shah waxed very brave and swore that he would go on with the contingent alone; consequently after a few hours' rest, we marched to Candahar (eighteen miles) and fired a royal salute. Three weak regiments of Infantry, newly raised and half disciplined, marched to Candahar on the 24th April, without any Cavalry, and only one troop of Horse Artillery. And for this an army of 30,000 men was ordered into the Field in November last, and for this an army of 10,000 passed the Bolan defile. Sir John Keane arrived on the 20th, the leading column of Bengal Army on the 27th, the 4th Brigade a few days afterwards, and the Bombay Column on the 4th of May. Sir J. K. gave Mr. MacNaghten a wig for giving him the ship, (so is the report) and deservedly so. If any fighting had been expected, the Army would have been sent forward, and the Shah would have taken up a safe position; but, as submission was expected, Mr. MacNaghten gave Sir J. K. the go by, in order that all the eclat of the business might fall to himself and the Shah. The fact is that Sir J. Keane got the whip hand of them all, and ruled the roast famously. Neither Mr. MacN. nor the Shah approved of this and would be glad to shake off the incubus if they could. However we did march 30 miles in two days and got rid of his presence for a time. There has been a great deal of sickness—the hospitals are crowded with men, both Native and European, suffering from severe bowel disorders, attributable to the bad water. I have been a sufferer myself and do not expect to recover till I can see the bottom of a six dozen case of Allsop, for I date my sickness from the time that my supplies began to fail me. No words can tell how I have yearned after a bottle of beer, when heated and tired with a long march, and nothing but salt, dirty water to refresh me after the labours of the day. Mr. McN. and the Commander-in-Chief, and one or two lucky individuals, are the only possessors of beer,—a dozen was sold the other day for 120 rupees! Tea (bought in the town at 19 rupees a seer! Coffee (not to be had in the city) at seven rupees in the Camp bazar. Cheroots too lamentably scarce. I offered 100 rupees for 600 but no takers, so I am obliged to smoke the Candahar tobacco in a pipe, a bad substitute but better than nothing. Grain selling for 3 seers the rupee—the army still on hard rations. I don't know when we shall advance to Cabool. The harvest has just commenced and the heat is very great—from 100 to 105 in tents. The sherbet and wine of the country are not drinkable, they are only very fine—in poetry.—I have been much disappointed in the country. Shawl is tolerably cultivated, and Pishen (south of the Khojah hills) has a sprinkling of wheat and barley; but the country north of the hills is desolate in the extreme, until within a few miles of Candahar. The whole country is hilly—bare and precipitous rocks—not a respectable tree in all Afghanistan. The valley of Candahar is tolerably green, and there are many orchards round the town—plenty of mulberry trees, but the fruit wants flavor. There are also apricots, grapes and pomegranates, but they are not ripe yet. Candahar is a mud town with a pultry mud wall (of no great thickness) and a contemptible ditch. Burnes tells us that there is not a stone or pukka brick building between the Indus and Constantinople—except the ruins of Palmyra, I suppose. The country is thickly populated and but partially cultivated, though the soil generally appears rich. I suspect grain will always be scarce, until we reach Peshawar. The crops of Cabool are, I believe, scarcely sufficient to maintain the population—grain is always dear there, but now terrifically so. There is some talk of a portion at least of the Troops returning in October or November. I hope we may be among the number. Every body is disgusted, and the order for the march home across the Punjab, will be received with the greatest pleasure by all. I don't think the natives will come this way again in a hurry. Some regiments were ordered to hold themselves in readiness to march to Ghirisk, to drive away the Candahar chief, Robus Dit Khan; but I believe accounts have been received of his having left Ghirisk, with the intention of coming to tender his allegiance. The King does not appear to be popular, as no man of any great influence has as yet joined him. As for the lower orders, they look on with indifference, and the hill people plunder and kill whenever they can. The Shah was installed yesterday. The ceremony took place outside the city, and the army paraded and marched past in review order. The Officers of the contingent were to have presented gifts to the Shah, and five gold pieces—Belgian coinage of a late date, strange to say, and the currency of this country, (how did they find their way here?) were presented to each of us for that purpose; but the ceremony was deferred; and, if possible, I will avoid it altogether, as my pride kicks rather against it. I don't relish paying homage to Shah Soojah, a puppet-king, without even the power to maintain the crown we have given him; besides, I am not in his service and do not even wish to be. We were kept in the back ground yesterday. The contingent did not parade, but formed a street for his Majesty. This was hiding our "candle beneath a bushel," as ours is, without doubt, the finest troop in the field. The Bombay detachments (Artillery) look well, but their teams, harness, carriages, and fittings up are very inferior to ours. Tell this to T., if you see him, and also that we have found the benefit of having no store-boxes; we have not had a single collar-gall. Grant has maddy; his horses and those of the Bengal Cavalry, are much done up. Our carriages have stood well; but the Bombay ones are much shaken, many of the beam-trails of their waggons broken. Their horses are small, and do not look well in harness, but make good Cavalry Horses; and they are easier fed than ours. The Bombay H. A. have much better helmets than we have, and I would recommend the adoption of such to our commandant. Stevenson commands all the Artillery; he, Day and Backhouse are all well.

Among the rumours current at Shikarpoor, was one to the effect that the Bombay Army would pay Hyderabad a visit on its return for the purpose of extracting a few more lakhs of rupees from the Amiers, who are accused of doing all in their power to hamper the measures of the Commissariat Officers in procuring grain for the use of the Army.

CABOOL.—It is said that the Cabool Sardars had quarrelled among themselves, and had gone each his way, leaving Dost Moolumud and a few of his more attached adherents, in the Fort of Cabool. His brother, who had been entrusted with the defence of the Khybur Pass, had also abandoned his post, which was immediately occupied by Colonel Wade, who, with Timor Shah and our Seikh Allies, had crossed the Pass.

Every thing indicates a speedy termination of the campaign, and the troops were in hopes of returning to Hindoostan in the cold weather.

Some Engineer and Artillery Officers are to proceed immediately to Heerat, to fortify it.

The Bombay papers have a report, on which they apparently place implicit reliance, that half the Army had marched from Candahar on the 7th ult. and in a night attack, which they repulsed, sustained a loss of 4,000 men.

HERAT MARCH 29TH.—The price of the grain had fallen, and Mr. MacNaghten could make arrangements to send further supplies to the City from the province of Suatan, the chief people of which had come to wait on the British Officer at Candahar. Lieutenant Pottinger, —now quite well,—is on the most friendly terms with Shah Kamran and his vizeer.

CAPTURE OF GIRISK AND SADUSH.—Letters from the detachment under the command of Brigadier Sale, dated Helmund river between Candahar and Herat, May 22nd, mention, that the forts of Girisk and Sadush were taken possession of in due course by the troops of the Shah without the smallest trouble. It appears that Kuchendil Khan had, previous to his flight, destroyed all the boats on the river and carried away the gates and walled out the houses in the Fort in order to prevent our troops making rafts and following him across. The rum casks of the detachment were, however, brought into play last of all and the flank companies of H.M.'s 13th Light Infantry and the 16th N. I., were crossed without any difficulty. An order, however, arrived for their halt on the Candahar side of the river, and their return to head-quarters preparatory to a move on to Cabool. The letters continue to speak of a frightful scarcity of every article.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

The Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund have much satisfaction in publishing the following letter, dated 11th May last, from Mr. Curtis, together with its enclosures; as also copies of that gentleman's letter, dated 14th of the same month, to the address of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, and of the Committee's reply to Mr. Curtis.

In communicating to the public, under date 6th instant, the substance of the difficulties enumerated by the Hon'ble the Court of Directors in the way of adopting Mr. Curtis' plan, the Committee expressed their conviction that Mr. Curtis would easily meet those difficulties; and they now refer the Indian public to that gentleman's letter to the address of the Right Hon'ble the President of the Board of Control, under date 13th April last, and to his letter to the Hon'ble Court dated 14th May; the latter written in consequence of the desire of the Hon'ble Court that the communications of Mr. Curtis should be direct, and not pass through the President of the Board. The reply to this latter communication will doubtless be received by the next mail, and from it some judgment may be formed as to the eventual result. At all events the Committee congratulate themselves and the people of India, that the question is now under discussion in that form and manner which cannot fail of bringing it to a decision; while from the able and judicious course adopted from the original public meeting held at the Jerusalem Coffee House under date 18th October 1838, to the transmission of Mr. Curtis' letter to the Hon'ble Court, dated 14th May last, the Committee feel assured that that decision must be favorable.

The Committee have much satisfaction in publishing the following extract of a letter from Captain Barber, dated 11th May:—

"Lord William Bentinck was over for a few days only on Lord John Russell's division on the Irish Policy. His Lordship approved of all that had been done, declared himself anxious to be President of the Company, and that on his return to town, about this time, he would move for papers, and act with us with energy, should it be necessary, in Parliament. I am sorry to say, however, his Lordship since his return to Paris has been suffering seriously from illness, and still remains I believe confined to his room."

By order of the Committee,

C. B. GREENLAW, Secretary,

Town Hall, Calcutta, the 15th July, 1839.

London, 11th May, 1839.

C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.

SIR,—I have had the honor of receiving by the hands of Captain Barber, the letter which was addressed to me, by R. H. Cockerell, Esq., Acting Chairman, and several Members of the New Bengal Steam Committee, and yourself on the very interesting subject of a regular communication between India and England by Steam via the Red Sea.

It is a gratifying reward, for the labour the Committee appointed at the General Meeting in October last undertook, to learn that their endeavours were duly estimated by the important body which your Committee represents, and by the Indian community in general. The Report, which you will have subsequently received, will, I trust, have shewn that no pains were spared to arrive at a conclusion which should satisfactorily convince every unprejudiced mind, that the great end contemplated, and so ardently desired, both by the Indian and British Public was attainable; and that the difficulties which had presented themselves as almost unsurmountable obstacles, were to be overcome by ordinary enterprise, and the application of those means which are always within the reach of a Commercial community.

I can bear testimony to the zeal, ability, patience, and perseverance with which the gentlemen composing the Committee conducting the investigation pursued their enquiries, and to their title to your thanks. For myself, highly honored and flattered as I feel by your kind notice of me, I am conscious how little claim I have to it; but, I accept, with great gratification, the expression of your approbation of the part I have taken in this important business; and, as far as my humble abilities will permit it, make the free offer of my best services in the endeavour to carry into complete effect, the great scheme in which I have embarked.

I have now to transmit to you the correspondence which has taken place between the President of the India Board and myself (No. 1 to 7, and 13 and 14) and some Communications from Mercantile bodies (8 to 12) in reply to a letter from me, handing them the Report of the Evidence taken by the Committee; at the same time, I beg not to be understood as arrogating to myself the merit of these various documents, as they have all been the result of the deliberate consideration of the Committee appointed by the Meeting of January last, although nominally appearing to emanate from myself.

The course of the negotiations with the India Board has now become somewhat impeded and perplexed from two causes; 1st, from the East India Company not choosing to recognize as official, in respect to itself, any communication made to the India Board, and requiring a direct application to the Court from the projected Company (you will observe however by the introductory paragraph of my letter of the 21st Feb. that it was at the instance of the President of the India Board, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that I entered upon that course of proceeding) and 2d, from the secession of Lord Melbourne's administration from office, which will throw the negotiations into new hands.

The first difficulty will, I trust, be overcome by my addressing a letter to the East India Company, referring the Court to the correspondence which has already taken place, and giving an epitome of the subjects of it; and I have every reason to believe that in any new President of the India Board, the committee will find as ready and firm an advocate for the establishment of Steam Communication on the comprehensive plan, as they have every reason to think Sir John Cam Hobhouse would have proved himself, had he remained in office.

In perusing the correspondence, you will see that difficulties of an imaginative character have been raised; but, I trust, you will at the same time perceive that they have been set at rest. Others exist which it will be our duty to dispel. Two of them are the supposed impossibility of docking for the repair of vessels of such a length and breadth, as the proposed steamers of 2000 tons would be, and the want of engineers in case of accident to the machinery.

To the first we answer, under the best opinions we can obtain, that mud-docks of any size, safe from the effects of the bore, can be constructed or enlarged at a moderate expense at Howrah or elsewhere, capable of receiving vessels of any length or breadth; and to the latter, that the fact of the want of engineers existing will be the means of establishing them, as is proved by the advertisement of the Cossipore Engine Foundry in the Calcutta Englishman of the 28th January last.

Upon these points we should be glad to be strengthened by your opinion, and advice; and particularly we should wish that you should be prepared either to construct a new dock on purpose, or to possess yourself by treaty of one already in existence capable of being extended and enlarged to admit vessels of the size and length contemplated, and which will be at least 250 feet long and 70 feet across, from the outside to outside of the paddle boxes.

If time will permit, I will have a copy of my letter to the East India Company added to the document herewith sent,—and remain, &c.

T. A. CURTIS, Chairman.

London, 21st February, 1839.

TO THE RIGHT HON'BLE SIR JOHN CAM HOUBHOUSE, Br.
President of the India Board.

Sir,—In reference to the conversation which I had the honor of having with you and the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the 8th instant, and in compliance with the wish expressed at that interview, that a defined statement should be made, pointing out what might appear the defects of the present arrangements for communication with India via the Red Sea, the objects of the proposed Company, and the terms as well as the assured means of carrying the plan into execution, I have now as Chairman of the Committee appointed at a General Meeting held on Friday the 18th January last, to lay before you the views which that Committee takes of the subject, and the proposal which it is thought may fairly be made to her Majesty's Government and the East India Company.

The universal call for regular and rapid Communication between Great Britain and her Indian possessions on the part of the public, and the great importance attached to its Establishment by the Government of the country, has been responded to by the plan which has been partially carried into effect by the East India Company, in stationing Steam vessels for the Post Office service at Bombay to carry mails, &c. to and from Suez. The practicability of this channel of Communication having been thus tested and proved, it remains to be seen in what way it may be rendered more perfect, and less exposed to interruptions than it is at present.

It is impossible to refuse the meed of praise for the ready acquiescence which was evinced by the East India Company in meeting the recommendation of a Committee of the House of Commons in 1834 to make the experiment. It required that in such a measure the initiative should be taken by that corporation. But the economy which necessarily attended such an experiment as born one of the causes of its very limited success, and the cost of carrying it out, so as to make it as extensively beneficial as the peculiar circumstances of the case require, would be more than it is reasonable to expect any public body should incur. The Steam Boats which have hitherto been employed are:—

The Hugh Lindsay of	450 Tons and	160 horse power.
Atalanta ,	616	210
Berenice „	664	230
Semiramis „	800	300

and the East India Company are now building at Bombay one of 640 Tons and 230 horse power.
„ Pitchers two 800 „ 220 „ „

The great difficulty on the Asiatic side is the monsoon which the boats at present in use have thrice failed to overcome.

If, therefore, with vessels of 664 Tons and 230 horse power the monsoon is too strong to be resisted, it follows as a natural consequence that a vessel of nearly 800 tons with only 220 horse power will also fail in its object. But even supposing that, by improved machinery and better built vessels, the proportion of power to the tonnage should have been rightly adjusted in the new vessels, yet the vessels themselves are not sufficiently powerful to encounter the monsoon, and will not afford that extent and character of accommodation to passengers which in addition to the transport of letters the public requires.

The vessels which are to perform the service between India and Suez, should be of that class, that they should offer ample accommodation to passengers, to whom it is of so much importance to find means of easy transport, for themselves as for their letters.

The arrangements, then, which at present exist, and to which from the size and power of the vessels now building it seems they are intended to be limited, are insufficient in two essential points.

- (a) 1st. They offer no guarantee of successfully overcoming the monsoon, and
- (b) 2d. They can only accommodate a limited number of passengers.

By the present arrangements, besides, the communication is not continuous, it commences and breaks off at Suez—for the chain not being kept up the Mails from India are upon the average obliged (according to the report of the East India and China Association) to wait 5½ days at Alexandria for a French

- (c) Steamer to Marseilles, and 7½ days for a British Steamer to Malta, and the average arrival of letters by the French route from Alexandria to England is 26 days, and by the English Packet 31 days, so that the want of a corresponding arrangement at Alexandria, subjects the transmission, even of letters and papers, to delays which can be, and therefore should be avoided.

Such are the imperfections of the present plan, to remedy which would require new arrangements, a new system, considerable outlay of capital, and a combination of facilities and accommodation to the community at large, which neither the Government nor the East India Company would be willing to undertake.

But in addition to the before mentioned impediments to the efficiency of the present plan, is the interruption to which it is subject by the requisition of the Steam Boats for political purposes, so long as they belong to the East India Company. It is true that this interruption has only occurred once; but looking to the immense extent of coast, the possible circumstances which may arise out of the present occupation of the shores of the Indus by the

(d) Indian Army, and the important advantages which the transport of troops in Steam Vessels at all times affords, it is fair to infer, that whenever occasion requires, the packets will be appropriated to the service of the state, and the post office duties will be performed by sailing vessels if they chance to be at hand, or they will be postponed until an opportunity may offer.

Having thus pointed out the defects and inconveniences attending the present system, and attempted to show that prospectively there is little ground to hope for any improvement in it, I have now to lay before you the plan which the proposed Company is calculated to carry out.

The great desiderata of any arrangements are safety, punctuality, despatch, adequate accommodation, continuity, and undiverted management.

To accomplish the four first of these objects vessels of sufficient size and power must be provided. The experience, which has been happily obtained

(e) by the performance of the Sirius, the Great Western, the Liverpool, and Royal William Steamers, running between England and the United States, has proved the superiority of large Steam vessels over smaller ones; they are easier, they meet a heavy sea with less labour and less strain than small ones, the speed is also greater and more regular, and therefore the calculations can be more certainly made in respect to arrivals. This experience affords a guarantee of safety, and of the power which large vessels possess of overcoming the monsoon which has hitherto been wanting.

The concurring testimony of all who have been examined upon the subject of the monsoon, leads to the conclusion that large vessels, with an adequate Steam power, will successfully contend against it, and although there are various opinions of what may be the exact amount of tonnage which would effect that object, yet from a parity of reasoning the greater the size of the vessel, within certain limitations, the more security there is of overcoming the obstacle.

Taking this view of the subject, the Committee appointed at a general Meeting on the 12th October last, have in their report recommended vessels of 2,000 tons burthen and 500 horse power, which will then combine (d) See Report, 13th January, 1839, Mr. Auber's evidence, page 16.

(e) The Sirius started for New York four days before the departure of the Great Western, which, being a larger vessel, arrived within a few hours of the time of the Sirius, which being of inadequate tonnage and power has been since withdrawn from the American station.

the desired objects of safety, punctuality, despatch and accommodation.

In respect to the latter point, it may be well to remark, that the kind of passengers going to and from India is different from those frequenting other places, and they require from their habits and general means better accommodation than the crowded state of Steam vessels in colder climates could afford. The attractive character besides of such boats would multiply travellers in a great degree, and be the means of increasing that information which the research of scientific and literary persons at all times affords from their observations.

I am sure I am not overvaluing the importance of this latter consideration, when I reflect upon the avidity with which every book treating of the interesting matter which Eastern countries afford is read by the British public.

Hitherto the communication by way of the Red Sea has been confined to Bombay (f) and the routes from Madras and Calcutta to that presidency are attended with great difficulty, and much inconvenience, (g.) immense expense and delay are experienced by travellers in getting across the country (which in the case of families moving amounts to a virtual prohibition); added to which is the uncertainty of finding a boat at Bombay on their arrival. It is therefore proposed to extend the communication by Steam to Ceylon, Madras, and Calcutta.

The plan of the proposed Company is to establish—first a regular Steam Communication every fourth Saturday from England to Alexandria, which voyage will be accomplished often in 12 and on the average in 15 days, allowing even for calling off Gibraltar and Malta to give and receive mails, and to take such passengers as may be ready immediately to embark, without detention to the vessel. On arrival at Alexandria the mail, &c., and passengers will be immediately forwarded to Suez by the Canal to Cairo, and by land conveyance from thence. At Suez a steam boat will be always in readiness to take the mails and passengers on board and sail immediately for Aden, Socotra or Ceylon (as may be hereafter determined according to circumstances) and deliver the mail and passengers for Bombay to a boat which will be in readiness to receive them. It will then proceed to Madras and Calcutta (leaving the mails &c., for Ceylon at Point de Galle.) The return voyage will be regulated in the same manner, starting from Calcutta every fourth Saturday, and from Bombay in time to meet the Calcutta boat.

This arrangement will afford a communication with

Bombay in	35	days
Ceylon	37	„
Madras	40	„
Calcutta	45	„

(g) It appears that the charges at present of a passage from Calcutta to London are

From London to Gibraltar,.....	£18
Gibraltar to Malta,.....	13
Malta to Alexandria,.....	12
Travelling and incidental expenses in Egypt,...	10
Suez to Bombay,.....	80
Bombay to Calcutta by land travelling and incidental expenses,.....	120
	£253

But the proposed plan of the Company would reduce the charge to,..... 130

Effecting a saving thereby to the traveller of, .. £123

Such are the objects of the proposed Company, and it is believed that it will meet the cordial approbation of the Indian community, European and Native; who have by their constant petitions to the Legislature, to the India Board, and to the Court of Directors, evinced the lively interest they take in the scheme being thus comprehensively carried out. But in order to give it the fullest and most beneficial effect for all the interests which are involved in it, the concurrence and support of Her Majesty's Government and the East India Company are sought, and considered by the Committee to be indispensable.

The Company proposes that in consideration of the conveyance of the mails to and from the three presidencies and Ceylon and Great Britain, and the conveyance of mails every fourth Saturday to Gibraltar, Malta and Alexandria, and back from these places when the packets return (which will be comparatively regular when once fairly established) an allowance of a sum of money equal to the expence to which the Government and the East India Company are now subject for the partial and imperfect communication carried on between Bombay and Suez, (but not exceeding the sum of £1,00,000 per annum) be made to the Company for ten years, the Company undertaking to give any security which the Government may require for the due fulfilment of their contract; the Government reserving all the postage money for letters, and the Company agreeing to reduce the Government payment by as much of the profit in every year as shall be in excess of 10 per cent. dividend to the shareholders, making due reserve for sinking fund for wear and tear, and renewal of Steam boats when too old for service.

The Company will, in addition, agree to the nomination of Directors to their Board, who may take part in and vote upon any matter in discussion, except the appointment of officers and servants of the Company, viz. one by the President of the India Board, one by the Post Master General, and one by the East India Company; and a free passage shall always be given to any officer the Government may choose to send in the Steam Boats to report upon the state of efficiency for the service of their contract, and which officer shall have access to every part of the vessel, and may stop at Alexandria or proceed on to India free of expence according to the orders he may receive from the Government, it being fully understood that the said officer is not to interfere with the navigation of the Steam Boat.

In short, I may sincerely say, that it is the desire of the proposed Company that every security should be offered to Government and the public that the communication will be efficiently and honestly carried out, which I think will be evident from the guarantee I have named above, and from the fact that the Company only require as compensation from the Government and the East India Company for the entire conveyance of Government despatches, of the letters to and from England and the three presidencies and Ceylon, and a (4) four-weekly conveyance of letters to and from Gibraltar, Malta and Alexandria, the same sum that they now expend in conveying the mails to and from Suez and Bombay.

The means which the Company intend to apply to the present object is a paid up capital of £5,00,000 for the establishment of seven vessels (and an eighth if necessary) and of such land conveyance across the Isthmus as may secure the free and safe passage of the mails, passengers, &c.

The Company will have to apply to the Government for a further aid in modifying the Quarantine Laws, and to place the Company's vessels upon the same footing in that respect as H. M.'s Ships, viz. allowing the days of the voyage to count in performance of the Quarantine.

The plan of the proposed Company contains a further advantage to the travelling public by its community. The great evils of the present system in regard to passengers, are the uncertainty of getting forward from Suez to Alexandria, the second uncertainty of getting a vessel ready to sail from Alexandria, the detention and Quarantine at Malta, and the constant changing of boats, which is in almost all cases a most serious inconvenience. All these inconveniences will be obviated by the connected plan of the Company; and, the management of it being undivided and free from all interruption from the caprice or inability of others, every traveller will find the means at hand of immediately pursuing this journey if he thinks fit.

I may here add that the proceedings, diaries, &c. of the Supreme Council of Bengal being (1) very voluminous and bulky, cannot be conveyed by dak to Bombay for transmission to England by the present mode of Steam conveyance, they are consequently sent by sailing vessels round the Cape, and are thus subject to all the delays and accidents attendant upon that route, whilst by the adoption of the plan now recommended, they would be transmitted in the same rapid manner as ordinary letters and despatches are intended to be conveyed, a matter of the highest importance both to the Government and to the East India Company as well as to individuals concerned in these proceedings.

I take this liberty, in conclusion, of adverting to a remark which was made that the Government had nearly concluded Treaties by which letters might go in sealed bags to Marseilles or Trieste, and thence be forwarded to Alexandria in less time than was now occupied in their transmission by Gibraltar and Malta. It will occur to you that in sanctioning the proposed plan submitted by the Company you promote great national interests by the encouragement of sailors and engineers, both of whom may be most useful in case of maritime war. You will give employment to British capital, and a zeal to British enterprise. You make yourself independent of the permission of foreign powers, one, always a jealous rival of all our national objects, and the other having almost innumerable intermediate little states between it and England, each of which has its own fiscal laws, and is tainted with undefined interests, and the occasional exercise of capricious interference, and finally the period of arriving at Alexandria will, on all ordinary occasions, be quicker by the direct route by Sea than by an overland journey by Marseilles or Trieste.

Sir,—The questions which I understood you to place before me, when I had the honor of an interview with you on the 14th instant, in reference to the letter which I addressed to you on the 21st of February were, 1st. In how short a time the proposed Company which I represent, could place steam vessels on the station direct from England to Alexandria. 2dly. In how short a time the said Company could place steam vessels to commence the packet service at Calcutta, and 3dly. Whether the Company would forego the Bombay line.

Having employed myself in conjunction with my colleagues in collecting the necessary information from Ship-builders and Engineers of the first eminence since that interview, I am now prepared to state that the Company could place steam boats to take up the whole line in England and India in twenty months from the time of receiving the recorded sanction of H. M.'s Government and the E. I. Company, and the agreement on the part of both to contribute collectively the sum of £1,00,000 annually for the term of ten years, reserving always to those parties the advantage of the possible diminution of that sum offered in my letter of the 21st February, before referred to.

At the same time I think it due to the importance of the question to state, that should Her Majesty's Government and the East India Company desire it, the proposed Company would undertake to place steam boats at a much earlier period, though of smaller dimensions than those contemplated by the Company for the permanent service, to carry the mails and passengers, &c. direct from England to Alexandria and back, on receiving an allowance to be agreed upon as equivalent to the service performed. In respect to this latter proposal, I beg to observe that the steam boats in the service of the East India Company do not admit of many passengers being accommodated, and therefore steam boats of the large size intended to be run between England and Alexandria, when the comprehensive plan is complete, are not required under the present limited arrangements of the East India Company.

It may be well to add that during the four months of the monsoon, few or no passengers will come by the present East India Steam Packets to Suez, and that unless immediate orders are given that the packets shall proceed along the Malabar Coast during the monsoon and come round by the African Coast to the Red Sea, no certainty can exist in regard to the time of the arrival of the packets at Suez.

Referring to the third question the Company will readily acquiesce in relinquishing the Bombay line, if it should be deemed desirable; but I respectfully submit that the undivided management of the plan carries with it a certainty of success, which the dependence of one party upon the other would probably defeat.

In conclusion I take the liberty of soliciting the earnest possible determination of the Government upon the subject, as the most favorable season for contracts with Ship-builders and Engineers is now at hand, and possibly the establishment of the steam boats on the whole line at an earlier period than that specified, might be thereby accomplished.

India Board, 6th April, 1839.

To T. A. CURTIS, Esq.

Sir,—Having communicated to the Court of Directors your letter to me of the 25th ultimo, I have the pleasure to transmit to you a copy of the reply I have received from the chairman and deputy chairman.

I am, &c.

(Signed) JOHN HUDHOUSE.

East India House, April, 1839.

Sir,—We have had the honor to receive and lay before the Court of Directors of the East India Company your letter dated the 28th ultimo, relative to your communications with Mr. Curtis, the chairman of the committee for promoting the extension of Steam Navigation with India.

2d. The Court observe that the first question proposed by you to Mr. Curtis, respects the communication between this country and Alexandria, the existing arrangement for which were framed by, and are under the management of H. M.'s Government without any participation therein by the East India Company.

3rd. The Court trust however that they may be permitted to remark, that it is almost without exception on this side of Alexandria that the delay attending the transmission of the mails between India and England has arisen. Whether this delay, which is much to be deprecated, and which has occasionally been ascribed to a pending contract between the Post Master general and a private company, would be effectually obviated by a contract with another private company, not yet formed, seems to be very doubtful; as even supposing the company to perform to the letter all its engagement, the route via Marseilles, would, in all probability, be quicker than that via Gibraltar, whatever might be the size and power of the vessels employed; and the Court are impressed with a conviction that any arrangement for the transmission of despatches and letters, which left another and more expeditious route open, would fail of giving satisfaction either to the public or the Government.

4. With respect to the communication between Egypt and India, the Court, however anxious to be relieved from the business of conveying the mails, could not entertain any proposal for transferring it to a private association, and making it an annual payment with a pledge of its continuance for a term of years, unless the East India Company were released by a competent authority from all responsibility to the public for the due and regular performance of that duty, and a sufficient guarantee were given which would enable the East India Company after the transfer had been made, to acquit themselves of their responsibility, in case of failure by the association. An indispensable preliminary, therefore, to the Court's acquiescence in any such proposal as that of Mr. Curtis, would be an act of the Legislature recognizing the new association as the only body to be employed in, and responsible for, the regular transmission of the public mails.

5. In reference to your question to Mr. Curtis, Whether the new company would forego the Bombay Line, from which the Court presume that you contemplate the continuance of the Bombay Line by the East India Company simultaneously with the operations of the new Association in other parts, the Court request us to state that they could not consent to make any pecuniary grant in aid of the expence of a steam communication with India without being relieved from the charge which the East India Company now incurs on that account.

6. In the event of your deeming it to be desirable to communicate further with Mr. Curtis upon this subject, the Court would suggest as an important inquiry,—what course the proposed Company would adopt, if during the term of their contract, political circumstances should arise to preclude the passage of the Maila throughout Egypt.

TO THE RIGHT HON'BLE, SIR JOHN CAM HOUBOURSE RT.
President of the India Board

Sir,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 6th instant, transmitting me a copy of the reply which the Chairman and Deputy Chairman of the East India Company had addressed to you in respect to my letter of the 25th ultimo.

This communication embraces five particular points to which I take leave to reply.

1st. The delays and irregularities which occur between Alexandria and England in contradistinction to the regularity with which the Communication has been maintained between India and Egypt.

2d. The greater despatch which may be looked for in transmitting the mails from Alexandria by way of Marseilles instead of the Sea route.

3d. The acquittal of the East India Company of their responsibility in respect of the due and regular performance of the duty of transmitting the Mails to and from India and Egypt.

4th. The abandonment of the Bombay line by the East India Company.

5th. The alternative contemplated by the proposed Company for carrying out the comprehensive plan, in case of any interruption to the Red Sea route from political causes.

I take leave, in adverting to the first point, to remark that the fact does not appear to correspond altogether with the Chairman and Deputy Chairman's letter. The June and July Mails from Bombay arrived both at the same time, the latter having had half its contents plundered by the Arabs in crossing the desert from the Persian Gulf; and again the August and September Mails arrived at the same time from Bombay by the Red Sea route, the Semiramis Steamer having been obliged to put back with the August Mail, being unequal to contend against the Monsoon. The three Mails of the 1st August and 2d and 30th September 1837, from England to India, were sent from Suez all together, in consequence of the detention of the two former from an accident to the machinery of the Berenice on her voyage from Bombay to Suez. I have thus clearly shown that the delay attending the transmission of the mails is not "almost without exception on this side of Alexandria;" although I am quite willing to admit that the delays which do exist in that part of the arrangement, are both frequent and vexatious; and, as it is admitted on all hands that the Steamers at present in use, as well as those building for the East India Company, are quite unequal to contend against the S. W. Monsoon, it follows that there is no chance of that corporation responding to the calls and just claims of the people both of England and India for a regular periodical transmission of the Mails. I beg also here to remark that the letter of the Chairman and Deputy Chairman refers solely to "despatches and letters; whereas I venture humbly to suggest that, viewing the vast extent and importance of the interests involved in the possession of the Indian empire, there is as great a duty to be performed in affording the facilities of passage to and from that empire, to persons, as to letters and despatches; which facilities must be for ever closed against the public if the present arrangements are permitted to continue.

The 2d point of the Chairman and Deputy Chairman's letter, assumes that the transmission of letters by way of Marseilles will in all probability be quicker than that by the Sea route. To this assumption I demur in toto. By a return in my possession it appears that in thirteen months consecutively from October 1837, to December 1838, the time occupied in transmitting letters from Alexandria to London via Marseilles was 26, 25, 8, 35, 45, 23, 22, 22, 23, 22, 20, 22, 21 and 21 days, making an average of rather more than 25 days, and the shortest time in which letters have ever arrived by that route has been 16 days. It is upon record that the 'Orient' Steamer made the passage from England to Smyrna in 12 days in the worst season of the year, her class not being any thing near what the proposed Company's vessels would be; the assumption therefore that the route via Marseilles would be quicker than that by sea, whatever might be the size and power of the vessel employed, is by no means borne out. The logs of the large Atlantic Steamers will show that an average of 200 miles per day can be maintained in all weathers, thus establishing the proof that in such a voyage as that between England and Alexandria, the passage in ordinary times may be made in large vessels in 12 days, and on the average in 15 days, or one day less upon the average than the shortest passage ever effected by way of Marseilles, and ten days less than what the experience of 13 months has exhibited in respect to that route. In addition to this I permit myself to recall to your recollection, that part of my letter to you of the 18th February last, in which I pointed out that under the present system the Mails were on the average detained 2½ days at Alexandria for a French Steamer to carry them to Marseilles, whereas, by the adoption of the plan I have submitted, a Steam boat would always be in readiness to bring away the Mails, despatches, and passengers, the moment they arrived at Alexandria from Suez, which is in fact 2½ days more in favor of my plan.

I scarcely feel myself called upon, or perhaps justified, in adverting to the 3d point in the Chairman and Deputy Chairman's letter, because the acquittal of the responsibility undertaken by the East India Company towards the public is entirely a matter between that Corporation and the Government; but I refer to it to express my full expectations that the Legislature will sanction and recognize the Company. I shall propose, by an act of incorporation, which will embrace and embody all the points which can render it effective to the Public service, and bind it to any obligations it may undertake. On the point of the abandonment by the East India Company of the Bombay line, I have only to refer you to my letter of the 25th March. With the pecuniary grant I conceive I have nothing to do, as that must remain as it is at present for adjustment between the Government and the East India Company.

The fifth and last point of the Chairman and Deputy Chairman's letter is in reality the most important of all, and to that I shall reply by referring in the first place to that paragraph in the Report from the Committee of enquiry to the General Meeting held at the London Tavern in February last, in which reference is made to the size of the vessels contemplated, and which in the case their applicability to other sources, in case of need. This indirect allusion in that report to the possible contingency of interruption to the Red Sea route, was intended to imply that the vessels might be sent round by the Cape should such a necessity arise. The Chairman and Deputy Chairman's letter enquires what course the proposed Company would adopt if during the term of their contract political circumstances should arise to preclude the passage of the Mails through Egypt? might I not answer this question by asking in my turn by which route the East India Company would send their despatches and letters in such an event? My plan only exposes itself to one and that an improbable contingency; but the route by Marseilles and Egypt contains two possible and one probable interruptions. I avoid the latter contingency altogether; and, having as I trust satisfactorily shown that expedition is more easily secured by the Sea route, than by way of Marseilles, I again appeal to the patriotism of the Government to cherish a system which will form a constant school for that branch of nautical science, Steam Navigation, which is daily, I may say hourly, increasing in importance, in preference to the adoption of a route, which whilst it exposes the Government and the British Public to the risk of detention, interruptions, and the possible breach of good faith by opening despatches and letters under vexatious pretexts, also throws into the scale the advantage to the French Government of fostering, improving, and rendering formidable its own means of Steam Navigation at the expense of British enterprise, British industry, and British skill. In the event of any interruption to the route by way of Egypt from political causes, I propose that the Steam vessels of the projected Company should be sent round the Cape, unless the Port of Beyrout and the passage to the Persian Gulf might be made practically available for all purposes. But of course this contingency would require a fresh arrangement with the Government and East India Company, as the expenses in both cases, either of Beyrout or the Cape of Good Hope, would be greatly increased. A clause to that effect might be inserted in the contract.

In conclusion I beg to remark upon one expression in the Chairman and Deputy Chairman's letter, which, though I am sure it was not intended by them to cast a suspicion upon the projectors of the comprehensive plan, has that effect in reading the paragraph. The letter says, 'whether this delay, &c. &c. would be effectually obviated by a contract with another private Company, not yet formed, seem to be very doubtful, as even supposing that Company to perform to the letter all its engagements, &c.' It is true that the Company is not yet formed ostensibly, but the East India Company are quite aware, as they have received all the reports upon the subject from me, and a copy of my letter to you of the 18th February, that nothing is required but the sanction and support of the Government and the East India Company, to bring it into immediate activity. It seems therefore a gratuitous and uncalled for expression of doubt, whether the plan will ever be matured and carried out, when followed by the major doubt whether the proposed Company will perform all its engagements; a doubt which ought to have no existence; inasmuch as the very basis on which the proposal is made to the Government is that of ample security that the Company will fulfil its engagements to the letter; and I trust the good faith of British Merchants is still to be confided in, even if no other guarantee was offered: but to all the guarantees which the Company can offer in itself is to be superadded the individual interest of almost if not all the persons who will be parties to the Company.

TO THE RT. HON. SIR J. C. HOBHOUSE, BR. &C. &C.

Sir,—I had the honor of receiving your note of the 24th April in which you stated that as soon as you had received an answer from the East India Company in respect to my last letter of the 13th April, you would have the kindness to transmit it to me. I trust I shall not be considered importunate if I again solicit a reply, as the overland Mail goes away on the 11th instant, when, I am most anxious to be able to inform the Steam Committee in Calcutta, of the progress I have made in this important question; a question which resolves itself at present into the small compass of whether the Government and the East India Company will contribute the sum I have required, under the conditions stated in my various letters, if I am prepared with a company entitled to confidence.

India Board, 6th May, 1839.

Dear Sir,—I have only to repeat what I have told you very frequently before that the decision for which you ask does not rest with me; and that of course you are at liberty to adopt any measures which you may think advisable for the furtherance of your own projects.

Very faithfully yours,

JOHN HOBHOUSE.

TO THE HONORABLE THE COURT OF DIRECTORS OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

London, 14th May, 1839.

Honorable Sirs.—The daily increasing importance of the vast Empire held in possession by your Honorable Company in the East Indies, both as regards the political, social, and commercial relations in which it stands to this country, and the necessarily consequent desire, on the part of those who are in any way connected with that branch of the British dominions, that the most expeditious mode of communication should be established between Great Britain and her Indian Empire, led to a public meeting which was held at the Jerusalem Coffee House on the 12th October 1838. The result of that meeting was the appointment of a committee to take into its consideration such plans as might be submitted to it for carrying into effect the proposed object of a direct and regular communication by Steam Vessels from Great Britain to the three Presidencies of India and to Ceylon, by way of the Red Sea. After a diligent investigation, the Committee made its report to the General Meeting which was held at the London Tavern on the 18th January last, when the report was received, and a Committee appointed to carry into effect the proposed object. Of that Committee (as of the former one appointed by the public Meeting of the 12th October 1838) I was named Chairman,

I had the honor of transmitting to the Chairman and Deputy Chairman of your Honorable Court the printed report adopted by the Meeting of the 18th January last, for the information of your Honorable Court, and having at the desire of the Right Honorable the President of the India Board, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, addressed them a letter pointing out what we conceived to be the defects of the present system of intercommunication with India, and the remedy to make it perfect, I also transmitted a copy of that letter to the Chairman of your Honorable Court. Subsequently, in consequence of some questions put verbally to me by the President of the India Board, I addressed another letter to that Right Honorable Gentleman, and a third in reply to a letter from the Chairman and Deputy Chairman to him. In order to bring all these documents under the consideration of your Honorable Court, I transmit, enclosed herewith, copies of my several letters alluded to above, viz 21st February, 25th March, and 13th April.

I trust I may be allowed, in entering upon this important subject with your Honorable Court, and in submitting my proposal for its consideration, to disavow any intention whatever either of impugning the good intentions and efforts of the East India Company, in what has been already done in the establishment of a Communication with India by the shortest and readiest route—or of undervaluing the benefits which the public, as well as the Government, have derived from these meritorious endeavours. I may safely say that the increasing calls for its more general application, have arisen from a sense of the benefits that have occurred, and a consequent conviction of the immense advantages which must flow to both Great Britain and India, from a constant, regular, safe, and rapid interchange of letters and means of conveying packages and passengers by Steam Boats to and from all the Presidencies of India, and by a well organized passage across the Isthmus of Suez. It seems, however, both unreasonable and contrary to all experience, that the East India Company, deprived entirely of its commercial character, and limited to the functions of an administrative Government, can undertake that extension of the system which is called for by the British and Indian public, and which alone can make it useful as a national object. The vessels employed now, and building for the East India Company, are not sufficient in power to contend against the Monsoon, nor sufficiently capacious to afford accommodation to the numerous passengers who desire to travel by the short route. The confinement, also, of the Communication to Bombay, is a great drawback to the advantages of the Red Sea route, to which the employment of the Steam Vessels for political purposes, adds a further interruption. These, amongst many other considerations, induce the impression on the public mind, that nothing short of a Company established for the express purpose of effecting the Communication, can succeed as a complete measure.

It is proposed, therefore, to establish a Company with a capital of One Million Sterling, and it is my duty to lay before your Honorable Court the following proposal.

The Company will build a sufficient number of Steam Vessels of 2000 Tons and 500 horse power each, which shall perform the duty of packets from Great Britain to Alexandria, and from Suez to the three Presidencies and Ceylon.

The plan on which it is proposed that this Communication shall be carried on, is, that on every 4th Saturday, a Mail shall be despatched from London to the port of departure of the Steam Vessel, which is to convey the Mails, passengers, and packages, &c. to Alexandria, and which shall only stop at Gibraltar and Malta to leave the Mails and take in such letters and passengers as may be ready to be embarked immediately. A Steam Boat will be waiting in readiness at Suez to receive and forward the Mails &c. as they arrive from Alexandria, which Steam Boat will go the whole distance from Suez to Calcutta, stopping at Aden to deliver the Mails, &c. for Bombay, and at Point de Galle and Madras, to leave the Mails, &c. for those places. At Aden a Steam Boat will be in readiness to receive the Mails, &c. and to proceed immediately to Bombay. The return voyage will be made with similar arrangements, every fourth Saturday from Calcutta, touching at Madras and Point de Galle for mails, &c. and receiving at Aden the Mails, &c. from Bombay. During the four Monsoon months, however, the Mail from Bombay will be received at Point de Galle, and forwarded to Suez by the Calcutta Steam Boat from thence; but the Mail for Bombay, from Europe, will always be received at and forwarded from Aden. The time of the departure from Bombay will be regulated so, that the Steam Boat from thence shall always be in time to meet the Steam Boats to and from Suez.

The Company will establish the means of a ready, and, as far as circumstances will permit, a commodious passage across the Isthmus of Suez.

The Company will engage that a Steam Vessel shall always be at Suez to receive and forward the Mails, &c. the moment they arrive there from Alexandria, and that there shall be also always a Steam Vessel at Alexandria, to receive and forward the Mails, &c. as they arrive from Suez.

The Company will provide accommodation and subsistence for any Officer Her Majesty's Government or the East India Company may think fit to send in the Steam Vessels in charge of the Mails, or to report upon the state of the Vessel and Engines, and the conduct of the Officers of the Company in their public duty in respect to the Vessel and mails.

In consideration of this extended and regular line of communication being established to the satisfaction of your Honorable Court and Her Majesty's Government, and of the conveyance of the Mails free of all charge, the Company are to receive from the Government and East India Company an annual sum of £1,00,000 sterling, for the term of ten years, in such proportions as may be settled between the Government and the East India Company, as to each other; such payment to commence from the day on which the first Steam Vessel shall leave Great Britain on its voyage to Alexandria charged with Mails.

In case of any interruption to the conveyance of Mails, &c. across the Isthmus of Suez from political causes, the Company will be ready to undertake the transmission of Mails, &c. to the three Presidencies by way of the Cape of Good Hope, on a sufficient allowance being made by the Government and East India Company, for the extra expense and risk to which the Company will be exposed.

The Company will engage to reduce the contribution from the Government and East India Company annually, by so much as the profits of the Company, after making due allowance for the charge of wear and tear, and a reserve fund for repairs and renewal of ships, shall exceed 10 per cent. per annum; that is, the annual payment shall always be £1,00,000, and the reduction shall be from the profits of each particular year, returned in proportion to the contributions of the Government and East India Company respectively.

Should your Honorable Court require any further explanations, I shall be most happy to afford them, or to answer any enquiry that may be made in respect to the means of carrying the proposed plan into complete effect.

Sir,—Above I have the pleasure to hand you a copy of my letter to the East India Company, and remain, Sir, yours, &c.

To T. A. CURTIS, Esq., &c. &c. &c.

Sir,—I have the honor, by direction of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated 11th May last, with its several enclosures, as also copy of your letter, dated 14th of that month, to the address of the Honorable the Court of Directors of the East India Company.

The Committee desire me to express their unbounded thanks to you and your colleagues, for the able and judicious course adopted by you in furtherance of your project for establishing a comprehensive Steam Communication between England and India by way of the Red Sea; from which they cannot but anticipate an early and satisfactory settlement of this long pending question. At the same time, I am directed to state, that, in the event of still further delay in the realization of what is admitted by high authority to be the just expectation of the people both of England and of India, you may rely on the active co-operation not only of this Committee, but generally of the people of India.

With respect to the two points on which you desire information, viz. the supposed impossibility of docking for repairs, vessels of the length and breadth of the proposed Steamers of 2000 tons, and the want of engineers in case of accident to the machinery; I am directed to state, with reference to the first, that the Calcutta Docking Company, in anticipation of this difficulty, in May last referred home a drawing of one of their Docks at Howrah, the masonry of which is upwards of 200 feet in length and 60 in breadth, with a view to obtain plans and estimates for its extension, in connection with a ship, the full particulars of which you can obtain by referring to Capt. Andrew Henderson, with whom you have already been in communication; and the Committee have every reason to believe that the information you will obtain from him will be quite sufficient to remove this difficulty. Should, however, Capt. Henderson not be able to adapt this Dock to the purpose required at any reasonable expense, the same Docking Company are prepared in their extensive premises to cut a mud Dock for such purpose, which can be done without difficulty or risk.

With regard to the want of Engineers in case of accident to the machinery, if the want of sufficient talent is meant, I am directed to state, that that want certainly does not exist, as is testified in the ready facility with which a main shaft was forged at the Calcutta Mint for the Berenice, from the magnitude and execution of which, it is presumed that talent and means are not wanting to execute any heavy repair which the machinery might require. The Committee are given to understand, that there is attached to the Mint a Foundry for casting iron, the blowing apparatus of which is driven, as required, either by a 14 or by a 40 horse power Steam Engine; and the same Engines drive a powerful forge hammer and other workshop tools and ranges of turning lathes, one of the latter being adapted for work 5 feet in diameter, and for cutting either the largest or the finest descriptions of screws, as also (with reference to such diameter) for boring Steam Engine or any sort of pump cylinders; and as the Mint apparatus consists of 5 Steam Engines, and of a greater variety of machinery, than, at the time of its construction, was to be met in any manufacturing establishment in Britain, it may fairly be presumed, that the means employed for keeping it in repair can efficiently be applied to the exceedingly simple Engines of Steam Vessels. Besides this, the Head

Engineer attached to the Steam department, under whose management, subject of course to the Controller of Government Steam Vessels, the repairs of the machinery of Government Vessels is conducted, would, it is presumed, be at any time permitted, (as also the Mint department) to afford him aid and that of the means at his disposal, which means are rapidly on the increase,—the expense of course being borne by the Association.

But independent of the Government means available for the repair of Steam machinery; besides the Calcutta Foundry referred to by you, with whose conductors time does not admit of communication being made, but of whose power to repair any description of machinery the Committee entertain no doubt; Messrs. Jessop and Co., of this place state that within the last three years they have considerably enlarged and improved their manufactory, having built new furnaces and cupolas, erected several large lathes, boring and planing machines, &c., and engaged competent European Superintendents for each branch of the business. They are now ready to engage to cast, bore, plane, and fit up steam cylinders of the largest size, to forge, turn, and fit shafts, piston rods, &c. for Engines of any power, and in general to execute any work in their line in the style of the best European manufacturers.

Moreover, the Steam Tug Association of this country have lately established a regular Steam Workshop with apparatus from England sent out by Captain Henderson under a good Engineer and Boiler maker, also sent from England for conducting it; so that you will readily perceive there will be no difficulty whatever in executing any repair to the Machinery of Steam Vessels of whatever power.

The Committee of the new Bengal Steam Fund have the pleasure of publishing the following further proofs of Mr. Curtis's active zeal and exertions in behalf of the project of forming a Company at Home, for the establishment of a Comprehensive Steam Communication by way of the Red Sea. The documents consist of replies made to Mr. Curtis by the Liverpool East India Association—the Liverpool Mediterranean and Levant Association—and the London East India and China Association, to his requisitions.

STEAM COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA.

A Communication from T. A. CURTIS Esq., Chairman of a Committee on Steam Navigation with India, having been read and considered.

Resolved.—That it is the opinion of this Association the formation of a private Company for promoting Steam Communication with India, will be highly beneficial to the interests of India, as well as of this country.

Resolved.—That in the event of sufficient Steam boats being provided for maintaining regular communication between Suez and Bengal, as well as Bombay, the route by the Red Sea will afford the best means of securing the speediest and safest communication with India.

Resolved.—That in regard to the proper Port for departure of Steam Vessels for India, while, in the opinion of this Meeting, Southampton would be preferable to Bristol, Liverpool is decidedly better than either. For not only does she possess ample Dock Accommodation for large steamers, and a good quarantine establishment, but from her easy and rapid means of intercourse with London and the intermediate places, with Ireland and Scotland, and with the extensive manufacturing districts of the North of England, Liverpool enjoys advantages superior, on the whole, to those of any other port, particularly as to the supply of Goods on freight, which is essential to the profitable employment of Steamers of large size.

SIR,—The letter and packet of papers which you did me the honor to address to me on the 10th instant, as chairman of the Liverpool Mediterranean and Levant Association, on the very important subject of Steam Communication with India, I submitted to the consideration of the Committee, and I now beg to enclose you a copy of Resolutions which they have passed in reference to them.

The Committee are fully sensible of the great importance of the subject, both commercially and nationally, and are convinced that the route via the Red Sea is the one best calculated to ensure a quick and regular communication between this country and her possessions in India.

I am desired to submit to the consideration of your Committee, the expediency of making Liverpool a port of departure. The rail roads already terminating here and which will presently connect it with all parts of the country form an easy and expeditious approach to it from all those districts of England, Scotland and Ireland, which more especially trade with India, and it is situated in the heart of the manufactures which not only consume the greater part of the imports from India, Turkey, Egypt, and the Mediterranean, but also produce the various articles of export to those places, the majority of which exports are shipped from Liverpool. Indeed the Committee of this Association conceive, that if due weight be given to these facts, it will induce a conclusion not only that Liverpool is peculiarly adapted for a station, but that it ought to be the port of departure.

In the opinion of the Committee, the facilities which Southampton, as a station, would afford to individuals departing from London and Bristol, is scarcely to be placed against the advantages which Liverpool would afford to passengers and the exportation of Goods from almost all other parts of the United Kingdom, and even for London and Bristol, a mere trifle in time would be saved by selecting Southampton as a station.

We shall be glad to render every information and assistance in our power, to carry into effect the object in view, and shall feel obliged by your opinion upon the points submitted, and also by being advised from time to time of the progress making in the undertaking. If Liverpool should be determined upon as a station, the committee think, that with a Liverpool Directory, many shares would be taken, but as an associated body, we have no power to apply the funds to such a purpose.

A communication having been read from

T. A. CURTIS, Esq., of London, Chairman of the Committee on Steam Communication with India via the Red Sea.

Resolved.—That the formation of a Private Company for establishing Steam Communication with India, is advisable, and will be highly advantageous both to this country and India.

Resolved.—That if a sufficient number of Steam Boats are supplied for maintaining the intercourse between Suez and Bengal, and also Bombay, the route via the Red Sea is best calculated to secure a quick, regular, and safe communication with India.

Resolved.—That the Committee are of opinion that Liverpool is peculiarly adapted for a station, whether regarded with reference to passengers or freight. Its convenience as a station for passengers is at once apparent from its easy access from all parts of England, Scotland, and Ireland by means of Rail Roads completed already (and in course of being made) having a terminus here, and it being the great port for Steam Communication with Scotland and Ireland; whilst its location in the heart of the manufacturing districts, which consume the majority of goods imported from India, Turkey, Egypt, and the Mediterranean, and also produces the majority of manufactured goods exported to those countries, and its possessing ample Steam Dock accommodation and a Quarantine Establishment, cannot fail to secure for it a constant supply of goods on freight.

SIR,—I am directed by the Committee to acknowledge the letter you addressed to the chairman on the 6th inst., on the subject of the report of the committee appointed at the public meeting on the 18th October, 1838, to investigate the question of Steam Communication to India, and I have now the honor to forward you a copy of the resolutions they have adopted with reference thereto.

Extract from the Minutes of the London East India and China Association, 21st Feb. 1839.

The Committee having been especially convened to take into consideration a letter dated the 6th inst. from T. A. Curtis, Esq., transmitting copy of resolutions passed at a general meeting for promoting Steam Communication with India, held at the London Tavern on Friday, the 18th ultimo, together with the report of, and evidence taken before the Committee appointed by the general meeting held at the Jerusalem Coffee-House on the 12th October, 1838, and requesting the special attention of this Committee to the important object to which those documents have reference, and the same having been read, it was after the fullest deliberation resolved unanimously.

1st. That a regular and speedy transmission of the mails between Great Britain and India by the means of steam, is, in every respect, of the highest importance, and would generally conduce to the prosperity of both countries.

2d. That no plan for such transmission can be satisfactory but such as shall insure a regular, constant, and direct communication to Calcutta, Madras, and Ceylon; as well as to Bombay.

3d. That without imputing blame to H. M.'s Government or to the Hon'ble East India Company, the arrangements hitherto made by those bodies respectively, have not answered the expectations of the public.

4th. That provided H. M.'s Government and the Hon'ble East India Company will give their sanction to a private company, and make allowances thereto, commensurate in a fair degree with the expenses they now incur, that no higher rates of postage shall be charged, that the Company shall be subject to an efficient control in its regulations, and moreover be not confined to any one line, but be open to take advantage of future improvements and experience in Steam Navigation, the Committee is of opinion, that, under the management of an efficient Board paying undivided attention to the necessary details, such company may prove effectual for insuring the regular, constant, and speedy transmission of the mails between Great Britain and the several presidencies in India, and this Committee will gladly avail themselves of its services when it is so established.

5th. That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to T. A. Curtis, Esq., for the information of the Committee on whose behalf he has addressed this association.

STATISTICS OF CRIME IN BENGAL.

However revolting the inquiry into the character and extent of national crime may be, its importance cannot be questioned. Without it we should legislate in the dark, and carry our laws into effect without knowing whether the execution of them was doing good or harm. We suppose our rulers are sufficiently convinced of so plain a truth as to keep before them the returns of their judicial officers, and have them occasionally thrown into a comprehensive table, by which the social condition of every part of India may, at least, be guessed at. Otherwise, it is not easy to see how they can be properly aware of the exigencies of the community, or have it in their power to remedy them. But whether they enjoy this advantage or not, the economy of our Government denies it not only to the public, but even to the officers of the Courts. As our Councils have but little to occupy their leisure with, might it not be advantageous to invest them with the character of a Committee of Papers, in order that they might select from the mass of official documents, which are poured into the bureaux of the Secretaries and Registers, such of them as it would be advantageous to the State to have generally made known, either in whole or in abstract, and might prepare them for publication? It would certainly be the means of engaging many minds in the examination of important points, respecting which the benefit of their intelligence is now lost.

In the meantime, we will use our best endeavours to obtain as much information as we can, on the subject with which we began, the state of crime in India. In the Appendix to the Report of the Committee on Prison Discipline, we find statements by the Magistrates of Berhampore, the 24-Pargunnas, Hooghly, Burdwan, Jessore, Nuddea, and Midnapore, of the convicted prisoners in custody in those districts in the month of December, 1836, which appear to us to be of great value. As, however, the statements are given separately, and without any attempt at uniformity in their details, they neither afford an easy comparison of the several districts in respect of crime, nor a distinct view of the aggregate amount of crime in the portion of Bengal which they embrace. We have, therefore, thrown the whole of these statements into one table, and have added the population of the different Zillahs, as it was estimated by Mr. Adam in his Education Report, at the time, to which the returns of the Magistrates refer. Our table will afford materials of thought to every intelligent reader: and we trust its uses will be manifest, that our friends in all parts of the country, will be stimulated to send us more ample returns, from which we may compile something far better, and therefore more useful.

In judging from this table of the state of crime in this part of Bengal, it is to be remembered, that all criminals doomed to capital punishment and banishment, and, we believe, the most of those sentenced to imprisonment for life, are omitted. The table does not, therefore, exhibit the full extent of crime, and especially of its most aggregated forms. Neither do the crimes specified appear always to mean the same thing. Thus the returns of murder in Burdwan amount to the enormous number of 80: but these are not so many perpetrators of distinct murders, for there are between twenty and thirty of them apparently grouped in one condemnation. The fact is, we imagine, that under this head are reckoned in Burdwan, a number of cases, which, in other districts, would have been returned as affrays with murder. Similar discrepancies will be found in respect of other offences.

In considering this subject, there are two inquiries to be prosecuted, of prime importance. To what causes are the prominent crimes to be attributed, and how, therefore, may they be abated or prevented? And what are the crimes known to exist extensively and injuriously to the public welfare, which our system of jurisprudence is unable to lay hold of and subdue? At present we shall simply leave these questions to the consideration of our readers. They are of grave importance.—Friend of India, July 4.

CIVIL AND MILITARY LAW—SOLDIERS DISPOSING OF THEIR REGIMENTAL NECESSARIES.

To the Editor of the Bengal Hurkaru.

Sir,—There has been a great deal written in your paper lately, and in the columns of the Military Chronicle, concerning the Civil Law and the Military Law, and the connexion existing between them. I have read the discussion with much interest, and have been tempted thereby to write a few lines on the subject. Not that I have any intention of refining upon such subtle points of distinction, as you and your contemporaries have touched upon—such matters are beyond my reach. I merely hazard an allusion to one or two facts, which I leave you to theorize upon at leisure; or perhaps I ought to say, I content myself with offering certain texts whereupon you may discourse your excellent wisdom, whenever it is convenient so to do.

I read in your paper of last Saturday, that two Sergeants of the Cameronians had applied to the Magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs for a search warrant, enabling them to enter and search the residence of one Johnson, a notorious character, who has long been in the habit of taking the military uniforms of soldiers in pledge for liquor supplied to them; upon which the Magistrate remarked, that "he considered Johnson was justified in seeking the best security he could obtain for his liquor!" or, in other words, aiding and abetting an offence, for committing which a soldier may be, and very frequently is, punished with 300 lashes on the bare back? Oh! brave judge?

A Daniel come to judgment—yes a Daniel!

But this is not all; the Magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs very probably thought, that the soldier had as much right to pledge his clothes as the civilian had to receive them in pledge. I do not quarrel with him for his ignorance, of the "Articles of War," but I do think, that it was a little presumptuous of him, when in the full possession of this ignorance, to give his opinion as to what, an old officer like Colonel James, ought to do with the men under his command. "If it is contrary," continued the Magistrate, "to Martial Law, for soldiers to mortgage their clothes, the Colonel of the Regiment ought to punish them, and by deductions from their pay, redeem their clothes." Now, only think, Mr. Editor, of the Magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs, after confessing to an utter ignorance of all law, either civil or military, bearing on the transaction, to dictate to the Colonel of a Regiment what he ought to do to this man. Just as though every Cadet in the service did not know perfectly well, that the soldier who disposes of his kit, is amenable to a very heavy punishment—that in European Regiments there are more Courts-Martial, relating to offences of this description, than to any, nay, than to all other offences in breach of the articles of War. I have seen, Mr. Editor, more of soldiers flogged for unlawfully disposing of their kits than for drunkenness, neglect of duty, and all other military crimes put together. Yet the Magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs says, that if it be a crime, the Colonel ought to punish the criminals.

What the Civil law is, Mr. Editor, relating to the purchaser of the soldier's kit, beyond the bounds of military jurisdiction, I do not very well know—perhaps there is no law that touches the matter; but I know very well what it ought to be—to borrow Mr. Patton's expression. I am almost afraid, Mr. Editor, to say anything to you in favour of the Code Macaulay but in that much abused volume there is an article (page 32, paragraph 25) which bears directly on the point, and as Military man, I must confess that the proposed law, is one that I should right gladly see brought into effect. These are the words of the paragraph, for I transcribed it into my note-book, at the time that I first read it.

"Whoever by instigation, conspiracy or aid, prevails upon what he knows to be a breach of Military or Naval discipline, by any soldier or sailor in the service of the King or the East India Company, shall, if such breach of discipline be committed in consequence of that instigation, in pursuance of that conspiracy, or with that aid, be punished with imprisonment of either description (i. e. with or without labour) for a term, which may extend to 6 months, or fine or both.

Illustration.

If a soldier offers his Military accoutrements for sale to A. A buys them, knowing that it is a breach of Military discipline in B to part with those accoutrements, A has committed the offence defined in the clause.

The illustration, Mr. Editor, is not mine, but the Law Commissioners! there can be no more law wanted, no illustration more apt. I am convinced, that if the receiver were punished as often as the pledger, the offence complained of, which is one of every day occurrence, would speedily diminish in frequency; but at present, the soldier gets 300 lashes and the civilian gets the profits of his dishonesty. Something ought to be done to amend this, but I am not going to theorize about the matter.

But whilst I am on the subject of the Code Macaulay, I may just as well allude to another provision, the existence of which was brought to my recollection, the other day, by the perusal of a letter in the Military Chronicle and some editorial remarks thereupon. There is an article, I think, under the head of cheating, which renders the assumption of a false name or title an offence amenable to the penal law. Amongst the illustrations adduced, are the very cases suggested by the correspondent of the Military Chronicle, but as, unfortunately, I have not the Code within reach, I cannot quote the paragraph in question; but I know that the assumption of the military uniform and military titles, and assertions of fictitious relationship, are all touched upon in the illustrations; and I think that the interests of Society demand that some such law should come into force. Hoping that if you are disposed to bury this long history, you will act upon the suggestions contained at the commencement of it,

I am, Sir, your obedient Servant.

BASSANIO.

* * We shall not neglect our correspondent's suggestions, but at the present moment, in hourly expectation as we are, of the much-wished for overland mail, we cannot make any rash promises.—Ed. HURK. —Hurk. July 4.

We have taken from yesterday's Hurkaru a letter on the subject of an offence, both military and civil, which we doubt not occurs repeatedly wherever there are European regiments,—we mean the offence, on the soldier's part, of selling or otherwise unlawfully disposing of his regimental necessaries; and, on the part of the civil subject, of purchasing, receiving, or having unlawfully in his possession, any of the said necessaries. Our contemporary's correspondent appears to be an officer, but not being well acquainted with the penal law relating to the case, though assuming that there is such law, he reproves the magistrate referred to, without being able to put him right, and without being sufficiently full and exact in his own knowledge,—for he does not know whether the civil offender is punishable though he truly says he ought to be, and refers to the Articles of War as containing the law of the case. We dare say it will do no harm, in the instances of such of the Cameronian privates, and those of other regiments, who do not patronise the Temperance Societies, and who find a convenient friend, like the John of the case before us, at their respective stations; if we expound to them and their confederates, as accordingly we shall, the jeopardy they may get into. The Articles of War cannot decree punishment to any non-military persons (including camp followers) and therefore that code goes no farther than to assign punishment to the soldier, who improperly disposes of his accoutrements; and our contemporary's correspondent, having probably searched the articles only, of course found no provision made for the case of the Johnsons; but if like Dunsterwivel, he had proceeded with 'Search No. 2' and delved into the mutiny act, he would there have found, matter to have convinced the magistrate of his reported error, and to have taught the said functionary the civil application of the military enactment. The following is the clause,—taken from the first attempt of our maiden Queen to legislate for men's small clothes, and certain other articles of their military apparel:—

'65. And be it enacted, That any person who shall unlawfully have in his or her possession or keeping, or who shall knowingly detain, buy, exchange, or receive from any soldier or deserter, or any other person, on any pretence whatsoever, or shall solicit or entice any soldier, or shall be employed by any soldier, knowing him to be such, to sell any arms, ammunition, clothes, or military furniture,—or any provisions,—or any sheets, or other articles used in Barracks, provided under Barrack Regulations,—or Regimental necessities,—or any article of forage provided for any horses belonging to Her Majesty's Service,—or shall change the colour of any clothes as aforesaid,—shall forfeit for every such offence any sum not exceeding twenty pounds nor less than five pounds, together with treble value of all or any of the several articles of which such offender shall so become possessed;—and if any credible person shall prove on oath before a Justice of the Peace, or person exercising like authority, according to the laws of the part of Her Majesty's dominions in which the offence shall be committed, a reasonable cause to suspect that any person has in his or her possession, or on his or her premises, any property of the description herein before described, on or with respect to which any such offence shall have been committed, the Justice may grant a warrant to search for such property, as in the case of stolen goods: Provided always, that it be lawful for the Legislature of each or of any of Her Majesty's colonies, on the recommendation of the officer for the time being administering the Government of any such colony, but not otherwise, to make provision by law for reducing such pecuniary penalty if not exceeding twenty pounds nor less than five pounds, to such amount as may to any such Legislature appear to be better adapted to the ability and pecuniary means of Her Majesty's subjects and others inhabiting the same, which reduced penalty shall be sued for and recovered in such and the same manner as the full penalty hereby imposed: Provided always, that it shall be competent to Her Majesty, or to the person administering the Government of any such colony on Her Majesty's behalf, to exercise, in respect of the laws so to be passed as aforesaid, all such powers and authorities as are by law vested in Her Majesty or in any such officer as aforesaid in respect of any other law made or enacted by any such colonial Legislature.

CALCUTTA PUBLIC LIBRARY.

At a meeting of the Curators held on the 13th July, 1839

H. M. PARKER, Esq. in the Chair.

Read the following letter dated July 10th, from George Grant, Esq., Secretary to the Mechanics' Institute:

To BABOO PRABU CHAND MITTRA,

Secretary Calcutta Public Library.

Sir,—It having been mentioned at a Meeting of our General Committee that it is in contemplation to erect a Building for the use of the Public Library, and that the Committee of the Horticultural Society is similarly disposed—it was suggested and concurred in by a considerable majority of the Members that as our Institution had come to a like Resolution, an union of the three Societies might enable each to effect its object much more economically and at the same time obtain for all more advantages than could be accomplished by any one separately. This being followed by a Resolution instructing me to open a communication with you and the Secretary of the Horticultural Society regarding it, I, in compliance therewith beg leave to address you, soliciting your opinion on the subject.

It certainly appears to me that among other objects obtainable by such an union, one of some weight is that it would obviate the expence of each Institution having to erect separate Rooms for its Public Meetings and Committees, reducing the cost, therefore, of that portion of the required Buildings to one third of what would otherwise be necessary;—one Theatre or Public Hall would easily accommodate the three Institutions whose appointed days for public assembly differ, as would also be the case with Committee Rooms, where Meetings might be fixed for various differing periods.

The frequent meeting of the Members of three such important Institutions under one roof, would doubtless also increase the attraction and popularity of each to a degree advantageous to all, besides which many other mutual benefits and interchanges of reciprocal accommodation must occur to you.

Perhaps the best way however of entering into a complete understanding of what our Committee had in view in making the proposal, would be by a meeting of the three Committees, or if at this stage of the business you think that a personal interview will be sufficient to enable you to lay the matter before the Committee of the Public Library, I beg you will do me the favour to appoint a time at which it will be convenient for the purpose.

I beg to state that I have addressed a letter also to the Secretary of the Horticultural Society in order that the proposal may receive as early as circumstances will admit, all the attention which I am anxious to draw towards it

I have the pleasure to subscribe myself,

Sir your obedient Servant,

(Signed) GEO. GRANT, Secy. M. I.

Resolved.—That the Librarian be directed to correspond with the Secretaries of the Mechanic's Institute and the Agr. Horticultural Society in order to ascertain what sums those Secretaries could in all probability respectively contribute towards the attainment of this object, before the Curators come to any decision on this subject.

Read a letter dated 12th ultimo, from Capt. G. T. Marshall, recommending the purchase of Adelung's Historical Sketch of Sanscrit Literature, Vans Kennedy's Origin and Affinity of Languages and "all good treatises on the Sanscrit literature, owing to the late abolition of Persian as the language of Public business, which will make the acquirement of Sanscrit popular."

Resolved.—That the books recommended by Capt. Marshall be procured from England, in case they cannot be obtained here.

Read a letter from S. G. Heatly, Esq. forwarding a plan and sketch of the Plymouth Public Library, with his own notes thereupon, and recommending that the proposed Metcalfe Library be built according to this model.

Note.—Mr. Heatly's papers will be laid before the Building Committee when all the arrangements connected with this matter are completed.

Read a letter dated 8th ultimo, from J. Barrow, Esq. presenting a paper on Catholic Emancipation.

Read a letter dated 6th instant, from W. Turner, Esq. submitting a number of the Trade List for the inspection of the Curators which was ordered to be returned.—Husk July 18.

UNION BANK.

The nineteenth half yearly meeting of the proprietors of the Union Bank was held yesterday (Monday, July 15,) at noon, for the purpose of inspecting the accounts and electing directors in the room of those whose period of service has recently expired. The meeting was also made special, for the confirming or disallowing the proposed increase of capital to one crore of rupees; and for the further consideration of the question of a reserved fund, which was mentioned at the last meeting.

Mr. W. P. Grant was called to the chair, and proceeded to business, reading the advertisement by which the meeting was convened and made special, and afterwards the following report for the past half year:—

Report by the Acting Secretary of the operations of the Union Bank for the half year from 1st January to 30th June 1839.

For the detail of the transactions of the Bank, I beg to refer to the accounts on the table, consisting of the Trustees account, balance sheet, and profit and loss account.

The business done by the Bank for the last six months has been very active, and its capital kept in full employment, yet I regret to have to state, that, owing to the several reductions in the rates of interest, which the abundance of the money market rendered necessary, the profit for the last six months affords a less dividend than the Proprietors may have been led to expect.

The profit for the last six months, including the recovery of certain outstanding debts, amounts only to Co.'s Rs. 3,13,313-7-11, which divided on a paid up capital of Rs. 77,59,000, gives a profit of nearly 8½ per cent., leaving a surplus of Company's Rupees 12,531-11-3 over a Dividend of Rs. 40 per share, or 8 per cent.

The net amount of interest and discount for the preceding half year shewed a profit of Rs. 3,21,990; the rates of interest being 8, 9, 10, per cent. This last half year the net profit has been only Rs. 2,92,681-10-3; the interest being chiefly 5, 6, and 7 per cent.: thus shewing that a greater business has been done, though at a lower rate of interest. The uncertain state and final stoppage of the China Trade has deprived the Bank of one considerable source of profit in having diminished the usual advances on that trade.

It is desirable to draw your attention to the fact that the gross receipt this last half year in the shape of interest was Co.'s Rs. 2,66,850-3-5. But from our system of allowing interest on deposits, the amount payable under that head was Rs. 42,502-4-10, which of itself would have yielded nearly 1½ per cent. additional dividend, and which deducted from the gross amount of interest Rs. 2,66,850-3-5, leaves net interest Rs. 2,24,347 14 7.

The system of allowing interest on deposits proved an expedient means of adding to the capital of the Bank, when it started with less than 15 lacs, and when a considerable profit accrued from the difference between the interest paid and received. Even now this system yields some profit. But one of the reasons why the Directors have desired an increase of the capital from 8½ Lacs to a Crore of Rs. has been, that the amount which they now borrow from Depositors at interest, being no less than 27,90,000, might be raised on a more economical shape as additional stock, and supersede the system of allowing interest on deposits, or it may permit a reduction of the rates on those that are fixed for three months.

The proposed augmentation of 20 Lacs will enable the Directors to effect this arrangement by degrees as the new shares come to be paid up. Even this increase of 20 Lacs you will observe is less than our deposits of last half year by nearly 8 Lacs. In fact the Bank has been transacting business with no less a sum than a crore and 20 Lacs, of which its own capital

Its Notes in circulation.....	5 00,000
And deposits at Interest.....
On Fixed.....	27,90,000
On Floating.....	11,00,000
	1,20,90,000

It may be proper here to notice that of the last increase of capital 40 Lacs, about 2½ Lacs only remain to be taken up, belonging to absentees who have the extended period of another year for paying up. These 8,000 shares are now divided among 470 Proprietors.

The circulation of the Bank Notes keeps steadily at about 5 Lacs.

The Mirzapore Agency under Mr. Dick has not been established long enough to admit of forming a correct judgment of its success. But about 3 Lacs of Rs. have been employed through it, the profits on which cannot be brought into the present calculations.

JOHN STOWN, Acting Secy.

Union Bank, July 15, 1839.

The usual resolutions for the dispatch of business were then passed as follows:—

1st. Moved by Mr. Trebeck, seconded by Mr. Parker, and carried unanimously. That the Secretary's Report just read is approved, and that it be published.

2d. Moved by Mr. Baillie, seconded by Mr. Bagshaw, and carried unanimously. That the accounts now submitted, are approved, and passed by this meeting, and that the books be closed accordingly.

3d. Moved by Mr. Cragg, seconded by Mr. Greenway, and carried unanimously. That a half yearly dividend at the rate of eight (8) per cent. per annum, or Company's Rupees Forty (40) per share be now declared.

The regular business of the meeting being thus disposed of, it was proceeding to the election of four directors, to serve in the stead of those going out of office. The following resolution was accordingly submitted to the meeting by Mr. Dickens seconded by Mr. Parker :—

4th. That the time of service as Directors of Messrs. William Cobb Hurry, William Martin, Kenneth Ross Mackenzie, and Baboo Radamadab Bonnerjee having expired, the meeting proceed to elect four duly qualified proprietors in their stead.

It being, however, considered advisable that the meeting should first give its attention to the subject of the increase of capital and the reserved fund, the following amendment upon the above resolution, was proposed by Mr. S. Smith, seconded by Mr. R. J. Lattey and carried unanimously :—

That the election of directors be postponed until all special business is disposed of.

Mr. Dickens then rose and said.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen. I rise in pursuance of the purpose for which this meeting has been made special to propose for your adoption and confirmation, the resolutions passed at the preliminary meeting in the month of June last. The substance of those resolutions is, that the capital of the Bank shall be increased from eighty lacks to one crore of rupees. As these resolutions are rather numerous, and are intended to provide for the details of the measure proposed, and as they have been sufficiently long before the proprietors to render every one familiar with them who has taken the trouble to consider them, I think, I shall best consult the time and convenience of this assembly by passing over them, and proceeding at once to develop the reasons which have induced me, in concert with many others, to propose an addition to our capital.

Before I do so, permit me to remind you, that it is now ten years since this Bank was established, permit me too to congratulate you all on its increasing power and prosperity. Many are around me here who recollect, and who aided in its first establishment in circumstances far from encouraging. The seedling which they helped to plant and tended and nourished with provident care has now grown into a goodly tree. That which we saw in the acorn, we now behold in the oak, spreading its branches far and wide, and well rooted enough to make, as I trust, yet wider and more vigorous shoots.

Gentlemen, as I have said, the plan of this proposed measure, and most of its details have been long enough placed before you to be well considered. I went out of the way in the meeting of the 4th of May, called for another purpose, to give notice of this proposition, and not only did I give notice of the main purport and intent of it, but the resolutions were printed at large pretty much the same as you now see them, and the whole details of the plan as far as then matured, and that was nearly perfectly, were given to the public, on purpose that proprietors might come to the preliminary discussion in June, fully prepared. On the 4th of May too, I also took care to dwell, though but briefly on the principal reasons which induced me, acting in concert with others to propose the increase of our capital. A statement has been hazarded elsewhere, that no reasons were given. That is not correct. It certainly is not my fault, that what I said in May was not reported. At the next and preliminary meeting in June, I certainly did say in moving the measure (having explained them shortly a month before) that as the expediency of an increase was generally admitted, I should reserve my reasons and wait to answer objections if any were made, being as the mover entitled to reply. No objections were made, or even hinted, to the vote, by which the resolutions were carried, subject to your confirmation in a second special meeting was unanimous.

I would fain proceed without further preliminary remark now to develop my reasons at large, but must be permitted one digression. I have perceived objections made by critics in the newspapers, which I think it not superfluous to notice here. It has been said that the mode of increase which has been adopted by giving one share at par to each holder of four shares, and the rateable premium to holders of less than four shares is objectionable, and that the increase of capital has always been effected in that way. And this part of the plan has been assailed by the insinuation, that there is something dark and mystical in this number 4, and some deep designs of self-interest and advantage in the framer of the plan.

The assertion that the capital of this Bank has always been increased by successive fourths is contrary to the fact, as I shall immediately shew. The original capital of the Bank subscribed stood at 600 shares of 2500 Sierra Rupees each. The first increase took place on the 14th January 1836. Each share was then made up to 2,700 Company's Rupees by a payment of Rs. Rs. 33 5 4, making 600 shares of 2,700 Company's Rupees each. At that period, there were still 400 original shares unsubscribed for, and this always kept down our shares to par, though the Bank was then beginning to pay excellent dividends. At that time it was resolved to cancel 200 of these unsubscribed shares, and to distribute the remaining 200 (making them up to 2700 Company's Rupees each by the call already stated) among the 600 old paid for shares. That was done, and the 200 new shares taken up at once. The capital of the Bank then stood at 800 shares of 2,700 Company's Rupees each, making 21,60,000. Thus the first increase was in the proportion of 1 to each 3 shares. The second increase was on the 6th May, 1837, and effected in this way. Each proprietor of the 800 shares of 2700 Company's Rupees was called upon to pay up 300 Rupees, making the total capital 24 lacks, and this being done, was allowed one share of 900 Company's Rupees to each original share, thus made up to 3,000 Company's Rupees, and the share of 3,000 was subdivided decimally into 3 shares of 1,000 Company's Rupees each. Then the capital stood at 32 lacks of Company's Rupees, and the second increase was after the payment of the call for 300 on each share also by one-third. The third increase proposed by myself was from 32 to 40 lacks, and by adding a new share to each 4. The reason seems pretty plain, 40 lacks being the maximum then aimed at. The fourth increase was my friend Mr. Clarke's proposal, and doubled the capital at once making the 40 lacks 80 lacks. That added one new share to each old one. The present is the fifth proposed increase from 80 lacks to one crore, and gives one new share to each holder of 4 old ones for this very simple reason, because 20 is the fourth of 80. I really don't know how, Gentlemen, it could be better or more simply done. It seems to me if a man complains because he has got but one share, and another has got four, that he might just as well complain, that another man was four inches taller than himself. The plan provides, that the proprietors of four single shares may club together, and get a new share amongst them, and that shares which cannot be taken up because several proprietors must needs hold numbers of shares not capable of division by four, shall have the exclusive benefit of the premium on each share when sold by auction. The former sale by auction at the Bank on the occasion of the last increase of one-fourth.

was very advantageous to such proprietors. The premium at the hazard rate of the day, was, I think, some 310 to 315 rupees, but the highest price attained at the auction was 370, and the average was above 340.

[This was said across the table at another time to a proprietor, but inserted here for the sake of the connexion.] Thus the small proprietors who did not take up their shares, but got the premium on the sale, were in fact better off than those who did take them up and previously sold them. So much gentlemen, for the assertion that the increase of the capital of this Bank has always been effected by successive additions of one-fourth, and the insinuation that some benefit to the large proprietors and projectors, and injury to the small ones when the increase is by 1-4th lurks beneath this mysterious number. I am bound in candour to suppose that the objector wrote in perfect, profound, and unmitigated ignorance of the subject on which he professed to instruct others. I have thought it necessary to say thus much as to objections made elsewhere. It is in this place, before the assembled proprietors, and at the appointed time that I meet opponents, and render reasons for the propositions which, in concert with many others here, I have undertaken to recommend.

As the insinuation has been hazarded that the projectors of this plan have some deep designs of advantage to themselves by selling their shares at a premium, regardless of the decrease of future dividends, I think it as well to add, especially as this attack has been pointed by name against a learned friend of mine (Mr. Clarke) as well as myself, both pretty considerably interested as proprietors in the prosperity of the Bank, that since you did me the honor ten years ago, on its formation, to appoint me a trustee of this Bank, when also I became a proprietor, I have never sold a single share though I have bought many, and since Mr. Clarke became a proprietor, I believe, if I mistake not greatly, he can say the same. It is not my intention to sell shares nor is it his, at the present time if at all, as I have good reason to know and believe, and surely this is a sufficient pledge of our intentions. Besides the attack on my friend was peculiarly wide of the aim on this occasion, for it so happens that he was not altogether convinced of the propriety or necessity of this increase. I have thought it right to say thus much for him because he is unavoidably absent. I proceed to the motives which have led me to propose and recommend the measure under consideration.

The main reason is that we have not money enough to do the business which we have to do: a glance at the accounts on the table will shew this,—it will there be seen that we bank with a capital of not less than a crore and 20 lacks including our circulation. So much for the objection which has been made to complete ignorance of our operations, that we had not business for our money. The consequence of this want of money has been, that in order to attract and fix deposits, we have allowed in all cases 4 per cent. in many 5 per cent. on deposits for fixed periods of 3 or 4 months, and 1 per cent. on floating deposits of which the balance in favor of the depositor exceeded 2000 Rs. In this way the interest account of the Bank has been swelled to a sum not much short of 1,16,000 rupees per annum, which we pay to various insurance offices and other depositors. Now either we want money, which we thus pay so highly for, or we do not. If we do what becomes of the objectors who have denied this want. They are disposed of. If we do not want money, then what are we to think of the management of the Directors, who have been paying away at the rate of more than a lack per annum to no purpose at all. I need hardly say that I conceive the Directors knew, in this particular, their duty too well, and that the money was worth having, or they would not have paid interest for it. If, however, we can procure the same amount without paying interest for it, we add so much to the profits of the Bank. I propose to procure it, and to put an end to the interest account altogether. This will add a clear one per cent. per annum, to the dividends, and it will drive away no customers, for the customers of a Bank are the borrowers not lenders of money. It may sometimes answer to a Bank to borrow as well as lend at interest, but it can rarely answer, and I am sure it has not answered in this case, during the last half year, as I shall presently show, when I come to speak of the portion of the Bank Capital invested in 4 per cent. paper. The system of paying interest at the rate of such Government Securities, or any interest at all at our present rates of discount, is in my humble judgment not advantageous, it is a system by which the depositors obtain the benefit of the Bank establishment to do their business without cost or risk, while the Bank not only obtains no benefit at all or very little, but may if any considerable portion of the deposits be at five per cent. incur positive loss. I am clear, therefore, that the system of paying interest on fixed deposits is mischievous and disadvantageous, and ought to be abandoned. This is the pillar and basis on which I propose to rest my propositions for an increase,—the abolition of interest on fixed and floating deposits. If it is not a condition precedent, as lawyers phrase it, of the proposition, it is at least a condition concomitant; and to be performed at the same time.

It has been said that of the Bank Capital, a large part of capital, consisting of the last increase, has not been paid up. I refute it by the Directors report. But a very insignificant portion remains unpaid, that belongs entirely to absentee proprietors, and you will recollect that the whole amount of this large increase of 40 lacks has been paid in half the period allowed for payment, in 12 months instead of 24, and I believe that if my propositions be carried, three fourths of the 20 additional lacks will be paid up in the next six months.

It has been said too, that the increase of our capital has been the cause of the decrease of our dividend; that I deny. There are two main causes which have reduced our dividend; both are in my humble judgment perfectly avoidable, and arising from a system which is defective, and of which the bad working once perceived may be cured for the future. The first is the allowance of interest on deposits. The second, gentlemen, is the investment of no less a portion of the funds of this Bank than 14 lacks of rupees in 4 per cent. Company's paper.

It must be borne in mind, that, at that very period we were saddled with some 28 lacks of fixed deposits at 4 per cent., some indeed at five per cent. interest. If in the urgency of daily business, called upon to act at a moment's notice almost, and pressed by the occasion, our Directors made what has not been a profitable, but what I will not venture to call after all, an improvident, I shall call it only an untoward investment of our funds, in this let me not be supposed in the remotest degree to express dissatisfaction or imply censure. I am far too conscious of the thanks we owe them, and far too grateful for the general excellent and judicious management of the Bank, to intend this in the remotest degree, and I feel that you will all do me the justice to believe this, and do them the justice to share the opinion that I sincerely express, that we ought to be grateful to them.

I have dwelt on one of the main reasons why I advocate an increase of capital, simultaneous with the abolition of deposits bearing interest, whether fixed or floating deposits, but I have by no means developed all the reasons which led me to the adoption of the proposition I have had the honor to recommend to you.

The circumstances of our Empire at this conjuncture strongly induce me, looking to the question merely as a Bank Proprietor, and one desirous of high dividends, to seize the occasion, satisfied that we shall profit by it. All around the political horizon is black with the thunder-clouds of coming wars. Let who will be straitened, we who have no paper circulation to cause us fear, or to provide for, who though burdened with the unlucky 14 lacs bear no other burdens, shall be unhackled in our energies, and untouched in our resources, ready to take advantage of a start, which must place us by far the foremost in the race of future competition. Let me remind you, for nearly all of you must remember the times and circumstances that led to the original projection and formation of this Bank. During the Burmese war, the mischiefs and hindrances caused to commerce by the stoppage of all usual accommodation, were most severe. The Bank of Bengal was closed to the Merchant. Not only was all customary accommodation in the way of discount at an end, but during times of short or few between, even loans on Company's paper were refused, and that at a time when the rate of interest in the bazar was two per cent. monthly. Even if the Bank did open for times, in three months again it would shut. The opening and shutting might as well have been guided by mere caprice, as by any rule, considering the injury inflicted. No merchant or man of business knew how he really could calculate his monthly rate of profit or depend upon his base of operations from month to month. The confusion and uncertainty were immense, the consequences distressing in proportion. Surely it is well to guard against a recurrence of such times. If wars should come upon us, as I believe they will, let us be prepared to take advantage of the times and circumstances that will give to us a practical monopoly of custom, as the Government had before, a practical monopoly of money to the ruin of all. Let us by providence seize upon and bind occasion, and forestall the time of scarcity. Let us be ready to give all to commerce which she can need, when there will be other source from which she can draw supplies. I say advisedly, no other source for it is not to be supposed that the Government gives the benefit of its connexion, and the monopoly of the paper circulation of this vast presidency to the Bank of Bengal for nothing! The connexion between them, which is one of unmixed advantage to the Bank of Bengal in time of peace, will become precisely the reverse in time of war. The bullion of the Bank must be at the disposal of the Government which opens the treasuries of its collectorates, and the Treasuries of the Metropolis, to the reception of Bank Notes, and the Bank which is the partner of the Government must support the credit of the paper of its powerful partner and benefactor, and keep as large a proportion of its capital as possible invested in that way, beyond what is invested in bullion to meet the extraordinary calls. This will be but a reciprocation of benefits; a fair exchange and no robbery. Qui sentit commodum sentire debet et onus. Let me not be supposed in these observations to be actuated by a jealousy of a rival establishment. I have expressed my fixed opinions formed from a review of the past, and the probabilities of the future, and as I am here to render my reasons to the Proprietors of this Bank, I think it right to give them frankly, at least all those which have mainly weighed on my own mind, and prompted the plan which is here submitted to you. Other, but minor considerations in favor of the proposed reasons may easily be assembled and urged, I do not think it necessary, however, further to enlarge upon the subject, nor shall I, gentlemen, as I mentioned to you, in the commencement go at all into detail on the rather numerous Resolutions necessary to carry the measure into full operation. They have been printed, and before you full ten weeks for consideration, and I presume they have been well considered by you in all their bearings in the abstract as well as the concrete.

Mr Cragg differed from Mr. Dickens in the view he entertained respecting the effect of the proposed increase of capital upon the dividends. He thought the increase suggested, would assuredly have a prejudicial effect, and decrease the dividends, and, therefore, he was opposed to the adoption of the measure.

Captain T. J. Taylor supported Mr. Dickens's view of the case, and Mr. Dickens then left the question of the adoption or rejection of the measure to the meeting, by proposing the following resolution:—

5th. Moved by Mr. Dickens, seconded by Mr. Parker, That this meeting, made special for the purpose, approves and confirms the resolutions of the special meeting held on the 5th June last, for increasing the Capital of the Bank to one crore of rupees.—Carried unanimously.

Mr. Cragg then resumed the subject of the Reserve Fund, which had been discussed at the last meeting, and proposed the following resolution:—

6th. Moved by Mr. Cragg, and seconded by Mr. Dickens. That it is expedient to create a reserved fund for the purpose of meeting casual losses.—Carried unanimously.

Some discussion then ensued, in which most of the Proprietors, then present, took part, as to the manner of raising this fund, and the way in which it was to be appropriated. The conclusion to which the argument was brought, may be gathered from the following resolutions:—

7th. Moved by Mr. Cragg, seconded by Mr. Dickens, and carried unanimously. That the surplus now exhibited of 13,000, be carried to the credit of the reserved fund.

8th. Moved by Mr. Cragg, seconded by Mr. Cullen, and carried by a majority. That all fractional dividends be carried to the credit of the reserved fund.

9th. Proposed by Mr. Parker, seconded by Mr. Young, and carried unanimously. That the reserved fund shall be appropriated, to the extent in hand, towards making up dividends to eight per cent. per annum when they fall short of that amount, and that when the dividends are in excess of eight per cent. all fractional parts of a rupee shall be carried to the credit of the reserved fund, until the said fund shall accumulate to two lakhs of rupees.

10th. Moved by Captain Taylor, seconded by Mr. Cragg and carried unanimously. That whenever the balance at the credit of this account, shall amount to more than two lakhs of rupees, as much shall be taken from the same, as may be necessary to increase the dividend to the proprietors by one per cent. per annum.

The Fund question being settled, the meeting proceeded to the election of the new directors, and Mr. Dickens's postponed resolution No. 4, was put from the chair and carried unanimously. The following gentlemen were candidates for the vacant offices, Messrs. H. Leighton, A. De H Larpent, W. S. Smith, W. Turner, W. Greenway and Baboo Prosonocoomar Tagore. The proprietors having recorded their votes, Mr. Hurry and Mr. Fergusson, who acted as scrutineers, gave in their return, and the Chairman declared Messrs. Leighton, Smith, and Larpent and Baboo Prosonocoomar Tagore, to be duly elected.

Thanks to the Chairman having then been moved by Col. McLeod, seconded by Mr. Cullen, and carried by acclamation, the meeting separated. Hurk. July 17.

M. DUPUIS' FANCY BALL.

On Wednesday night, the Fancy Soiree, as it was styled in the announcements, came off at M. Dupuis' house in Durrumollah. There was a tolerably good attendance, but the rooms were not so densely crowded as might have been expected; probably the number of guests might approach to two hundred. Whether, however, it is that the good folks of Calcutta shrink from the idea of making shows of themselves; or that the toil and trouble attendant upon the getting up of the simplest fancy costume, is considered a bore; or that the expense is voted a needless one, we cannot take upon us to say; but certain it is that there was at the assembly on Wednesday night but a small proportion of dresses coming under the denomination fancy. Scarcely a fourth part of the visitors had taken the trouble to make themselves the subject of observation and comment to their more soberly attired neighbours—hardly enough to keep each other in countenance, or to entitle the ball to the designation assumed for it.

This is not as it should be,—in England they do things differently.—Fancy Balls are Fancy Balls there, and no sober suited cynic is admitted, to sneer at the gay throng who are “making fools of themselves.” But perhaps this exclusive system would not answer here, probably if it was enforced, it would have a ruinous effect on M. Dupuis' exchequer, and so we must wink at the inconsistency of a Fancy Ball, with a few fancy costumes sparkling here and there among crowds of plain dark coats and (awful to relate!) white jackets, like diamonds in a heap of sand.

Though, however, so “few and far between” the fancy dresses were in general pretty good. Among the ladies, two or three very youthful beauties had donned the tartan, and appeared as bonny Highland lassies, and there was a splendid Helen Macgregor attended by her Rob Roy disguised as a joker in a plaid jacket. There was, too, a lovely juvenile Suzanne, magnificently and most characteristically attired. Others had, by the varied disposition of flowers and ribbons, and by slight modifications of their more ordinary, but not the less graceful attire, made to themselves dresses which claimed the appellation fancy, in its most emphatic application.

As for the gentlemen, there was among them enough of plumes, tinsel and hair to stock the Sans Souci, that is to be, for seven years at least. There were Spanish Dons, civil and military; a ferocious looking Turk—the “Saracen's Head” with the body attached to it; “the most comparative, rascaliest, sweet young Prince Hal;” a Maenniello whom in our simplicity we put down as the Flying Dutchman; a footman whom, till better informed we took to be an attaché of Monsieur's establishment, so like was he at all points to a real dunkey; and last but not least, a tall ungainly personage in a high crowned velvet hat and tartan coat and smalls, who might, upon an emergency, have represented the character of “1st Murderer” in Macbeth with considerable ecart.

There was one remarkable fact which struck us on a review of the party coloured groups of characters, as being particularly worthy of the notice alike of the natural historian and the moral philosopher, viz that of half a dozen young gentlemen on whose chins as we can certainly depose, nature hath not yet bestowed a vestige of down, every one was loaded with most supernatural beard, whiskers and moustachoes.

But though fancy costumes were scarce, they had, few as they were, a very enlivening effect when their wearers were mingling in the dance, as many of them did with much grace and spirit. Quadrilling was kept up almost without intermission, till about two o'clock, when Monsieur's inexorable decree silenced the musicians, and as a consequence, stopped the yet unwearied dancers.

Of the refreshments which were laid out below stairs, we can only say, that, though we heard one or two inveterate grumblers expressing some little dissatisfaction with either their quality or quantity (we don't know which) we found the eatables very palatable, and the wines perfectly drinkable, and believe there was a sufficiency of both.

It would be pleasant to conclude with a declaration that “harmony prevailed throughout the evening” but as faithful historians we are compelled to say, that such was not the case. From the early part of the night there were frequent squabbles and bickerings between different parties of the guests. There were many, who to their shame be it spoken, had apparently gone there with the laudable determination to have a “row”—and who seemed to have combined together to bully and insult all whom they could so treat with impunity. The leaders of this band were, as we learnt, men whose wealth or station would lead us to expect something better from them. Surely gentlemen holding Her Majesty's commission might employ their energies better than by acting as Commanders to a gang of idle brawlers, the lowest of the low.—Hark. July 26.

BISHOP HEBER'S STATUE.

At an adjourned Meeting of the Subscribers, agreeably to the Resolution of December 6th 1838, held in the Town Hall on Tuesday, July 23, 1839.

Present.—The Bishop of Calcutta in the chair; The Hon'ble the Chief Justice; The Venerable Archdeacon Dealtry; the Revd. H. Fisher and C. K. Robison, Esq.

The Resolution of the last Meeting of December 6, was read. That this Meeting be adjourned until after further notice, to allow of further enquiries being made by the Lord Bishop, as to where the Statue can be best placed in the Cathedral, and what alterations are necessary for that purpose.

The Bishop then presented the following Report:—

“The Subscribers to the late Bishop Heber's Statue are respectfully informed that the most anxious pains have been taken by the Chief Justice, Major Forbes, Captain Fitzgerald and other friends, and by the Bishop himself, to discover a position in the Cathedral at all suitable for the superb Colossal Statue of the late Bishop Heber; and it is with the utmost distress they have found that the monument is too lofty and grand for any part of the interior of the building.

The position pointed out by the accomplished artist Sir Francis Chantrey, between the altar and one of the Gallery fronts, was discovered to be impracticable, as both those fronts are contiguous to the rails of the communion table, and leave not a foot of available space.

It was then hoped that by altering the present position of the pulpit and contracting the area within the communion rails, a position might be created. But this on consideration was considered objectionable as being too near the altar; and was also rendered inconvenient from the limited space between the pulpit and the steps of the communion rails; the projected removal of the pulpit itself being attended with insuperable difficulties.

It was found again, that room, indeed might be made at the back of the galleries, against the north or south wall of the Cathedral; but the superincumbent load of the Gallery floor, resting at one or two feet distance, upon the head of the Statue the entire height of which from the base is 12½ feet) and the want of light, rendered this plan undesirable.

The Western Internal Porch had next been thought of but had been abandoned, as being found too contracted for the purpose.

In the next place, the body of the Church against one of the gallery pillars had been suggested; but the destruction of two principal pews, the want of a suitable back for the repose of a Colossal Statue, and the glaring light in which it would stand rendered this design abortive.

Another and most promising idea had, in the last place, occurred, that of breaking open the eastern wall of the Cathedral between the galleries, the whole of the eastern verandah, (about 60 feet by 24) and placing the holy table and communion rails against the verandah wall.

In the new north and south aisles thus created, a most admirable position would have been found.

For a long time the Bishop, Archdeacon, and Presidency Chaplains fondly hoped that this plan might have been carried into effect.

It was found, however, when maturely considered by the Military Board, so objectionable—chiefly because the alterations would not be in harmony with the rest of the building, because the elevation of the east front would be spoiled, and because it was doubtful whether the voice of the Reverend Chaplains would be heard over the church when reading from so distant a spot—that, at the suggestion of the Government, the Bishop was compelled to lay it entirely aside.

In consequence, however of this disappointment, and the unexpected opportunity which presented itself just at that moment of erecting a long projected New Church at Chowringhee, on a beautiful spot on the Esplanade of the Fort, the Bishop has now the prospect of offering to the Subscribers an altogether suitable position for this fine work of art.

The plans of a limited, but fine gothic Cathedral, 185 feet by 65, and 60 feet high without galleries, are nearly completed—the site on the Esplanade is admirably adapted for the sacred purpose—the money for the entire body of the edifice—all that is essential for public worship—is ready—the first stone will be almost immediately laid, with solemn prayer to Almighty God for his blessing—and there is every prospect that in a year and half or two years from this time, the whole extent of the side walls, 60 feet in height and without appending galleries, will be open for the choice of a position for this magnificent monument of Bishop Heber.

In the meantime, it is submitted to the Meeting that the proposal of Captain Fitzgerald in the letter subjoined to this report, be adopted as to the temporary position of the Statue in the eastern verandah of the present Cathedral; and indeed for its permanent place there should any thing arise to obstruct the completion of the projected Cathedral.

If the Meeting should think proper to nominate a Sub-Committee, the details of Captain Fitzgerald's present plan, as well as the removal hereafter of the Statue into the New Cathedral, may be left to their care and management.

The Subscribers are further informed that the state of the funds, which the kindness and energy of C. B. Greenlaw, Esq. has furnished, is as following:

The account received by Messrs. Palmer and Co., is 19,511-0-5 to which 9102-7 being added for interest allowed at 8. per cent, raises the total to 20,421-3-0 4

The monies remitted home are two sums; the one of 1,500£ the other of 500£ making 2000£; and leaving a balance due to Messrs. Palmer of Rs. 55 5-8.

It is painful to add, that above 2000 Rs. from about 38 Subscribers seem never to have been paid in, though an interval of 13 years has elapsed.

The funds available at home, appear from Mr. W. W Wynne's letter, to be about £30£ from this subscription fund, and 150£ from the fund for the Monument erected to Bishop Heber in St. Paul's Cathedral London.

It is respectfully proposed to the subscribers that, after the balance due is paid to Messrs. Palmer and Co. (whose conduct has been most honorable and generous) and the expenses discharged both for the temporary placing of the Statue, and its final erection in the New Cathedral, the remainder should be devoted, under the direction of the Sub Committee, for founding an Exhibition, Scholarship, or annual prize at Bishop's College, bearing the name of Heber.

The inscription on the Statue, it is also submitted, may be referred to the same Sub Committee.

The Bishop has twice written home to state the circumstances of the case, and to request the money to be transmitted to India, but no answer has as yet been received.

Captain Fitzgerald's letter will now suitably conclude this report.

MY LORD.—In consequence of my not being able to attend the Meeting of the Subscribers to Bishop Heber's Monument, to-morrow morning at the Town Hall, I address your Lordship to state that in my opinion after much consideration and examination there is no fit position for the Statue in the interior of the Cathedral. It could not be placed in the vicinity of the Communion Table, without incurring objections, which I need not mention, or without occupying space which is already too limited, or under either of the galleries without an almost total destruction of the grandeur of this beautiful piece of statuary—I would consequently recommend as a temporary arrangement, until a more fitting place is erected for it, that it should be placed in the Eastern Verandah of the Cathedral, a position where the Statue can be well observed, and, judging from others similarly situated, where I do not anticipate it will ever receive injury from the climate or from any other source—but to avoid all apprehension of this nature, a covering might be made for it, easy of removal upon all occasions, when it might be considered desirable that the figure should be seen.

I remain, my Lord, your Lordship's obedient servant,
W. R. FITZGERALD.

Fort William, 22d July, 1839.

1. It was then resolved unanimously that the above Report be received and adopted and its suggestions carried into effect.

2. That the following gentlemen be requested to form the Sub-committee:

The Hon. the Chief Justice.

The Bishop of Calcutta.

The Venerable the Archdeacon.

The Senior Presidency Chaplain.

C. K. Robison, Esq.

3. That the balance of 55 5-8 Sicca Rupees be paid to the Assignees of Messrs. Palmer and Co., with many thanks.

4. That the thanks of the Meeting be presented to the Chairman.

HINDU BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION

At a private meeting of the teachers and the superintendents of the above institution, held at the school premises, on the 30th June last, convened for the special purpose of taking into consideration some proper means, to alleviate the present incumbrances of the school; the following persons were present:

Babus Nobinkissen Ghose, Head Teacher.

Teachers.—Kisinauth Ghose, Shamachurn Nandi, Bonomaly Chatterji, Bhuybanichurn Doss.

Krishnahurri Basu, General Superintendent, Kallachund Datta, Assistant ditto.

After some desultory conversations on the present debts and income of the school, it was proposed by Baboo Kallachund Datta, and seconded by Baboo Nobinkissen Ghose, that as the Hindu Benevolent Institution is under adverse circumstances, owing to the death and departure of many of its subscribers, it is expedient that the teachers, whose salaries have fallen into arrears, pay a quota of their pay to the liquidation of its debts—Carried unanimously.

The meeting dissolved at 3½ o'clock P. M.

RUNGPORE UNITED SOCIETY.

To the Editors of the Friend of India.

SIRS.—Allow me to forward you the following account of the Rungpore United Society, founded by Messrs. T. A. Shaw and Rajmohun Roy Chowdry, in association with some of the principal Landholders and other respectable gentlemen of Rungpore, and to request the favour, that you will give it a little space in a corner of the Friend of India for general information.

At a preliminary meeting, held at the Rungpore Grammar School, on the 9th of March last, the United Society was organized with the following objects in view, viz.

First. To support the rights of Landholders, and their tenants.

Secondly. To encourage Agriculture in all its branches.

Thirdly. To aid the Public Authorities in local improvements.

In order to effect the first object of the Society, viz., to support the rights of the Landholders, and their tenants, it was resolved,

I. That the Landholders are to arbitrate the disputes of the members of the Society.

II. To correspond with similar Societies.

III. Directly or through the medium of similar Societies to make respectful representations to Government.

IV. To act always in conformity with the letter and spirit of all existing acts, orders, and proclamations of Government, and to assist in promulgating the same.

V. To pay, in proportion to the Sudder jumma, of each Landholder, for all expenses incurred in supporting their particular rights.

In order to effect the second object, viz., that of encouraging Agriculture in all its branches, the United Society is,

I. To entertain a secretary who, as professor of Agriculture, is to lecture publicly, and by means of an experimental Farm to teach the science practically.

II. To form a library and museum.

To effect the third object, viz., that of aiding the public authorities in local improvement.

I. To afford personal aid to the public authorities, and to render them pecuniary assistance in the construction of roads, bridges, and all public works as far as may appear expedient.

II. Each member to pay an annual sum of 25 Rupees for ordinary expenses, and a donation of books, or Agricultural, and Philosophical instruments.

The formation of this and other similar Societies shew that India is making daily advancement to civilization, and knowledge of political rights. A few years ago many a Zemindar would meekly submit to orders which, although given by public authorities, very often bore not the least stamp of legality, but at present we find them ready to oppose such measures with firmness. Like every other civilized nation, they are assiduously ascertaining the legal demands of Government, and respectfully petitioning the rulers for the modification and repeal of such laws as are injurious to them as a body. Thus by making it a common cause, they are supporting the political privileges, and rights of every individual, at the same time they are not shewing themselves ignorant of their duty of submission to every legal measure, and are not wanting in zeal to assist Government in rendering those measures efficient.

Attention to the science of Agriculture also bespeaks the progress of civilization. Barbarous nations from ignorance of its knowledge, do not enjoy one sixteenth part of the blessings which are brought within the reach of an Agricultural people. The former have to depend only on hunting, and fishing, which at least being precarious means of subsistence, they are led to a wandering life, a mode of existence that is, in fact, little better than that of the beasts of the forest. But the latter, from the natural course of their avocation being forced to fixed habitations are enabled, in addition to the productions of the earth, to breed up cattle, and other useful animals, so that they are enabled not only to secure for themselves and family, a sure and permanent means of subsistence, but also contribute in a great measure to the increase of population, consequently to the progress of knowledge, at the same time, by the productions of raw goods, to assist the acceleration of manufacture and commerce, which bring to men an accession of wealth and reputation. But in ministering only to the pleasures and appetites of the body, without the culture of the mind; man would not, says an author, enjoy half the delight, nor discharge half the duties of life. The mind, however, could never be properly formed without the aid of wealth, the production of which is in a greater degree attributable to Agriculture. If the farmers had not laboured to produce more corn, and the shepherd more meat than they could consume, the world could never have been blessed with those philosophical and literary productions which add immortality and fame to the names of some of the ancients and moderns. But, notwithstanding the greater extent of land, and superior fertility of soil, the productive power of India falls far short of that of England. Here the people with all their sacrifices, and supplications to the Deities, and Pears, very often obtain a harvest hardly sufficient for six months' consumption; the inhabitants of that enlightened land, however, are enabled by the power of scientific knowledge, to compel the earth to yield up her fruits. The advantages of this useful, and pleasure-giving science, will never be fully attained by the Hindoos, until the enlightened, and rich among them contribute to the propagation of its knowledge. The farmers of this country must not depend on the assistance of a plough and a bullock only for a plentiful produce, but should, like those of England, endeavour to secure the assistance of knowledge and observation. By keeping small pieces of experimental grounds in various parts of their land, they must learn their difference of fertility, and their willingness, or otherwise to afford nutrition to particular plants. They must observe and know the unfailing seasons of sowing seed, and at the same time, not forget to introduce machinery to forward manual labour.

As the slender stock of Agricultural knowledge which the Hindoos possess, is quite inadequate for the production of rich and plentiful harvests, the Rungpore United Society have resolved to engage a Professor, who is to give public lectures, and afford experimental knowledge of the science to the Ryots of those Zemindars who are members of, and subscribers to the Society. It is hoped, that the formation of this institution will be gratifying to every one who is a friend to native improvement, and that this Society will remain a permanent memorial of the benevolence and humanity of the founders.

BENGAL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

Proceedings of the Third Quarterly General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, for the year 1839.

At a Quarterly General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, held under Rule XIX. at the Town Hall, Calcutta, on Monday the 8th of July 1839, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

PRESENT.

George Angus, Esquire, in the Chair.

H. S. Mercer.
H. Chapman.
H. H. Goodeve, M. D.
Jas. Gregory Voe, M. D. } Esquires.

The Secretary read the Proceedings of the last Quarterly General Meeting held on Monday, the 6th of April 1839, and the following Report of the Proceedings of the Committee of Management for the Quarter ending this day.

REPORT.

Bengal Medical Retiring Fund Office, Calcutta, 8th July 1839.

With reference to the allusion made in the last Quarterly Report to Mr. Surgeon William Grime, (who retired from the service on the 9th of March last) having proceeded to Europe without payment of the deficit equal to a moiety value of his Annuity, required to entitle him to an Annuity, the Committee have learned that Mr. Grime requested his Agents (Messrs. Frith and Co.) to pay the same; but owing to their Insolvency, the amount had not been paid up.

Four hundred and twenty-three printed copies of Mr Griffith Davies' Report on the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, having been received per Barque Kyg, a copy is in course of issue to each Subscriber.

Mr. Surgeon John Davidson, whose application to be admitted as a Subscriber was noticed in the last Quarterly Report, has been admitted a Member of the Fund, the ballot on his admission being as follows.

The Resolution passed at the First Quarterly Meeting to refund to Dr. John Swiney the difference between the value of an Annuity paid by him, (thirteen-sixteenth of the value of an Annuity at his age) and the moiety value thereof, having received the sanction of the Subscribers, the sum of Co.'s Rs. 9250 2 7 will accordingly be refunded to that gentleman, on account of the over payment as below. The ballot on this question is as under.

The Committee of Management announced in their last Quarterly Report, that they found it expedient to require Life Insurance from such Subscribers who fall into arrear of subscriptions from absence in Europe, availing themselves of the provision of Rule IX. to pay up such arrears by instalments of double their monthly subscription, and that a Resolution to this effect, passed by them, was in circulation for the votes of Subscribers. This proposition has received the sanction of the Subscribers. The votes being as under :

Against.....	16

Majority for guarantee of Life Insurance. 107

Applicants for Annuities absent in Europe being admitted to the benefit of this Fund from the date of the Bengal Government General Order announcing their retirement from the service ; Messrs. G. G. Campbell and T. Scott, lately admitted Annuitants, object to this rule ; and request payment of their respective Annuities from 1st January 1838. The Committee, however, have in reply informed these gentlemen that the application of a general rule adopted to accelerate promotion under which they have been hitherto acting, cannot be laid aside to answer individual cases.

The Committee of Management beg to submit an Account Current of " Unappropriated Funds," from 1832-33 to the 30th April 1839—on which date a balance of Co.'s Rs- 91,131 2 2 was available for Annuities for the ensuing year. This sum will give Five Annuities computing the balance of the moiety value to be made up by each Subscriber at Co.'s Rs- 14,000. The Committee estimate that the realizations on account of subscriptions from 1st May 1839 to the 31st December following, will amount to Co.'s Rs- 12,000 per month or Co.'s Rs- 96,000, which sum for the eight months will yield five more Annuities, so that ten Annuities in all may be safely offered for acceptance of Subscribers who have served their time. Of the nine Annuities declared last year, only five have been taken up, the difference of four therefore merges into the ten Annuities now offered of which four are for 1835 and six for 1836.

The Committee also submit a sketch Account Current with the London Agents of the Fund, Messrs. Cockerell and Co. of No 8 Austin Friars, as also one with the Hon'ble the Court of Directors shewing a balance due to the Fund on the first, of Co's Rs. 3,362 11 1 and Co.'s Rs 23,501 6 6 due from the Fund on the second. These latter two documents are called sketch accounts because credit has been allowed on each in anticipation of payments made in England, of which the Committee are not yet apprised. An Account Current for the same period of " appropriated Funds" is also submitted, shewing a balance at credit of that account on the 30th April 1839 of Co.'s Rs. 5,48,775 1 8 of which Co's Rs. 17,664 11 3, are in excess of Funds required to be reserved for value of Annuities according to ages of the several Annuitants, inclusive of Co.'s Rs. 82,000 laid aside for contingencies for every six Annuitants, this surplus has been added to the balance of " Unappropriated Funds" agreeably to Rule XXXVII. It is necessary to mention that the debits in this account are included in anticipation also of the regular payments to the Annuitants on dates on which their several Annuities fell due ; for it must be obvious that no certain entries can be made to debit of " Appropriated Funds" until receipt of Accounts of Disbursements from the Hon'ble the Court of Directors and the London Agents, from neither of whom any account has yet been received.

The usual Advertisement will be inserted in the principal Calcutta Newspapers, inviting applications for Annuities to be sent in on or before the 31st of October next.

By Order of the Committee of Management.

ASIATIC SOCIETY.

At a Meeting of the members of the above Society held in the Grand Jury Room of the Supreme Court 3d July—the Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, President, in the chair—the Secretary read the Proceedings of the last Monthly Meeting, and Dr. Wise was elected a member of the Society.

A communication from Mr. H. T. Prinsep was read, presenting on the part of Government, a silver plate, brought from Kotah, where it had been used to take altitudes—this plate was greatly admired by the company for the neatness of its workmanship.

Several fossil remains of elephants' tusks, &c., were presented by Dr. Spilsbury, of Jubbulpore, who promises to forward hereafter a description of the fossils.

Read a communication from Dr. Cassanova promising to forward for presentation to the Society from the King of Lucknow, some specimens of Tigers and Elephants.

Mr. Davidson, C. S., presented to the Society a bag of lead money, sent down from Buxar—apparently very ancient coin.

Mr. H. T. Prinsep read to the Meeting a manuscript description of some very old Sanscrit writing on leaves—the latter had been received from Colonel Alives without any specific information as to whets they were found, or what they comprized. The pundit Kumlakaunt had examined them and given his opinion that they were very ancient, probably not less than a thousand years old, that the title of the work was the Sama Vaidya, and was the production of Gymnasia or his Garoo—together with a commentary thereon. That as there were numerous manuscripts of a similar description, occasionally found on mount'Abou in Rajwarra, among the Jain temples mentioned by Todd as being scattered about there, it is likely that those in question were obtained from thence. Dr. Sutherland thought, from the beautiful state of preservation in which the leaves now appeared, that the antiquity of the work could not be so great. The explanation of the various subjects touched upon by the author in this work were highly important and amusing.

The Secretary next brought to the notice of the Meeting a project of a distinguished Foreigner, Baron Bazin, present at the Meeting, for establishing a regular communication between this country and every part of the world by means of an electrical telegraph, the intelligence to be conveyed in some situations through hydraulic tubes. Should the telegraph be established it was the inventor's expectation that a message could be sent from Calcutta to London in three quarters of an hour—(a matter of the highest importance to the merchants of the city.) It was estimated that the expense attending the erection of such a telegraph as was proposed throughout Hindoostan, dividing the country into four routes, namely, Loodiana, Singhhoom, Purneah and Dacca, would be a sum of one crore and thirty-six lakhs of rupees. The Hon'ble President thought the subject of too important a nature to be disposed of hastily by the present company, he would therefore propose, as it was customary to do in all such cases both by this Society and all others of a similar nature, that a Committee be appointed to take the subject into their mature consideration and report on it at their next Meeting. A Committee of four persons, besides the Secretary, who offered every assistance on the occasion, were appointed; but Baron Bazin was desirous, as he was shortly about to take his departure from Calcutta, the subject should be discussed and a decision come to summarily at the present Meeting. This not meeting with the approbation of the Hon'ble President or the Members, it was proposed and carried that the papers descriptive of the new telegraph be returned with the usual acknowledgements.

Read a letter from Government presenting to the Society, a piece of a fragrant wood, its bark and leaves, some gum and a mineral which had been transmitted by Dr. Pearson from Darjeeling.

Lieutenant Kitloe presented to the Society, two numbers of his "Illustrations of Indian Architecture."

Shah Kubbeeroodeen, just arrived from Sasseram, presented a number of old Sactrian coins, gold, silver, &c., which he had obtained from that neighbourhood—the impressions on the gold coins, it was remarked, were more perfect and distinct than any that had before been received by the Society—the silver coins were of the time of Shere Shah, Azim Shah, &c.

Mr Middleton presented the head of an Antelope, a native of Ajmere—the specimen was much admired.

The Secretary then brought to the attention of the Meeting the state of the finances of the Society—the present expenditure exceeding the income by 173 rupees a month. He held in his hand a report drawn up on the subject, embodying certain measures for lessening the expenses of the Library, Museum, &c. and bringing them within the income of the Society—this report had met with the approval of the Committee of Papers, and was laid before the Meeting for the adoption of the members. It was proposed by the President, seconded by Sir John Peter Grant, that the capital of the Society be disbursed to meet all bills due, and that no works in the oriental tongues should be undertaken, till the debts under this head shall have been liquidated. The thanks of the Members were voted to Dr. McLelland for his disinterested and very generous sacrifice of salary for the purpose of facilitating the proposed reductions.

Several beautiful specimens of birds and fishes were on the table for the inspection of the Members.—Calcutta Courier, July 4.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting was held at the Society's Rooms, Town Hall, on Wednesday the 10th July 1839.

C. K. Robinson, Esq., Vice President, on taking the Chair, announced the regret of the Hon'ble the President at being unable from other business to attend.

(Fifteen Members present)

Dr. Wallich informed the meeting that he had, for the day, undertaken to officiate for the Secretary, who was prevented from being in his place by indisposition.

The proceedings of the last meeting were then read and confirmed.

Members Elected.

The Gentlemen proposed at the last meeting were elected Members of the society, viz.:

Messrs. H. T. Stewart, J. W. Laidlay, A. K. Lindsey, H. Falconer, M. D., Archd. Sconce, L. J. H. Grey, R. C. Halkett and Lieut. Col. Presgrave.

For Election.

The names of the following gentlemen were read as candidates for election at the next meeting:—

Colonel Thomas Fiddes (Town Major)—proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Mr. C. K. Robinson.

H. C. Halkett Esq., C. S. (Jessore)—proposed by Mr. W. H. L. Rainey, seconded by Dr. Spry.

F. Lowth, Esq., C. S., (Jessore)—proposed by Mr. W. H. L. Rainey, seconded by Dr. Spry.

F. Courjon, Esq., of Comillah, proposed by Mr. John Allan, seconded by Mr. W. Storm.

Lieut. J. Eliot (Artillery, Akyab)—proposed by Dr. E. W. Clarributt, seconded by Dr. Spry.

W. P. Downing, Esq.—proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

A. S. Anhand, Esq., (Magistrate and Collector at Tipperah)—proposed by Mr. Charles Cardew, seconded by Dr. Spry.

Frederick A. Lushington, Esq., (Joint Magistrate and Deputy Collector at Moorshedabad.)—proposed by Mr. Alexander Beattie, seconded by Mr. C. J. Richards.

PRESENTATIONS TO THE SOCIETY.

Library.

Two copies of the second volume of the Farmer's Cabinet,—Presented by the Philadelphia Society for promoting Agriculture.

Museum and Nursery.

A few varieties of Maize, and a small quantity of Grass and other seeds,—Presented by the Philadelphia Society for promoting Agriculture.

A small quantity of Pernambuco, Peruvian and Fernando Po Cotton Seed, grown at the Palmasdeeah Plantation, near Sook Saugor,—Presented by Mr. L. Quantin.

Two grafts of Orange trees and two grafts of Pear trees,—Presented by Nawaub Tohowerjung.

A fresh supply of Cactus plant with Cochineal from the Isle of Bourbon,—Presented by Mons. Richard, Superintendent of the Botanical Garden at that Island.

Note.—Dr. Wallich stated that the Plant had arrived in excellent condition, but he regretted to say there were very few insects alive on them. He begged of Members who might have any practical knowledge of the treatment of the insect to assist him with their advice.

Motion of which notice was given at the last Meeting.

The motion proposed at the last Meeting by Mr. Piddington, seconded by Mr. Robinson,—that with a view of aiding the labours of those scientific gentlemen at home who have interested themselves on the subject of an interchange of plants between Asia and Europe, a Committee be formed for the purpose of suggesting such plants and trees as may be thought desirable for introduction into India, and those that can be furnished in return,—was the subject which first engaged the attention of the Meeting.

Mr. Piddington in addressing the Meeting, as the proposer of the above motion, stated that he did not consider it necessary for him to say much on the subject,—as the object to which it had reference was one, the utility of which, could not fail to be recognized by every member of the Society,—yet he begged to call the attention of the meeting to a few staple articles of commerce, among many others that might be named if time permitted, which appeared to him to require some slight comment. In the first place, he would allude to that great staple of Indian Commerce, Indigo. We had now for many years been cultivating the Asiatic species, without endeavouring to discover whether the Indigos of other countries might not possess equal if not superior qualities. Mr. Piddington then mentioned the African and American varieties as being superior both for production and for manufacturing purposes, and instanced the Egyptian Indigo and that of the Caraccas,—the latter, he had found, by experiments on a large scale, to be a species of Indigo from which it is scarcely possible to make a bad colour; and reckoning the loss on a crop, on account of its inferiority in colour, at the moderate rate of 5 per cent. what a saving would be effected by the culture of that species, which would afford a good colour. Mr. Piddington then went into detail to prove that the plant that is now so largely cultivated in India, is not, by any means, the best variety.

The several sorts of Oil seeds were next alluded to by Mr. Piddington. The African Sesamum, which gives a greater produce of oil than the common black sort:—the White Sesamum of Southern India, and several other varieties of this highly useful product, which might be successfully introduced.

The trees producing Gums of several qualities were then adverted to. In the vast tracts throughout India, in many parts the Babool only was cultivated. Now if we could introduce those trees which produce the Gum Senegal, Gum Arabic, &c. &c. which are so well known to give a price in the market, very much beyond that obtained for the Gums now cultivated, what great advantages would be conferred on the country: the subject of an interchange of plants between Asia and other parts of the world was one which had engaged the attention of the Society many years ago, and Mr. Piddington reminded the Members of the Circular which was issued in the year 1832 regarding it. In addition to the foregoing, Mr. Piddington alluded to several other articles of commercial value, and stated in conclusion, that the Society would doubtless have it in its power to aid materially those gentlemen at home who had undertaken the enquiry, and he would therefore beg to propose that a Committee be appointed for that purpose.

The Meeting having taken the subject into consideration agreed that the following gentlemen be now requested to form themselves into a Committee, with power to add to their number,—Dr. Wallich and O'Shaughnessy,—Babon Ramcomul Sen,—Major Carter,—Messrs. Storm, Robinson, Willis, Wason, Piddington, D. W. Speed, Johnson, Cowie and Dr. Spry.

Notice of Motion.

Proposed by Major Carter, seconded by Mr. Piddington,—

"That the sum of five hundred rupees be assigned for obtaining from abroad a quantity of seed Corn, for distribution or sale. The amount of each description to be determined by the Committee or Society."

Report of the Cotton Committee.

Dr. Wallich read to the Meeting a report drawn up by the Cotton Committee on the only samples of Cotton, which had been submitted to compete for the medals of the society.

"The committee consider the two samples of Cotton, submitted by Mr. Quantin for their judgment, and labelled "Peruvian Cotton first year's crop, sown in June, 1838," and "Peruvian Cotton, 2d year's crop," to be undeserving of either of the Society's Medals;—1st, owing to the smallness of the quantity furnished, and 2dly, on the ground of there being no sufficient report in accompaniment as to its production.

The specimen of "Peruvian Cotton sown in June 1838," is bad in colour and of bad quality."

The specimen of "Peruvian Cotton, 2d years crop," is of good colour and good quality—so good indeed as to deserve particular enquiry. It is quite equal to any imported into England from Peru or the Coast of America.

This sample would without doubt have been entitled to a Medal had the grower produced a sufficient quantity, and accompanied it with the full and particular Report required by the published conditions of the Agricultural Society."

In connection with the foregoing Report, and with reference to the wish of the Members of the Committee, for more detailed information on the mode of culture, &c. of the trees, from which the above samples of Cotton had been produced,—the following extract of a letter from Mr. Quantin, dated from Palmasdaleah Plantation near Sook Saugor, in reply to the application of the Secretary, was brought to the notice of the Meeting.

"I have only one Peruvian Cotton tree, which was 21 feet high, which gave me 360 pods, and had not the storm blown down the tree, I would have collected about 100 pods more, as the tree is blown down, I have cut off all the branches and left the stalk only, which is thriving well,—the soil is mixed, a little sandy, the trees I had left to chance, only watered several times during the severity of the weather in March, April, and May. The sample tickelled "Peruvian Cotton, second year's growth," is the produce of the former year's trees not cut down." Mr. Quantin proposed extending the cultivation.

Dr. Wallich read to the Meeting an interesting communication from Dr. Helfer, dated Mergui, May 28th, to the address of the Secretary.—After offering his services to the Society in any way they may be available in that quarter, Dr. Helfer adds—

"The Tenasserim Provinces being the Southern and Easternmost of the Presidency of Bengal participate much more of the nature of the Malay countries and of Indo-China at the same time, than of India proper, and have consequently many productions peculiar to them not to be found in the rest of India. The Southern parts and chiefly Mergui province, must according to its latitude be already included within the cyclone of inter-tropical countries, the violence of the monsoon being already broken, and a more equally distributed rain to an uniform approaching series of seasons assimilating it to the climate of Penang and Singapore."

"Hence also the productions of these countries promise to thrive well in these parts, and I have incited an experimental introduction of the Clove and Nutmeg Tree. Should these succeed, they could with great probability, from here be transported to a more northern latitude, gradual acclimation being the great secret in the introduction of foreign vegetable productions. In this way for instance the Date tree has been gradually brought from the Deserts of Arabia into the secluded valleys of Gedeve where it now blossoms and produces fruit.

"And so we may hope that the valuable Spices of the Molluccas after having made their first stage at Penang, and their second at Mergui, their third at Moulmein, may finally be introduced into Bengal.

"The true Cajuput Oil tree is growing in abundance in these parts, should the Society wish any number of seedlings for introduction in Bengal, I will be happy to send them.

"As Coffee thrives beautifully in these Provinces a supply of sprouting Coffee seeds would be highly desirable for distribution among the Natives. All the Coffee hitherto sent dry proved a failure, the power of germination was extinct."

Experimental Plantation near Amherst Town Intended introduction of Chinese Labourers into the Tenasserim Provinces.

Mr. Blundell, Commissioner in the Tenasserim Provinces, in a letter dated Maulmain, 10th June, acknowledges the receipt of a consignment of Seeds forwarded by the Society in April last:—"Every thing," writes Mr. Blundell, "reached me in perfect safety, the Coffee Plants in especial fine order. The Cotton Seeds, however, I regret to say, nearly all proved bad, with the exception of the Malta Cotton. These and Maize are the only seeds that have yet been put in the ground, the other being reserved till the strength of the Monsoon is passed. My friend Mr. Riley has taken charge of all these Seeds and plants at his Establishment near Amherst Town, and he will duly report the result of his experiments. I heartily wish we had a few more individuals here to engage in Agricultural pursuits, but doubtless if Mr. Riley succeeds, others will soon follow. One great advantage enjoyed here is the adaptation of the climate to the European constitution; land is abundant and of every description, but on the other hand the price of labour is enormous, owing to our very scanty population. Mr. Riley proposes to obviate this by the introduction of Chinese labourers from the Straits."

Report of the progress made in the Garden of the Branch Agricultural Society at Saugor.

Capt. White, Secretary to the Branch Agricultural Society lately established at Saugor, gives the following interesting particulars relative to the progress of their Institution:—"An European has been employed as a Superintendent, and to keep a diary of proceedings, as well as of the productions of the Garden. The Coffee plants, of which there are a great number, thrive exceedingly well and bear berries, although this year not in such profusion as in general, we are anxious to know, whether the berries have to undergo any particular process in the drying before being burnt for use. The Otahitee Sugar Canes are large and luxuriant, and a small quantity of poor has been made therefrom by way of experiment. The Cotton is very productive, the Georgia has not succeeded so well as anticipated, this probably may be owing to their having been planted in the wrong season. The Arracan Tobacco, will, I have no doubt, be speedily acclimated, and become very fine, at present the leaf is small: the Rhubarb Seeds from Dr. Wallich have been sown and vegetated, but I much fear the plants will not thrive, having been put into the ground only last month, and I should think the proper period to be the commencement of the cold season (October.) "With regard to Horticulture, experiments," Capt. White adds. "The vegetable productions have not been noted in the Society's Garden; in that of Sir Thomas Ambrose's several very large Cabbages from Cape Seed (Drum-head) were produced, the largest weighed 19 lbs., the stock cut short and without a single green leaf, in circumference it was 39 inches. The Tematas are the largest I have ever seen, or heard of, one weighed 42 lbs. R., and was 17 inches in circumference. The Leeks have been most carefully cultivated, and are not only in great abundance but very fine, the weight 1½ lbs., circumference 7 inches and length 14 inches entirely white; the Lettuces of every description exceedingly large, a Coss Lettuce weighed nearly 1½ lbs. divested of the green leaves. Parsnips of a very large size, are still in the General's Garden, the Seeds did not vegetate very freely, but what did come up, have thriven wonderfully well, and some have just shown the appearance of going to Seed,—the Scorzonaira I expect next year will be very fine, one small bed has seeded very freely, and the few roots we tasted were exceedingly good, resembling very much in flavor to Artichoke bottoms; of the American Seeds, the Squash, Pumpkin, Mangul Wurzel and the different kinds of Radishes have vegetated, the bush and long green squash are very luxuriant, and appear to be a very delicate and delicious vegetable."

Climate and Capabilities of the Provinces of Chota Nagpore.

The next communication read to the Meeting, was one from Major Steel in charge of the Ramghur Local Battalion. This gentleman, in a letter dated Dorunda, Chota Nagpore, May the 13th, thus expresses himself. "The climate is cool and agreeable during the night, in the day an occasional hot wind prevails, but never long,—the winds have been too variable. The people are an honest, simple race, but as superior in integrity to the other inhabitants I have met with as possible. Any thing might be made of them, and I feel convinced the soil contains great practicabilities. If you can supply me with some Cotton, Coffee and Tobacco, I shall be most happy to distribute them to some of the most intelligent Zemindars, so as to be able to give you an account of the results, as well as some of the best Sugar Canes that you have at your disposal." "The capabilities of these Provinces appear to me to require only to be proved to render it a place of much more consequence than it has hitherto attained in the eyes of the Commercial Community."

A large supply of different kinds of seeds has been forwarded to Major Steel.

Great extension of Cane culture in the Districts of Azimgur, Benares and Jaunpore.

Dr. Lindesay, Civil Surgeon at Benares, in a letter dated May 15, speaks most highly of the flourishing state and rapid increase in the culture of cane in that neighbourhood.—"The Sugar Cultivation," writes Dr. Lindesay, "is extending every year;—I drove over from Jaunpore yesterday, and was much struck with the great spread of thriving young Cane. An intelligent planter thinks that this year will nearly double the last, (so quickly is it progressing); this year there was a fall of rain at an unusual time (February) which while it destroyed the wheat and barley enabled the cultivators to plough and plant Cane without irrigating."

Expected arrival of Seeds and Plants from England.

Dr. Wallich brought to the notice of Members the receipt of a letter by the last overland mail, from Messrs. Noble and Sons, Seedsmen and Florists;—mentioning the despatch by the Malcolm at the latter end of March last, of a large consignment of Garden Seeds and Fruit trees. As the Malcolm is now shortly expected, the arrival of these Seeds so early in the season will admit of a fair trial being given to them.

As in some measure connected with the foregoing, Dr. Wallich read a letter from an old correspondent and well wisher of the Society, Mr. J. J. Dixwell of Boston. This gentleman promises to use his best endeavours to transmit by the first favourable opportunity, a large quantity of American Maize of different varieties, and a large assortment of Grains, Grasses, and other Agricultural Seeds, for the use of the Society. Mr. Dixwell adds—"We have lately introduced a new Potatoe of wonderful prolificness, and coming to perfection under an uncommonly high temperature. All the late crops are too old to send you, but I will endeavour to forward some of the first of the next crop."

Mr. Steer, the Magistrate of Kishnaghur, in letters to the address of the Secretary, intimates the formation of an experimental Garden at that Station. Mr. Steer mentions that, it was his intention in the first instance to have endeavoured to have established a Branch Society, he was however unable to carry his wishes into effect, "but," adds Mr. Steer,—"the natives who put their names down as Subscribers, have expressed such disappointment, in the failure of the proposition, that I have determined to gratify them with a garden of some sort, it will be no contemptible a concern to be termed a Branch Society, we must, therefore, be independent of you in the first instance. The object of our Society will not be so much the cultivation of European Vegetables, Flowers, &c. as the improvement of those staple articles, Tobacco, Sugar, and Cotton, of which there is a large cultivation in this zillah."

Dr. Wallich stated, that the Secretary had despatched a large quantity of Cotton, Tobacco, &c. Seeds to Mr. Steer, to assist in stocking this newly formed Garden.

Proposed formation of an Experimental Garden near the City of Allahabad.

The next letter that was read was from Mr. R. Montgomery, Magistrate at Allahabad, in which that gentleman intimates his intention of establishing an experimental Garden on a piece of land belonging to the Government, close to the Station, and requests to be furnished with an assortment of such seeds as are at present available. With respect to the produce of a supply of Cotton Seeds received last year from the Society, Mr. Montgomery mentions, that "the Cotton trees seemed to flourish very well, but did not flower till January, and produced Cotton in the end of March, whilst the Cotton of this part of the Country is sown in the end of June, and the produce collected in November. Perhaps I was too late in sowing it, which I believe was the case;—of the five kinds of Cotton Seeds sent me only three kinds, viz the Bourbon, Seychelles and Sea Island came to perfection, and the Bourbon succeeded the best of all. I will have a little of it put in parcels, and sent for the inspection of the Society."

In compliance with the request conveyed at the close of this communication, Dr. Wallich mentioned that a liberal supply of Cotton and other Agricultural Seeds had been forwarded to Mr. Montgomery by the last Steamer.

With reference to the resolution passed at the last Meeting, regarding the award of the Society's Gold Medal to Mr. W. G. Rose, for the best specimen of Silk, "on his furnishing the requisite information to the satisfaction of the Silk Committee," Dr. Wallich drew attention to a letter which had been lately received from Mr. Rose, in which, that gentleman expresses his readiness to afford every information on the mode of cultivation, manufacture, cost of production, &c. of the Staple alluded to, as soon as a little leisure time will admit of his doing so.

Letters were read from the Secretaries of the American Philosophical Society at Philadelphia, and from the Philadelphia Society for promoting Agriculture, conveying the thanks of their respective Institutions for the donation of vols. 3 to 5 of the Transactions of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India.

For all the foregoing presents and communications, the thanks of the Society were awarded.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, the 6th July 1839.

The following gentlemen proposed at the last meeting were elected members of the Society.

K. W. Kirk, Esq., M.D., and J. Ellin, Esq., M.D. G. S. Cardew, Esq., M.D., was proposed as a member by Mr. Egerton, seconded by Dr. Goodeve.

*Letters from the following gentlemen were read.

From Dr. Parish of Philadelphia, returning thanks for a packet of the Society's Journals.

From A. Smith, Esq., M.D., of Hidgelee, expressing his opinion that the monthly circular of reflections should be discontinued as an unnecessary expense.

From J. Leese, Esq., M.D., forwarding a preparation of the tumor of the upper jaw, lately removed by him; a notice of which operation was communicated at a former meeting.

Dr. Leese also presented some large specimens of calculi, passed by the Urethra, one of these was extracted by his Native Doctor.

A new form of bandage for fracture of the clavicle, was presented to the Society through the Medical Board. The apparatus was forwarded to that body by Dr. A. K. Lindsay of Benares. It is the invention of a young Hindoo patient of that gentleman, who found the usual apparatus inconvenient.

Dr. D. Stewart presented a communication upon the treatment of fever and dysentery in the latter stages of pregnancy.

A discussion then ensued upon the nature of the fever at present epidemic in Calcutta, which appears to be of the congestive type, and is attended with a peculiar eruption, having the appearance of measles, but wanting in many of the decisive characters of that complaint.

SUPREME COURT.

MONDAY, JULY 1, 1839.

THIRD TERM OF 1839.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant, and Sir H. W. Selon.)

RAJABJOYGOVIND SING D. REED AND OTHERS.

Mr. Morton moved, upon notice, for an order to discharge the order for taking the bill pro confesso, for want of an answer, and to clear contempt upon payment of party and party costs, and for liberty to file the answer already sworn. He believed there was no opposition on the part of the complainant.

Mr. Clarke for the complainant said, that he certainly did not oppose the filing of the answer, but he wished to put the defendants upon terms, viz. that some period should be specified within which the answer was to be filed, perhaps four days, and that it should be expressed to be upon the payment of costs generally.

These terms being assented to.

Order absolute accordingly.

GOFFMOHUN DIB V. THE E. I. COMPANY AND OTHERS.

Mr. Clarke mentioned, that his client, upon conference had expressed a disinclination to accede to the reference, suggested by the court. It seemed calculated to lead to great expense, perhaps to idle purpose, unless some definite points were referred. Perhaps the questions might be simplified, if for example the Court were to decree, (either for or against the complainant) on the question of his talukdare rights.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the Court had no intention of referring a single question of law to the decision of the Master, but they were of opinion, that they could not decide the rights of the complainant, even partially, without further and necessarily expensive inquiry. The Court would decide the questions of law in any way in which they might be properly raised. They had only intimated that they considered the party entitled to relief either at law or in equity, but they had not yet decided that the bill could be sustained.

Mr. Clarke begged leave to mention the matter again.

BULLOBBROSS AND OTHERS V. BULLOBBUR CHOWDRY.

Mr. Prinsep moved for a rule to reduce the verdict to nominal damages in this case, in which the plaintiff had recovered Rs. 4698, upon a contract for not accepting Opium. He contended, that in such form of action, the measure of damages was only the difference of value, and not the whole contract price, and that the plaintiffs, therefore, had not given evidence of damage at all. He cited Hinkley v. Smith, Peake 42 note; Starkie's Evidence, p. 674. Burman v. Nash, 9 Baur. and Creswell.

Rule nisi.

R. H. COCKERELL AND OTHERS V. JADUNCHUNDER SEAL AND ANOTHER.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith showed cause against the rule nisi obtained by the defendants for setting aside the verdict for Rs. 43,000 odd, obtained last sittings. The cause, at the trial, was undefended, the defendant's Counsel having been instructed not to appear, because the "notice of trial" was alleged to have been irregular; and upon this ground the present rule had afterwards been obtained. The cause was originally set down for the last Sittings of 1838, and it was tried in the second Sittings of 1839. Until the 13th of February last, it had stood over, pending a motion for an injunction, and both previously and subsequently, letters had passed between the attorneys on both sides, mutually requesting and granting postponements. The cause was re-entered two days before last sittings, and notice of trial was given on the same day, being two days only instead of six as usual. The learned counsel for the plaintiff now argued, first, that this cause was a remount, and that no fresh notice was necessary; and secondly, they contended strenuously, that notice had been dispensed with. At all events there was bad faith displayed, and the court would not be anxious to assist parties under such circumstances. There was no affidavit of merits, and this ought to have been supplied, in order to shew that the application was not made for improper delay.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Morton for the defendants, were stopped by the Court, who declared that they could not draw any inference of bad faith.

Mr. Clarke. After the hard terms which my friends have applied, charging my attorney with "bad faith," I should have asked the indulgence of the Court, to have made a few observations upon that point, even after the Court had declared their opinion upon the more point of practice; but when the Court on hearing the passages read from their own affidavits, have declared that they cannot draw any such inference, of course any comments of mine are unnecessary.

Sir E. Ryan. This clearly was not a remount, and nothing whatsoever has been shewn, dispensing with the usual notice at trial. The notice must be given, even where a trial is postponed by rule of Court, or even where the plaintiff is under a peremptory undertaking. Besides the question of strict right, however we see nothing to warrant the charge of bad faith. On the contrary, we think, that in applying to postpone the trial the attorney appears expressly to have guarded against any waiver of the usual notice! The rule must be made absolute in the usual way.

Rule absolute with costs.

JOSEPH BARRETT, D. F. J. BENTLEY AND ANOTHER.

This was a demurrer to a replication. The plaint was special assumption for the building of a certain vessel within a certain period. The plea was that after the making of the original agreement, a subsequent contract was entered into between the parties, in lieu of the former and the performance of such second contract was averred in avoidance of the original liability. To this the plaintiff replied generally denjuria, thus putting in issue all the facts in the plea.

Mr. Sandes for the demurrer. This form of replication is certainly applicable to actions of assumption, according to the recent decisions in all the Courts of Westminster Hall, but only where the plea consists of matter of excuse. Thus in Whittaker v. Mason, 2 Bingh. New Rep., the replication was held bad, because the plea was in denial. Again in Jones v. Senior, 4 Mees. and Welsby, it was decided to be improper, where the replication was not excuse precedent, but discharge subsequent. The same opinion was expressed in Cripp v. Griffiths, 3 Dowling's Reports. Now in the present case, the plea is accord and satisfaction, and clearly not matter of excuse for the breach, but discharge of the liability subsequently

There are several cases in all the Courts which establish the general applicability of this form of replication to actions of assumpsit, but in all of them, the plea will be found to have been matter of excuse alone.

Mr. Morton contra. The first question is, whether a plea of accord and satisfaction subsequent to the breach, is not matter of excuse to all intents and purposes; and secondly, whether the present is such a plea. The distinction between a defence arising before and one arising after, is most arbitrary, and unwarranted by the general rules of pleading, yet it must be admitted that some of the cases cited, do, in some degree, countenance the distinction. Why should all the facts be allowed to be put in issue in one case and not in the other? Even "accord and satisfaction" constitute "excuse," although it is in fact excuse subsequent, not precedent;—as in trespass, a subsequent release is equally "excuse" for the wrong, as much as a previous licence. In the following cases, the defence arose subsequently, and the replication was held good without any such nice distinction being recognised, Griffin v. Yates, 4 Bingham, N. C. 579. Watson v. Wilks, 5 Ad. and Ell. 237. Reynolds v. Blackburn, 7 Ad. and Ell. 161. But in the next place, the present plea is not accord and satisfaction after breach, but a substituted contract before, and therefore "excuse" in the most literal acceptance of the term. There is no averment that it was after breach, and the want of an absolute averment cannot be supplied by mere argumentative inference.

Mr. Sandes in reply, contended, that it appeared sufficiently by the plea, that the defence arose subsequently. The defendant could not take issue upon this form of replication without a departure.

The Court intimated that they would consider the point.

TUESDAY, JULY 2, 1839.

CHUNNA MULLI versus MEG RAJ KAYA.

This cause came on ex parte. The action was for goods sold.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith appeared for the plaintiffs.

Verdict for the plaintiffs, for Rs. 1398.

BRIJNATH ROY AND ANOTHER, versus RAMDHONEGUR AND ANOTHER.

This was also an ex parte action, to recover the value of certain chunam sold by the plaintiffs to the defendants, the balance due being admitted upon a written acknowledgment.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Morton for the plaintiffs.

Verdict for the plaintiffs, Sa. Rs. 427.

DOOROACHURN DUTT versus JOHN INNES SIM.

In this case, judgment had been suffered by the defendant to pass by default. The action was brought upon an account stated signed by the defendant.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Sandes for the plaintiff.

Verdict for Rs. 977.

HURHUJJUR SING KHETTHY, versus ASSANUND LOHANAH.

Mr. Leith opened the pleadings.

Mr. Clarke stated that the action was brought upon a Persian instrument, in the nature of a promissory note for Rs. 480, given by the defendant to the plaintiff for money lent to the former.

The defendant had pleaded that he did not make the note, in question, and this was the only issue to be tried.

Evidence was then gone into at considerable length.

The Advocate General (with whom was Mr. Morton) for the defence, addressed the Court. He should call evidence to shew that the note was a forgery, that the handwriting was not that of the defendant, and that the whole story was highly improbable, as the defendant was a wealthy merchant and the plaintiff was almost a pauper.

Evidence for the defendant was gone into at great length, and the case occupied until nearly six o'clock. Evidence in contradiction, upon one point, was also called in reply.

The signature to the alleged note appeared to be in a very unique character, which only five or six men in Calcutta could decypher. It was a species of Nagree, which completely puzzled Mr. Blaquiere (one of the most accomplished oriental linguists probably in the world) the Post Office Moonshiee, the Pundit of the Court, and one or two other learned individuals.

Mr. Clarke replied.

Sir E. Ryan (after a brief consultation) said that there must be a general verdict for the defendant.

Verdict for the defendant.—Hurk, July. 3.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3, 1839.

BIRRETT V. BENTLEY AND ANOTHER.

In this case, in which the demurrer to the replication was argued on Monday, by Mr. Sandes for the demurree and Mr. Morton for the replication, the Court delivered judgment this morning.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J. This is a special demurrer to the replication de injuria in assumpsit. There can be no question that this form of replication is now admissible in actions of assumpsit, as well as in torts, but subject, however, to the rules applied in the latter case. The plea, therefore, must consist of matter of excuse. See Croquet's case, 8 Coke's Reports. The principle is well laid down by Tindal, C. J. in his judgment in Whittaker v. Mason, 2 Bingham, New Cases. In Jones v. Senior, 4 Meea and Welsby, which was decided only last year, and is the most recent case on the subject, it was held that where the plea was matter of discharge, the plaintiff must reply spontally, confessing and avoiding the matter of discharge in the plea alleged, and that this general replication de injuria was there inapplicable. The present plea we consider a good plea of accord and satisfaction after breach, and, therefore, matter in discharge of, and not excuse for, that breach. A distinction was attempted to be taken at the argument, that it did not here appear that the second contract was after the breach of the former, and, that it was therefore matter of excuse literally, being "substituted contract before breach." But this is not so, because the form of such a plea would not be like the present. We think, therefore, that the demurrer must be allowed, with liberty to the plaintiff to amend his replication.

Demurrer allowed with leave to amend.

BRIJJOULL V. RAMKISSEN COLLEAH.

This was an action against the drawer of two bills of exchange for Rs. 2100. The defendant had suffered judgment to pass by default.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith for plaintiff.

Verdict for plaintiff.

IN EQUITY.

THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1839.

BOONABUN SAIN DEVSU LOGNAUTH MULLICK.

KNOWANNIPERNAUD, EXECUTOR OF KHODOPOLLOLL, D.
GOPAULLOLL AND OTHERS.

This cause came on for further directions on the Master's Report. The original bill was filed for an account of the estate of the testator, and to establish the will, and to carry the trusts thereof into execution. The Court by their decree of March 1838, referred it to the Master to take an account of the copartnership estate, effects and debts, and to make all reasonable allowances to the parties. It was decreed and declared, that the complainant was executor in respect of one-third of the estate only, (because the testator was entitled to no more, though he had assumed the power to dispose of the whole), that the testator's widow, one of the defendants, was beneficially entitled to the said one-third under the will, that the defendant Gopaulloll and his infant brother, another defendant, took one-third, and the two remaining infant defendants took one-third, not under the will, but by Hindoo Law.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Saunders now appeared for the complainant, and asked for a further reference, in respect of certain expenses which the complainant had incurred as executor, and which the Master had not allowed, as not appearing to be within the terms of the interlocutory decree of March 1838.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Morton for the defendant, Gopaulloll, (who was the guardian ad litem of the infants, and in the same interest) opposed the further reference, and contended that if the accounts in question were not authorized to be taken by the decree of March 1838, the complainant could not object at this stage of the cause, but ought to have pressed it at the original hearing, and if they were authorized, the present objection should have been taken by way of exceptions to the Master's Report. With respect to costs, they argued, that the whole costs up to the decree, ought to be paid out of the testator's fund alone, that is the one-third share of which complainant was executor under the will, because the bill ought to have gone merely for an account in respect of that one-third share, instead of claiming, three times as much as the complainant was entitled to.

Mr. Cochrane appeared for the infant defendants, and contended, that it clearly appeared that both complainant and Gopaulloll had been plundering the estate, and that, therefore, not a rupee of the costs ought to be charged upon the shares to which the infants were entitled.

Mr. Leith appeared for the widow of the testator, and resisted the visiting of the whole costs prior to the decree upon the share in which his client was beneficially interested.

Two or three of the items of the further account required by the complainant, were agreed to be allowed, and the further reference was abandoned. It appeared by the Master's Report, that about Rs. 1,700 of debts had been got in, and that about 42,000 were outstanding, and probably desperate.

The Court ultimately directed, that the costs of the complainant and widow, be paid out of the share of the latter, and the costs of Gopaulloll and his infant brother, and the costs of the two other infants, out of their respective one-third shares. By consent of parties, the outstanding debts to be sold by Master. Funds to remain in Court, sufficient to satisfy the creditors of the estate, and to pay the costs in the proportions above specified. Receiver to pass his accounts, and be discharged.

Final decree accordingly.—Hark, July 4.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep shewed cause against the rule nisi, for setting aside the verdict found for the plaintiff, for Rs. 3000, in this action for criminal conversation, and entering a verdict for the defendant instead. The objection, perhaps, ought rather to have been taken by demurrer, or in arrest of judgment; but, no doubt, it is very necessary that the question should be raised, and finally determined in some shape or other. The Supreme Court has a general jurisdiction within certain limits, and within those limits it administers English law (with certain special exceptions) like the Courts of Westminster Hall. English law has been introduced, and generally administered in Calcutta since the establishment of this Court, and it must be considered the only law which prevails here, except only where some enactment of the legislature has introduced an express and positive exception. The exceptions in the 21st Geo. III. c. 70. s. 18, clearly do not include this case, for they relate only to matters of succession and inheritance, and to matters of contract and dealing. The present action is trespass for a personal wrong and the question whether the injury complained of, is or is not a civil wrong, must be determined according to English, not Hindoo law. The Hindoos and Mahomedans are not foreigners, as they have been represented to be, but subjects of the British crown, (though they are not indeed included in the technical term "British subjects"); but even foreigners subject to the jurisdiction, would be amenable whether criminally or civilly, to the lex loci, the law of the country in which the offence was committed or the cause of action arose. It is said, that according to Hindoo and Mahomedan law, adultery is only criminally cognizable. Granted;—but as it is not criminally cognizable in this Court, the consequence would be, if it was also held not civilly cognizable, that among Hindoos and Mahomedans there would be no legal check at all, within the limits of this Court's jurisdiction. The only restraint would be the moral sense of right and wrong, which often proves a feeble restraint enough. It is true, that there are no direct authorities to show, that the action is sustainable between Hindoo parties in this Court; but in effect, every case in which the Court administers English law between Natives, amounts to an authority. A very learned Judge, Sir Thomas Strange, in his work on Hindoo law, has expressed his opinion, that the action would lie in the Supreme Court, although he expressly states, that, according to Hindoo law itself, the injury is not civilly cognizable. The opinion of this learned Judge is equally valuable, whether formed in the closet or on the Bench.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith in support of the rule. There is perhaps little scope for argument upon the question. It has been contended, that if adultery among Hindoos and Mahomedans, is held out to be civilly cognizable, it will neither be a criminal offence nor a civil injury, and the moral sense will be the only check. But it is forgotten, that the customs and usages of the natives are in themselves, a restraint. The jealous laws of their zenanas, and the rules which regulate the strict seclusion of their daughters and wives, furnish a protection, and these rules are recognised and sanctioned by the law of the land. Whatever may be said about Hindoo and Mahomedans not being foreigners, it is certain that they are not "British subjects," and it is difficult to see how there can be any medium. Express statutes were necessary to remove certain disabilities which they were under in this country, such as the sitting upon Juries and acting as Justices of the Peace; and they are under certain disabilities still, for it is certain that they could not inherit lands in England or hold a seat in the British Legislature. [Per curiam. That is by no means certain. The expression "British subject" is a mere technical expression used in the Charter, and in certain statutes, the meaning of which seems not very definite.]—It has been further contended, that as the present case does not fall within the exceptions specified in the 21st Geo. III. c. 70, it must be governed by English law. But it does not seem necessarily to follow, that, because it was considered necessary, specially to except two or three very special cases, all others were intended to be excluded from the exception. And further, it may be doubtful, even whether this cause of action ought not to be considered a case arising out of a "contract," that is, the "contract" of marriage.—But even if the case does not fall expressly within the exception, the exception ought to be extended to it, because it is clear, that according to the peculiar laws, usages and customs of the natives, the doctrines of English jurisprudence, are in this respect, inapplicable. The inapplicability alone is a sufficient argument. The consequence of attempting to apply English law to this case, would lead to numerous incongruities. For example, concubinage, incest (or what would be so by English law), and polygamy are not only allowed but in certain cases enjoined. Now if English law be extended to one case, it must be extended to all; and to have kept concubines or to have married more wives than one, would be a bar to this action! Again, the English law of divorce, it is presumed, must prevail, and the plaintiff in the present action might forthwith file his libel on the Ecclesiastical side of the Court! [Per curiam. Marriage is a contract, at all events among Hindoos and Mahomedans, and would therefore come expressly within the exception.]—In the case of The Attorney General v. Stewart, 2 Merwale, it was held, that the English Statutes of mortmain did not extend to the island of Granada—not that the words of the Statutes were not sufficiently extensive—but because the whole object of those Statutes was in its nature inapplicable. The same reason applies here. The total absence of all authority upon the point, in the shape of decided cases in any one of the Supreme Courts of the three Presidencies, is a strong presumption in favour of the doctrine contended for on behalf of the defendant, because it is clear, that the universal opinion must have been that the action could not be supported.

The Court intimated, that they would give judgment to-morrow.

FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1839.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant, and Sir H. W. Seton.)

BOODABUN RAIN D. LOCKENAUTH MULLICK.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J., delivered judgment this morning in the case argued yesterday. This is an action of trespass for criminal conversation, between Hindoo parties, and the present rule is for setting aside the verdict found for the plaintiff. There is no doubt that adultery was originally regarded rather as a criminal than as a civil offence, even by the English law, and it is still penal cognizable to the Ecclesiastical Courts. In the case of Burt v. Barlow, 1 Dougl. Rep. Lord Mansfield still seems to have regarded the action from crim. con. as being of the nature of a penal action. The question here is, whether the action is sustainable as between native inhabitants of Calcutta. The point is in the usual form, alleging the damnum to consist of the loss of society and so forth. Now English law unquestionably prevails within the limits of this Court's jurisdiction in respect of some persons, in all cases, and in this among the number; so that the alleged inapplicability can only be personal, and not local. The case therefore does not fall within the principle illustrated by the cited case of The Attorney General v. Stewart, and that case lays down no new doctrine, but only contains a particular application of a general principle to be found in Blackstone's Commentaries and elsewhere. There may, no doubt, result some inconvenience in some particular cases, by applying the doctrines of English law, but the question is not to be decided by the argumentum ab inconvenienti, but by the strict rules of law. In the argument that this cause of action falls within one of the exceptions in the Statute, I cannot at all acquiesce. This part of the Statute, it may be observed, gives no new jurisdiction, it restricts, not extends. The argument that if the action could not be supported, there would be no remedy civil or criminal, I admit, does not appear to be of much force; for if there be no remedy, it is not for us to frame one. The direct authorities upon the point are few enough. There is the dictum of Sir Thomas Strange, which has been cited; and there is the quoted opinion of the Pundit that a Hindoo plaintiff, may, at least, recover in such an action the expenses of the second marriage. In the only case which appears to have arisen in this Court (Coonjee Mullick v. Rankissen Podur) it does not appear to have been doubted (at least the doubt was not raised) whether the action could be supported. The plaintiff was nonsuited at the first trial for want of proof of the marriage, and at the second, because the evidence showed that the act was a rape. I am of opinion that the verdict for the plaintiff must stand, and the rule must be discharged.

Sir J. P. Grant delivered his judgment, concurring in the opinion of the learned Chief Justice.

Sir H. W. Seton concurred.

Rule discharged.

IN THE GOODS OF LEWIS CARTELINO.

Mr. Leith moved that the usual citations do issue. He wished to mention to the Court that the original Will was lost, rather unaccountably, after having been deposited with the late Registrar, but a copy verified by affidavit was among the grounds. The Will had been traced to the possession of one Fegrado, and the affidavits set forth his explanation of the matter, but Fegrado had refused to make an affidavit himself and there was no power to compel an affidavit. The present application was to enable the brother, as next of kin, to take out administration with the copy of the Will annexed, the executors named in the original Will having renounced and the widow being supposed to be dead.

The Court were disposed to think that the proof of the loss of the original was not satisfactory.

Mr. Leith said that he would alter the form of his motion, and cite the contumacious Fegrado.

INDRACHURN DAGOAR D. ARCHIBALD KEAN.

Mr. Leith moved to amend the record in this case, in which issue had been joined. The plaint, which was upon a promissory note, contained a clerical error in the date.

Sir E. Ryan said that under the new rules the Court would have amended such an error even at the trial.

Granted.

TUFHANEE SING DEYANE COOMAR COLLYCOOMAR BOY MULLICK AND OTHERS.

Mr. Leith opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep for the plaintiff, stated that the action was brought to recover damages for an assault upon the plaintiff by the principal defendant, Collycoomar, or rather by the other two defendants, his servants, acting under his orders. The assault complained of, had taken place on the occasion of Collycoomar's shadow. It would over to the Sheriff of Calcutta the sum of Rs. 24,143 being the balance in his hands."

This order was afterwards amended (the same day) by substituting the name of "J. G. B. Lawrell Esq." for the name of "the Hon'ble J. O. Erskine," who had just vacated the office of Collector.

The order not having been complied with, a rule was granted to shew cause, why a writ of attachment should not issue against Mr. J. G. B. Lawrell, the present (officiating) Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs.

The Advocate-General now shewed cause, and took the preliminary objection, that no order nisi for the payment of the money had ever been served upon Mr. Lawrell. The writ of attachment was a proceeding against him personally, and he was not to be punished for the misconduct of his predecessor.

Mr. Prinsep contra, urged that the order nisi was upon the office of collector, and obedience to it was not to be evaded by a mere change of the individual holding the office. As Mr. Erskine did not shew cause, it must be presumed that no cause could be shewn, and it was quite clear that the Court would have granted an attachment (probably absolute in the first instance) against him, had he still been Collector.

The Court were at first disposed to think that the objection urged was immaterial, and that the order nisi to pay the money was not required to be served personally upon Mr. Lawrell. The Chief Justice, however, observed that the learned Advocate was not prevented at all events, from shewing cause upon the merits, and that Mr. Lawrell might now shew for cause against the making absolute the rule for an attachment, whatever matter Mr. Erskine might have shewn against the making absolute the order nisi to pay over the money.

The Advocate-General shewed cause upon the merits. It appeared that there was still a party who had a claim upon the said surplus monies under a robecarree, an order of a Mofussil Court which appeared to be not a decree, but an order in the nature of a sequestration. This party claimed only the sum of 2000 rupees or thereabouts, but it appeared that there was some condition or other that upon non-payment thereof, the whole talook was to become his property.

Mr. Prinsep said, that the claim was clearly a fraud; but at all events it only extended to Rs 2000.

The Court said, that if Mr. Erskine had relied upon the robecarree of a Court of competent jurisdiction, there would clearly have been sufficient cause shewn. Perhaps the best course would now be to allow the present rule for an attachment to stand over, and to move for a rule calling upon this claimant himself to shew cause upon service of the rule upon him. But the learned Counsel for the plaintiff must take his own course; it was not for the Court to advise.

Mr. Prinsep said, he would consider what was the best course to be adopted.

Stand over.

Mr. Prinsep said, that the Caveat had been withdrawn, and the matter settled among the parties.

ELLIOTT MACNAGHTEN, ASSIGNEE, &c. v. C. D. RUSSELL.

This action came on ex parte, and was brought to recover principal and interest due upon a promissory note for Rs 2000. The instrument was made payable by mistake to F. (instead of E) Macnaghten, but evidence was admitted to explain the mistake, and to shew who was the party really intended to be made payee (Willis v. Barrett, 2 Stalkie N. P. C. Rep.)

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Sandes for the plaintiff.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

THURSDAY JULY 11, 1839.

BULLODHOS V. BULLODHUR CHOWDARY.

Sir B. Ryan. This was a rule nisi to reduce the damages in an action for not accepting opium, to a nominal verdict. No question arises on the new rules of pleading, because the only question is, what is the proper measure of damages for the breach of contract admitted to have been proved. In one case in this Court (Rajkissen Sing v. Gnoindchund Bomerjee) which was an action for not accepting certain indigo, the measure of damages was held to be, not the whole price agreed upon, but the difference between the average price at the previous July sales, and the contract price. In another case in this Court (Cossinanth Khettry v. Bullab Doss) in which the action was for non delivery of goods, the measure of damages again was taken to be the difference between the market value and the contract price, and, indeed, in an action for not delivering, no other estimate could possibly be applied. We are of opinion, that the same principle in ascertaining the damages, is applicable to the present case, where the action is for not accepting; and as it does not appear what the difference is we can only assess the damages at a nominal sum. The rule must be made absolute, but without costs, and the plaintiff is of course entitled to the costs of the action.

Rule absolute, without costs, for entering nominal damages only.

DOONG DOSS MOOKERJEE v. BINDOODASHONEE DABEE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Prinsep applied for further time for the defendants to put in their answer. It was the first application for time.

Mr. Clarke for the complainant, said that he would consent upon condition of the defendants' assenting to the appointment of a Receiver, or undertaking to pay into Court the Company's papers claimed by the bill!

Mr. Prinsep declined crippling himself, by parting with the sinews of war.

Mr. Clarke. Then I shall not consent to time being given, and the grounds are clearly insufficient to support the applications when opposed by the complainant. The affidavits merely state, that the instructions for Counsel to prepare the answer could not be got ready in time, but nothing in the shape of a reason is assigned. If this case be considered to constitute a sufficient ground for the application, there is an end of the Equity Rule, which limits the time for answering, and the Court's recent decision is a nullity, in the case in which further time was peremptorily refused to me, although the bill consisted of, Heaven knows, how many hundred folios, and took two of my learned friends seven months to concoct!

Mr. Prinsep declared that he would rather allow the process of contempt to go against him, than accede to the conditions proposed. He could not undertake to consent,

Sir E. Ryan. Then we will not grant you further time. The Court are determined to adhere strictly to the 14th Equity Rule.

Refused.

OBOYCHURN MOOKERJEE AND ANOTHER V. LUCKEYNARAIN MUNDUL AND OTHERS.

Mr. Prinsep said that, with the Court's permission, he would take the order which their Lordships suggested might be the proper one. This was the case in which the motion for an attachment against the Collector of the 24 Pergunnahs was made on the day before yesterday.

Sir E. Ryan disclaimed any intention of advising what was the proper course to be adopted.

Mr. Prinsep. Certainly, my Lord. But I understood the Court to say that if the application were made, they would enlarge the rule for the attachment, and grant a rule calling upon the only remaining claimant under the roobcarree (one Faqueerebund) to appear and shew cause.

The Court granted the application.

SITTINGS AFTER THIRD TERM OF 1839.

This was the first day of the Sittings; but no causes were taken. The Chief Justice sat alone.

There are only nine common law causes for trial, on the Sittings Board. They will be taken on Monday. The first order is Doe dem Nemychurn Mullick v. Radamohun Day—Hark July 13.

MONDAY, JULY 15, 1839.

NOBINMONEY DABEE V. BURLLOT TAGORE AND OTHERS.

In this case the Master made his report on the 3d of July 1838, finding that, among other debts due from Lalloymohun Tagor's estate, the sum of Rs 53,202 due to Juggomohun Mookerjee, and Rs 20,211 to Obhoyah Dabee, upon outstanding judgments. The Court's decree of the 18th of July, confirmed the report, and decreed (among other matters) that the debts should be satisfied out of the estate, and that if they were not paid within a limited time, the Talook of Mohemshye should be sold by the Master for the purpose of liquidating the claims. This Talook was afterwards sold, upon the condition that one fifth of the purchase money should be paid on the 1st of April last, and the balance within one month from that date, or in default thereof with interest thereafter at twelve per cent. The purchaser paid the one-fifth, but made default in the payment of the residue, and an order was afterwards obtained that the purchaser do pay within ten days the said balance with interest from the 1st of May to the date of payment at twelve per cent. On the 9th of July the balance was paid in accordingly, with interest at twelve per cent. to that day.

Mr. Prinsep now moved on behalf of the two creditors, Juggomohun Mookerjee and Obhoyah Dabee, for the payment out of Court, of the said principal sums of Rs 53,202 and 20,211, with interest thereon at 12 per cent. from the 1st of May to the 9th of July. The whole purchase money of the Mohemshye Talook was Rs 1,75,000, more than sufficient to satisfy all the creditors, and it was submitted, that the creditors, who now asked for payment of their debts, were clearly entitled to the interest during the period in question at the rate that the purchaser in default had paid interest, which was twelve per cent.

The Court, however, only allowed the payment of the principal sums due to the two creditors respectively.

Order accordingly.

[Query. Whether the creditors were not entitled to the interest paid by the purchaser, as being interest in effect upon their money?]

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF NEMYCHURN MULICK V. RADAMOHUN DAY.

Mr. Marton opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep stated, that the ejectment was brought to recover a house and fourteen cottages of land in Neemtollah Street in Calcutta. The lessor of the plaintiff claimed as mortgagee of one Jebunkistno Sing, who had obtained judgment by default, in an ejectment brought by him for the same premises in the year 1827. It was apprehended that this would shew a sufficient title to support the present ejectment; but if necessary, the title would be carried further back. An appearance had been entered to this ejectment in the name of the defendant Radamohun Day in the place of the casual ejector, and he had duly pleaded; but it seemed, that no counsel had been instructed to defend.

The mortgage from Jebunkistno, and the record in the action of ejectment brought by him, and in which he had obtained judgment some time previously to the execution of the mortgage, were put in and approved.

Sir E. Ryan. This is not a sufficient title.

Mr. Prinsep submitted that this was enough to maintain ejectment, which was a mere possessory action. After obtaining the judgment in the action of ejectment in 1827, Jebunkistno had the right of possession, and this right he transferred by the mortgage to the present lessor of the plaintiff.

The Court did not consider it sufficient. Not constat for example, that some other party had not since recovered in an action of ejectment.

The title was then gone into. It appeared that in the year 1788, a family of the name of Khan obtained a pottah of the premises from Rajah Nuhkissen, and possessed them for several years, when they mortgaged them with a power of sale to one Kistnokunker Doss, but this instrument was not produced. A mortgage from Kistnokunker Doss to Jebunkistno, however, was put in, and also an instrument of confirmation or release from the Khan family to Jebunkistno, reciting his recovery of the premises in the ejectment in 1827.

Sir E. Ryan. You could not have done without the release from the Khans.

Verdict for the lessor of the plaintiff.

LUCKHEEBAH BEYAH V. PANCHOWRIE COSSOYE AND OTHERS.

This was an action of assault, alleged to have been committed upon the plaintiff by the defendants in the Chandney Bazar in May last. Several witnesses were examined on both sides, and there appeared to have been some dispute and affray, but the witnesses gave various editions of the particulars. When the plaintiff's case was closed, the evidence prima facie implicated all of the defendants, except one, in the assault, but as there was no evidence against him at all, he was of course entitled to a verdict at once.

The Court then suggested that as this party was clearly entitled to his costs, it might be advisable for both parties to consent to stop the action and pay their own costs.

Mr. Clarke however said that the costs of this defendant would be a mere nothing, if the plaintiff (his client) succeeded against the rest, because the defence was joint. He thanked the Court for the suggestion, but he was not disposed to acquiesce.

The case then proceeded, and a verdict was ultimately given for the plaintiff, with nominal damages.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Morton for the plaintiff.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith for the defence.

DEONATH SANDYELL AND OTHERS V. PATRICK MAITLAND AND H. W. DROZ, AND THE REVIVED CAUSES.

Mr. Prinsep moved upon notice for the payment out of the fund standing in Court to the credit of the above causes, of a sum of money found by the Master's report to be a proper maintenance for a lunatic party in the cause, Preenouth Sandyell. The original bill was filed by the parties interested under the Will of Raghobarry Surmons, against the executors named in the Will; and two decrees were had in the original suit, the last of which was as long ago as the year 1820. The whole estate, which was very considerable, had been brought into Court, and the sum standing to the credit of the cause was about six lakhs. The Court by their decree, after directing the payment of the debts and legacies declared the residue to belong to the grandsons of the testator (of whom Srebnauth was one) who were living at the time of his death. After the second decree, upon the death of Debnauth, it became necessary to revive the suit, certain legacies and charitable bequests (especially the feeding of one hundred thousand Brahmins) remaining unpaid, and the residue therefore still unascertained, and a bill of revivor and supplement was accordingly filed, bringing before the Court the fact of the said lunacy of Sreenauth (which had happened immediately) and the appointment of a committee of the person of the lunatic. It was upon the behalf of this committee of the person, that the present application was made, and it was now opposed on the part of Golucknath, who was another of the grandsons, and who had actually applied for and obtained an order for the payment of a sum out of the funds in Court for his own maintenance! though he now refused the same benefit to the lunatic.

Sir E. Ryan asked how the orders for a reference to the Master upon the subject of the sums for maintenance, had been obtained.

Mr. Princep said, that Golucknath had obtained his order upon consent, but that this order in the present case had been obtained as a matter of course, the party being a lunatic. He believed the only ground of objection to the present application set up on the other side, was, that a committee of the estate of the lunatic had been since appointed, and that this party ought to have been brought before the Court by a bill of further supplement.

The Court thought so too. But there was another objection: the report of the Master only found what sum was proper for the maintenance of the lunatic, but it did not (and could not) report out of what fund such sum was payable. The residue was not yet ascertained, and there was no fund in Court standing to the separate credit of any party.

Mr. Princep said that he ought perhaps to alter his application into a motion for another reference to the Master to ascertain the fund.

Per Curiam. You had better put your suit straight first.

Mr. Princep submitted that as the lunatic, and the committee of his person were before the Court, no other parties were necessary.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith contra, said that their only objection was that the proper steps were not taken to put the suit in train for being finally disposed of. If the proper parties were all before the Court, a final decree might be had at once.

The Court stopped them, and declared that they would do nothing until the defect of parties was remedied.

Refused.

SAME V. SAME.

Another motion in the same cause, on behalf of a legatee for the payment of a legacy to which she was declared entitled by the decree of 1820, was made, but being liable to the same objection, it was also Refused.

Dwarkanath Mullick v. D. Donsalves and Others.

Mr. Clarke shewed cause on behalf of Messrs. Mackillop, Stewart and Co., against a rule calling upon them to shew cause why they should not pay over to the Sheriff the sum of Rs. 4039, alleged to be the monies of the defendants, seized in the hands of Messrs. Mackillop and Co. under a writ of f. fa. upon a joint judgment obtained by the plaintiff against the three defendants in this cause. The learned counsel took a preliminary objection, that the rule nisi had not been served upon the necessary parties, in fact it had only been served upon Messrs. Mackillop and Co. One of the defendants had since become insolvent, and an order of adjudication had been made; now the rule had not been served upon either of the other defendants, or upon the assignee of the insolvent. The objection was clearly fatal.

Mr. Leith, in answer to the objection said, that it appeared from his learned friend's own grounds, that the only parties interested in the money, were the plaintiff himself and Messrs. Mackillop and Co. and that it could not therefore be necessary to bring in any other parties.

Sir E. Ryan. The defendants, and the assignee of the insolvent ought to have had an opportunity of coming in to shew cause. It is an established rule that the Court will require all the parties to have had notice of an application of this nature, that they may have an opportunity of appearing if they choose. We shall not discharge the rule, but enlarge the time (upon payment of the costs of this application) in order that the plaintiff may have an opportunity to serve the notices.

This motion was taken by consent, as of last Term.

Rule enlarged to the first day of next Term.

DOE ON THE DENISE OF MURDOONMOHUN ROY v. HILDER.

Mr. Leith moved, according to the liberty reserved, to set aside the nonsuit in this ex parte ejectment tried last sittings. The title of the lessor of the plaintiff was derived under two bills of sale from the Sheriff, and as it appeared in evidence that the original judgment (to which however the lessor of the plaintiff was no party) was against a lunatic, and that the present landlords were lunatics, the Court directed a nonsuit. The first of the two objections urged against the right to recover in this ejectment, viz. that the original judgment appeared to be fraudulent, had been met alibi by the cases cited, when leave was given by the Court to move. Those cases shewed that nothing impeaching or avoiding the original judgment, at all affected the title of the purchaser at the Sheriff's sale, who was no party to the judgment. The second objection, that the landlords were lunatics was equally untenable. The cases of Kernot v. Norman, 1 Term Rep., Nutt v. Venn, 4 Term Rep. and others, shewed that a lunatic might be even arrested for a debt. But again, by the 1st Ejectment Rule and all the proceedings in Ejectment, the tenant in possession was obviously the only party whose right was considered. Nothing whatever was said about giving notice to the landlord. And this was unanswerably confirmed by Doe dem. Thompson v. Roe, where it was held that in the absence of collusion between the tenant and lessor of the plaintiff, the want of a notice given by the tenant to the landlord, was no ground for setting aside the judgment in ejectment and letting in the landlord to defend. The notice to him was not part of the duty of the plaintiff in ejectment, but entirely a private matter between the tenant and his landlord. But further the case of Doe dem. Lord Aylshbury v. Roe, 2 Chitty Reports, seemed to establish that the lunacy even of the tenant in possession was no bar whatever to the recovery in ejectment.

[The learned counsel was then stopped by the Court, who declared their reluctant conviction that the lessor of the plaintiff was clearly entitled to recover.]

Sir E. Ryan, Chief Justice said, that the Court were satisfied that the nonsuit must be set aside, though they came to the conclusion with some reluctance, as there was so much suspicion of fraud in the case, though it must be admitted indeed that the present plaintiff did not appear to have been connected with the fraud. The rule might be made absolute in the first instance.

Rule absolute for setting aside the nonsuit.

[Query, whether the original judgment itself was necessarily fraudulent. The debt might have been contracted before the lunacy, or if after, it might have for the necessities of life and recoverable; Baxter v. Lord Portsmouth, 5 B. and C. 170.]—HURK. July 19,

FRIDAY, JULY 19, 1839.

The Chief Justice sat alone this morning, and no business was done, except the taking of common motions.

The two issue cases will be taken on Monday, and will probably occupy most of next week. The case of Doe on the demise of Sreemutty Chaund Behee v. Owen John Elias stood for Tuesday, but it will not be taken until after the issue cases. — Hurk, July 20.

SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1839.

The learned Judges did not come into Court until rather a late hour this morning, their Lordships having been engaged in consultation upon the decree to be made in the case of

JOHN WALLIS ALEXANDER, ASSIGNER, &c. v. RAMTUNOO MULLICK, AND THE OTHER CAUSES.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J., said, that the Court had not yet been able to form any conclusive opinion upon the decree to be pronounced; but there was a suggestion which they wished to make for the consideration of the Counsel concerned for the different parties in the suit. The Court would suggest that all the parties should consent that the trust-deed executed by the Scins (in 1827, before the Indian Insolvent Act) should be declared null and void, and that all further proceedings should be stayed in this suit: then would arise the question, whether everything now sought to be obtained might not be obtained in the Insolvent Court. (See Dutton v. Morris, 17 Ves. Jun. 203.) In any event it was very doubtful whether the Court could possibly uphold this trust-deed, as there were many objections to its validity.

[Considerable discussion then took place on the subject, between the Court and the different Counsel in the cause, and it was agreed that the Counsel should take it into consideration, and mention it to the Court on a future day.]

MONDAY, JULY 23, 1839.

BADAKISSEN MITTER v. THE BANK OF BENGALE AND OTHERS.

The Advocate-General moved that the petition of Appeal to Her Majesty in Council, be allowed.

Mr. Clarke took the objection that the motion was upon notice, and that it ought to have been for an order nisi. The point had been so ruled in Sreemutty Comulmoney Dosses v. Sreemutty Saabooondery Dosses, where he (Mr. Clarke) had been turned round upon the objection of the learned Advocate himself!

The Advocate-General then said that he should move for an order nisi instead.

Order nisi that the petition of appeal be allowed.

J. W. ALEXANDER, &c., v. RAMTUNOO MULLICK, &c.

The Court this morning intimated that certain difficulties had occurred to them as likely to arise in administering to the estate in the Insolvent Court without a decree in the Equity suit. The minutes of the proposed decree were accordingly handed over to the Counsel.

Stands over.

RANEE RAJESSOORRE AND ANOTHER v. UNNOOFOORWAIE DAYER AND ANOTHER.

The first of the issue cases came on for trial this morning. This is the case which involves the Adoption. Mr. Clarke and Mr. Sandes appeared for the plaintiffs.

The Advocate-General, Mr. Prinsep, Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton appeared for the defence.

The case stands thus. In September 1837 Rajah Gopaul Indronarain Roy died, leaving his two Rannees, and a married daughter (long married, and childless) him surviving, but no male issue. The younger Rannee, alleges, that just before his death, Rajah Gopaul caused an instrument of permission to adopt (or an Onnumuttie-pucca) to be drawn up, and that in compliance therewith she (the younger Rannee) has duly adopted Goluck Indronarain Roy, the son of Rajah Gopaul's younger brother. On the other hand, the elder Rannee, and her daughter, deny the validity of the instrument of adoption, and set up a Will or testamentary instrument of gift of the whole property in favour of the daughter. There are two distinct issues to try these questions, and the former came on first in order. The estate has been taken by the Court of Wards.

A purabit was examined this morning on behalf of the plaintiff, and his examination and cross-examination occupied the entire day. As there are a vast number of witnesses, it is impossible to say how long the cases may last. A report will appear when the cases are concluded.

Adjourned at a quarter past four o'clock.

There is an ejectment case, and some Equity causes, for trial in the present Sittings; but unless the issue cases break down, or unless the Court adjourn the Sittings, the abovementioned causes (we presume) must be made remnants. — Hurk, July 23.

TUESDAY, JULY 23, 1839.

The issue cases proceeded this morning.

Sir E. Ryan said that the two questions must in fact come on at once, although the issues were distinct. The whole matter must be decided in the present issue. The evidence for the Will would, to a certain extent, be evidence against the adoption, and vice versa. Witnesses were then examined in the continuation of the plaintiff's case, which was not quite closed at the rising of the Court.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 24.

RANEE RAJESSOORRE AND ANOTHER v. RANEE SOIQ-CHANJONEY AND ANOTHER—AND THE OTHER CAUSES.

The evidence for the plaintiff, in the Adoption Issue, was continued this morning, and their case closed before three o'clock. A Hinloo purdah woman, examined as a witness, (Parbutty Proca, the mother of the child alleged to have been adopted) was brought into Court in a covered palanquin, in which she remained secluded while giving her testimony.

The deputy collector of Midnapore (Kylaschunder Dutt) produced several papers from the Collector's Office, which were taken there by the Nazir soon after the Rajah's death, some of which had the Rajah's seal and signature, the papers themselves being in blank. This was for the purpose of shewing that the alleged instrument of gift (set up by the defendants to the first issue, the authenticity of the seal and signature not being denied by the plaintiffs) might possibly have been written after the Rajah's death upon a blank paper to which his seal and signature had been previously affixed. None of the blank papers however (30 or 40 in number) corresponded with the paper on which the alleged Will is written, the stamp being of a different nature, and the date of the stamp, mark on the will, paper being 1837-8, while the latest blank paper produced, bearing the Rajah's seal and signature, was of the year 1830. Two or three other witnesses were called, who deposed to the same details, generally, as the witnesses who were examined yesterday, and the day preceding.

The Advocate General, the leading Counsel for the defendants in the Adoption issue, then addressed the Court in a speech of very great ability, for more than two hours.

THE ISSUE CASES.

FOURTH DAY.

The issues were proceeded with to day.

Several witnesses were examined for the defendants in the Adoption issue. Their evidence of course tended to negative the adoption and to establish the will.

At 6 o'clock the further bearing was adjourned. There still remain several witnesses for the defence, but the cases will probably be closed to-morrow at a late hour.

Adjourned.

At the rising of the Court,

The Advocate General reminded the Court, that to-morrow would be the last day of the sittings, and inquired whether the cases on the plea and equity side, still remaining undisposed of, would be taken after the issues were over. There were several motions and an Ecclesiastical case also.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J., said, that it was the fault of the parties themselves, that the cases were all postponed to the last, when there was not sufficient time left to dispose of them. Last week had been comparatively an idle week, and all the business seemed to have been unnecessarily crowded into the present. The ejectment case, however, was an exception, as it had been specially fixed for last Tuesday upon a regular motion for the purpose; and the Court thought that the parties were entitled to have it taken. This case therefore would be taken on Saturday, after the issues were over, as they probably would be by to-morrow evening.

[After some discussion, however, the Court intimated, that they would continue to sit for the disposal of all the remaining business.]—Hark. July 26,

RANEE SAJESOREE AND ANOTHER VERSUS RANEE SOLO-CHANGMONET AND ANOTHER.
AND THE OTHER CAUSE.

These issue cases were proceeded with this morning.

The remainder of the evidence for the defendants in the Adoption-issue was produced, and their case was closed before 3 o'clock.

Mr. Clarke was heard in reply in an able address, which lasted about two hours and a half.

The Court deliberated for a considerable time, and at last pronounced a verdict for the plaintiffs in the issue relating to the adoption, and for the defendants in the issue relating to the Will, thus establishing the validity of the former and negating the latter.

Verdict for the Adoption and against the Will.

The Ejectment case, Doe v. Elias, will be taken first tomorrow, and after that the Equity case.—Hark. July 27.

OTHERS V. OWEN JOHN ELIAS.

This ejectment on being called on this morning was struck out by the attorney for the lessors of the plaintiff.

STEPHEN JACOB JOSEPH V. WILLIAM PRINSEP AND OTHERS.

IN EQUITY.

This cause came on for further directions on the Report of the Master Extraordinary, J. F. Leith, Esq.

The bill was filed in May 1836 by the complainant, who was the eldest son of the testator, Jacob Joseph, against the executor Mr. W. Prinsep, and against the widow, the second son and the youngest daughter of the testator, and against the Ecclesiastical Registrar, as administrator of the youngest son, deceased. There was another daughter of the testator, who was not residing within the Court's jurisdiction. The will of the said Jacob Joseph, who died in May 1829, directed his houses, effects, and property to be sold by Public Auction, and the proceeds to be divided among his five children and his widow, share and share alike. Probate of the will was taken out by Mr. Prinsep very shortly after the testator's death.

At a sale of one of the houses, which took place in pursuance of the will, in the year 1831, the widow, the two daughters, and the youngest son, became the purchasers themselves, and they were put into possession by the executor; but the deeds of conveyance were never executed, nor the purchase money paid.

The bill prayed that the trusts of the will should be established, and an account taken, and that the completion of the purchase by the widow, daughters and youngest son, should be enforced, or that the house should be resold, and any loss or deficiency accruing, should be made good by the said parties or by the executor.

In July 1837, the Court made their decretal order, declaring the will valid, and that the trusts thereof should be carried into effect, and directing several references to the Master, relative to the taking of the account, the sales of the houses, and other matters.

Mr. Dickens, then Master, being a party to the cause as administrator of the youngest son, declined to act, and the reference was made to Mr. Leith instead as Master Extraordinary. Mr. Leith made his report on the 18th of the present month. The Report found (among other things) that an offer to purchase the house for Rs. 60,000 had been privately made in 1829, but the sale had been prevented by the mother, and brothers and sisters of the complainant, but as the will directed a public sale, the Report found that those parties were not liable to make good the difference. Subsequent sales, however, by public auction, were prevented from being completed by the obstinacy of the same parties, and as it appeared, that the sums then offered greatly exceeded the present value of the house, the Report found that those parties (and after them the executor himself) were liable to make good the difference. The Report further found, that the purchasers at the last sale, in April 1836, had refused to complete their purchase on the ground of defective title, and that the house still remained unsold, and that its estimated value was Rs 44,000.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Nott for the complainant, contended, that their client was entitled to his one-sixth share clear of all deductions, as he had always been ready to convey, and urged it to the utmost. The obstinacy of the other parties beneficially interested under the will, had been the cause of the property still remaining unsold. The executor was not entitled to his costs, because he had acted wrongfully in not enforcing the sale.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Byrwell appeared for the executor, Mr. Wm. Prinsep.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Sandes for the Registrar, the administrator of the younger brother.

Against the rest of the defendants the bill had been taken pro confesso.

The Court decreed that the sale should take place by the Master, and that all necessary parties should join in the conveyance, that, the costs of the parties should be paid out of the proceeds, that the one-sixth part of the sum of Rs 49,300 should be paid thereout to the complainant, and that the residuum should be divided into five shares, of which one should be paid over to each of the other parties.

Decree accordingly.

Mr. Clarke opened the Libel.

The Advocate-General for the promovent, stated that this was a suit for a divorce a mensa et toro, instituted by husband against wife, on the ground of adultery. The circumstances of the case were not unknown to the Court.

Mr. Leith contra, admitted, although a negative contestation had been filed on behalf of the lady, that he could not support it.

INSOLVENT COURT.

JULY 6, 1839.

(Before Sir H. W. Seton.)

IN THE MATTER OF EDWARD PITTIS.

The Insolvent, who had been previously discharged, was sworn as to the correctness of his Schedule.

IN THE MATTER OF WILLIAM BASON.

This Insolvent was sworn as to the truth of his Schedule, and there being no opposition, he was discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS.

Since the last investigation of this case, some important disclosures have been made and concealed property has been discovered, or given up, to the amount of above 30,000 rupees. Several witnesses were examined by Mr. Clarke on behalf of the assignee. The Advocate-General was retained for the Insolvent.

James Jacobs.—Knew that a considerable portion of his property had been given up to the assignee, within the last few days. Amongst it he believed were the five organs mentioned in former examinations, and a seraphine. He had not, since April 1838, had any other instruments of that kind in his possession and he believed them to be the same as are entered in his cash-book "as sold" on the 11th of May and the 14th of June 1838. Before he went to prison, he gave into the charge of Mr. Mathew Johnson, a large organ, two smaller ones, and a seraphine, in consequence of his having become security for him (the Insolvent) to Moore, Hickey and Co., for a sum of eleven or twelve hundred rupees.

On being asked how he happened to have sworn to a different story with respect to these organs, he said he must throw himself entirely on the mercy of the Court. He had done all "with the best intentions." He had considered, that his property would be quite sufficient to satisfy one half of the claims of his creditors, and with the concealed property he hoped to recommence business, and in that case to pay his creditors the other half. But finding that they were determined to have all he had, he had been induced, in self-defence, to dispose of his property as he had done.

When pressed to say whether or not the organs above mentioned were in the possession of Mr. Johnson at the time he, the Insolvent, went to gaol, he, after much hesitation, said, that they were. They were removed from Mr. Johnson's about the 18th or the 19th of September last, and were taken to the house of Mr. Philpot, in Creek Row. A piano was also taken there a day or two afterwards, not from Mr. Johnson's, but from the Insolvent's own shop. He had taken a house in Colinga, not for the purpose of concealing his property, but as a residence for Mrs. Jacob's and his family. It was given up a few days after he went to gaol. Mrs. Jacobs never lived in it, but a quantity of goods was taken to it. He did not know whether it was taken by, or in the name of, Robert Bartlett. The piano-forte before mentioned, had been lent out on hire, and had been returned to Mrs. Jacobs. He had stated on a former occasion, that Mr. Johnson had advised him to take the benefit of the Insolvent Act, but he distinctly denied, that Mr. Johnson had advised him in his ulterior proceedings, and had not to his knowledge, examined or revised his Schedule. He had not, purchased a quantity of music from Messrs. Cockerell and Co., but believed that his son had done so. He then said that the music was paid for by a boondee for Rs. 700, received from Mr. Zchurpell, of Madras, but immediately recalled his words, and said, that the boondee was not for Rs. 700; but for 300 and odd, obtained from prizes in the Madras Lottery. The boondee was not sent in payment for a Piano-forte and two cases of music. In May or June 1838, he had received from Mr. Zchurpell, an order for 700 Rs. in payment for the goods mentioned. Did not know from what money Messrs. Cockerell and Co. were paid, but it was neither by the boondee, nor its proceeds. He had received a sum of Rs. 700 from Major Phelose, of Gwalior, in the beginning of last year. He was not certain that he had two cases of piano-forte strings; but knows that a quantity was stolen from him—probably ten or twelve hundred rupees worth. Two or three boxes of brass crooks, mouth pieces, &c. were also stolen. He did not complain at the police, not knowing whom to charge with the theft, and not wishing to waste his time without hope of redress. He had formerly in his possession, six canisters of French varnish or polish, but two of them he had sold, so that only four remained when he went to gaol. The selling price of this polish was from 70 to 80 rupees per canister; but the cost was only from 25 to 30 rupees. He had also a quantity of embossed leather piano-covers, but he believed they had been given up to the assignee, at first. He had also another house in a lane opposite the Union Chapel—it was a lower roomed house. He did not know to whom it belonged. He had not realised any money on bills, or other written security, since he went to gaol. Neither had Mr. Johnson for him; but Mrs. Jacobs might have done so, and might have told him of it afterwards.

He paid Mr. Parker for fitting up the shop in Old Court House Street for his son. He paid Rs. 500 in cash, and a promissory note of Mr. Dyer for 500 more. He had a McCabe's clock, which he believes was in his house when he went to gaol, but never heard that it was taken to Mr. Johnson's. In answer to a question from the Advocate-General, he replied that he did not know of any other property remaining concealed at the present time.

Mrs. Caroline Jacobs.—All the property of Mr. Jacobs had been given up. Some of it was at the house of Mr. Philpot and the rest at Serampore, at the time she wrote to Mr. Alexander. Never had a house in Colinga—it was in Fenwick's Bazar, or rather Free School Street,—not near the Union Chapel, but in an opposite direction. All the property with the exception of the organs, the scraphine, and the piano, was there when she wrote to Mr. Alexander. The articles mentioned were at Mr. Philpot's, except two organs, which were at Serampore. She was very unwilling to disclose the name of the person at Serampore, with whom the two organs were deposited, saying that she had pledged her word to the party that she would not mention the name, and begged that she might be excused doing so. However on its being insisted on, she said that they were with a Mr. Cushman, who, she believed, was employed by the missionaries, but of that she could not be positive. The property mentioned was brought from Serampore on the day Mr. Burkinyoung found it. A large six harrell-ed organ, and two table organs, were removed, from Mr. Johnson's to Mr. Philpot's in Creek Row, about Doorga Poojah time last year. Robert Bartlett did not assist in the removal,—they were taken by coolies, under her orders. The removal took place at dusk. No one accompanied the coolies, they knew the houses themselves. She could not say that Bartlett did not take the things to Mr. Johnson's. The house in Fenwick's Bazar was taken by Bartlett, who was living with witness's family at the time. She did not know whether Bartlett superintended the removal of the property to Fenwick's Bazar. She thought he might have known that the house was intended as a place of concealment for the goods. She did not know that he was frequently at the house while the property was lying there. The house was taken in Bartlett's name, but witness paid the rent. The property was removed from Johnson's to Philpot's, because it was witness's intention to give it up to the assignee, in hopes of making some arrangement to her husband's advantage. When asked why the goods were not taken to her own house, she seemed at a loss for an answer, but said something about seeing her error when too late to remedy it. Never told Mr. Johnson that she had removed the property to Fenwick's Bazar, until lately; and when informed of it, he disapproved of the measure. She had taken a house in Jaun Bazar with the intention of residing in it, and had removed the excepted articles of furniture, &c. to it; but afterwards finding that it would not be necessary for her to remove, she had brought all back again. There had been some plate, but witness had sold it to a native silver smith, of whom she could give no account, although, she said, he had been frequently employed by her. The plate was sold while Jacobs was on the river. Never saw two cases of piano-forte strings. Did not know what was in the shop. Had heard Jacobs complain of having had things stolen from time to time, but never to so large an amount as 1200 rupees at a time. There were some boxes of French polish lying in one of the godowns. One had been sold to Charles Gould for 70 rupees, and there were two left still. A house was taken in Entally, to which some property was removed, and it was intended to remove all there. It was about a month since that witness told Mr. Johnson of the property being in concealment. The goods sent to Mr. Johnson's, were, as she understood, on mortgage. Mr. J. generously renounced his claim upon them, on witness informing him that she wished to give them up for the purpose of making arrangements with the creditors. Mr. Johnson did not know where they were removed to. In answer to a question by the Advocate-General, she said she did not know of any property not yet given up.

Mahomed Aumman.—Let a house in Fenwick's Bazar to Robert Bartlett, who brought a quantity of boxes and chests, and deposited them in it. Bartlett was in the habit of coming to the house occasionally. The rent was paid by the durwan, who was stationed there by Bartlett. Young Jacobs sometimes came with Bartlett. The house was taken on the 3d June 1839, and vacated on the 20th June.

Robert Bartlett. On his receiving his subpoena previous to his last examination, he went to Mrs. Jacobs and asked what he was to say—how he was to proceed; when Mrs. J. told him, that if he mentioned any thing about the house or property, he would bring trouble upon the family and probably upon himself. Mr. Johnson was not present when this was said, neither had the witness any conversation with him as to the evidence he was to give. In consequence of some disagreement Mr. Johnson had not spoken to him for two years. Mr. Johnson was present yesterday, when Mrs. Jacobs told witness, that now, as every thing was found out, he might speak the truth. He did not know where the clock was taken to, or where it was brought from. The organs were taken from Mr. Johnson's to Creek Row, in September, one evening after nine o'clock. Witness accompanied them at Mrs. Jacobs's desire. The witness was persuaded that Mr. Johnson knew nothing of the concealment, because Mrs. Jacobs had told him so. Another house was taken in Jaun Bazar, to which some furniture was removed, but he saw no silver plate. Witness did not know that the property was brought back until the day that Mr. Burkinyoung came and seized it. He did not run and hide himself when Mr. Burkinyoung came in, but was only told by Mrs. Jacobs to step out of the way.

Charles Gould. Recollected goods being packed up for removal to Entally, before Jacobs went on the river. Young Jacobs and Bartlett were also present, and Mr. Johnson called in the evenings, while the work was going on. Witness supposed that he (Johnson) knew why they were packed.

Witness had had some conversation with Mr. Johnson on the day when he was last examined. On that occasion Mr. Johnson had told him to answer "soberly," and in the way that had been proposed and settled at Mrs. Jacobs's, which was, that witness should not mention the organs which had been in his possession, and which he afterwards gave up to Mrs. Jacobs. Nothing else was said about the evidence witness was to give. There was a McCabe's clock, but witness did not know what had become of it. He thought it was first removed when other articles were taken away. Had been at Johnson's house, but never saw any of Jacobs's property there. Johnson was at Jacobs's house almost every evening.

In answer to the Advocate-General—Did not know if all the property was given up, because he had not seen it.

Mathew Johnson, examined by Mr. Clarke.—There is no property of the insolvent's at my house, nor have I any knowledge of any of his property being now concealed. I now know, that a large quantity was given up the other day; before that, I did not know of its being concealed. No property of his was ever concealed with my knowledge. A large six-barreled self-performing organ, two smaller self-performing organs, and a seraphine were pledged with me as a security for a debt. The debt was this; I had accepted a bill for him on Messrs. Moore and Hickey, for 1000 or 1100 Rs., and to secure me, in case of his not taking up this bill, he lodged his property at my house. I had often assisted him with acceptances, this was not the first instance. Here is the bill, and the receipt for the money that I paid, (handed to the judge). I think the property was sent to my house in the latter end of April or beginning of May. It was before the insolvent went on the river, that I perfectly recollect. I was examined before the examiner in February last—it may have been the 9th, I do not recollect exactly. This is my examination, taken down by the examiner, and this is my signature at the bottom of it. (shown to the witness). Witness. My lord I beg to say in explanation of this, that I went before the examiner to give evidence regarding Mrs. Jacobs's marriage settlement—I did not expect to be examined to other matters. I was very confused, and being much pressed about dates and facts, I mixed up different transactions.

Mr. Clarke.—You need not be in such a hurry to explain. I must hear a little more of your present story.

Examination continued.—The organs and seraphine remained at my house until I gave them up to Mrs. Jacobs. I had a lien on them for the money I had paid to Moore and Hickey, but I abandoned that, to assist the family, when they got into distress. Mrs. Jacobs asked me to return the property to her, as it would enable her to make an arrangement with the creditors. I cannot say when I returned it. It might have been the 18th of September, or about the Doorgah Poojah, or in August, I do not exactly recollect.

Mr. Clarke.—On your oath was it not after Jacobs had gone to jail?

Witness.—It might have been, I think it was.

Q. Don't you know it was. Take care how you answer.

A. Yes it was.

Q. Now, Sir, did you not swear before the Examiner on the 9th of February, "that two organs and a seraphine were put in my possession with the view to my becoming security for Mr. Jacobs to Mr. Burkingyoung, but that not succeeding, Mr. Jacobs took them away from me, that was about the latter end of last May?" Look at the depositions signed by yourself—did you not say so?

Witness.—My lord, I was very confused and did not expect to be examined to these facts, and I mixed up other transactions.

Mr. Clarke.—I don't want your explanations—I will have an answer. Did you say so?

Witness. I did.

Q. Did you not also state, that "when Jacobs went on the river he took them with him. He told me, that he had disposed of them on the river?"

A. I did, but I mixed up another transaction.

Q. Now then—explain if you can—how you came to swear, that you returned this property to Jacobs in May, when he took it on the river and sold it, and now you admit you gave it to Mrs. Jacobs in September, after her husband was in Jail, to enable her to arrange with the creditors?

A. My Lord, I was confused at the time. I had received a piano from Jacobs, which I intended to purchase, but not doing so, I returned it to him, and I mixed up the two transactions.

Q. So you mistook a piano for three organs and a seraphine?

A. I was confused at the time.

Q. And when examined you really believed, that these four instruments had been sold on the river in May, though they remained in your own house, and were given up to the wife after her husband went to Jail?

A. I mixed up different transactions.

Q. Now, man, did you say one word about a piano before the examiner?

A. I find I did not.

Q. Did you say one word of the pledge for the defendant to Moore and Hickey before the examiner?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you not invent this story about your returning the organs in May, and their being sold on the river, to induce a belief that no property was kept back, after Jacobs went to Jail; but now that it has been traced to your own house, you are obliged to confess?

A. No. I say again, I was confused at the time, and mixed up different transactions. The witness continued. The property was removed from my house after dark, not so late as eleven o'clock at night. It might have been after gun fire. I was at dinner and coolies took it away. I do not know where it was taken to, I swear I do not. I never asked Mrs. Jacobs, I swear I never did. I am most intimate with the family. I go occasionally to the house—frequently I may say, but not every day in the week nor six days out of the seven. I call in the morning, on my way to office, and I take my tea there at night. I again swear I never asked where the property was removed to. I did not know it was taken to a house in Creek-row, until the Assignee found it there the other day. I did not know of there being property concealed at a house in Intally. I heard Jacobs had taken one there; nor did I know of property at another House in Tultollah, nor at the house in Janu Bazar. Nor at the other in Fenwick's Bazar. I swear I did not know of this, though I hear it now.

Q. And this is as true as that which you swore to before the Examiner, eh?

A. No; what I swear to now is true. I was confused then, and mixed up different transactions. I was never consulted about Jacob's schedule, I never read it. I never read the draft. I never approved of it. I never discounted a hoondie from Madras. I remember the purchase of a case of music from Messrs. Cockerell and Co. I paid a part of the money for young Jacobs, and he repaid me. He did not get the money by discounting a Madras hoondie, that is I don't know that he did—I know of a McCabe's clock—it has been given up to the Assignee. It was removed from the Insolvent's house, on his going to jail. I don't know where it was sent—I did not take it. I know Mr. Cashman at Serampore. I did not know of the two organs having been sent to him, until they were brought back the other day. I never told Gould the day before the last hearing, not to say any thing about the house in Fenwick's Bazar, or we should be all ruined. Upon my honor I never did.

Mr. Clarke.—I don't want your honor, Sir; on your oath, did you? He has sworn did.

A. On my oath I did not, I never told him in that verandah to speak as we had agreed upon at Mrs. Jacobs's, I may have told him to be "cool"—perhaps I did but I don't recollect. Mr. Advocate General declined putting any questions to this witness.

C. B. M. Jacobs, the insolvent's son, knew that much property had lately been given up, and that some of it had previously been concealed. He did not know, until about a month ago, that any of the property was in the possession of Mr. Philpotts. Could not say whether he knew of it at the time he was examined in the Examiner's office. He did not know till lately that any of the property was concealed. He had purchased music from Messrs. Cockerell and Co., through Mr. Sutherland, to the amount of about Rs. 700, of which Mr. Johnston paid a part, and witnessed the remainder. There had been a clock of which the Assignee had now obtained possession. Witness understood from his mother, that it had been mortgaged, but he did not know for what sums.

At the conclusion of the examinations, Mr. Clarke moved, that the insolvent might be remanded, stating as his reason for such a course, his conviction that it would lead to the disclosure of other portions of the insolvent's property. The evidence given by one of the witnesses on the last examination, had frightened the parties, who had made a virtue of necessity and delivered up goods to the amount of at least Rs. 30,000, being of itself 8 annas in the rupee on his debts. He (Mr. Clarke) had little doubt that a further investigation would lead to still further discoveries, and therefore wished to have the insolvent remanded till next Court day. Remanded.—Hark, July 8,

MISCELLANEA.

CALCUTTA.

LORD AUCKLAND'S CAMP.—Lord Auckland's camp is ordered to be prepared at Kurnaul in the first week in October, but whether for a second tour or a downward trip, will depend on events still in the womb of time.

We have since heard it stated, that Lord Auckland and suit are certainly to return to the Presidency next cold weather.

SIR HENRY FANE.—The Commander-in-Chief, Sir Henry Fane, it is said, will not return to England until November or December next.

SIR EDWARD RYAN.—Sir Edward Ryan is about to proceed in a few days, upon a tour to Simlah and the Hills.

COURT OF REQUESTS.—Mr. George Lay, the nephew of Mr. James Pattle, has been appointed to officiate for Mr. C. W. Britzke, who has obtained ten months' leave on medical certificate.

DROWNED.—On the 28th of July, Mr. Mitchell, late chief mate of the Ship "Forth of Atlas," fell from the dingy alongside of that vessel, and was drowned.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITIES.—The following are the Civil Servants to whom the six vacant pensions of the current year have fallen:—Messrs. Turnbull, Braddon, F. C. Smith, W. Cracroft, A. Trotter and H. T. Pringle.

CIVIL SERVICE FURLONGS.—There are more applications for Civil Service furloughs for the coming season than there are furloughs available.

PERTAB CHUND.—The Sudder Nizamut have rejected the application made on behalf of Pertab, for a new trial.

THE WATER WITCH'S PACKETS.—The following are the numbers of the letters sent by the Water Witch.

Calcutta letters,.....	3,332
Mofussil ditto,.....	867
Newspaper, &c.,.....	1,291

Total, .. 5,490

to which should be added the Government despatches, which alone were two or three men's loads.

MAJOR TURNER.—It is said, that a memorial has arrived in this country from Major Turner, late Home Agent to the Orphan Fund, with an appeal to the Army to be reinstated in his office as Home Agent.

COL. JAMES YOUNG.—Colonel James Young retired from the Law Commission and assumed his position of Secretary of the Union Bank, on the 1st instant. This notification will be heard with regret by all who wish well to India, for seldom has the elevation of any man to high office, called forth such general approval through the country, as Mr. Ross's nomination of Col. Young to the Law Commission.

MR. MATTHEW JOHNSTONE.—The Gyannashun states, that Mr. Matthew Johnstone, Deputy-Collector of Calcutta and Panchanon Gram, has been compelled to resign his situation, in consequence of having perjured himself. We have been informed, that this statement is not correct, as the Government have merely called upon Mr. Johnstone for an explanation of his conduct, in having given contradictory evidence in the matter of James Jacobs, an insolvent. A bill has been filed in the Supreme Court, however, charging Mr. Johnstone with gross perjury.

RESUMPTION OPERATIONS.—It is said that all Resumption operations are likely to be suspended forthwith. Mr. Taylor's celebrated Resumption cases, the 700 cases decided in one day, have been already definitively quashed, and, thanks to the right-feeling on this subject, displayed by Mr. Robertson and his colleagues, a few days more, it is expected, will see the announcement that Resumption is no more!

INDIAN AGENCY IN CAPE TOWN.—Captain Vaananen, formerly of the 25th Regiment Native Infantry, has established an "Indian Agency" in Cape Town, for the convenience of officers and others proceeding there on sick furlough.

COLONEL STODDART.—Colonel Stoddart, who was imprisoned at Bokhara, has now been released from duress, and is graciously received by the King, and treated with even more consideration than he experienced before the unfortunate occurrence, which occasioned his incarceration.

DARJEELING.—Those who look to Darjeeling as the future Simla of the Cocknies of Bengal, will be glad to hear, that the officers there are promised five hundred coolies from the Hazareebaugh district, to be at Titalia on the 15th of October next, whose pay is to be four rupees a month, and their food found them.

INDIGO PROSPECTS.—The Indigo prospects in Jessore are improving,—the weather having cleared up and the river fallen about two feet. The manufacturing in the factories situated in the higher lands was, in consequence, quence, suspended for a time, and was to have been resumed early in the present month.

The accounts from Bhagulpore are not so satisfactory as the foregoing; they intimate that a north-easterly storm had considerably injured the plants in the high lands. The river had fallen, and the previous sudden rise had been attended with serious injury to the plants in the ekur lands, chiefly in the direction of Pooroes.

From all accounts received, the present promises to be a splendid season for the indigo and paddy crops, although a great deal of indigo plant has been lost through inundation. The Mahanuddes and an adjacent river, have overflowed their banks and inundated the surrounding country.

MR. DAMPIER.—Mr. Dampier, Commissioner of the 24 Pergunahs, has gone for a six weeks' tour to certain of his districts. His trip to the Burdwan and Hooghly neighbourhood, is in some degree connected with the settlement of the lands resumed by Mr. W. Taylor, of two-hundred-lakeraj-cates in-morning-deciding notoriety.

It is said, that Mr. Dampier is to succeed Mr. F. C. Smith, as Superintendent of Police.

A TRADE LIST OR DAILY COMMERCIAL REPORT.—The Committee of the Trade Association have just begun to issue "A Trade List or Daily Commercial Report," which is circulated gratis to the members of the Association, but is sold to the public also, for a trifling monthly sum.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—At a General Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, held on the 2d July, it was resolved, with respect to bills of lading for Liverpool and the other out ports of Great Britain, that in future the freight be made payable in cash, less 60 days' discount; at 5 per cent per annum from the date of arrival, on proof of due delivery of the goods.

THE PIC NIC.—The Pic Nic has changed its name and its form. The paper is now entitled the Calcutta Weekly Chronicle, and is printed on a demy sheet, in rather small type, which admits of that copious record and discussion of local subjects to which the editor seems disposed to devote his new journal. The change is undoubtedly a great improvement in the Pic Nic.

BANK OF BENGAL DIVIDEND.—The Bank of Bengal has declared a dividend of eight per cent. per annum on its past six months' transactions. This is a falling off of about 2 per cent since its last half year's dividend.

THE FAUMBAUM CHANNEL.—The usefulness of the Faumbaum Channel, seems to be increasing rapidly. In the statement of craft which have passed through this Channel from the 20th to the 23d ultimo, a period of only three days, their appears no less than four schooners, averaging 40 tons burthen, twenty-eight dhonies (1,566 tons) and a vessel of 200 tons! the barque Muhammed Samodaney-pilay, from Nagore to Keelacourray.

ELEPHANTS.—The elephants sent to the Pasha of Egypt by the Columbo, under the charge of Captain Graham, have been most handsomely acknowledged by Mahomed Aly. After harnessing them to guns and being satisfied of their utility, the Pasha declared he would immediately procure some from the Soudan. His Highness then presented Captain Graham with a gold snuff box and a Turkish sabre; and Mrs. Graham with a superb Cashmere shawl.

TRANSLATION OF THE ACTS AND REGULATIONS OF GOVERNMENT.—The remonstrances continually addressed to the Government by the Press, and by officers in the service of the State, touching the great want of a translation of the Acts and Regulations of Government for dissemination amongst the natives, have at length produced their effect. A translator's office is in course of organization, and will be placed under the control of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Legislative and Judicial departments.

ESTABLISHMENT OF AN ENGLISH SCHOOL AT BARSAT.—The Probakhur gives a report of a meeting at Barsat, for the establishment of an English School at that station. The meeting was held in the house of Baboo Roy. Prankissen Metre, a wealthy Zemindar of the place, and was attended by about thirty Hindoo gentlemen, including five Pundits. Several resolutions were passed, embracing the establishment of a branch Committee in Calcutta, to co-operate with the local one, and an address to the Magistrate of the district soliciting his countenance and support.

SHREE SING.—Intelligence has just been received from Ferozepore, to the effect that Shree Sing, son of Runjeet was murdered a few days previous to the date of the letter at Umritsir. "It is supposed," says the writer of the letter, "that Dhian Sing, the Chief Mooktear at the Labour Court, was the instigator of this deed," but of course all suppositions of this sort are vague, and not founded upon any particular facts implicating the suspected party. The report of the murder, has since been contradicted.

THE OUDH FORCE.—The following is an extract of a letter from Lucknow, dated 23d July.

"We are no longer servants of the King of Oude. An order has come out from the home Authorities, to refund the sixteen lacs received from the Oude Government, and henceforth, if we are not disbanded, which appears rather doubtful, we are to receive our tolls from Honorable John. Fancy the King giving a salute on receiving the money back into his treasury!"

ATLAS INSURANCE COMPANY.—The following resolutions were passed, at a meeting of the proprietors of the Atlas Insurance Company, held on the 27th July.

1st. That the statement subscribed by the Secretaries be approved of and passed.

2d. That a dividend of £75 per share be made by bills on the London agents.

3d. That the thanks of the meeting be given to the Directors, who are requested to continue their services for the ensuing half year; and that Mr. J. S. Stopford, be requested to act as a Director, in the room of Mr. A. DeSouza, resigned.

CAPTURE OF DACOITS IN CALCUTTA.—Thirteen men supposed to be part of a gang, which, in the course of last month, committed a dacoity attended with murder, in zillah Nuddes, have, through the vigilance of the Police, been discovered and apprehended. Eleven of them were found upon the premises of Baboo Nobinohunder Bose, in Shaam Bazar, and the remaining two in the house of a man who passes as a mendicant, in Nim-tollah street. It is believed that several others escaped from the former place, as three or four were actually seen jumping out of a window in the rear, a height of about twenty feet.

DUEL.—A hostile meeting took place on the evening of the 23d instant, between Capt. McNaghten and Mr. Chas. Hollings. It appears that some time in 1837, Capt.

McNaghten, considering himself affronted by an article published in the Delhi Gazette, when that journal was under Mr. Hollings' management, called on Mr. H. either to retract and apologize or to give him (Capt. McN.) the satisfaction which one gentleman, under such circumstances, owes to another, whenever they might happen to be at the same station. Mr. Hollings, however, neither retracted nor apologized, but having recently arrived at Calcutta, he sent a friend to intimate to Capt. McNaghten his readiness to afford him the satisfaction he formerly required. Captain McNaghten accordingly accepted the offer, as Mr. Hollings still refused to atone by apology, and the parties, with their seconds, crossed the water to adjust the dispute. After receiving Mr. Hollings's fire, Capt. McNaghten declared his satisfaction with the atonement afforded, and the parties then left the ground.

A DACOITY.—A dacoity was committed on the night of the 26th of July, at the house of Baboo Sumbhoo Chunder Nudder, in Gorla, on the east of the bridge. The dacoits, consisting of about a hundred armed men, when entering the house of the Baboo, were seen by a chowkidar, who, on his attempting to obstruct their entrance, was tied down by a string and thrown into the canal; but was saved from a watery grave. Afterwards the patrolling officer went forward to offer them resistance, but was mortally wounded by the ruffians, and immediately expired on the spot. They also deprived of life of two Brahmins, and a servant of the above mentioned gentleman, by means of a scimitar, and the merchant himself received so serious a wound on his head, that his life is almost despaired of. Besides these, eight persons were severely wounded, but some state they may live. The merchant was robbed of his money to the amount of 2,500 rupees and a pair of gold bony and several other gold and silver articles. The plunderers then threw down their weapons and disguising themselves variously, took their course several ways. Some of them stopped at a place named Korriah. A servant who followed the robbers, ran and informed the thanadar, pointed out the place, and had them apprehended. The merchant is very much esteemed for his benevolence towards poor and helpless orphans.

THE FANCY BALL.—M. Dupuis' fancy ball took place on Wednesday night. There was a tolerably full attendance, but a very small proportion of the visitors sported fancy costumes. What there were, however, were, generally speaking, very good. The refreshments (except the beer, which was pronounced execrable,) were very good, and quite sufficient for the demands of all reasonable people. Dancing was kept up with great perseverance throughout the night, until about two o'clock, when, the host played the music under an interdict and so brought the light footed quadrillers, somewhat prematurely to a stand.

The ball would have gone off very well, had it not been for the very turbulent conduct of some persons present who, from their situation in life, ought to have conducted themselves with propriety. The consequences of their outrageous conduct has been, that they have ruined an industrious man, whose exertions to amuse the public and support his family, deserved a better return.

AN ASSAULT.—Mr. W. H. L. Frith, Attorney-at-law, in consequence of having received what he conceived to be an insulting letter, on account of his not having paid his subscription to Messrs. Pittar and Co.'s lottery, went over to the shop of that firm and asked Mr. Charles Pittar, whom he called a d—d snob of a shopkeeper, if he had written the note. Mr. Pittar said he had, and that Mr. Frith was nothing more than a d—d snob of an Attorney.

On hearing Mr. Pittar retort his complimentary language, Mr. Frith could bridle his wrath no longer, but clenching his digits, drove his knuckles straight at Mr. Pittar's thorax, feeling him a clip which did not quite knock him down. Some wordy sparring then ensued, during which Mr. Chas. Pittar and his nephew, Mr. W. Pittar, questioned the veracity of Mr. Frith, who became so irritated at the shopkeepers' insolence, that he gave Mr. William Pittar a dig in the bread-basket, which did not, however, knock him down. Mr. Wm. Pittar then closed with Mr. Frith, and, with the help of some birchbushes, expelled Mr. Frith from the shop of crime. The affair was brought to the notice of the Police, and Messrs. Pittar had the satisfaction to see Mr. Frith subjected to the mortification of paying to Her Majesty, on account of his pugnacity, the sum of Twenty rupees two hundred, for violating the peace.

RUNJEET SING.—Runjeet Sing, the Lion of the Punjab, the founder of a dynasty, is at last really and truly dead, and is not only killed by the newspapers. Runjeet Sing, the grasper at all, the squeezer of Shah Soojahool Moolah, the extorter of Khoi-noor, has been grasped by death, squeezed in his turn by the grim tyrant, who has extracted his life from him, and made him relinquish all his ill gotten booty, including the Hill-of-light.

Karrack Sing, Runjeet's son, has succeeded him, and taken unopposed possession of the throne. The Khoi-noor, has been bequeathed by Runjeet to the idol Jagernauth. The Lion of the five rivers, was sixty years of age when he died.

LAST HOURS AND DEATH OF RUNJEET SING.—The Maharaja, when he became very ill, ordered his treasures and jewels to be brought forth. 100 cows with horns gilded, 100 caparisoned horses, and 5 of the best breed, such as the "Kubootrah," the "Kandaharee," the "Nugeena," and others, all equipt in gold and jewelled saddles; 4 Elephants with gold and silver housas, a golden chair and bedstead, plates, strings of pearls, swords, shield, guns, and innumerable other valuables, were given in alms, and deposited with Misur Beilee Ram, to be distributed in all parts of India, and at all the sacred Hindoo shrines and temples. Afterwards a surpeich, received from the Governor-General, and other jewels and gold bangles, were given away.

The gifts made this day are computed to have amounted to about two crores of rupees, but making allowances for exaggeration, it can be no less than one crore. The Ministers and Koonwur Kharruck Singh enquired, with cries of lamentation, 'what would become of them?'—on which the Maharaja shed tears. The Rajas Dhian Singh and Heera Singh, will distribute all the money and things to the Goordwara and other places, and to the Brahmins and Sothees. The Maharaja sent for the precious diamond, Kohinoor, from Belee Ram, and wanted to give it in alms; but he was dissuaded by the Rajas, who represented how invaluable a diamond it was—worth the revenues of all India, and that there would be no one to buy it from the Brahmins. A Jagher of 25,000 rupees annual revenue, was granted to the Amritsar Goordwara to support travellers. The surpeich and string of pearls received from the Governor-General, were given to Pandit Madasoodan because of their being so very precious. The gifts continued till evening, and the Maharaja remained in the state in which he was, the physicians all the while feeling his pulse. The Rajas have so strictly guarded the touchkhana, the fort, and the city, that no stranger can enter, and similar arrangements have been made at Amritsar through Misur Sookraj. At Jemadar Khoosah Singh's suggestion, Koonwur Kharruck Singh has written to Koonwur Sheer Singh, to come without delay, and he is expected to arrive as soon as possible.

The death of the Maharaja being known, the Ranees, Koonwur Kharruck Sing, Raja Dhian Singh, Jemadar Khoosal Sing, and others, raised cries and lamentations, tearing their hair, casting earth on their heads, throwing themselves on the ground, and striking their heads against bricks and stones. This continued during the night by the side of the corpse. Every now and then looking towards the corpse their shrieks became shriller. The gates of the fort were shut, but Koonwur Kharruck Singh ordered the shops in the city to be opened, and business to be carried on.

Koonwur Kharruck Sing, Raja Dhian Sing, and others, had a bier of sandal wood prepared and embroidered with gold flowers. Raja Dhian Sing prepared to burn himself with the Maharajah, but the Koonwur and the sirdars threw their turbans at his feet to dissuade him, alleging that without him the affairs of the state would be deranged. It was not until after some hours passed in thus beseeching him that they could prevail upon him. Then the Raja proposed to go to Beasree after a year, which was complied with. Ranees Koon-dun, called "Guddun," daughter of Raja Sansar Chund, of Kuttock; Ranees Hindesres, daughter of Meera Puddum Sing, of Noorpoor; Ranees Rajkower, daughter of Sirdar Jay Sing of Chyapoor, a village about 7 miles from Amritsar, and the Ranees "Biant Allee," came and approached the corpse weeping, and received to burn themselves with their husband. Koonwur Khurruck Sing did his utmost to dissuade them; he pointed out to them the dignity and the affluence they were possessed of, and promised that in future he would be with all his heart and soul most devoted to them, would they only relinquish their intention, but they would not for a moment listen either to the appeals of the Koonwur or the other chiefs. Ranees "Guddun" taking Raja Dhan Sing by the hand and placing it on the breast of the corpse, made him swear never to be a traitor to Koonwur Khurruck Sing, and Now Nehal Sing; or to be inattentive to the welfare of the state. Koonwur Khurruck Sing was in like manner made to swear not to be led away by any misrepresentations of interested parties to renounce Rajah Dhan Sing; and the torments due for the slaughter of a thousand cows were imprecated on him who should violate his oath. The corpse was then washed by the Koonwur with the water of the Gauges, and placed on the splendid bier. Rajas Dhan and Meerah Sing, Khoosaul Sing, Arjet Sing, Sudhan walla, the vakeels of Aloo walla, of Ladlah, Toohara, Hursurn Doss, and others, threw shawls on the bier, and it was carried in procession in the garden at Dhule hole, situated in the fort near the Huzoorie adjoining to Goo-roo Urjin's residence. The four Ranees, clad in the richest apparel and jewels worth many lacs of rupees, accompanied the procession bestowing every now and then some portion of their jewels and ornaments to the singers and the Brahmans. Having arrived at the funeral pile made of sandal-wood, the corpse was placed upon it. Ranees Koondun sat down by its side and placed the head of the deceased on her lap, while the other three Ranees, with seven slave girls, seated themselves around, with every mark of satisfaction on their countenances. At ten o'clock, nearly the time fixed by the Brahmans, Koonwur Khurruck Sing set fire to the pile, and the Ruler of Punjab, with four Ranees and seven slave girls, was reduced to ashes. A small cloud appeared in the sky over the burning pile, and, after having shed a few drops, cleared away. No one saw a hope of relief but in resignation. Raja Dhan Sing attempted four times to jump into the burning pile, but was withheld by the multitude. After the ceremony was over, Koonwur Khurruck Sing and the other Chiefs, bathed themselves in the Ravee and returned to the Huzoorie Garden. 15 pairs of shawls and 20 ducats were given to the singers of the holy hymns of Baba Nanuck, and a thousand rupees were distributed amongst the poor. The heart is rent in attempting a description of the distress and lamentations in the Palace,—amongst the Ranees, and amongst citizens of every age, sex, and religion.

NEWS.

NEWS.—Intelligence has, it is said, been received at Simla, from which a Burmese war is considered to be unavoidable. Though not mentioned in the Calcutta papers, it is known that three armies of 15,000 men each, have lately marched to Rangoon. Moukheir and Aracan respectively. Military stores in large quantities have also been imported from the French settlements in India. An increase of the Army will, it is said, take place in anticipation of this rupture.

JUBBULPORE.—Captain Wheatley had gone out alone to Jubbulpore, on a well known harness, and fell in with a tiger. When getting near, the tiger charged, and only being slightly hit, made good his charge, when a real skirmish took place between the animal, Captain W. having enough to do to keep himself to the howdah. After a time they parted; the tiger, having much the worst of it, went off a few yards, evidently distressed, (and no wonder for his ribs were stove in) when all being, as W. supposed, quiet, he stood up to load, when, suddenly, the elephant resumed her rolling, pitching W. head foremost out of the howdah, on which the elephant ran up to him and kicked him, but not severely, and before she could repeat her intention, the mahout was able to guide her off. Damage.—W.'s face scratched, right knee bruised, and left wrist sprained; both stocks of his guns broken at the grasp. Being so completely hors de combat he retired. Lieut. Banks and Turrook then proceeded, and found the tiger stiff, evidently killed by the elephant, as W. had only put two balls into his shoulder, neither of which would have been immediately fatal. The elephant is scratched on the forehead, a little on the neck, and a bite on one of her hind legs, but nothing very serious.

STATUS.—The Sirdar of Ladwa, relative of Maharajah Runjeet Sing, arrived there on the 28th ultimo, accompanied by Mr. George Clerk, Political Agent of Umballa. The Sirdar was presented at the Governor-General's Durbar, when the title of Rajah was conferred on him. The usual exchange of nozzaranes took place. The Rajah's possessions on this side of the Sutlege are estimated at two lacs of rupees, and Trana-sutledge at half a lac.

It is rumoured that the districts of Loodiana, Umbala and the Hill Provinces, are to be formed into one division and placed under Mr. Clerk as Commissioner.

A great proof that Mr. Clerk is rising high in His Lordship's estimation is, that he has lately placed his nephew under him.

The Ex-Rajah of Ladah, died on the 4th instant; he received a pension from Government of two hundred rupees a month.

THE AMEERS OF SCINDS.—A letter has been intercepted from the Ameers of Scinds to Dost Mahomed; through the zeal and intelligence of a young officer of the Bengal army.

It would now seem that an open rupture with the Scindians is inevitable; indeed so prevalent is this belief among the troops beyond the Indus, that it has raised the spirits of the whole corps d'armee; it is also said, and this report is borne out by many circumstances, that the Persians have actually reached Herat with an army of forty or fifty thousand men.

Confirmatory of the above rumours, Government has received an express from Bhooj (the seat of the British resident in Scinde) which puts us in possession of the intrigues of the Ameers; we may therefore look for the immediate assembly of a force for the subjugation of the Scinds states.

BAREILLY.—The following is an extract of a letter from Bareilly of the 4th instant:

4th July.—Bareilly was, on the night of the 29th ultimo, visited by a severe thunder storm, accompanied with heavy rain for two hours from the North-west; doing, I am told, a great deal of mischief to the mud walls in the city—heavy as it was, it has only given a partial relief, for the heat has become as insupportable as before, and unless the threatening clouds which have been hovering about ever since, all night and early in the morning, favour us in a few days, I really do not know what will become of us; the Ryots are beginning to look very gloomy; last year by this time all crops were up—this year none had been sown nor have they been able yet even to till their ground, which, if delayed many days longer, will be most ruinous to the country.

NATIVE STATES.

CABUL.—COLONEL CAMPBELL.—Dost Mahomed has, it is said, confined in prison at Cabul, General, or Colonel Campbell, and the American Officer now in the Khan's service, as also one of the Sirdars, who was favourable to our views.

JOODPORA.—All negotiation with Maun Sing is broken off. The determination of Colonel Sutherland to reclaim some 700 villages which the Gooroos or Nathi had secured to themselves, has led to their resistance; and as they possess wealth they have partitioned. As to the Rajah himself, he is a mere tool in the hands of a powerful faction, and that faction, it is well known, is any thing but friendly to the interests of the British Government.

JOODPORA.—On the 25th ultimo, a deputation arrived from Jhoupore, at Nusseerabad, and solicited an interview with Colonel Sutherland, which was not only peremptorily refused, but the deputation was ordered to return forthwith. The object of this mission could only have been to cause further delay, for our policy requiring the dismissal of the present advisers of Maun Singh, they will try the last extremity, rather than sanction a compromise which will involve their own removal. This and the note of preparation from Ajmere, leave little room for doubt, that, an army will march with all possible expedition to Jhoupore.

Letters from Neemuch, dated the middle of last July, state, that the 30th, 39th, and 49th Regiments of Native Infantry, two Squadrons of Cavalry, the Light Native Troop of Horse Artillery, and a detail of Foot Artillery, with guns, are warned to move at an early date on Joudpore. In addition to these, a battering train proceeds from Ajmere with one thousand rounds per gun; and three regiments of Native infantry, together with the 9th Light Cavalry and some Artillery, from Nusseerabad, the whole under the command of Major General Hampton. The Major General was to leave Neemuch on the 15th July, with his Aid-de-Camp, Lieutenant Campbell, of the 30th Regt. N. I., to meet Col. Sutherland at Ajmere, and concert future operations.

SYNDER.—It is currently reported that since the Political Agent issued the proclamation of our Government as regards the future management of Jeypore, which effectually prevents the Nahawaths from any longer plundering the country and withholding payment to the British Government of the arrears of tribute, so long due, that they are determined to thwart the measures of the Political Agent, by every means in their power. With this view they are endeavouring to confederate and form a league with those Chiefs and Thakors, with whom they were lately at enmity, in order, as they say, to save the Raj from the clutches of the "Feringees," for under present circumstances, they add, the Political Agent requires them to attend to their respective duties, which are very laborious, whilst no more profit can be gathered from the rich fields, in which they have so long revelled in uncontrolled liberty. Thakoor Sheo Sing is a simpleton, and says and does little; but his brother, Luchman Sing, "is making hay whilst the sun shines." He has carried off every thing he could lay his hands on to Choumoon; even the Raj cannon, it is said, have been purloined, and clandestinely taken off to adorn his new made bastions at the above fort, whilst some thousands of the public men and cattle belonging to the Jeypore State, have been constantly working for some months past, to put the hillah in a state of defence.

Major Thornesby is expected to assume charge of the Political Agency of Jeypore, on or about the 22d instant. After delivering over the charge of the Bhutia district to his successor, he will proceed direct via Hissar, Choptee, to Jeonjochoo, and thence to Jeypore, where his presence is greatly needed in consequence of the confusion and disorder that reigns in that ill-starred capital. It is said, that the investigations that have been instituted into the conduct of the Rawul and Luchman Sing, have already elicited sufficient proofs of the ruinous system of their measures. Lands to the amount of some lakhs per annum had been given away, and bestowed on their relatives and friends, whilst a host of Chiefs and Thakors have been ousted out of their patrimonial estates, in the most unjust and cruel manner, and driven to robbing and plundering for subsistence. Whilst these things were enacting outside of the city, the extortions and demands made on almost all respectable and monied individuals, and merchants, within the city, are beyond all measure tyrannical and oppressive; yet not one anna of the sums due to the British Government has been paid. Reports mention that property belonging to Jora Ram, amounting to nearly twenty lakhs of rupees, has been seized by the Rawul and Luchman Sing, and that not more than five lakhs out of the said 20, have been accounted for!

MADRAS.

MAONIC LODGE.—On the evening of the 24th of June, the first stone of a new Ma-onic Lodge was laid by Lord Elphinstone, on the South Bridge, between Capper's and St. Thome.

BOMBAY.

THE SEMINARIES.—It is said that after all the Seminars is not to be condemned. Two different committees have come to the opinion, that there is nothing in the damage she has sustained to prevent her again going to sea, in as perfect order as she ever was; and that the new boilers, ordered for her before the accident, the only thing in which her machinery was defective, came out by the Courts.

ARCHDEACON JEFFRIES.—The Venerable the Archdeacon, was to embark on the 15th of July for New South Wales, whither he proceeds on sick leave for two years.

THE BOMBAY BANK.—It is said, that a recommendation has been forwarded, by the Bank Committee, to the Supreme Government, that the opening of the Bank be postponed till March next, in consequence of the inconvenience that might be caused to most of the Shareholders, by their being called upon in the present crisis, to pay up the amount of their Shares in full, according to the fiat of the Court of Directors.

JAMSETJEE JEJEEBHoy's DONATION.—It is stated, that the conditions submitted to the consideration of the Court of Directors, under which Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy proposed a grant of 100,000 rupees for the establishment of an hospital for the natives of this place, have been approved of and accepted by the Court of Directors.

THE WEATHER. The last report of the weather is decidedly more favourable than the former, and is well calculated to allay any apprehensions that might have been felt upon the subject.

LARKINS v. LEWIS.—The Chief Justice has given, damages of 2,000 rupees in the crim. con. case of Larkins versus Lewis. These small damages were given in consideration of Mrs. Larkins, and not Mr. Lewis, appearing to have been the seducer.

TANNAN.—Moderate rain, it is stated, in a report from Tannah, dated the 21st instant, fell in most parts of the Zillah, during the early part of that week, but in the latter part there was none at all, and in some places the crops were beginning to dry up.

POONAH.—A report from the Acting Collector of Poona, dated the 25th instant, states, that the Monsoon had met in favourably in his Zillah, and that several heavy showers had fallen during the fortnight previous to the date of his report.

SURAT.—No rain fell in the districts of the Surat Zillah, between the 10th and 17th instant, as mentioned in a report dated the 20th, and it was therefore apprehended at the time, that unless some rain fell in a day or two, the rice crops would be destroyed.

SOLAPUR.—In Solapur, as elsewhere, the Monsoon had set in early, but little rain stated to have fallen during the fortnight preceding the despatch of the report received from the quarter, which is dated the 21st instant, except in the Barsee Talooka, where the ryots had been enabled to sow the kurreef crops in 67 villages, which operation was also performed in the southern part of the Mopdehball, and a few villages of the Sudee and Mhole Talookas more than a month ago.

RUTNAGHERIE.—A report from Rutnagherie, for the week ending the 17th instant, represented that abundance of rain fell in the Malwan Talooka on the 11th and 12th, and that it extended to Vingorla; and continued there up to the 14th. A few showers fell in the early part of the week in the Vozindroog, Severndroog, and a part of the Unjunwell Talooka, whilst only two light showers were experienced on the 16th and 17th instant in the Rutnagherie, and that part of the Unjunwell Talooka which was without rain during the previous week.

CANDEISH.—The distress occasioned by a deficiency of water in Candesh was alleviated by a heavy fall of rain, which happened on the 20th of last month, and filled all the wells and Nullahs—a second though more partial fall was experienced on the 6th instant, but the long interval between both those dates during which there was no rain, had excited alarm regarding the prospects of the season, and the safety of the crops. It is also mentioned in the Collector's report, that herbage had not attained sufficient strength to afford much food for cattle, and that the operation for sowing was suspended for the present.

THE INSURRECTIONISTS.—Mr. Bell, who was deputed some time ago, to try the insurrectionists, who were made prisoners, while committing their outrages in the Khair district, has returned from Ponah. The trials commenced on the 30th of May, and concluded on the 10th of June. Out of thirty-five who were charged with treason, nine were acquitted, one died at the bar while his case was under investigation, and twenty-five were condemned to death. Among those who were acquitted, was the son of Khatgeewallah, a Sirdar. The sirdar was so elated at the release of his son, that he held public rejoicings, and distributed sugar throughout the city. His escape was owing to the inconclusive nature of the proofs that were brought forward. It did not appear, during the course of procedure, that the relatives or friends of any other Sirdars had been implicated in the unlawful transaction that had taken place.

THE KILKENNY.—The long-looked for Kilkenny has at length arrived. She came to anchor on the 14th of July, after a passage of 130 days, 84 of which only she steamed. She left Cork on 6th March, made St. Vincent in the De Verde in 17 days, took in coals and proceeded for the Cape, passing to the Eastward of St. Helena and close in to the coast of Africa. When in lat. 22° South, had exhausted her coals, made the land at Cape Martha, took in wood, and finding that it would not generate steam, went about and made for St. Helena under canvas, which she reached on 7th June, after a great delay. On the 18th sailed and reached the Cape in 11 days, remained there 7, then proceeded and made the Mauritius in 16 days and Bombay in 15 days from thence, thus doing in beautiful style the latter half of the passage. Her usual steaming was 7½ miles the hour, and in calm weather from nine to ten.

BURMAH.

THE SHAN STATES.—Letters have been received from Dr. Richardson up to the 13th of May. It appears he quitted Bangkok on the 19th March for the Northern Shan states, furnished with orders for the purchase of a few cattle, but he seems to doubt whether he will succeed in fully re-opening the trade. He had met with continued kindness and civilities at the capital, but was subject to considerable vexation and detention in his progress up the country as far as he had then reached which was within a few day's journey of our nearest Shan neighbour Yahaing.

RANGOON.—Letters of the 1st instant from Ameerapoor, state, that our situation there is far from agreeable, being placed on an island. Not a soul from the town will venture to pay us a visit. The King is too cautious to commit himself until he is satisfied we cannot retaliate. He pretends to believe all kinds of absurd stories. Calcutta has been summoned to surrender to fifty thousand Persians!

Judging from the Court of Ava having ordered several stockades to be constructed on opposite points of the river below Rangoon, and ordered the mouth of the river to be blocked up with stones. It may be inferred that Tharrawaddie suspects, that our military movements at Arracan and Avasam are mere feints.

As the shadow of forthcoming events have had the effect of inducing Tharrawaddie to abandon his favourite guerilla system of destroying, and to commence concentrating his forces, it requires no ghost to foretell, that these unpopular and expensive freaks in building stockades and stopping up rivers, will, in concert with any forward military movement on our part, tend to induce him no listen to any overtures we may make about replacing the old King on the throne.

ARRACAN.—Letters received via Arracan mention, that intelligence had been received across the mountains, that the Maingloo and other Myothogyean on the frontier, were cutting timber to a great extent, for the purpose of erecting stockades along the frontier bordering on the Yamadangas. It is expected that their next step will be to stockade themselves on the Yamadangan mountains when, should hostilities break out, it will become a difficult matter to dislodge them without a great sacrifice of life. The march of Tharrawaddie's sons towards Rangoon, continues a subject of apprehension and speculation.

AMARAPPOORA.—Advices have been received from the Presidency at Amarapoor up to the 25th of May, but they contain nothing of importance, beyond the confirmation of the report of the King's sons being about to quit the capital for Rangoon, Bassein, and Young-ngoo, each with an army under his command, but of what number to consist does not seem to be well known. Great military preparations are said to be making at the capital, where the sound of Artillery and musket practice is to be heard from morning till night. The artillery men are said to have made great progress towards hitting a mark, their skill being encouraged by rewards, and their want of it punished with the rattan.

Reports of warlike preparations on the part of the Burmese, still, continued to be received at Moulmain, and, it is said, that the common topic of conversation among the people at Beling, is the approach of a war with the English.

SINGAPORE.

The Singapore Press states, that the accounts received by the Nymph, from China, do not corroborate the intelligence last previously received, of the intention of Capt Elliott to prevent the access of British shipping to Whampoa, but that the Superintendent has promised to address such a letter of the Canton authorities before leaving the country, as will make the factories too hot to hold any British subject, or, indeed any other foreigner. The Siamese are following the example of the Chinese, and are seizing and confiscating opium, and fulminating edicts to purify the land of the baneful drug. They also threatened to invade the state of Calantan. The French ship Denise, Captain Thibout, was treacherously attacked by a body of Malays, at the port of Soosoo, on the West Coast of Sumatra, by whom the Captain was slain and the vessel plundered.

Subsequent accounts from China, mention the total stoppage of the trade and the departure of all the foreigners from Canton.

SHIPWRECKS.—Intelligence has been received at Singapore of the loss of no less than three British-free traders, the Orontes, Siam, and Alquis.

The Siam, under command of Capt. Boodle, which sailed from Liverpool on the 18th February, bound for Singapore and Manila, at about 3 A. M. on the 8th ult., struck on the rocks about 12 miles to the Eastward of Java Head, during a heavy squall. She filled with water in about five minutes, and the surf ran so high that the Captain, with his wife and two children, and the officers and crew, altogether 18 in number, had barely time to save themselves in the ship's boats, leaving every thing behind. They were picked up in a few hours by the French ship Gabriel, arrived on the following day at Batavia, where the officers and crew were relieved from the state of destitution in which they found themselves left, by the charitable contributions of the British and American merchants. Captain Boodle and his family soon after taking passage for London in the Platina. Nothing whatever was saved from the Siam, not even the letter bag, and she began to break up as day-light appeared. The assistance of Government was applied for, which they evinced every inclination to afford, had not the surf rendered it useless—and the Admiral on the Batavia station, offered the first man-of-war brig that arrived to go there. The Alquis was wrecked in Torres Straits, on her passage up from Australia to Batavia, also without any loss of life.

GOA.

Intelligence has been received of the dispatch, by the Portuguese Government, of a new Governor for Goa, accompanied with a whole suite of Secretaries and other materials for the formation of a completely new Government. He is accompanied, moreover, by a regiment of European troops, 900 strong, to reinforce the Military establishment, and strengthen the hands of the civil authority, which have of late years been somewhat of the weakest. The cause of the decided measure is said to be a remonstrance addressed by the British to the Portuguese Government, on the subject of a marauding expedition from the Goa territory, into that of our subsidiary the Rajah of Sawunt Warree, in which considerable damage was sustained by the subjects of the latter. The remonstrance, it is said, stated, that unless such lawless incursions into the neighbouring country, could be prevented by the Government of Goa, the British would be under the necessity of taking Military possession of the city and its dependancies.

CEYLON.

THE VEDHAS.—Recently some seventy of that interesting people, the Vedhas, headed by a Chief, were induced by the desire of His Excellency the Governor, to quit, for a time, the depths of their native forests and visit the pavilion at Kandy. They displayed great skill in what was once the glory of old England—woodland archery—shooting with much precision at a mark placed at a distance of fifty yards, besides performing several feats of agility, after which the Hon'ble Mrs. Stewart Mackenzie caused a quantity of cloth to be distributed amongst them, when they departed, apparently highly pleased with their reception.

CANOE SWAMPED.—On the 22d of June, as a number of canoes were out fishing opposite to Colombo, but at a considerable way to sea, the weather, which had been for some days boisterous, became much worse, with a tremendous squall, when fifteen of them were swamped. In the evening, as the weather moderated, some canoes ventured out, and succeeded in rescuing the crews, who were clinging to seven of these; but it was only on the morning of the 23d, that the remainder was saved,—with the exception of one man, who was drowned in endeavouring to leap from his own swamped canoe into another, as it was passing. The poor creatures when brought on shore, were so benumbed from cold that they could not walk.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.—Sir Robert Arbuthnot met with an accident on the 21st of June, from which he fortunately escaped without the slightest injury, although it might have proved fatal. The Major General, accompanied by his Aid-de-camp, Captain Thurlow, was travelling in a palanquin-carriage from Kandy to Newera Ellia on the day in question. About 3 miles beyond Gampola, they came to a place where the road was rendered very narrow in consequence of part of it having been washed away by the previous heavy rain. Captain Thurlow here got out to lighten the carriage, but Sir Robert Arbuthnot—having been lately an invalid—remained in it. The horse was then led on cautiously, but the outer edge of the road giving way under the wheel, the carriage—with Sir Robert Arbuthnot in it—and the horse, rolled down the precipice, dashed against a tree and some rocks, and finally rested in the stream below. Captain Thurlow and the horsekeeper immediately rushed down and succeeded in extricating the General from the carriage, but not until he was nearly insensible from being under water. He, however, soon perfectly recovered, feeling only slightly bruised from a trunk and portmanteau that were in the carriage, rolling on him. The scene of the horse and carriage, (with the recollection of who was inside) which made two complete turns before they reached the bottom, is described as having been most faithful; strange to say, the carriage was not very seriously injured and the horse not at all.

DESERTION AND MURDER.—Recently, eight Malays of the Ceylon Rifle Regiment deserted, and it having been supposed that they had gone towards Negombo, Mr. Oswin, District Judge at that station, was informed of the circumstance, who, hearing that persons answering the description of the deserters were in his district, issued a warrant for their apprehension. The Police vedhan, who was intrusted with the execution of the warrant, with to assistant no, soon found the parties of whom he was in search; but on presenting the warrant the Malays wrested a gun from one of the vedhans and with it shot another dead. They also drew their creeses and wounded a second vedhan seriously, whilst the third fortunately escaped unhurt. They then stabbed the body of the dead man in several places, and even passed a creese through the neck.

On intelligence reaching Colombo, an armed party of the Ceylon Rifle Corps was despatched to the scene of murder; but before they arrived there, seven out of the eight Malays surrendered themselves to Mr. Oswin at Negombo;—the eighth, who is still at large, being it is said, the one who shot the police vedhan.

The murder was perpetrated in the neighbourhood of Kadarani Garden, where the Malays are said to have gone with the intention of robbing a considerable sum of money sent there for the payment of the Cinnamon peers. The Malays, it is said, in order to avoid suspicion, deserted the night before the treasure left Colombo; and believed that it would take the entire of the next night to travelling Kadarani, instead of reaching the Garden, at it really did late the same evening on which it was sent from Colombo, they intended perpetrating the robbery the night after.

CHINA.

Advices from Bombay mention the receipt at that presidency, of a proclamation, dated the 11th May, at Canton, by Captain Elliot, and signed also by the Dutch, French and American Consuls, recommending all Europeans to leave the Factory. It appears that Lin, in reply to a request for passports for them, had stated that all might go who chose to do so, but that such should not be permitted to return at any future time; and intimating at the same time, that if any of those who might determine on remaining, should hereafter be detected in introducing opium into the country, directly or indirectly, they would be instantly subjected to the last penalty of the law.

The Cowasjee Family, subsequently arrived from Macao the 11th of June, brings us news from Canton to the 4th of that month, of a highly interesting and important character. The whole of the opium had been delivered up to the Commissioner; and orders had been received from Peking for its immediate destruction. The Emperor had expressed perfect satisfaction with Lin's management, and had promoted him to the Government of Keanguen and Kingsee provinces. Game to the back-bone, the opium dealers anticipated considerable relaxation of the prohibitory measures, and in commercial phrase, "the drug had riz."—indeed "favorable sales" were said to be in progress, and the "Colonel Young" and other clippers were ready, armed and manned, to make a smuggling descent on the Coast, so soon as the destruction of the surrendered opium should be officially notified.

Captain Elliott took his departure from Canton on the 24th of May, accompanied by the following parties, against whom an edict of perpetual banishment from China had been promulgated, viz: Dadabhooy Framjee, Henry, Daniell, Stamford, Bomanjee, Inglis, Green, Kape, and Ilbery. On the 22d of May, a public notice was issued to her Majesty's subject in Canton, by Capt. Elliott, enjoining them to leave the Factory and suspend all commercial operations, and those arriving hereafter, to aid and assist in the prosecution of any trade whatever; and warning all such as may choose to neglect this injunction, that they will do so at their own risk and peril.

We have not at present time or space to comment on this most singular document; but prima facie it strikes us as certainly the most illogical, incomprehensible specimen of a state-paper, it was ever our fortune to peruse.

It does not appear to have been very effective either; for a long list of names is given of persons who had remained in Canton after the Superintendent's departure, and who were prepared, it is stated, to carry on all legal traffic as before.

Some new regulations for the entrance and anchorage of vessels at Whampoa of a strict character, had been promulgated; but otherwise the trade [barring opium] was likely to be carried on as before.

A report was current in town, that the stoppage of supplies to Macao had been threatened.

The Emperor, in his bounty, and to shew his sense of the dutiful obedience of the foreigners in delivering up the contraband article, had ordered five catties of Cangou to be given for every chest of opium; upon the principles perhaps, that exchange is no robbery.

Two French men-of-war were seen in the China Sea, by the Cowasjee, bound to Macao. An American frigate was in Macao roads, and H. M. S. Larne had sailed for Singapore in hopes of meeting the Admiral. The Ariel had sailed for the Red Sea.

We have been given to understand, that there is news from China, in private letters, later by several days than that extracted from the Canton and Singapore papers. By these we learn, that every British subject had left Canton, the movements of the few who had remained to wind up their affairs after Captain Elliot's departure having been quickened by one of the British ships firing into a Chinese war junk. It is stated, that the Captains of the several merchant ships, were to have had a meeting on the day after the Cowasjee's departure, to arrange future operations. It was understood to be their intention, to demand supplies from the Governor of Canton, and if refused, to bombard, burn and sink the whole Chinese fleet, which was numerous, war junks having been collected from all parts. The Portuguese Government, aided by the British merchants, were actively engaged in putting Macao into a state of defence, sufficient to resist any force the Chinese could bring against it, and every thing indicated war. Meanwhile opium sales were going on with great spirit on the coast. The Syed Khan's whole cargo had been sold at dollars 600 Patina, any 550 Benares, the cash being paid on board. Captain Tiver, having safely deposited the proceeds of sale at Macao, had sailed for a fresh supply from Manila.

PERSIA.

The following are extracts of letters from Karrack, dated 22d and 25th June:—

News, we have little or none; the following are the prevailing "on dsa." A new Governor is sent to Bushire, not to conciliate the wounded feelings of the British for the contumely observed towards the Admiral, Residents, &c., &c., but because he pays a larger sum for the Government than the gent we had the dust with.

The Shah of Persia, as a reward to Meerza Ameer, the Governor, Shick Hussein, the Kezee, and Bhukur Khan, the Turquoise Chief, sent the first a handsome meerza, inkstand and dress, with a royal letter; to the second a handsome Judge's cloak, and to "Bhukur Khan" the order of the Lion and Sun, enriched with twenty-four diamonds, and created him a Colonel of the 6th Class. Report says that some difference exists between the Shah and the Russian Ambassador. This is not unlikely from the tenor of our English news of April. "Koursched Pacha" has got the Sheik of Bahrein to enter into a treaty, by which the Sheik acknowledges Mahomed Ali as "Lord Paramount," and pays him a tribute of 5,000 dollars per annum. Koursched's emissaries are to work along the Arabian Coast, and in the Imam's territories: thus, while we are supinely looking on, Koursched keeps his army quiet and is obtaining by diplomacy, that influence which the British once possessed; and if some decided measures are not soon taken, the slight hold we yet possess on the regard of these people, will be lost for ever.

The Steamer returned from Bussorah; she got aground on the N. W. point of the island, about 2 A. M. fired three guns, but was got off before assistance came to her, Colonel Sheriff, who paid a visit to Bussorah in the Steamer, has returned with a Mr. Farren, who is supposed to be on some secret mission. With regard to affairs here, Russian, Persian, and Egyptian Agents are every where, misleading our agents with false reports. For instance: — writes, that Koursched Pacha had withdrawn from Nejd; we know that he is not eight days march from Grane. — writes that Mahomed Shah is so crippled, both with gout and want of money, that he cannot leave his capital to go to Koom, a distance of 60 miles. Is this likely? The other day we had Mahomed Effendi, the Agent of Mahomed Ali, or rather Koorschid Pacha, from Katiff, with two letters of quite different tenors—one agreeing to wait for further instructions for their respective Governments before any thing further was done; the other stating that Koorschid Pacha must occupy Bahrein at once. He also brings an agreement between the Bahrein Sheikha and the Pacha, by which the former is to pay the latter an annual tribute of 3,000 dollars. This, however, bears no seal, and is generally believed to be a forgery.

The Clive, however, has just left for Katiff, it is understood, with a letter, from the Resident, to the Sheik of Bahrein, enquiring whether such is the case or not. Mahomed Effendi left this for Bunder Dilluw, place on the Persian Coast, where, some time ago, a Khan arrived with a dress of honour, from the Shah of Persia, for Sheik Nassir, who is said to have proceeded to the King. He brought some presents for Captain Hemmell which were refused, and some Arab spears for Captain Hawking. He had an interview with the Resident, and wished to visit Colonel Shirreff for whom he had a letter; but the Colonel would not receive either, on the ground that he wished first to ascertain whether Koorschid Pacha had paid proper attention to the remonstrance sent him by the Resident, before he countenanced any agent of his.

Agents continue to be actively employed in endeavouring to excite a belief in the minds of the people, on the banks of the Euphrates and Tigris, that the Sultan is not supported by the English, in fact, that they have not the power to protect him. At Mohamerah, a place below Bussorah, Mr. Mackenzie, who was sent by the Political Resident on some business, was most coolly treated, and told by the Sheik that he wanted nothing to do with him or the English. The Governor of Bushire and Banker Khan have both received dresses of honor, and the latter the order of the Lion and Sun, for beating off the Admiral and 2,000 English troops. Such is the current report in the north; that the dress of honor, and the order, have been received, we know to be true. The soldiers at Bussorah, who, by the way, were the late Governor's private guard, and maintained at his cost kept for the safety of the place, have been nearly all discharged. About 50 of them came here about ten days ago for service, and 150 were seen at Grane on their way to join Koorschid Pacha.

The general belief in the Gulf, for the last two years, is that the power of the Sultan is tottering—so long has the present system been in operation. It is high time we had some more active and efficient Agents in these parts; only imagine at Bussorah an Armenian, who, beyond putting the pistons into his pocket, has not one idea to rub against another. He gave out the other day, that the Admiral had been beat off from Bushire, and when an officer of ours went up to Bussorah, actually asked him if it was not true! These are not the kind of Agents that England wants in these stirring times.

On the return of the Clive it was found that the Sheik of Bahrein had made no treaty with Koorschid Pacha. Since the foregoing part of this letter was written things seem to have taken a new turn in Persia. The Shah, it seems, had suddenly changed his mind, and dispatched five couriers to overtake, if possible, and recall the messenger sent with the dresses of honor and order to the Governor and Banker Khan. Since, the Governor has been recalled and another put in his place, to the regret of the merchants, who wished to retain the old one.

BUSHIRE.—Letters received from Bushire, via Bombay, announce the safe arrival of the John Adam, Captain Eales, at the former place. The market in the Gulf was brisk, and indigo in high demand, which the merchants expected to sell at a profit of thirty or forty per cent. The John Adam had commenced unloading her cargo, and every thing was, in a commercial point of view, comparatively tranquil and undisturbed. The Fiza Robany, Captain Keys, which sailed from Calcutta at the latter end of March last, had reached the vicinity of a place called Jezir i-Dera, (Anglice Long Island) situated at a distance of about ten days from Bushire. The merchants in the Gulf were in hourly expectation of her arrival, and their hearts leaped with joy at the favourable prospect of reaping a handsome profit from the different shipments consigned to them from Calcutta. They all blessed their ebol, and considered their stars to be on the ascendant! It is also stated on the authority of a letter received at Bushire from Ispahan, that Mahomed Shah contemplated visiting the latter city immediately after the Nowrooz, accompanied by his Premier and the principal Noble of his Court. This intelligence disproves the report of forty thousand Persian troops having marched towards Herat, headed by the Persian monarch. The internal administration of the city of Ispahan was in an unsettled state, and the expected visit of his Majesty was calculated to effect the restoration of good order and perfect peace.

A new Armenian Prelate, famed for his unobtrusive manners and profound erudition, had, it appears, just arrived at Julpha, from Elcheritchin, and had directed his attention to the obtaining of further remission of the capitation or poll tax of the Armenians of that place, by a humble memorial to the Persian Court.

The Russian Envoy, Colonel Duhamel, had retired from Teheran into Georgia, in consequence, it was understood, of some serious misunderstanding between the Shah and him; but of what nature is not said. Our relations with Persia remain pretty much in statu quo.

QUESTORAH, 4TH JUNE.—A messenger had just arrived from Damascus, with intelligence, that the Turkish and Egyptian Armies were in front of each other, that a conflict was deemed inevitable, and that the general opinion was the Turkish Force would be defeated. Ali Pacha, of Bagdad, was still at Mossoul, recommending for the Sultan, which was so unpopular a measure that it had produced an insurrection and led to a considerable loss of life on both sides, the Pacha having finished the affair by taking off the heads of sixteen of the principal men of Mossoul, who were in league against him, whereby submission and perfect tranquillity had been restored. The inundation of the Euphrates and Tigris this year, had exceeded those of any former years, in the recollection of the oldest people, the former, it is said, having overswollen its banks to a most alarming extent, and inundated and carried away entire villages, including Hama, the Hadarah, Rowah and Monawandah, to the great sacrifice of life and property. Mr. Farren, formerly Consul General at Damascus, had arrived at Bussorah from Bagdad, having been engaged in making extensive purchases of wool among the Arabs along the line of the Euphrates, which it was understood he intended to send to the market of Bombay.

Koorschid Pacha had returned into the Nejd for a time, and it was understood he still entertains his former views upon Bussorah, but every body regarded them as entirely chimerical. He had made an attempt to revive an old claim for tribute of 2,000 dollars annually, dating back to the time of the first Wahabee war, upon the Sheik of Bahrein, and had met a decided repulse. The Sheik, entrenched in his little Island, and set Alahommed Ali and all his power at defiance.

ARMY OF THE INDUS.

The following are extracts of letters from the army of the Indus, received during the month:—

CAMP GIRISK ON THE HELMUND, 19th MAY.—The men of the 13th Light Infantry crossed the Helmund on their own rafts on the 18th May, and the 16th were on the point of crossing, when an order arrived from the Commander-in-Chief to stop proceedings, as it was expected that the Government would get quiet possession of Girisk, and another fort, of which no name is given, but which is stated to be only two miles from the encampment. Kohan dil Khan destroyed the two ferry boats that were on the river, and carried away the gates and wood work from the houses in the fort, that the troops might not be able to make rafts and follow him.

Rumour gives out, that in consequence of the country being so favourably inclined towards Shah Soojah, he will not be able to make any stand and must come in. The River Helmund is said to be a noble stream, rolling along at the rate of ten knots an hour, 1,000 yards in breadth and 8 feet deep.

The men of the 16th Regiment volunteered to swim the river, so that there might be less delay in sending over their arms and accoutrements! They carried 3 days food in their knapsacks, the officers' servants carrying what they could for their masters, and leaving baggage, cattle, and tents behind, as they calculated returning in two or three days.

The encampment ground abounded in Jowassar, which, as tatties were so much in request, proved a great luxury to them, for the heat is stated as being intense, and rivalling that experienced in the imperial City during the hottest months of the year. Fruits of all kinds were pouring in from the other side of the river, and were selling for little or nothing in the Regimental Bazar. Immense flocks of Doombah sheep, which from feeding on lucerne and clover, were as fat as our gram-fed mutton, were seen grazing in all directions, and could be procured in abundance.

The report was prevalent that every thing was likely to be settled at Cabul before the Army could reach it. The officers had been much disappointed in not getting any good horses, which they had firmly calculated upon; but a few good ponies and tatoes had been brought in for sale.

31st of MAY.—The force under Brigadier Sale quitted the neighbourhood of Girisk for Kandahar on the 25th, leaving as a garrison for that fort, the King's 5th Hindustanee Infantry and Christie's Horse. From that date till the 31st (when I commenced this epistle, which circumstances have prevented my continuing till this day, the 4th of June) we remained pitched in the tope near the foot of Girisk, doing our best to obtain food for our men, but with very little success.

On the morning of the 31st a letter arrived from Lieutenant Edward Couolly, who had proceeded to Girisk (25 miles from Girisk) with a small escort, calling on Captain Woodburn to support him as the country people were attacking him. Rapid movement to the rescue was the order of the day, but when all our preparations for the march were nearly complete, a second missive informed us that the people were again quiet, having only risen to avenge an insult offered by a young sepooy to an old and influential Barukzya leader, whose wrath was disarmed by the present of a turban and a few honeyed words from the young Machiavel! Nevertheless it was deemed advisable to show a small force in the neighbourhood, so Captain Woodburn started at night with an escort of Cavalry for Girisk. On reaching Bolan, a few miles distant from the latter place, it appeared that the restored tranquility of the country rendered his presence unnecessary; Captain Woodburn therefore embraced the opportunity of visiting the foot of Nadali, on the evening of the 21 June, and early this morning returned to Girisk.

The Big Wigs keep us in the most blessed ignorance of points of, to us, vital interest. Nevertheless we have heard from other sources, (my informant was an Affghan,) that the Commander-in-Chief, with Europeans of the Army of the Indus, was to march this day towards Cabool, and the Shah to follow his Excellency in a few days. Hearing this, I naturally enquired of my communicative friend if he could acquaint me with the destination of the two regiments now at Girisk; to which he replied, that he fancied we had never been considered one way or the other, and must therefore remain where we are! Satisfactory as this intelligence is (the Simoon is blowing like a steam bellows, thermometer at an unprecedented height, half our regiment and half our camp equipage and traps at Kandahar!) I may conclude it to be true from the following circumstances, namely, that there is scarcely time for us to reach Cabool early enough to accompany the King the arrival of 20 days' half supplies for our detachment, with an intimation that when they were eaten we must feed ourselves; and a demand for the whole of our grain bags and commissariat camels.

SUKKER 3d JUNE.—The cosida had arrived at Sukkerpoor, from Candahar, six of whom had been severely wounded, and three of them plundered of their clothes by the Beloches. Seven sowars and 20 camels had deserted from the convoy under charge of Captain Newport.

The Lohane Chiefs (Sewan Khan's) Kafilah of 30 camels, that left Sukkar in the end of April, for the advance, suffered dreadfully from the heat between Bagh and Dadur. They encountered a Simoon which killed 65 of the chief's people, and also Sir A. Buren's head man, an Arab Jemadar. An officer of the name of Brady, of H. M. 17th, en route to join, is stated to have been carried off by this scourge.

A storm had been experienced at Sukker, which had blown, clean away, every tent pitched on a height.

It is stated, at Sukker, that the Bombay force, now at Candahar, was to return to Ghiznee, remain 3 months, then go on to the Indus, and drop down the river to Bombay, where they hoped to spend their Christmas.

Mr. Ross Bell and his Assistant, Lieut. Brown, of the Engineers, passed through Sukker on the 31st May. He is stated to be vested with great powers, and is said to be a decided character, and one that will not mince the business on which he has been sent. He has to get four hacs of rupees out of the Khyrpoor man. The Jagheerdar at Roree had promised to assist the British with 500 horse, but, he now says, the Ameers have told him, if he does, they may deprive him of his Jaghire. These Jagheerdars, however, will soon be made to understand that the British will and can guarantee to them their Jaghires.

Though the Bazar at Candahar was well supplied with many things, all were very dear. Two loaves of white bread cost a rupee; tea 8 rupees per lb.; liquors were scarce, and wine, at 60 rupees per dozen, was considered cheap, and beer at 50. The Bengal division, it was said, would, after the harvest was reaped, proceed to Cabool, and, thence, in September, to Attock, then home, via Loodiana. The loss of Cavalry and Artillery horses, during the march to Candahar, is estimated at 500, which, at 400 rupees each, would make this one item, in the accounts of the campaign, two lacks of rupees!

Timor Shah was said to have advanced through the Khyber Pass, when numbers of the followers of Dost Mahomed had deserted to his standard.

It would appear, that either our Government must clear the Bolan Pass of these marauding Belooches, or make Shah Soojah, or the Khan of Khelat do it, before the Bombay merchants can profit by the trade to Candahar.

CAMP CANDAHAR, 4TH JUNE.—We have nothing new going on in camp; our march to Cabul has been postponed "sine die." It is fixed at last that the 48th Regiment are to remain behind to garrison Candahar, till a part of the 2d Brigade comes up, when they will follow us to Cabul. The officers going to Herat, have nearly completed their arrangements, and they expect to quit this for Kamran's city by about the 15th instant, unless the late news regarding Persia puts a stop to their going for the present. The Russian spy, who was here a few days ago, has decamped. Only one or two officers knew of his being here, but when it reached the Political's ears, the man was no where. A shocking bad look out.

Nothing has been done with the men who were taken up under suspicion of having murdered poor Inverarity, (of the Lancers,) by the bye, one of them bolted from the Quarter Guard of the Lancers, ran clean away, and has never been heard of since) notwithstanding they were found immediately after, and close to the spot where the poor fellow was cut up, with bloody swords. A sowar of the 4th Local Horse was murdered to day, subsequent to Inverarity and close to camp, and the rascals had the decency to bury him. The three Companies of the 37th Regiment, which were left behind at Daudur, and a detachment of Europeans under Lieutenant Bennett, of the European Regiment, march in to-morrow. The Commissariat are buying up all the camels they can, but I am sorry to say, they are run away with faster than they are brought in for sale. The Commander in Chief has been trying how far it is practicable to breach a mud wall with 5½ inch shell fired from a 24-pounder howitzer. The experiment has not answered, as most of us could have informed him; the shell penetrated 9 inches, but did little or no injury to the wall. The experiment was tried, that in the event of its answering, we might leave our heavy siege train behind, but I much fear, we shall have to take it on with us.

Our European Regiment had a large party of guests last evening, and many of them the most distinguished officers in camp. I saw nothing but soldier's rum on the table, save one bottle of sherry opposite to old Brigadier Blaney, which he offered to Major General T. and Colonel M., the Military Secretary.

A regiment of the Shah's, and Captain Timmings's troop of Horse Artillery, are to remain here with the 48th.

The day before yesterday, Captain B., of the Lancers, and two of the men, were attacked with cholera. They are all three doing well, I am happy to say. God forbid that that disease should break out here just now, we should soon have a small army indeed. The weather is daily becoming warmer and warmer. Grain is selling at much the same, excepting barley, which is a little cheaper.

CAMP QUETTA 14TH JUNE, 1839.—The troops at Quetta stand just as they did a month ago, but a change will take place in a very few days, consequent upon orders just received from Kandahar. We are expecting the treasure escort from Shikarpore, which place it left on the 24th ultimo. On its arrival here, the Bombay corps, which forms part of the escort, is to make over charge to a Bengal Infantry Regiment, the 43d, which is to proceed, and form part of the garrison of Kandahar; General Nott is to continue in command of the troops in Shawl till further orders; one of the two troops of Horse Artillery (Shah's) is to accompany the 43d to relieve Capt. Timmings's troops ordered to remain for the present at Kandahar, which place is to be garrisoned by a Regiment of Bengal N. I., a ditto of the Shah's infantry, a ditto of the Shah's cavalry, a troop of Horse Artillery and four 18 pounders. The G. O. C. of the 1st instant, directs the whole of the army, with the exception of the 48th, and Timmings's troops, to be in readiness to march on such a day, under such orders as will be hereafter specified.

The army was to have marched on the 7th instant, but it is positively stated that Lord Auckland directed Sir John to remain at Kandahar till such time as a sufficient quantity of grain (6 week's supply) be collected. This was a fortunate order for the army, as the distress, which a hasty march, with an ill-provided commissariat produces, has already been too severely felt by this force.

The reports from ahead are various as they are numerous. One is that the Shah of Persia is advancing with 40,000 men on Herat. Another that his time is occupied in quelling rebellion in his own country: this last I suspect is most probable. It is also stated that Dost Mahomed's son is endeavouring to strengthen Guznee, in order to oppose us there; but those who know or ought to know, say, that he may as well save himself the trouble, as the place is not capable of being fortified. The 1st of July is mentioned as the probable day for the army to advance from Candahar. I suppose you have heard, that Captain Saunders, Engineer, Captain J. Abbott and Lieutenant Shakespear, of the Artillery, have started, or are to start immediately, for Herat, no guns accompanying them; they are merely going to fortify the place. I believe Folia is also going as political agent, or rather as envoy. Several officers have been lately appointed to the Shah's force, Lieutenant Hawkins, Artly. Broadfoot, European Regiment, Travers, 23rd Bombay Infantry, Moorhouse, 35th, and one or two more, whose names I don't recollect. It is still believed that the army will be back in the cold season; but if the report of the advance of the Persians, and the death of Runjeet be true, I fear we shall not be in Hindostan quite so soon. The Khan of Khelat is collecting troops, some say to support the Shah, but others positively state that an attack upon the Quetta camp is what he meditates.

20th JUNE.—Letters have been received which confirm the intelligence respecting the departure of the Army from Candahar in progress to Cabul on the 15th June. The 43d N. I. were likely to move about the 1st instant for Candahar, to escort treasure and supplies that were then on their way from Shikarpore, under charge of the 4th N. I. and one of the Bombay Regiments. The death of Ensign Beaufort, of the 43d, is reported to have taken place shortly after the Regiment left Bugh. The marching through the country, particularly the Bolan Pass, at that season, is described as most dangerous to the health of even the natives, who are habituated to the climate. During the months of May and June, a Simoom rushes through the Pass, killing every thing exposed to its influence. Of a party of natives that were bringing grain to Quetta, twenty, it was reported had fallen victims to it. The March Mail had arrived at Quetta with the Bombay dak on the 18th June. The Beloochees were taking every opportunity of killing stragglers from the Camp, though personally in camp, they seemed well disposed towards the soldiers. Officers were consequently careful to keep themselves and their soldiers within the lines.

Another letter from Quetta avers, that Sir John Keane had received a severe wig from the Governor-General for his injudicious and improvident measures, to which many of the disasters of the army are attributable. The Bengallees say, the wig is well deserved, and that all along they have been crippled without benefitting the Duck army thereby. The 48th remains at Candahar until relieved by a regiment of the 2nd Brigade. Besides Ensign Beaufort, Assistant Surgeon O'Halloran and the Quarter Master Sergeant of the 42nd N. I. had died between Shikarpore and Dadur, while escorting treasure. The heat is described as being "quite awful."

QUETTAH 26th JULY.—The army had not moved from Candahar on the 21st, but it was expected that the Head-Quarters and first column would march on the 25th. A force under command of Genl. Wiltshire, had been sent out to protect the supplies, which it was reported had been cut off by a party of Ghilzies. Shah Shoojah's Artillery and the 43d B. N. I., had received orders to hold themselves in readiness to march at a moment's notice. The detachment that relieves them was expected there the first week in July.

At Quetta, the heat was just bearable—28° to 100° in the tent during the day; but rain had fallen on the 25th, which had considerably cooled the atmosphere. Major Newport had been directed to halt at Dudar until further orders.

The accounts received of the sickness and mortality in the rear, were most lamentable. The detachments had been considerably weakened by the number of deaths. An officer and ten men of H. M. 17th Regt. who had been left sick at Bukhur, died on the march between Bukhur and Shikarpore; and, in addition to those of Ensign Chalmers and Dr. O'Halloran, accounts had been received of the deaths of two Conductors, two Subadars, three Havildars, two Naicks, two Duffadars, twenty-six Sepoys and several Sowars belonging to the Local Horse, on the march from Bagh. One of the daks, it was discovered, had been burnt at Bagh; a single letter having been picked up there—half consumed.

Some Parsees were shortly expected at Quettah with stores. Sir John Keane, it was said, is not very partial to the Bengal Officers, nor they to him. His complaint, being their want of subordination.

By the last accounts Colonel Wade was "hotly engaged" with the enemy in the Kyber Pass,—the Sheiks having left the Colonel to return to the Punjab. The same letters intimate that Captain Osborne, Military Secretary to Lord Auckland, was about to proceed on a mission to Kurruck Sing.

SHIKARPORE 22ND JUNE.—The following is an extract of a letter from Shikarpore:

"We here that the Political Agent is to proceed in a day or two to Khyrpoor, and see what the Ameer of that place is about,—report says he is quietly raising troops.

The force here consists of about 400 sepoy, and one corps of Shah Shoojah's, with a few hundred Beloochees and Pathans; new levies to keep the whole country in check. Out of that the Shah's corps, although 800 strong, is not equal to 300 of our men, for it is as yet unofficered, but half drilled, and composed of the scum of the place. The greater part of the Beloochee horse in our day are, in my opinion, with very few exceptions, worse than enemies; in fact, the chiefs of about 300 of them were discovered intriguing, and were turned out of our service only the other day.

Our principal strength lies in their want of combination. Some of the tribes in our way are at mortal enmity with others, and, consequently, if a sharp look out is kept, there is not much to fear from treachery. At the same time, if our force in advance meets with the slightest check, (and a check in their station would be tantamount to defeat) it will behave us to be well on our guard, for it may easily be supposed how all (those in our pay, as well as our opponents) would join, for the time, like a pack of wolves, to hunt down the prey, though they should cut each other's throats afterwards for the spoil.

The Pathans, as a race of men, are tall, handsome fellows, and much superior to the Beloochees, who are cut-throat looking scoundrels. You may imagine what a lawless set of fellows the latter are, when they, I mean some of the chiefs, actually attempted to strangle one of their own number, in the public durbar, because he gave information of a conspiracy being on foot.

A messenger had arrived from Cabool, and reported, that the whole of Dost Momed's army had dispersed.

TRANSMISSION OF MAILS TO EUROPE.

London East India and China Association,
Cowper's Court, Cornhill, 15th June, 1839.

W. LEMOND, Esq.,

Secy. to the Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta.

Sir,—It is with pleasure that I now acquaint you, for the information of your Chamber, that the convention between her Majesty's Government, and that of France, alluded to in my last, has been signed at Paris, and the ratification duly made here, so that a safe and speedy transmission of the overland mails will now be issued. The principal stipulations are :—

That the Government of the Queen of Great Britain shall confide to the Post office of France the conveyance, in mail bags or closed boxes, of the correspondence coming from the East Indies, destined for the United Kingdom, and vice versa, whenever the above-mentioned correspondence shall pass through France; but the British Government reserves to itself, at all times, the right of causing, whenever it shall think proper, the above mentioned correspondence, to be conveyed, either between Alexandria and Malta, or between Malta and Marseilles, or between Alexandria and Marseilles, by vessels freighted or employed for that purpose by its orders, or by packets of the Royal Navy Article 1.

The French Government engages to effect the conveyance of the mails in the following manner :—By steam packets of 160 horse power, belonging to the Government, which shall leave Alexandria on the 7th, 17th, and 27th, and Marseilles on the 1st, 11th, and 21st of each month; and between Calais and Marseilles by mail coaches. Art. 3.

The duration of the passage from Alexandria to Marseilles, including the time necessary for the transshipment and for the purification, if necessary, of the correspondence at Malta, shall not, except under uncontrollable circumstances, exceed 345 hours, or 14 days and 9 hours, and from Marseilles to Alexandria, including the time necessary for the transshipment of the correspondence at Malta, 300 hours, or 12 days, and 12 hours. Art. 4.

The distance between Marseilles and Calais shall be performed by the mail coaches of the French Post Office in 102 hours, or 4 days 6 hours. Art. 5.

The mails to pass through the French territory sealed with the seal of the Post Office of the East India Company, or with the seal of the British Post Office. With a view to exempt the correspondence coming from the East Indies from the operation of purification, to which it would otherwise be subjected by the Sanitary Regulations, the cases shall be made of plate, iron or tin, and shall be hermetically closed. Art. 6.

The cases shall be accompanied by a courier, who shall keep under his special care the despatches and mails of her Majesty's Government, and who shall have the right to be present at the purification of the correspondence, whenever it shall take place, and at all other operations to which the correspondence may be subjected. Art. 7.

The couriers of the British Post Office, who shall accompany on board the French Mediterranean packets, the mails, may receive or deliver either at Malta, or at any other station, at which the said packets shall touch, mail bags from or for Great Britain, &c., subject to the operation of Sanitary Regulations. Art. 14.

Such are the features of the new and highly important measure, and which cost this Committee eighteen months of anxiety and labour to effect, and they trust you will give this communication all the publicity you can for the information of the Indian community.

The possibility of mis-sending letters by way of Fal-mouth, although marked via Marseilles, which has frequently happened, and been complained of, is now at an end; and the inconveniences formerly experienced here of part of the correspondence coming by way of France, and the mail by way of Gibraltar, will no longer be felt. The mail and the Government despatches will arrive together, and there is every reason to believe without any increase in the postage.

A copy of the convention shall be sent to you by the first vessel that leaves here, which plan will be followed where papers are bulky, and with our despatches, except on very special occasions.

I remain, Sir, your very obedient humble servant,

(Signed) JOHN STRICKMAN, Secy.

Hurk., August 16.]

FIRST NIGHT OF THE SANS SOUCI.

When our dear deceased Drury, poor old creature! fell under the ruthless grasp of the Fire-King, and groined out her existence, enveloped in reeky clouds and devouring flame, leaving us, unfortunate Drama-loving Ditchers, to "Lament in rhyme—lament in prose,

With sad tearstrickling down like nose, the sad catastrophe of her destruction, there were many of those who passed for knowing ones in their generation, that, with a sage and woe-begone shake of the head, declared their conviction, that it was impossible the loss could ever be replaced before the lapse of a very long period. And, truly, at the time, it did appear very unlikely that any worthy successor of the annihiliated "Chowringhee," should arise to comfort us in our affliction. The Genius of the Drama seemed to have been scared away, by the burning of his temple, and his worshippers were beginning to despair.

But, lo! ere the ashes of the desecrated fane were well cold, a famous Enchantress, whose bewitching influences had erewhile been felt and acknowledged among us, came from beyond the wide sea, to bring joy and comfort to our desolate hearts. She came, and, in less than three brief months from the memorable and lamentable 31st of May, at the flourish of her magic wand, there sprang up a perfect little bijou of a Theatre, a worthy substitute for our lost favorite. Yes! at her command, her attendant genii, known among men as Ballin, Bartlett, and Smith, with a host of sooty goblins to do their bidding, set to work, and, in an incredibly short space of time, converted a long, gloomy lumber-room into a light and elegant theatre.

This beautiful little theatre, which its fair originator has denominated the "Sans Souci," was opened to the public on the night of Wednesday the 21st of August, 1899. We mark the date particularly, for it was beginning of a new era. At about half past seven on that evening, we found ourselves installed, upon a wooden-seated American ball-room chair, in a long, well lighted, and cheerful looking-room, with a tasteful proscenium and a plain double old-fashioned green curtain in front of us, the music of a well filled orchestra sounding in our ears, and a gay and goodly company all around, anxiously awaiting the cheering tinkle of the prompter's bell.

At about ten minutes to eight o'clock, the signal was made, the curtain ascended, and, amid loud and long continued cheers of welcome, Mrs. Leach presented herself to the delighted assembly. When silence was restored, she proceeded to deliver the opening address composed expressly for the occasion. It was in a light and cheerful style, and consisted, chiefly, of an invitation to all and sundry who had any unpleasant cares upon their minds, to come to the Sans Souci to get rid of them. In especial it held out promises of comfort to the quondam proprietors of the opium that had fallen a sacrifice to the patriotism of Mr. Commissioner Lin. It was well delivered, but of its merits as a composition we would rather not speak until it appears in print. Be its quality what it may, however, it was most enthusiastically applauded.

At the conclusion of the address, the drop scene was let down. It is a transparency representing the downfall of the Sans Souci's lamented predecessor, the late Chowlinghee Theatre. It is a melancholy subject, and is represented in a most melancholy manner, with the theatre blazing away most furiously, in the back ground. In front, upon a terrace, are two melancholy figures, one on either hand. The one is a female, crying bitterly, and at the same time "clewing up" a red curtain, which is flying out in the wind like a top-gallant sail in a squall. The other figure is that of a fierce-looking gentleman, in short petticoats, with a torch in one hand, and the plan of some place, to us unknown, in the other, and turning a pirouette à la Tagliani. This drop scene is the only thing with which we have to find fault, and even for it we can make very great allowances, when we consider the hurry in which it must have been executed. A drop scene, being placed so near to the audience, and presented to their scrutiny when the attention is not drawn away by the performance, should be finished more carefully than any other; and it is to be hoped that when time will permit, that of the Sans Souci may be retouched, or replaced by one more worthy of the theatre.

The first piece represented was, "You can't marry your Grandmother," a petit-comedy in two acts. The plot is very simple, Emma Melville, the ward, and Algernon, the grandson of Sir Rose Bloomsby, have been brought up together by that kind-hearted but somewhat vain old gentleman. According to custom, an attachment of which neither of them is fully conscious, had sprang up between them. Algernon leaves home, and in the gaieties of a London life, forgets the gentle Emma, who, however, still continues to cherish what she believes to be a most sisterly affection for him. At length the truant returns to the home of his boyhood, a finished man, with heaps of letters from "exquisite Countesses," &c. He talks of marrying a certain lady in the neighbourhood, while his grandfather wishes him to marry Emma, and Emma, herself sweetly confesses to the old gentleman, that if Algernon should ask her she would not refuse him. But Algernon does not seem inclined to ask her, so the old man invents a scheme for bringing him to her feet. Algernon is made to believe that the fair Emma has bestowed her hand upon his grandfather, and this announcement opens his eyes to the state of his own heart. He flies to the lady, confesses his love and while on his knees before her, receives what is gravely bestowed as his grandmother's blessing. At length, after some demur on the part of Sir Rose, who has begun to think that his ward is really in love with himself, Algernon is undeceived, and made a happy man, of course.

A rivalry between Mr. Ready, the dashing valet of Algernon, and Tom Short, Emma's obese and stunted page, for the good graces of Mrs. Trim, the lady's maid renders the piece particularly lively and entertaining.

Sir Rose Bloomsby was admirably represented by the Secretary, who has acquired a well deserved fame by his success in that particular line of character, his lively and eccentric old fellows being unsurpassed. We have only to find fault with one of his attitudes, which seems indeed to be his favourite one, but which appears to us unnatural and consequently ungraceful. It is that in which, resting his whole weight on one leg, the other advanced, and the knee bent slightly, he throws his shoulders as far back as possible. A little attention to guard against such mannerisms, and a little less palsy, will render him unapproachable in this particular department.

The debutant who enacted Algernon gave, we thought, but a very imperfect representation of the gay and careless rover, or even of the self accused and despairing lover. He was too cold and formal, and seemed too fond of heroics. We should recommend him to try tragedy.

But what shall we say of little Ballin's Tom Short? Only that it was capital, as was testified by the irrepressible bursts of laughter, which bore witness to the extreme ludicrousness of the character in the hands of that small-bodied but giant-souled man of all work. It was very, very funny.

The gentleman's gentleman, the smart, the saucy Ready, found a capital representative in the debutant who undertook that character. There was a life and spirit in his acting that were highly characteristic of the class to which Mr. Ready belongs. It was Sam Weller, who had got a young "gov'not" and become a swell.

Mrs. Leach's Emma, was all and more than all that we had anticipated; so sweet, so graceful a picture of youthful love, constancy and candour! Verily Mrs. Leach is a fascinating little actress, but that every body, we believe, knew long ago.

The lady's maid Trim, was well supported by Mrs. Francis, whose acting was, as it always is, spirited and correct, and whose representation of the coquettish Abigail, was distinguished by all her usual vivacity.

"But however," is a Farce in one Act, and shows how Mr. Caleb Chisler, being sore pressed by bailiffs, is forced to evacuate London, to rusticate, for the sake of his liberty, and to tease and mystify the bumpkins with his eternal "But however." How Mrs. Juniper, the hostess of "The Three Hollies," takes him for a gentleman who is expected to arrive from India to take possession of his estate in the neighbourhood. How Mr. Chisler countenances the delusion, and forms the design of becoming landlord of "The Three Hollies," vice Juniper deceased. How he afterwards finds out that, in his assumed character, he is affianced to a handsome young lady, and £50,000, for which of course he cuts the landlady, but not directly. And how finally the real Nabob, Mr. Cashmere, arrives nearly at the same time as one Mr. Prowl, a bailiff, the former of whom deprives Mr. Chissler of his assumed importance, his bride and her fortune, and the latter is on the point of depriving of his liberty.

Master Modus was Caleb Chissler, and who shall criticise Master Modus? Not we! Faith. In fact he was uncriticisable. A more vivid delineation of the bold, jovial, insinuating "ne'er do weel" could not be. The well known amateur, Heartwell, acted the honest country squire Stanwell, his stout, burly person and jolly countenance, harmonising with the character vastly well.

The representative of Prowl, was not perfect in his part, otherwise he enacted the character of the bailiff indifferently well. Gaby was well done by the debutant who took Ready in the first piece, and who shewed that he could shine as "Boots" as brightly as when valet. Mrs. Francis played well as Mrs. Juniper, Mrs. Tonson as Julia, was too stiff and tame,—she would act very well if she could only contrive to throw a little more warmth and feeling into her representations.

The performances concluded with the farce of "My Little Adopted," of which the following is an outline. A bosom friend of Laurette's has recommended her orphan nephew to the care of that young lady, who is expecting the little boy's arrival, and has provided for his entertainment a rocking horse, a kite, &c., &c. and has laid down a plan for his education in which she means to be very strict. The "Adopted" makes his appearance, a fine, stout young fellow. The young lady expected to find a little boy, the young gentleman expected to find an old lady in spectacles. Both were surprised, but not disappointed. Explanations follow, they compare notes, and on the entrance of the young lady's brother, who has from the first shrugged his shoulders at the plan of education laid down by her, he finds the pair whirling round the room in all the velocity of the waltz. Of course they fall in love, and the young lady no longer scoffs at her brother's passion for Miss Rose, a poor dependant, who resides in the family. Now the said Rose still remembers a lover of her childish days ere she became a lady, and this lover is by name John Dibbs, and so when Major Seymour pops the question, he finds amongst other obstacles to the completion of his wishes, her lingering affection for an ideal John Dibbs whom, in person, she has not seen for many years.

Well! John Dibbs makes his appearance, a thorough bred lout, with a hundred a year, a red coat, and a junk of bread and cheese in one of the pockets of it. Miss Rose is taken aback at the rudeness of her clownish admirer, and on his offering to take (per force) a kiss, fairly flees to the Major for protection. Miss Laurette Seymour then chooses to imagine that her "Little Adopted" has fallen in love with Rose, and consequently becomes very warm on behalf of her brother, who has a prior claim. Some explanations and coqueting ensue, then the Major pairs off with Rose, Frederick Summer with Laurette, and, lastly, John Dibbs with the maid Becky, and so the matter is finished to the satisfaction of all parties.

Major Seymour was performed by Master Modus and Frederick Summer "The Little Adopted," by the Algeron of the first piece, and both acquitted themselves as per last notice of each respectively. Of the former we should observe, that he introduced into the text of both pieces, original and apparently extempore variations chiefly on local affairs, which were rapturously applauded and laughed at by the audience. And truly these little sallies were most irresistible appeals to the risible faculties, though not always consistent with the supposed locale of the scene, or the position of the person represented.

The very ungentlemanly John Dibbs, was well represented "by a gentleman from the Theatre Royal, Sydney (his first appearance in Calcutta.)" He acted the rude clown very correctly, only some folks here might be apt to think him a little too boisterous. Certainly, we think, if he would refine the character a little, it would be more likely to win him applause from a Calcutta audience, to whom, although the imitation might be perfect, the effect was too startling to be agreeable.

Mrs. Leach, Mrs. Francis and Mrs. Tonson, took the characters of Laurette, Becky, and Rose, and of their acting, we have nothing further to say in addition to what we have said already. Laurette was charming Becky lively, and Rose stiff and formal.

We have now only to add, that Mrs. Leach sung song in the first piece; that every part of the house was full, save the upper boxes; that it was confoundedly hot in spite of the "Thermanidotes," and that we went away highly delighted with the whole affair.—Hark. August, 23.

CALCUTTA PUBLIC LIBRARY.

At a Monthly Meeting of the Members of the Calcutta Public Library, held on the 3d August, 1839

W. F. GRANT, Esq. IN THE CHAIR.

Read a letter dated 22d ultimo, from G. B. Trever, Esq. recommending the purchase of Frederick Schlegel's works, and Augustus Schlegel's lectures on dramatic literature, together with such of his writings as have been translated into the English language.

Resolved.—That the above books be purchased.

Read a letter dated 2d August from George W. Johnson, Esq., presenting a copy of his Memoirs of John Selden, for which thanks were accorded.

The following reply from Dr. Spry, Secretary to the Agricultural Society, to the letter which the Librarian was directed to address him, in accordance with a resolution passed at the last Monthly Meeting, respecting the proposal of the Mechanics' Institute to erect a building for the use of that Institution, the Agricultural Society, and this Library, was read.

TO BABOO PEARYCHAND MITTRA,

Librarian, Public Library.

SIR,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th instant, relative to a suggestion made by the General Committee of the Mechanics' Institute, concerning the propriety of adopting measures for erecting a building for the use of the Public Library, Institution, and Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, jointly—and in reply beg to state that all the plans are deftly arranged, so that the amount absolutely required for the erection of the building of the Institution be known, it is impossible, however anxious the Agricultural and Horticultural Society may be to join in such an undertaking, to decide what degree of support should be accorded.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) HENRY SPAY, M. D., Secy.

CALCUTTA STEAM MEETING.

A very full meeting of the friends and supporters of the new Bengal Steam Fund, was held yesterday, (Monday, July 19,) at the Town Hall, for the purpose of receiving the report of the Committee and a statement of its accounts.

The Lord Bishop was called to the chair, on the motion of H. M. Parker, Esq., who characterised him as an honourable, able, zealous, and persevering advocate of Steam Communication.

The Right Reverend Chairman then addressed the meeting as follows, Gentlemen,—It is not without some reluctance that I have taken the Chair on this occasion, because I think, that in matters not directly of a religious character, the chairs of public meetings are better filled by gentlemen more immediately connected with the subject in hand. Still so far as may be in accordance with my sacred duties, I am always happy to support this and every other design, which has for its object the good of India and of the world at large. But what overcame my reluctance to act as chairman, at this time, was an intimation from Mr. Greenlaw, that it was designed to offer some tribute to the memory of our late Governor-General, Lord William Cavendish Bentinck, tidings of whose death, at Paris, have just reached us. When I remembered his exertions in the cause in which we are assembled, and in every other design for the happiness of India I did not think it possible for me to decline the invitation with which I was honoured. It was Lord William Bentinck who, in 1833, first instilled into my mind that zeal for the cause of Steam Communication, which has ever since animated me. It was Lord William Bentinck who induced me to send the little letter in the June of that year, which many gentlemen before me remember, and which contributed, perhaps, in some measure, to advance the subscription then begun. I had continual opportunities afterwards of knowing, that the same distinguished person used every exertion in his power in furtherance of the great cause. A tribute to his memory, is therefore most justly due.

Moreover, when I remember the warm kindness which he displayed towards myself—when I remember the integrity of his character, his love for India, and his appreciation of the advantages of native education, I am still further disposed to honor his name. When I add to this his private charities,—his munificence to all around him, (he has more than once at Church put 2,000 rupees into the plate for the District Charitable Society)—when I remember, that I never missed him at Church when his health would allow him to attend—when I call to mind his avowed allegiance to the Christian religion,—the interest which he took in the wise and discreet progress of Christian missions, his Christian purity, his family piety, his love to his wife, his kindness and benignity to all around him—the examples, in short, that he set to India—all these induce me as a man,—as a resident in this country, as a Christian, and as one holding the office I do in the Church, to offer my feeble but heartfelt testimony of love to the memory of Lord William Bentinck.

The following Report of the Committee was then read by the Secretary, G. B. Greenlaw, Esq.,

REPORT.

Of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund to the Subscribers to the Fund and to the Petitioners, at the Twelfth Half Yearly Meeting, convened under the 10th Regulation of the Original Meeting of the Subscribers to the Fund, held on the 22nd day of June, 1833.

Since the date of the last Report, presented at the half yearly meeting of the subscribers to the New Bengal Steam fund, and to the Petitioners to the House of Commons, held on the 19th of February last, the Committee has, as usual, caused the Subscribers and the public to be made acquainted, through the new-papers of the Presidency, with the proceedings at home in furtherance of the object of their association; but it may not be inexpedient to embody them generally in this report, for the purpose of record, as well as of ready reference for any observations which the Subscribers may now desire to make on them.

At the date of the last report the accounts from England only reached to the end of November, at which period the Committee, appointed by the Public Meeting held at the Jerusalem Coffee House on the 12th of October last, to investigate the subject, was still sitting. On the 18th January that Committee presented their Report at a Public Meeting held at the London Tavern. Your Committee in their last report referred to the character of the evidence taken before Mr. Curtis' Committee, and stated, that "when the whole shall be published, the public will learn the full extent of the debt of the gratitude which they owe to that Committee and its Chairman." The whole evidence has now been published, and it contains, the committee venture to say, a greater body of practical information on all points bearing on the subject, than has ever been before brought together, and fully entitles Mr. Curtis and his colleagues to the gratitude of the Indian public.

The result of the meeting of the 18th January was, that another Committee, consisting of Messrs. T. A. Curtis, J. P. Larkins, J. Bagshaw and James McKillop, was appointed for the purpose of taking measures "for forming a Board of Directors, and preparing a prospectus" to carry out a Company. This was communicated to the Committee by Mr. Curtis, who, at the same time, expressed a hope that the Committee would "organize" so substantial a subscription in Bengal that will leave "no doubt of the deep feeling and interest which are felt on your side of the water in the success of this great enterprise, and which can only be ensured by a strenuous and unequivocal effort on its outset." The Committee considered themselves bound to submit this appeal to the Bengal public; and, accordingly, on the 5th April last they published, in the newspapers of the presidency, a short report with Mr. Curtis's letter and their reply, and solicited a meeting to take the whole into consideration on the 11th of that month, subsequently altered for the 15th, when the meeting was held, and it was resolved to meet Mr. Curtis's wishes, and forthwith to organize a subscription of shares of Rs. 500 each and to make a payment of 10 per cent. on each share as a first instalment into the Union Bank, to the Credit of the Committee as Trustees of the Company to be formed at home; and the Committee were authorized to remit to the Directors of such Company the amount paid, after the receipt of a Prospectus; the amount to be subject to such rules and provisions as might be established as regards the subscriptions in England.

The Committee are happy to state, that the cash paid into the Union Bank—amounts up to this date to Rs.

99,650, being 1st instalment on 9,96,500 Rs. or in round numbers 10 lacs or £100,000, and it has been paid by only 401 firms and individuals out of the large number of persons interested in this great undertaking. The Committee trust that many of that number may now be induced to come forward and support, at a critical period, the measures in progress at home; which cannot be better done than by demonstrating the sincerity of the interest felt by a subscription for Shares and payment of the 1st instalment.

The Committee, however, cannot record this magnificent proof of the sincerity of the past declarations in favor of this important object, without the expression of the grateful feelings with which they have viewed the progress of the Subscriptions, which are made up as follows.

Of the Calcutta Subscriptions five houses of business have each taken one hundred shares; and one native gentleman, Baboo Moty Loll Seal, has taken fifty.

The Committee cannot pass the Mofussil Subscriptions without noticing the highly interesting proceedings had at Berhampore.

On the receipt of a Circular, addressed by the Committee to the most influential and leading members of Society at the several stations in Bengal and Agra, a meeting was called by Mr. F. W. Russell, at which that gentlemen presided, and at which resolutions in conformity with those adopted at Calcutta, were passed, and a Committee appointed, consisting of Captain Pemberton and Messrs G. G. McPherson and Lambick, to further the object of the meeting.

A Resolution was also passed, to the effect "that the meeting observed with deep regret that no native gentlemen have attended, and concluding that they must be ignorant of the advantages likely to be secured to them by the establishment of a comprehensive system of Steam Navigation, it be resolved that circulation throughout this and the adjoining districts be given to a brief outline, in the native languages, of the nature and objects of the scheme."

This having been done, a voluntary meeting of the native gentleman took place at the house of Kowar Krsnath Row Bahadur, Rajah of Comabhar, at which the matter was discussed among themselves, and it being understood that, having made themselves acquainted with the nature of the enterprise and its manner of accomplishment, they were desirous of aiding herein, another public meeting took place on the 28th May, at which Mr. Russell also presided, when eighty-two shares were subscribed for (including 28 subscribed at the previous meeting) and two have since been added, making in all 84 shares from Berhampore. Of the 84 shares, fifty-one were taken by twenty-one Native ladies and gentlemen, His Highness the Nawab Ameeunissa Begum having taken ten shares, and Koowar Krisnath Roy Bahadoor twenty.

The Committee have not failed to convey to Her Highness, and the other ladies of the Nizamut family, who have taken shares, through the Agent of the Right Honorable the Governor-General, the high sense they entertain of the noble public spirit evinced by them on this occasion, affording an example, which, if followed generally throughout India, would greatly redound to the credit of the Native Gentry. At Mirzapore also a public Meeting was held and thirty shares taken by eight gentlemen.

The Committee regret to state, that the above are the only stations at which public Meetings have hitherto been held, with exception to Agra, at which place Resolutions were passed, which the Committee is anxiously waiting to see carried into effect. By one of the Resolutions the Meeting professes to feel anxiously desirous to co-operate with the Conditional Subscribers in every measure testifying their unabated desire for the speedy establishment of an efficient Steam Communication with England, and recommends the public at large to adopt all means which may be most likely at this juncture to shew the unceasing interest with which this vital question is regarded by her Majesty's subjects in India. The second Resolution resolves, that the Residents in the N. W. Provinces should be called upon to shew, by public Meetings and Subscriptions, that they feel a strong desire for a speedier and more regular Communication than at present exists. The third Resolution is as follows.

"That though this Meeting are unanimous in support of Steam Communication in general, and therefore of the comprehensive scheme, which is the only one now under consideration, they are also of opinion that a very useful direct Communication might be established between Bombay and Suez, and more advantageous by comparison to the Residents of the N. W. Provinces; before therefore joining in personal support of the comprehensive scheme, they would wish to express this feeling for the information of their brethren in Bombay, being impressed with the belief that if any Company or scheme were established for a direct Communication between Suez and Bombay, it would meet with the strenuous co-operation of the Residents of the N. W. P., but that in the event of no Bombay line being established, this Meeting would be ready to aid and support the comprehensive scheme."

This Resolution was passed at Agra on the 8th May, and the Committee need not say that no steps have in consequence been taken at Bombay; we are waiting, therefore, for a second Meeting to be called at Agra to carry out the strong professions in favor of "Steam Communication in general, and therefore of the comprehensive scheme, which is the only one now under consideration," and to redeem the public pledge thus given to uphold that scheme in the event of no Bombay line being established."

The Committee beg explicitly to state once again, that the proposed comprehensive scheme always, from the first, included Bombay as well as Madras and Calcutta. The exclusion of that Presidency, indeed, has never for a moment been contemplated; and letters for Agra would naturally be now forwarded by the Steamers of the comprehensive scheme, which took the line between Bombay and Aden; while passengers from and for Agra, would take their passages either on the Bombay or the Calcutta line, as might be most convenient to themselves. As respects letters, indeed, our Secretary is at this moment in communication with a gentleman, better qualified perhaps than any other individual in India to advise on such a subject, and who is preparing a statement to shew the shortest routes by which letters on the comprehensive Steamers will reach all the stations in India, in order that they may be made up in packets for Bombay, Madras or Calcutta, as the stations to which they are directed may be nearest by the dak route to one or other of those cities. Thus the Agra Presidency would of course have its letters and light Parcels via Bombay.

The Committee are persuaded, that the more the comprehensive scheme is understood the more clearly will it be found to embrace the highest interests of all the Presidencies, and all the different stations. It never had, from the beginning, in view any other than the most general and universal benefit of all India, British and Native; and as the plan becomes understood, it will draw to itself the general and universal support of all classes of this vast Peninsula.

The Committee have dwelt on the proceedings had at the above three places, with a view to shew the deep interest they take in Mutual co-operation, and in the hope that a spirit similar to that which induced the Meetings at Berhampore and Mirzapore may yet spring up throughout Bengal and Agra.

The Madras Committee, in the meantime, have not been idle. They called a public Meeting on the 10th May at that Presidency, at which the Hon'ble the Chief Justice presided, and at which Resolutions to the same purport as those passed in Calcutta were adopted. Above five hundred shares have been taken and subscriptions are still in the course of being made. Among the Madras subscriptions are those of His Highness the Rajah of Mysore, and of some members of his family for fourteen shares.

These subscriptions were made after his highness had been made aware of the object in view by the perusal of a pamphlet which had been sent to him at his own request by Major Stokes. His Highness, in returning the Pamphlet, and notifying the subscription and payment of the first instalment, observes:

"The Rajah concurs with Major Stokes in the opinion, that the permanent establishment of Steam Communication between England and India will be productive of extensive advantage to both Countries. It affords much gratification to him to find, that the Scheme has met with the powerful aid and support of a great number of persons, which is a strong proof of the warm feeling entertained in favor of this great Enterprise."

But the princely subscription for 25 shares by His Highness the Elliah Rajah of Travancore, demands the special notice of the Committee. The high estimation in which His Highness is held throughout India, induces a hope that his example will be generally followed, especially in the presidency which has had the benefit of His Highness's liberal contribution.

While matters were thus progressing in India, Mr. Curtis, and the Committee over which he presides, were actively employed. On the 17th and 18th ultimo, the Committee communicated to the subscribers and the public, through the medium of the newspapers of the presidency, a most interesting and important Correspondence, between the Right Hon'ble the President of the Board of Control, the Directors of the East India Company, and Mr Curtis, in which that gentleman placed the whole question in a point of view at once comprehensive, clear, and simple; establishing beyond question the radical and inherent defects of the present imperfect system, and offering to make arrangements for establishing the communication on the most enlarged and liberal scale to all the presidencies on receipt for ten years of a sum less than that which is now expended on the present incomplete communication.

The following is the proposal made by Mr. Curtis to the Hon'ble Court.

"The Company will build a sufficient number of steam vessels 2,000 tons and 500 horse power each, which shall perform the duty of packets from Great Britain to Alexandria, and from Suez to the three Presidencies and Ceylon."

"The plan, on which it is proposed that this Communication shall be carried on, is that on every 4th Saturday a Mail shall be despatched from London to the port of departure of the steam vessel, which is to convey the Mails, passengers, and packages, &c., to Alexandria, and which shall only stop at Gibraltar and Malta to leave the Mails and take in such letters and passengers as may be ready to be embarked immediately. A steam boat will be waiting in readiness at Suez to receive and forward the Mails, &c., as they arrive from Alexandria, which Steam Boat will go the whole distance from Suez to Calcutta, stopping at Aden to deliver the Mails, &c., for Bombay, and at Point de Galle and Madras, to leave the Mails, &c., for those places. At Aden a steam boat will be in readiness to receive the Mails, &c. and to proceed immediately to Bombay. The return voyage will be made with similar arrangements every fourth Saturday from Calcutta, touching at Madras and Point de Galle for Mails, &c. and receiving at Aden the Mails, &c., from Bombay. During the four monsoon months, however, the Mail from Bombay will be received at Point de Galle and forward to Suez by the Calcutta Steam Boat from thence; but the Mail for Bombay from Europe will always be received at and forwarded from Aden. The time of the departure from Bombay will be regulated, so that the Steam Boat from thence shall always be in time to meet the Steam Boats to and from Suez."

"The Company will establish the means of a ready, and, as far as circumstances will permit, a commodious passage across the Isthmus of Suez."

"The Company will engage, that a Steam Vessel shall always be at Suez to receive and forward the Mails, &c., the moment they arrive there from Alexandria, and that there shall be also always a Steam Vessel at Alexandria, to receive and forward the Mail, &c., as they arrive from Suez."

"The Company will provide accommodation and subsistence for any Officer Her Majesty's Government or the East India Company may think fit to send in the Steam Vessel in charge of the Mails, or to report upon the state of the Vessel and Engines and the conduct of the Officers of the Company in their public duty in respect to the Vessel and Mail."

"In consideration of this extended and regular line of communication being established to the satisfaction of your Hon'ble Court and Her Majesty's Government,

"and of the conveyance of the Mails free of all charge, the Company are to receive from the Government and East India Company, an annual sum of £100,000 sterling for the term of ten years, in such proportions as may be settled between the Government and the East India Company, as to each other; such payment to commence from the day on which the first Steam Vessel shall leave Great Britain on its voyage to Alexandria, charged with Mails."

To this Letter no reply had been received up to the 15th June, the date of despatch by the Marseilles route; whence the Committee consider the continued expression of the public desire for the immediate adoption of the comprehensive Scheme to be still necessary, and submit to the meeting the expediency of a resolution to that effect.

Accompanying are two tables similar to those presented at the late half yearly meetings. One (A) shews the divisions made at Bombay of the Calcutta Mail from England, the periods between the arrival of the Mail at Bombay, and of the several divisions in Calcutta, with the number of covers of letters and newspapers in each division. The other (B) shews the number of days between the advertised latest safe date of despatch from Calcutta and the despatch of the Mail from Bombay, with the number of covers sent from Calcutta and from all India.

On one occasion (viz the February Mail) sixty-two letters for Calcutta and eighty-three for the Moosul, (with a single newspaper) making 145 covers, were received in eleven days from Bombay; the great body of the Mail, 2,129 covers in number, did not arrive till three days after, and the remainder were two days more—and it has happened that the ordinary date of a late subsequent to the despatch portions of the English Mail for Calcutta has arrived previous to those portions of the Mail.

The largest number of covers yet received by the Mail at Calcutta, was contained in the March Mail when 4,441 covers were received 3,654 being for Calcutta delivery, and 807 for the Moosul. The largest previous number of covers received was 3897.

The longest period between the arrival of a Mail at Bombay and the final receipt of the Calcutta portion, since last Report, was twenty-one days, in the case of the last Mail. This Mail consisted of 4,111 covers. The first division arrived in 16 days after the arrival of the Mail at Bombay, and contained 955 covers—of which 815 were letters, and the rest newspapers. The second division arrived in 17 days, and brought 890 covers, of which 798 were letters. The third came in 18 days and had only 164 covers, of which only 3 were letters. The fourth took 19 days and contained 1,247 covers of which 913 were Letters. The 5th arrived in 20 days and had 531 covers of which seven were Letters. The sixth and last took 21 days, and brought 524 covers—of which twenty-one were letters. Thus on the (a) third day, although there were many letters to come few were sent; and in that Mail only 164 covers were sent, though on the following day the Mail conveyed 1,247 covers.

(a) Since the report was read at the meeting, it has been ascertained that the 3d and 4th Divisions left Bombay on the same day, as did those of the 1st and 2d Divisions, the two former having left on the 25th, and the two latter on the 27th ultimo. The 3d Division left on the 20th, and the 4th on the 22nd ultimo. B. G.

With respect to the Mail to England, as shewn in the Statement B., the minimum time between the latest safe date of despatch from Calcutta, and the despatch of the Mail from Bombay, was fourteen days, and the maximum 15. On one occasion, however, in consequence of the return of the Hugh Lindsay, the Mail did not finally leave Bombay (on the Barenice) till 37 days after the date of the advertised latest safe date.

As the greater number of covers received by any one Mail has occurred since the date of the last Report, so has the greatest number of covers been despatched from Calcutta, viz. 4,423, the largest previous number was 3,762.

Although the largest receipt and despatch were not by the last Mail respectively, yet the correspondence must be considered to be on the increase; and nothing can better shew how great that increase would be if Steamers started from Calcutta, than the fact that by the Water Witch, whose arrival at Aden in time for the Steamer to carry her Mails on to Suez, was very problematical—and whose voyage under any circumstances would not bear comparison with the despatch over the continent to Bombay and thence by Steam to Suez,—yet by the Water Witch, by far a greater number of covers was despatched than on any occasion by the regular Mail. The greatest number ever despatched from Calcutta by the ordinary Mail was stated above 4,423, while the Water Witch took 5,499,—28 Madras covers having also been despatched by her.

The accounts are laid on the table and they shew a balance to credit on the 31st ultimo of Rs. 32,454 13.

 Secretary's Office,..... 633 2 6 item, viz., Rs. 5,646 10 7 is on account of the Home Agency.

Rs. 7,361 4 10

The account of the expenditure of this sum, with vouchers, is on its passage to India by way of the Cape of Good Hope, the documents being too numerous for despatch overland. The printing and advertising charge, Rs. 493 10 9, is almost entirely on account of the subscription for shares in the proposed London Company, as is that of postage Rs. 588 13. This is a charge which the Committee regret should have been placed in their accounts; originally their correspondence passed free, but under the new rules they were deprived of this privilege. The charge on account of the Secretary's Office Rs. 633 2 6 has also some relation to the subscription for shares; but the principal amount is for the Clerk Rs. 95 per mensem, and for transcribing the proceedings which are voluminous and compiling an Index.

The Committee regret to have to notice the death of Mr. Cockerell, and Baboo Moothoornauth Mullick.

The former gentleman has acted as chairman during the absence of Mr. Macnaghten, and has, from the commencement of the sittings of the Committee, been one of the most constant attendants. To those who knew the habits of business of the late Mr. Cockerell, his urbanity, his talents, and professional attainments, the Committee need not express how seriously they feel his loss; nor could they reconcile it to themselves to make known that loss to their constituents without the expression of their deep regret.

The return of Mr. Fenton to India, and his consequent resumption of his seat in the Committee, will keep up the number originally appointed without the appointment of any gentleman in the place of Mr. Cockerell; but the meeting is requested to supply the vacancy occasioned by the death of Baboo Moothoornauth Mullick.

The Committee are assured that the death of Lord William Bentinck will be felt by every friend of this great measure, of which he was from first to last the earnest patron and promoter, with sincere regret.

When in 1833 the public feeling began to be strongly excited in favor of the immediate re-opening of the communication, which had been stopped by the laying up of the Hugh Lindsay, and in furtherance thereof subscriptions were entered into at Calcutta, a meeting of the subscribers was called to take into consideration the measures to be adopted. A draft of the proposed resolutions was submitted to His Lordship who, with reference to instructions to "the Committee to immediately apply themselves to the consideration of the means whereby the communication now interrupted by the laying up of the Hugh Lindsay may be first most 'CERTAINLY and speedily most SPEEDILY re-opened'" himself added "that they be authorised for that purpose to seek the aid of the Supreme Government" This could not fail to afford the Committee, at its outset, the greatest confidence in His Lordship's good disposition, a confidence fully met throughout their proceedings; and when subsequently the permanent establishment of the communication on a sure basis was a subject of anxious attention, and the anticipated difficulties of making the receipts equal the expenditure (whether well founded or not) were so great as to damp the hopes of the most ardent, Lord William Bentinck came forward and proposed that a sum not exceeding two lacs of rupees per annum, should be given to parties willing to contract to run Steamers four times in the year between Bombay and Suez. There can be no doubt that this splendid and energetic proposition gave new life and vigor to the exertions then making to attain the great object; on it alone could the merchants of Calcutta rest when they in 1834 made the proposition to His Lordship to extend the amount to five lacs per annum for the establishment of a communication from all the presidencies to England, the whole expences to be borne by the association, and the Government to retain the postage.

Anxious to accept this proposition, but deterred by the apparent extent of the premium, his Lordship offered to grant three lacs, and allow the Postage to be collected on account of the Association. For obvious reasons this was declined. Subsequently this Committee having reported on the subject to His Lordship in Council, under date 28th January 1834, and recommended for adoption a similar plan, His Lordship in Council concluded a long and comprehensive minute, as follows: "Considering in every respect the very superior advantages held out to the whole of India, I cannot but recommend the plan of the Committee with my decided recommendation, and express at the same time a hope, if individuals may be found willing to accept the terms, that this great measure, so important to the great interests of the Empire and to the comfort and happiness of so many thousands of our countrymen in this distant clime, may be carried into immediate operation."

That this plan did not come into immediate operation is in no degree attributable to Lord William Bentinck. Every effort was made on his part. To him, in conjunction with strong representations from the Bishop of Calcutta, was owing the original movement in 1834 of Lord Glenelg, then Mr. Grant, and President of the Board of Control, in obtaining a Select Committee of the House of Commons to "acquire the means of promoting communication with India by rail," and that His Lordship, while entering into ample and detailed communication, must have exerted his powerful influence in behalf of the great measure, is evident from the fact that, although throughout the evidence taken by the Select Committee, nothing whatever is said of the extension of the communication to the three Provinces, yet the 5th Resolution expressly recognizes "the combined plan suggested by the Bengal Steam Navigation Company as one for the consideration of the Government and the East India Company for immediate adoption, and it could only have been through the communications of Lord William Bentinck to the Grant, that this suggestion had any place at all in the consideration, far less that it should be then recommended to the House of Commons. If that great body were not so well apprised of the value and importance of the measure, which His Lordship took in the promotion of this great measure, while he remained in India, that he was privately supporting it with them at home, with whom then rested its consideration. On quitting India, His Lordship put on record the strongest possible expression of his sense of the value of such a communication, and his determination to do his utmost to obtain it—he said "I cannot command the opportunity of forwarding its future success, but it will be my watchword; you may depend upon the exertion of my most earnest efforts to promote its progress, and to obtain for India an advantage so great in all its direct and indirect consequences, that, in my opinion, it would be cheaply bought at any price."

That this pledge was redeemed is well known but the Committee desire to place on record their unbounded gratitude to His Lordship, while living—their reverence for his memory, now that he is no more—for his arduous and continued exertions at home.

In June 1837 His Lordship presented the petition of the inhabitants of Calcutta, and its environs, to the House of Commons, and obtained the appointment of a Select Committee, of which he was himself chairman.

His labors and exertions during the sittings of that Committee, have been described by every one who knewed them as having been constant and unremitting. He is thus mentioned by Captain Gindoff "We have great reliance on the result of our Select Committee, and the indefatigable exertions of Lord William, who quite astonished us with his activity and arduous devotion to the business, in spite of obstacles which it is quite shameful to throw in his way. His Lordship is giving to you, and will tell you a great deal about it, but I will tell you what probably he will not, viz. that you will owe the extension safety and security to his unconquerable firmness."

In addition to the labors of Chairman of the Select Committee, His Lordship convened daily a private Committee at his own house, at which men were selected to be brought before the Select Committee, in the manner of which business his Lordship was conducting. Subsequently, as we saw, while in India, that the resolution as to by his suggestion of a grant of two lakhs, of rupees for 24 years for a quarterly communication with Bombay, and when the Select Committee were presented the objection to a grant at home, by his motionable letter to the Court of Directors under date 14th August 1837, in which he offered to take a prominent part in the conduct of a Company on an annual sum being granted "not exceeding two thirds of the present charge," and he adds "by this arrangement a large amount being will accrue at once to the Government, while the annual donation of the Indian community, so repeatedly pressed upon the attention of the home authorities, will be completely and satisfactorily met."

The Honorable Court, while they considered the arrangements then in action should be maintained, at least until it had had a fair and complete trial, in point both of efficiency and expense, at the same time, without prejudging the merits of the final adoption of the measure, refused to interfere from his Lordship any detailed instructions in the carrying out of his proposal which he might deem it prudent to make.

While then Mr. Currie's Committee was formed, and His Lordship readily transferred the opening then made with the Court of Directors, as a most unexceptionable basis to Mr. Currie, he says "I transfer with much satisfaction the further prosecution of this object to those who are conversant with the affairs of the world, and whose general knowledge and respectability must give them such powerful weight, both with the authorities, and with the public at large."

This occurred in November 1837 and His Lordship continued, in communication with Captain Barker, to whom he had been desired to be instrumental in securing that his long sought object.

He had declared himself anxious to be President of the proposed Company, intending, on his return to London, to move for papers, and to act with Mr. Currie and his Committee, with energy, should it be necessary, in Parliament. His Lordship however did not live to return, and his death has deprived India of the earliest, warmest, best friend to that measure, the result of the completion of which is thus described in his own words. The Subscribers to the Madras Steam Funl addressed me a letter in 1834, in which they stated their belief, that this project would confer vast and incalculable benefits upon our country, and mankind.

"I answered as follows—I confess that my anticipation of the expected benefit goes far beyond the more obvious results, even as those undoubtedly would be, of improved Government, of the welfare of the public as affected by such improvement, of the promotion of commerce, and of what may be considered of minor importance, of the comfort of our numerous emigrants separated by such great distance of time and space from all connection with their dearest interests. The limit assigned by the resolution is expressed by the large term 'mankind,' and, in my judgment, appropriately and correctly, because the great want of this Eastern world, India, China, &c., may be comprehended in the single word—Knowledge."

The above is a very imperfect sketch of what has been done by Lord William Bentinck in furtherance of this measure. It would indeed be impossible in the short compass of a Report to detail all that India owes to him for his endeavours to obtain for her an advantage so great in all its direct and indirect consequences "that it would be cheaply bought at any price."

Such was the staunch, the untiring the energetic friend to our country whose death we have to deplore, and here, in this hall where his name has been so often and so honorably mentioned in connection with the great and glorious purpose to which Lord William Bentinck devoted so much of his time his talents, and his influence, the Committee need scarcely express their regret that at this present will participate in their regret for his loss, and in their respect for his memory.

By order of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund.

CHAS. B. GREENLAW, Secretary.

Capt T. J. Taylor, then spoke to the following effect. Mr. Chairman, I believe, after the report just read, every person in this room will feel cause to congratulate himself, and the public, on the gradual advancement of the good cause of Steam Navigation. But few remarks are required from me in support of the proposition I have now to make. It was considered as a reproach upon the people of England, that they could not be brought to feel an interest in, or exert themselves for, any thing which was to bring no pecuniary benefit to themselves. It was said by the old Spanish Ambassador Olvarez, that nothing was to be done in England without the expectation of the candle-ends and cheese-parings. This has been shown, however, not to be the case with our indefatigable friend Mr. Curtis, the Governor of the Bank of England, who had the good sense to appreciate the advantages of extended Steam Communication between England and her most valuable colony, and whose energy had determined to produce those advantages. His assiduity in the cause is unparalleled. Mr. Curtis is a man of great wealth and great commercial influence, and could have nothing to expect in the way of pecuniary reward. But, undoubtedly, he expected to elevate himself in the opinion of his fellow men. I trust he will not be disappointed. I trust that the thanks of this meeting, and of all India, will be accorded, as they ought to be, to that indefatigable man.

Satisfactory, however, as is the general report of the progress made during the last half year there is one drawback, gentlemen, to which I must advert. I mean the unflinching opposition to the cause of Steam Communication, shown by the Court of Directors, which is altogether unworthy of that honorable body. There is, indeed, some reason why they should not be pleased at the prospect of a speedy communication between India and England—it affords such an opportunity for applicants for redress. Persons have already gone by the Steamers from Bombay, to lay their grievances at the foot of the throne. There are practices in this presidency far more calculated to produce such appeals than any thing to those of Bombay or Madras. Look at the resumption! When I went up the country last year, what was it made the people in the province of Behar look on me as if they could cut my throat? What was it made the man at Patna say that "they only wanted a leader?" It was the simple fact, that every man above the common herd—every man possessed of land and property in his own right, felt that his whole estate might be seized on the morrow by the Resumption Special Commissioners, and that he might be turned out into the world, a homeless wanderer, and, with a starving family, be reduced from independence to absolute beggary.

The Court of Directors well knew, that if a rapid communication was fairly established, the number of applicants for redress would be doubled,—quadrupled,—increased a hundred fold. Their opposition, therefore, need be a matter of no surprise. But there is a power to which even the Court of Directors must bow,—the power of Parliament and the pressure from without.

If, therefore, the Court of Directors should return an unfavorable reply to Mr. Curtis's last letter, no time should I think, be lost, in convening a fresh meeting, and addressing a petition to Parliament, appealing against the proceedings of the Honorable Court. It now only remains for me to propose to the meeting the following resolution:—

"That the Report be received; that the thanks of this meeting be conveyed by the Right Reverend the Chairman, to Messrs. Curtis, Larkins, Flagshaw and McKillop, and to Captain Barber, for their zealous and well directed efforts to obtain the immediate establishment of a perfect comprehensive Steam Communication between England and India; and that they be assured that no exertion shall be wanting in aid of their endeavours."

The resolution was seconded by Col. McLeod, and carried unanimously.

The Right Reverend Chairman, here took occasion to observe, that it would be advisable for the gentlemen present, strictly to confine themselves, in their orations, to facts relative to the object of the meeting, and not digress from the subject to attribute unworthy motives to, or censure, any body, on mere hypothesis.

Mr. Parker.—My Lord and Gentlemen,—I have been entrusted with a resolution which I solicit your permission to read, it is as follows:—

"That the position of the question, when the last Mail was despatched, demands that this Meeting should reiterate, in the strongest manner possible, the unabated desire which pervades the Meeting, and the public in general, for the immediate establishment of the communication, and their determined resolution to continue to use every means in their power to obtain it."

Before submitting this resolution to the sense of the meeting, I would crave permission to offer a few remarks, which I hope may appear not inapplicable to its tenor. In submitting these remarks I shall bear in mind, as far as possible, the excellent advice we have just received from our Right Reverend Chairman, not just in itself, so worthy of attention, as proceeding from hints. I shall abstain as much as possible from comments; I shall confine myself as much as possible to facts. Comments, however true, may, as His Lordship observes, create unpleasant and unfriendly feelings. Facts can have, or ought to have, no such effect.

Since we last met in this hall, another season has elapsed of distressing and humiliating failure in the present imperfect scheme of Steam Navigation between Great Britain and India. That is a fact.

At this moment every hour is worth a week of ordinary time. A commercial crisis of an unparalleled nature, and involving immense interests, has occurred in China. A momentous war is waging on one frontier. On two others the storms are gathering, and clouds of threatening hostility hang darkly. In the interior of our Empire, for such I may say is Joudpore, there is another conflict to all appearance approaching. These, my Lord,—these gentlemen, I think I may call facts!

Between the United States of America and our native country, mighty vessels, called the Great Western, the Liverpool, the British Queen, and there may be many others, are breasting their magnificent way through the storms, over the foaming seas, amidst the incumbering ice of the Great Atlantic—stopped by no obstacle, triumphing over every difficulty, and carrying on their intercourse between the old world and the new, almost with the regularity and precision of clock work. This, my Lord, is no comment—it is a fact!

While a crisis is hovering over British Asia, such perhaps as no man has yet seen—while every hour is precious, and thick coming events cry speed—speed;—while the glorious vessels, I have alluded to, are going to and fro with the rapidity, and the certainty, of great creatures of the sea, conquering the mountain waves and the adverse winds, the momentous dispatches of this Government on which may hang the fate of millions—the thousands of letters fraught with the hopes, the wishes, the fortunes of an immense public—are painfully floundering through the Syrian deserts, with very little chance, to my mind, considering the state of that part of Asia, of ever reaching their destination; or are beating about on the ocean in two-tail-fay vessels despatched on voyages of discovery, sent, in short, to make the interesting and pleasing experiment, of how speedily sailing vessels might reach Aden against that monsoon, which it has at length been confessed, the inefficient strainers provided for the service “could not look at.” This is really a state of things,—but I remember our excellent Chairman’s exhortation—gentlemen, have I stated any thing but facts?

I have still another curious fact or two which may not be unworthy of your attention, and they bear upon the subject of my resolution.

I find, in a statement placed before Lord William Bentinck’s Select Committee, by Sir John Hobhouse, in 1857, the following passage.

Perhaps the Committee will permit me to read them.

First.—A despatch dated on the 16th of September 1836, which the home authorities received from the Government of Bombay; it is couched in these words:—

“We beg leave to offer to your Hon’ble Court our congratulations on the rapidity with which your wishes have of late been conveyed to all parts of your Indian possessions. The three last Overland Mails have brought despatches from London to Bombay in 53, 45, and 64 days; and those intended for Calcutta have been forwarded in 10 days. We have witnessed the energetic impulse this early intelligence has given to the mercantile interest, and the unbounded satisfaction it has diffused throughout all classes of the community, &c. &c. &c.”

Now there is some ambiguity in the term “despatches” in the above passage. I construe it, however, as any plain man would, as having reference to what interests the public at large, viz. the Overland Mails, which, I conclude, are said on the 16th September 1836, to have been “of late” conveyed to Calcutta in ten days. Gentlemen, I have had drawn up a little paper here which shows that from the 1st of June to the 16th September 1836, the date of the letter quoted the Overland Mails reached Calcutta from Bombay in fifteen days—in fifteen days and a quarter—in sixteen days and a half—in fifteen days and a quarter—in fourteen days and a quarter, twelve days and a half, and thirteen days and a half; but on no one occasion in ten days! These are curious facts—facts they are. That I cannot reconcile them is owing no doubt to my want of apprehension.

Secondly.—On the 30th March 1837, a letter was addressed to the President of the Board of Control, which will be found at page 18 of the Minutes of Evidence before the Select Committee. The letter says:—

“The Court are aware that it will be necessary to promote, by every possible means, facility and quickness of communication between Bombay and Calcutta, and Madras; and they have observed, by recent intelligence, that the Government of India has adopted arrangements for the acceleration of the dawk, by which packets may be conveyed from Bombay to Calcutta in from eight to ten days, and to Madras in about seven days, and which the Court consider to be a much more rapid and certain, and unquestionably more economical mode of communication than a Steam conveyance.”

My Lord—Gentlemen—this is a happy announcement; but how has it been fulfilled? I put many other failures (unavoidable failure,—failures inseparable from the very scheme of sending the English mails overland from Bombay.) I say, I put many other failures out of the question, I only entreat your notice to that order which we are now smarting. The Tuptee left Aden with the English Mail on the 16th, and reached Bombay on the 27th ultimo. The first letters by that vessel reached us—neither in eight or ten—but in sixteen days, after the arrival of the Mail at Bombay! The last letters by that vessel reached us—neither in eight or ten—but in twenty-one days after their arrival at Bombay! Gentlemen,—do you desire any further comments upon the passage I have quoted? If you do, it must be offered by some more competent individual. I confine myself to a simple statement of facts.

But I have yet another. In the passage I have quoted, it is said, that this overland route from Bombay is considered to be a much more rapid, certain, and unquestionably a more economical mode of communication than a steam conveyance. I say nothing about the economy of the matter; that question was settled for ever when Lord William Bentinck offered to conduct the full free comprehensive scheme at two-thirds of the expense attending the present wretched system:—its certainty is also pretty well disposed of;—but its rapidity! Ah, that is worth consideration,—and I shall accordingly give you a fact.

The Tuptee left Aden on the 16th ultimo. The last letters by that vessel reached us on the 17th instant, having been thirty-two days between Aden and Calcutta. Now by a direct steamer like the Great Western, I will take upon me to say (and there are many here who can correct me if I am in error,) I will take upon me to say that by a steamer like the Great Western, those letters would have been brought from Aden to Calcutta at this season of the year, including stoppages at Galle or Madras, in fourteen or at the outside FIFTEEN DAYS, instead of thirty-two.

I have still in store—my Lord and Gentlemen,—one little fact, which will probably give you more gratification than any I have yet placed before you; but away with any affectation of pleasantry. This fact is a grave and a sad one; you have not yet heard it yet; you will now doubtless hear it with those painful feelings, and that sense of almost hopelessness, with which I communicate it. The English Mail, gentlemen, for which the latest safe date was pronounced to be the 17th July, which was to be carried to the Persian Gulf by the Zenobia on the 1st August,—that mail has been left at Bombay, which it did not reach until the 3d, instead of the 1st of August, the Zenobia having left on the appointed day.

No blame whatever can be attached to the Bombay authorities for this. It was right that the Steamer should depart on the date fixed for her departure. It is the entire wretched system which makes this Presidency dependent upon the uncertain Overland Communication to Bombay, that is to blame for the whole. That;—but, gentlemen, I must refrain from comment; I have, I trust, redeemed my pledge by dealing only in facts.

And in doing this, my Lord,—in doing this, gentlemen, have I mentioned a single evil which does not admit of the simplest and most easy remedy? Do we call for impossibilities when we crave and implore that these things may be corrected? No! I say we do not! I say the correction lies in the adoption of a measure simple and practical, that the blindest bigotry, the most determined prejudice, cannot but admit its completeness. I say, that it lies in the despatch from the Hooghly every fourth Saturday of a powerful steamer calculated to ensure a passage to Aden, and thence to Suez, within a given time, at all periods of the year. I say it lies in the completion of the great comprehensive scheme of steam communication between this mighty realm and the sovereign country. In saying this, my lord and gentlemen, do I, or do I not state a fact? If I do, the better reason is there for adopting the resolution which I have now the honor to move.

The resolution was then seconded by James Colquhoun, Esq.

T. E. M. Turton, Esq.—I have one question to ask. I see in a Bombay paper, a statement of which I wish to ascertain the accuracy. It is, that the blame of delay did not rest with the Bombay Government, but with the Government on this side of India. That the Bombay Government are ready to forward the mails in one despatch as far as Nagpore, if the Bengal Government had runners to carry them on to Calcutta. If this be true the remedy of the delay complained of, lies with this Government. Let us ascertain the true state of the case before we do ought to cause between us and the sister presidency a further interruption of that harmony, which should unite all lovers of steam navigation. I would, therefore, put the question on this head now, before the present resolution is put.

Captain T. J. Taylor. If you will allow me, Mr. Chairman, I can answer that question. On the western side of India the country is clear and open, and horses convey the mails from Bombay to Nagpore. On this side of Nagpore, it is jungly, unhealthy and almost impassible, with very few inhabitants and those in a very low condition. There are nine men stationed at every stage of 8 miles each, who are sufficient to carry four or five men's loads passing either way. The expense of this conveyance is nearly one lakh of rupees per annum. But as the weight of the entire mail is so very great, if it were all brought on together, it would be impossible, even with the above large establishment, to bring it at a greater rate than two miles an hour. But by bringing it on horses to Nagpore, by separating it at that place into different despatches, each not exceeding 4 or 5 men's loads, and requiring the runners to return forthwith to their posts, in order to bring on a fresh despatch within 12 hours, and by giving them extra payment for the same, the whole mail of 20 men's loads, would be transported to us to reach its destination within two days after the first despatch arrived. On the late occasion the mails were divided at Bombay, and were sent in 4 regular and daily despatches, by which two days longer time necessary was occupied. This was not the fault of the Government of India, but arose from some mistake on the part of subordinate authorities.

It would cost 2 or 3 lacs of rupees to place such an establishment on the Bombay road, as to bring the overland mails at once and without delay.

H. M. Parker, Esq.—It is not the Government that is to blame, it is the system. If we have to bring these mails through jungles, in which many valuable European lives have been lost, and which are described as almost impassible,—if such be the state of affairs, all these are reasons for the comprehensive scheme of steam communication.

T. E. M. Turton, Esq.—Allow me a few words in explanation. I did not intend to attack my friend's resolution. When examined before the House of Commons, I ventured to suggest, in opposition to Sir John Lubbock's statement, that there were circumstances such as these, which would at certain seasons of the year occasion much more delay than was spoken of in the conveyance of the mails from Bombay to Calcutta. I am glad that I put the question, for it shows that the delay does not arise so much from the Bombay Government, as from the nature of the country itself, and shows more than anything how much we are interested in the establishment of the comprehensive scheme.

C. B. Greenlaw, Esq.—I hope you will exonerate the Committee. I cannot understand how it is that they send three letters and 21 covers one day, and on the next twelve hundred.

T. E. M. Turton, Esq.—I think it may have been a fit and proper thing. They probably sent what they thought most required. Therefore, the first and second day they sent as many letters as possible, and the third day they may have sent as many as possible, and probably the last parcels. These letters were more of the nature of parcels and the weight probably each day was nearly the same. We should know all this before we attach blame to the Bombay Government.

After the above explanations, the resolution was put, from the chair and carried unanimously.

J. H. Stocqueler, Esq., then rose and said, gentlemen I have been entrusted with the third resolution, but before I read it to you, allow me to remark, that I see no reason to let off the Bengal Government so easily from the charge of delay in the transmission of the mails. One reason of that delay is in the conduct of the Rajas through whose territories the route lay. I believe that the exertions of a Commissioner between Nagpore and Calcutta, would do something to bring those fellows to order, and to exonerate the Bengal Government from the imputation cast upon them.

In consequence, gentlemen of the death of Baboo Mothoormohun Mullick, it becomes necessary to appoint some one as his successor. The resolution I have to propose, nominates Baboo Mutty Loll Seal, who you all are aware, has lately become the owner of a large stake in the scheme. Mr. Stocqueler then moved.

That Baboo Mutty Loll Seal be appointed a member of the Committee, in lieu of Baboo Mothoornauth Mullick, deceased.

The resolution was seconded by David Hare, Esq., and carried unanimously.

T. E. M. Turton, Esq.—My Lord and gentlemen; I have had a resolution put into my hands, which I will, if you please, commence with reading.

"That this meeting deeply deplore the loss which the cause we are here to support has sustained by the decease of Lord William Bentinck; and, impressed with the most profound gratitude for his zealous, straight forward, and unwearying exertions for the promotion of the great measure while he was alive, desire to manifest by this resolution, their reverence for the memory of the earliest, warmest and most persevering friend of a comprehensive Steam Communication between Britain and British India, a cause which he continued zealously and perseveringly to support to the hour of his lamented death."

My Lord, if this resolution required any powers of eloquence or persuasion, I should have shrunk from the task imposed upon me; but it requires only to be received to be appreciated. There is not a heart in any one whom I address, or any belonging to a friend of Steam Navigation between England and this country, specially of the friends of that great and comprehensive scheme which we are met to promote, that does not respond to the praises of Lord William Bentinck on this subject; it would indeed, be ungrateful in us, if it were not so. It was here from the first he endeavoured to promote the cause we have at heart. He first took up the plan and laboured in its support with unwearied perseverance. After witnessing his anxious endeavours to promote it here, I can speak to his earnest exertions in its favour in England, and so he continued, I may say, up to the period of his death. One of the last persons I saw at Paris on my way here, was Lord William Bentinck, and I had a long conversation with him upon the subject, which he felt as warmly as ever. I was with him continually during the sitting of 1837, of that Committee in which he was Chairman, and of which he was the main supporter. From the hour of the appointment of that Committee, for three hours every morning, his house was filled with persons, who were in attendance there, that the evidence might be marshalled and all in preparation for the Committee. Nor did he confine his exertions to that Committee,—there was not a steamer of any note or power that he did not personally visit and inspect, for the purpose of informing his mind more fully on this subject.

We must look back with feelings of gratitude to him while he lived, and of respect to his memory now that he is dead—we must look forward with distrust now that he is taken from us. I declare that I know not a man on whom I could put my finger, in the British House of Commons, to advocate our cause as a worthy successor of Lord William. There is no man who could bring his weight and influence, or his knowledge,—his straight-forward character, his integrity of purpose. Lord William had a weight in the House of Commons, which probably we should find in few possess whose services we might be able to procure. Other men, would be considered the advocates of this or that part of India,—the late Governor-General would be considered only as advocating that which was best for India.

There is one fact I know well,—that while the state of his health compelled him to avoid taking any part in matters connected with India, from this rule he made an exception in favor of the cause of steam. With feelings of the deepest gratitude to him, I look forward with little hope of finding a fitting successor.

There is no need for me to dilate further on this subject. I have avoided speaking upon the general merits of his government, upon which there may be a difference of opinion; though I should scarcely, for my own part, think it necessary to avoid it. I do not, however, mean to say that I agreed with Lord William Bentinck in all his views. He knew very well I did not agree with him in some. My opinion one way or other was of little consequence; but in this great object of steam navigation, we had no difference of opinion. Many may differ from his views on various points; but whatever difference of opinion there may be, all, I believe, will give him credit for honesty of purpose and integrity of heart. We all know and feel the loss which we have sustained. In expressing my own personal sorrow for his lamented death, I but express a feeling in which every person here present will sincerely and deeply participate.

Dwarkanauth Tagore Esq.—Gentlemen, after what has been said by my friend Mr Turton, I need not enlarge much upon the praises of Lord William Bentinck. His is a name which no native of this country can mention without regret. Respecting his being the friend of the natives, there can be but one opinion. He raised them to the high estate which they now enjoy. Before Lord William's time, the natives were not made so much of by the Governors. I do not wish to bring any accusation against Lord William's predecessors,—perhaps they might be fully employed in more important matters; but it was he who raised the natives,—he first gave them private audiences. Before his time they had only been treated with pawn and altar, and this did not give them satisfaction. The Medical College, of his instituting, gave the great blow to the prejudices of the country. The Hindoo College has done much, but it is the Medical College that has done most for the natives. It has saved the lives of thousands, and the youths who are being educated there, will go forth thence throughout the country and be a blessing to its inhabitants. Gentlemen, it is with heart-felt pleasure that I second the resolution.

Mr. Turton. After the manner in which the resolution has been seconded with so much feeling, by our friend, Dwarkanauth Tagore, who may be considered as representing the whole native community, I think nothing more is necessary than to submit it for your approbation.

The resolution was then put and carried unanimously.

The last resolution was proposed by Captain Johnston, seconded by T. E. M. Turton, Esq., and carried by acclamation.

"That the thanks of the meeting be given to the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, for His Lordship's kindness in taking the Chair, on the occasion of a Meeting so interesting to all the friends of Steam Communication with England, as also for His Lordship's able conduct therein, and his constant, warm and energetic advocacy of the cause."

The Right Reverend Chairman then briefly returned his acknowledgments, and expressed his readiness to forward, by every means in his power, the interests of this and all other plans for the benefit of the country.

The meeting separated at about twenty minutes past eleven.—Hurkaru, Aug. 20.

CALCUTTA DOCKING ASSOCIATION.

The Calcutta Docking Association's fifth half-yearly meeting was held at the office of the Secretaries, on Tuesday the 27th inst., when the following report was read, approved of, and ordered to be printed.

Fifth Half Yearly Report upon the proceedings of the Calcutta Docking Company—to 30th June 1835.

The Committee regret to have nothing very favorable to lay before the proprietors as the result of the past half year. Docking business has been unusually slack, and although twenty-seven vessels have been docked against thirty during the former year, the work they required was, in most cases, of trivial importance and amount. The total amount realized during the past half year upon repairing jobs, is Co.'s Rs. 1,60,678 3-6 New work, none.

One of the Steamers building for the Steam Tug Association was launched in December last, the other is now nearly completed, and will be ready for launching the next spring. The Committee accruing to this Company upon these jobs is estimated at Rs. 500 and has been carried to credit of Commission account, subject to adjustment with Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. when the accounts for materials and labor have been closed. In the manner the Commission upon the Eastern Dockyard, built at Kidderpore, and which ship was launched on the 13th July, estimated at Rs. 11,000, has been also carried to credit of Commission account.

The Committee regret to report, no other new work upon land at either Dock.

A tender was made to Government, under their advertisement, to build their new large steamer of 700 tons. In the estimate of which every possible precaution was taken to define most clearly the work to be done, and thus prevent the loss which occurred upon a former occasion either from errors, which our builders could not foresee. The cost of materials was taken at the rates of the day, which happened to be low, and the estimated profit upon the work was about 25,000 or ten per cent, upon the total value of the vessel when complete; still the tender was rejected although we believe the lowest of two before it was made. The time, with the courteous remark that it was too short; and it is understood that a contract from Madras to build on very low terms, has been accepted by Government.

The Committee have nothing particular to remark upon the general detail of the proceedings. Every exertion has been made to reduce the amount of outstandings against the Company, and it will be found that after paying off the Executors of J. Kyd, our present position is far more favorable than it was upon the 30th June, 1838. At that date the total amount of engagements still outstanding for the cost of the Docks and for Materials was Co.'s Rs. 6,06,367-12, since which the sum of Co.'s Rs. 1,71,802-12-0 has been paid up by new subscribers, to complete the 600 shares, and subscribers in default—reducing the present liabilities by this, and other items to the sum of Co.'s Rs. 4,34,564. To save the compound interest we are paying to the Banks for part of this assistance, the Committee are in hopes of effecting a favorable arrangement for a loan for two years, upon mortgage of the Kidderpore property, at an easy rate of interest; they have not yet succeeded in disposing of any of the property at Howrah, but a decision has been made at a small expense for the erection of separating walls which they trust will ere long enable them to do so.

Captain Gordon was elected from those gentlemen who tendered upon the Company's advertisement

Superintendent, resident at Kidderpore; but the duties of this yard alone have required all his attention. The general Superintendence, therefore, contemplated at the last Meeting, has not for economy's sake been adopted. The Howrah Yard remains under charge of the builder Mr. Hanton. No builder has been appointed at Kidderpore in succession of Mr. Bremner, who has resigned. The Purser assistant remains in charge of this department.

The Committee have to report that their tender for the conduct of all Government repairs upon their Pilot Vessels and Boats and Buoys, &c. has been accepted for three years, from the 1st June; but the terms are such that little advantage will accrue to the Docking Company, except in the occasional employment of their Docks and the keeping their workmen from idleness.

An answer has been received from Captain Henderson in England, with an Engineer's Estimate of the cost of converting the lower Howrah Dock into a Slip and Dock for the largest sized Steamships, but the expenses would be too enormous to be thought of, being upwards of a lac of rupees; but another plan has been suggested which, if feasible, will enable the Committee to recommend it to the notice of subscribers, as entailing a trifling comparative expense for the great object to be obtained. The subject is necessarily deferred till the next General Meeting.

The abstract of realizations during the past half year for Dock hire, House rent, and profit on Materials expended, less the charges for interest, Establishment, contingencies and Secretary's commission, shews an estimated profit of Co.'s Rs. 50,437-14-6 equal to about 8 per cent. for six months upon the Capital, which has now been paid up on for the arrangement made at the last General Meeting for the disposal of all the shares.

In addition to which the balance at credit of the Reserved Fund in accordance with a Resolution at the last Yearly Meeting, after deducting the loss on building the Enterprise 17,654-14-11, is Co.'s Rs. 30,594-15-2.

Calcutta, 27th August, 1839.

Subsequent to the reading of the report, it was resolved, to empower the Directors to call a special meeting of subscribers speedily, for the purpose of amending certain rules of the Company, and to revise the Association's present establishment.

Thanks being voted to the chairman, the meeting dissolved. —Barkara, August, 29.

UNION BANK.

A Special Meeting of the Proprietors of the Union Bank was held yesterday (Wednesday August 30,) at noon for the purpose of considering a proposal of the Directors, to appoint an Assistant Secretary and Auditor to the Bank; and their recommendation of Mr. A. G. Paterson to that situation, and their election of Mr. J. DeCruz to be Accountant, in the room of Mr. A. H. Sim, resigned.

THEODORE DIONNE, Esq., was called to the Chair.

The following resolution was proposed by Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, seconded by Col. McLeod, and carried unanimously: That the recommendation of the Directors be approved and confirmed, for the appointment of an Assistant Secretary and Auditor of Accounts, with a salary of Co.'s Rs. 800; and that Mr. A. G. Paterson be nominated to fill the same. Also for the appointment of Mr. J. DeCruz to be Accountant, on a salary of Co.'s Rs. 600 per month.

Longueville Clarke, Esq., then read to the meeting a comparative abstract of the expense incurred for their respective establishments by the Bank of Bengal and the Union Bank. From this statement, it would appear, that the amount paid to Assistants, &c. in the latter, is considerably less than in the former one, being in the Union Bank Rs. 5,721 monthly, while in the Bank of Bengal it is Rs. 9,165. The expense of the house-rent is also much in favour of the Union Bank; the monthly rent of its premises being only Rs. 400, while the buildings of the Bank of Bengal have cost the proprietors no less than a lakh and twenty thousand rupees.

Mr. Clarke further stated, that in consequence of the recent great increase in the capital of the Bank, it would be necessary to augment the native establishment. The proprietors would, therefore, he hoped, be prepared to receive, at some future meeting, the suggestions of the Directors on that head. The increase of expenses would not be more than three or four hundred rupees per month.

There being no other business or proposition for its consideration, the Chairman received the thanks of the meeting, and it was dissolved, after a short sitting of about a quarter of an hour.—Hurkaru, August 29.

DISTRICT CHARITABLE SOCIETY.

Extract from Proceedings of the Central Committee of the District Charitable Society, at a Meeting held on the 30th July, 1839.

ST. JAMES'S DISTRICT COMMITTEE.

Read a letter of the 17th instant, from Mr. C. Kerr, Secretary of the District Committee, containing a proposal for building a separate Alma House for the St. James's District poor, the estimated cost being 1,000 rupees, inclusive of the purchase of a piece of ground.

On receiving this application from the St. James's District Committee, for erecting an Alma House for the reception of the poor of that district, instead of sending them to the Old Church District Alma House, where there is no space to receive them, and upon the suggestion of the Sub-Committee (Mr. McFarlan, Mr. Lewis, and Captain R. J. H. Birch) appointed on the 25th June to enquire into the practicability of establishing an Asylum for able bodied indigent females—it was Proposed by the President and resolved, that a Special Committee, consisting of the following gentlemen, viz.

From the Central Committee, Messrs. D. McFarlan, J. Lewis and Captain R. J. H. Birch;

From the Old Church Committee, Messrs. Joseph Young, and William Balston;

From the St. James Committee, Messrs. C. Kerr, and W. H. Perkins, and;

From the Cathedral Committee, Messrs. R. Molloy, and J. Llewelyn,

Should be appointed to enquire and report whether the distribution of the Charitable Funds of the District Charitable Society may not, both as to infirm, and able bodied persons, be better conducted through the medium of one General Alma House, to which the poor of all Districts shall be sent; and whether the present mode of relieving the greater proportion of the poor at their own dwellings, should not be wholly discontinued.

The Committee are requested to consider whether, if they are of opinion, that relief should be generally afforded to the indigent poor from an Asylum or poor house, what exceptions they would recommend to the general rule. Also, if they recommend an asylum or poor house, to state plan of government, give estimates, &c.

The Committee are also required to report on the present state of the Alma House in the Old Church District, and on the proposal made by the St. James's Committee to erect an Alma House.

The Secretary of the Native Committee, Baboo Rasmoy Dutt, is also to put himself in communication with the above Special Committee, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the Asylum for native poor may not be connected with, and form a ward of, the General Asylum.

And that the Report be made on the last Tuesday in Nov.

J. GREGORY VOA, M. D. Secretary.

5th August, 1839. C. C. D. C. Society.

In conformity with the above resolutions, a meeting was held this morning, (Tuesday, August 27,) at the Town Hall, after some discussion, it was resolved, that it is expedient to erect an Alma House for the reception of the poor of the St. James's District, and instead of a monthly allowance, they will receive rations, &c. The ways and means are to be discussed Tuesday after next.

27th August, 1839.—Hurkaru, August 29.

THE CALCUTTA MECHANIC'S INSTITUTION.

On Tuesday evening, the 27th August, about eighty members of the Mechanics's Institution, assembled at the Town Hall, to hear the first Report of the Committee. The Rev. Mr. Boaz, one of the Vice-Presidents of the Society, having taken the chair, the Secretary read a full Report of the proceedings since the formation of the Society.

The Report stated, that since the establishment of the Institution, there had been realized, by subscriptions and donations the sum of Company's rupees 7,417; that the sum of Company's rupees 853 had been expended on incidental charges, and that there was now a balance of Rs. 508-5-10 at the Union Bank. On this subject, it also stated, that a Sub-committee of finances had been appointed for the purpose of inspecting all bills before they were paid. Besides the donations in money, which alone amounted to 5,401, a variety of valuable and useful scientific instruments and apparatus, and a great number of books had been presented to the Institution, a list of which was read for the information of the meeting. The number of Members composing the Society had, to the date of the Report, come up to 405.

A Sub-Committee had also been formed, to provide accommodations for the Society; but had experienced great difficulties in procuring a suitable place for that purpose. Their report, embodied in the report of the Committee, was read. It pointed out one or two plans of buildings, which were illustrated by drawings that lay on the table. The Committee had also endeavored to hire the rooms of the Benevolent Institution, but could not obtain them. The Committee had, however, succeeded in arranging with Mrs. Leach, for the use of the Sans Souci, when it was not otherwise occupied for the purposes of the Mechanics' Institution. An enquiry had also been made as to the practicability of effecting a union of the Mechanics' Institution with the Agri-Horticultural Society of India, and the Public Library, for the purpose of erecting a building suited for the joint use of the three Societies. The correspondence on this subject having already appeared in the public prints, we mention it only as the subject at any length.

A Sub-Committee of books and papers had also been formed, and had prepared a list of books necessary to complete a library for the Institution, and arrangements had been made with Messrs. Ostell and Co. for the supply.

Since the formation of the Society, only one member had voluntarily seceded; but a case of more painful and serious character had occurred, in which the Committee had acted under a sense of duty and justice to itself and the Society it represented. The circumstances are briefly these:—

"The publication of an anonymous letter, calculated to prejudice the public mind against this Committee, and reflecting in unwarrantable terms on several members of its body. The subsequent avowal of authorship, accompanied by an offer to prove before the Committee the truth of the injurious assertions so published; and when called upon, at a Special Meeting, to substantiate his charges, his refusal to redeem the pledge previously given.

"The letter alluded to, was circulated amongst the Members of the Committee, together with the acknowledgment of authorship, and the offer to substantiate the charges it contained. There was one general opinion as to the incorrectness of its statements, and the wicked spirit in which they were conceived."

"At a Special Meeting, held on the 23rd August, at which were present eleven members."

"It was resolved, that, with reference to Mr. Atkins's acknowledgment of having made certain communications to the Hurkaru newspaper, and in accordance with rule 30, a Special Meeting of the Committee be held at the Englishman's office, on Monday evening next, for the purpose of enquiring into Mr. Atkins's conduct in that matter, and that his attendance on the occasion be requested."

"Of this Resolution, the Secretary was instructed to forward a copy, and a request that that gentleman would comply with the requisition. Two letters were received—the one stating that his compliance with the request, would depend on his being furnished with the comments of the Committee on his conduct; and in the other declining to appear at the Meeting, on the ground that the feeling of the Committee was hostile towards him, the Meeting named in the Resolution, took place last night, at which 15 members were present.

The following Resolution was unanimously passed:—

"That the Revd. Mr. T. Atkins, not having appeared, in accordance with the request, contained in Resolution the first, passed on the 23d August, to justify his conduct, with reference to his acknowledged authorship of the letter signed Verras, and having, by his subsequent conduct, aggravated his offence, the Committee, under this opinion, feel called upon, under Rule 30 of the Institution, to eject him from his present Membership."

After the report had been read, its adoption was moved by Dr. C. D. Mitchell, and seconded by Mr. V. R. Rao. On putting the resolution to the vote, the chairman called to the recollection of the meeting, that by adopting the Report of the Committee, they were in fact approving of all that the Committee had done, and also of the line which the Committee intended in future to pursue. He therefore wished to know if any gentleman had any remark to offer.

Mr. L. Clint, wished to have further particulars about the expulsion of the Revd. Mr. Atkins. In this call he was supported by another, whose name we could not learn. The observations of this latter gentleman appeared to excite a good deal of indignation, and there was much confusion and noise in consequence. Some order having at length been restored, the chairman proceeded to take the sense of the meeting, whether further particulars, connected with the Revd. Mr. Atkins's expulsion, should be gone into; but he was again interrupted by the last speaker, who, being called to order, the resolution of Mr. Clint, was put to the vote and negatived. The original resolution, viz, the adoption of the report, was then put and carried by a large majority, on which the individual who had been the cause of the confusion, retired.

Dr. Corby now rose to move the second resolution.

"That the lectures which have been delivered in this Institution, meet the approbation of the members, and that all lectures on interesting branches of science be continued."

In a speech of considerable length, the Doctor fully explained the connection of the various subjects on which lectures had been already delivered, with the pursuits of a mechanic. He pointed out the advantages of lecturing on those subjects, and showed their benefit to mankind in general. He entered on the merits of each lecture, and the reception it had met with and without the Mechanics' Institution. He concluded by calling on the meeting to approve of the lectures that had been delivered. He was frequently and loudly cheered during his speech. The resolution having been seconded, was carried unanimously.

Lieut. Kittoe, with a few appropriate observations, moved the following resolution:—

"That with reference to the proposed union of this Institution, with the Agri-Horticultural Society of India, and the Public Library, the members and friends of the Society be called upon to subscribe towards a Building Fund, but that the Committee shall be fully at liberty to appropriate such funds to the erection or purchase of a building independent of the Institutions before named, should circumstances render it more expedient."

This was seconded by Mr. M. Rochfort, and after some explanations had been called for and given, it was carried unanimously.

Mr. J. Middleton, in a very good speech, moved the following resolution:—

Resolved,—That the Committee be empowered to appoint a teacher, upon a moderate salary, to instruct a class in the elements of Mechanics.

This was seconded by Mr. M. Crow, and carried unanimously.

The Chairman then proposed that Messrs. Johnson and Speed be appointed Auditors of accounts. This was also carried unanimously.

The usual thanks were then voted to the chair, and the meeting dissolved at about 9.—Hurk. August 9.

HALF-YEARLY REPORT OF THE MECHANIC'S INSTITUTION,

The Committee of the Mechanic's Institution begs to report, that since its establishment there has been realized by Subscriptions and Donations the sum of Co. Rs. 2,417,

By the accounts now laid before you, it will be seen, that from the accounts so realized, it has been necessary to withdraw for incidental charges the sum of £6. 3s. 6d. 10. 2, and that there is consequently in the present time a balance in the Union Bank of £6. 3s. 6d. 10. 2.

It is proper to state, that with a view to order in pecuniary matters, a Sub-Committee of Finance was specially appointed, to which, and the Vice Presidents, all bills have been submitted previously to payment.

The following were the Gentlemen appointed:

Mr. G. T. J. Speeds.

Mr. H. Crow.

Mr. W. Matthews.

Harbo, Remond and Mitter.

The interest which has been excited in favour of the Institution may be inferred from the following long list of those who a liberality has been successfully appealed to on its behalf. [here follows the list of names.] The total amount of these several sums being £6. 3s. 6d. 10. 2.

The spirit of liberality and encouragement has not been confined to the gifts just enumerated; many of the friends whose names have been read to you, have levied further obligations on the gratitude of the Society by donation of valuable books and apparatus, and the example has in some instances been followed by the kindness of anonymous contributors, to whom and to all other benefactors the Committee, on behalf of the Institution, thus publicly tenders its grateful acknowledgments.

Of Books and apparatus, the following is a correct statement.

Mr. R. Blechynden, — a Pamphlet, Thoughts how to better the condition of Indo-Britons.

From a lover of Science, 4 pieces of Apparatus. — 1st, an Instrument for exhibiting the composition of water by exploding a mixture of its component gases by electricity. — 2nd, an Instrument for exhibiting the decomposition of water by the Galvanic Battery, and for collecting the produce. — 3d, Radiometer for decomposing gases. — 4th, an Instrument for effecting decompositions by the aid of the Galvanic Battery.

Since the formation of the society up to the present period, 405 persons have been registered as Members.

The Committee has long felt the necessity of obtaining a house or premises suitable for carrying out the practical purposes and objects with which the original establishment of the Institution was associated: the great number of persons for whom it is necessary to provide accommodation, renders it a matter of extreme difficulty; no place, sufficiently capacious for all the contemplated purposes having even as yet presented itself, save at an expense which the means of the Society could not with justice or propriety attempt to meet.

At an early stage of the proceedings of the Committee on this matter it was found necessary to form a Sub-Committee of Buildings, with a direct reference to the object just stated.

The Committee so appointed consisting of the following Gentlemen; viz.

Messrs. J. Middleton.

" E. Gray.

" J. M. Vos, and

was instructed to enquire—

1st. Whether the Government possessed any unemployed ground in an eligible situation, fit for the erection of a Building suited to the wants of the Institution, and whether such ground could be obtained from the Government as a gift.

2dly Finding in that, to ascertain upon what terms the Institution could effect the purchase either of ground for the erection of a Building, or premises which might be rendered available for the required purposes, by addition or alteration.

3rdly To adopt measures for having temporarily a room or rooms in which to effect some of the practical objects of the Institution.

The Committee has been furnished with the following reply on these several points

SUB COMMITTEE OF BUILDING

The Members of the Building Committee beg to report to the General Committee of the Calcutta Mechanics' Institution, that they have satisfactorily ascertained, that the Government has no ground in an eligible situation suited for the purposes of the Institution, and, therefore, in accordance with the minute at the last Monthly Meeting, commenced negotiating for other ground. The old Masonic Lodge in the Dhurumtollah has been presented itself, and your Committee would recommend its purchase, if it can be obtained for 5 or 6,000 rupees; the present building on the spot would afford sufficient accommodation for the purpose of the Institution with the proposed Theatre, for which, there is ample space. The probable cost of the Theatre and repairs of the present buildings would be from 11 to 12,000 rupees. In the event of not being able to obtain the Lodge on the terms recommended, they beg to point out to the notice of the Committee another spot not far from the Lodge, and in the same street, it consists of about one biggah of ground, and contains a lower-roofed house and shed suitable for a Laboratory and Workshop; it may be obtained for about 4,000 rupees and in the opinion of Mr. Vos, a Member of the Committee, is preferable to the Lodge, having a wider frontage and greater extent of ground.

The erection of a Theatre with one or two rooms for Library and Museum will be necessary, for there there is abundant space, as the accompanying rough sketch of the ground will show, a plan of the proposed buildings is added.

J. Vos.

E. GRAY

P. S. D. ROZARIO.

In compliance with the further request of the General Committee, that this Committee should adopt the necessary measures for having, temporarily, a room or rooms to enable the General Committee to carry into effect some of the practical purposes of the Institution this Committee has further to state, that on the representation and recommendation of the Revd. Mr. Boaz they have inspected the Rooms of the "Benevolent Institution," situated in the Bow Bazar Street, and "are unanimously of opinion that they offer, in a temporary point of view, accommodation both for the delivery of Lectures and the formation of Classes."

The Secretary having been instructed to make application on the subject of the "Benevolent Institution," and to learn from the trustees of the Building the terms upon which it would or could be let, the following reply has been received from the Revd. J. D. Ellis, from which it will be seen, that the hope of effecting any arrangement for the use of the "Benevolent Institution," may be considered at an end

To, GEO. GRANT, Esq. Secy. Mechanics' Institution.

MY DEAR SIR,—In answer to yours of the 23d August, which I received on Saturday, I beg to say, that however much I may approve of the Mechanics' Institution, as the Benevolent Institution, the building I mean, is held in trust for specified objects, I do not at present see my way clear in recommending to the Trustees its partial appropriation for the purposes you mention.

Yours truly,
Jno. D. Ellis.

26th August, 1839.

In compliance with another suggestion the Secretary was instructed to ascertain by application to the Secretary of the New Theatre, whether the Proprietors would consent to let the use, for occasional purposes of the Sans Souci, and if so upon what terms. The Committee has much pleasure in stating that the reply received this day from Mr. J. W. Peterson tends to the hope, that for the present the search for accommodation may be looked upon as satisfactorily concluded, so far as regards the delivery of Lectures, and the establishment of classes.

To Geo. GRANT, Esq. &c. &c.

SIR,—In reply to your letter of this day, I have to inform you that Mrs. Leach has no objection to let the "Sans Souci" to the Mechanics' Institution for the sum of Rs. Rupees 30 (thirty) a month, provided as you have stated in your letter, that the arrangement does not in any way interfere with the entertainments to be given there. On future evenings will be Wednesdays and Thursdays the former for rehearsal, in the latter, the night of performance, the other days of the week it can be at your service.

I am, yours truly,

J. W. PETERSON, Secy.

Pending these enquiries a suggestion arose as to the practicability of effecting a union of the Mechanics' Institution, the Agricultural Society of India and the Public Library, for the purpose of erecting a Building suited for the joint use of the three Societies—the object appeared to the Committee calculated not merely to accomplish, with greater economy, the acquisition of a Building but as likely to invest the Institution with a deeper interest in the public mind.

With this impression the Secretary was instructed to open a communication with the Secretaries respectively of "the Agricultural Society," and "the Public Library," explanatory of the wishes of the Committee, and urging a fair consideration of the mutual benefits which might result from the recommended union of the three institutions—not so dissimilar in character and tendency as to render the hope of effecting it a very unreasonable expectation, and doubtful so far only as the fair proportion of the required means, might exceed the capability of this Institution to contribute towards its accomplishment.

To GEORGE GRANT, Esq., Secy. to the Mechanics' Institute.

SIR,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th instant, communicating a proposal of the General Committee of the Mechanics' Institution to join with the Agricultural Society and this Institution, in erecting a Building for the use of the three Societies, with a view to save that expence which would be incurred by each Society providing for itself a separate building.

In reply I am directed to inform you, that before the Curators can come to any decision on this subject, they are desirous to know what sum your Society could in all probability contribute towards the attainment of this object.

I have also been directed to open a communication with the Secretary of the Agri-Horticultural Society, in order to ascertain whether that Society is in possession of funds available for this purpose, and is disposed to come into the contemplated arrangement.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

PEARCE AND MITRA, Librarian

Library Room, 15th July, 1839.

To Mr Gao. Grant Secy, Mechanics' Institution.

Sir,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th instant, relative to a suggestion made by the General Committee of the Mechanics' Institution, concerning the propriety of employing messengers for carrying a Basket for the use of the Institute, Public Library, and Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India jointly,—and in reply, beg to state, that all the plans are deftly arranged, so that the amount absolutely required for the erection of the building of the kind now alluded to, be known, it is impossible, however anxious the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India may be to join in such an undertaking to decide what degree of support should be accorded.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your obdt. servant,

HENRY H. SPRY, M. D., Secretary,

Agri and Hort. Society's Rooms,

Calcutta, July 23d 1839.

Mr Gao Grant, Secretary to the Mechanics' Institute.

Sir,—At the desire of the Special Committee appointed by the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, to enquire and communicate with the representatives of the Mercantile Institution, the Mercantile Library Fund and the Public Library, in order to prepare a plan and submit estimates for a building that shall be well adapted to the purposes of the Public Library, and this Society, or to the purposes of the Public Library, the Mechanics' Institute and the Society,—I have to beg the favor, in reference to your letter of the 7th instant, of your informing me if the Mechanics' Institute is prepared to come forward with the sum of Company's Rupees Ten Thousand, towards the contemplated new House, and further that you will be so good as to furnish me with a ground plan of the permanent accommodation which the Institute may require, mentioning the amount of square feet, with the number and size of the rooms.

As the Committee have adjourned their further sitting till your reply be received, I have to beg the favor of as early an answer as practicable.

Sir, your's obediently and faithfully,

HENRY H. SPRY, M. D., Secretary

Agri. and Hort. Society's Room, Town

Hall, Calcutta, August 13th, 1839.

The last Letter requires no comment from the Committee—it appeals directly to every Member of the Institution, and it must be shown by the result of this meeting whether the hope of effecting so desirable an end may be further indulged or at once abandoned.

I concluding this part of their report, the Committee beg to state that from the representations of the two Societies (with which it is desirable that this Institution should be united under one roof) the proposition has received all the consideration and support which was either anticipated or conceived to be in their power to afford it.

FORMATION OF A LIBRARY.

As the formation of a Library appeared to the Committee an object of considerable importance, the following Gentlemen, viz

Mr W P Grant,

Dr Mellicham,

Mr. J. Middleton, and

under the title of a Special Committee of Books and Papers, were instructed to take the necessary steps for providing such Scientific, Periodical or other Works, as in their judgment should be well suited for the Institution in its present state.

From the gentlemen so appointed, the Committee accordingly received the following list of arrangements since been entered into with the Firm of F. Oriel and Co., both for the purchase of such books, as are necessary to complete or fill up the deficiencies in the works already possessed by the Society and for the supplying at regular and stated terms, of the periodicals recommended.

[Here follow the list of books, which it is unnecessary to detail]

The Committee takes this opportunity of stating its sense of Dr Hufnagel's kindness in having undertaken to supply the Journals of the London Institution at the American price of publication, free of all other charges.

In making this selection the Committee had been guided by views of economy and a wish to put the Institution in possession of works of practical utility and acknowledged merit in one instance only has the purchase of the works recommended subjected the Institution to present or heavy outlay. Of one work named in the list last before you, the Edinburgh Philosophical Journal 17 vols. have been purchased from the Curators of the Public Library, at 2 rupees per vol.

There may be a little difficulty in obtaining the volumes required to complete the work, but even in its present state it is thought up and worthy of a place in the intended Library of the Institution.

As the order of business prescribed for this occasion requires, that the Committee should report the resolutions of members—it is necessary to state that voluntary subscription one instance only has been brought to notice, the reason assigned being that the member who refused admission for himself and two sons, who, it should be observed, were not Members.

A case of a more painful and serious character remains to be laid before the Meeting—in reporting the circumstances connected with the Committee's recently assured the Members, that it is full to be an imperative duty, both in justice to itself and the Society it represents.

The circumstances are briefly these—

The publication of an anonymous letter circulated to prejudice the public mind against the Committee and reflecting in unwarrantable terms on several Members of its body.

The subsequent removal of authorship, accompanied by an offer to prove before the Committee, the truth of the injurious assertions so published, and when called upon at a special Meeting to substantiate his charges, his refusal to redeem the pledge previously given.

The letter alluded to, was circulated amongst the Members of this Committee together with the acknowledgment of authorship, and the offer to substantiate the charges it contained—there was one general opinion, as to the incorrectness of its statements and the unkind spirit in which they were conceived.

At a Special Meeting held on the 23d August, at which were present eleven gentlemen.

It was resolved—"That with reference to Mr. Atkins's acknowledgement of having made certain communications to the Hurkuru newspaper, and in accordance with rule 40, a Special Meeting of the Committee be held at the Englishman Office on Monday evening next, for the purpose of enquiring into the Revd. gentleman's conduct in that matter, and that his attendance on the occasion be requested."

Of this resolution the Secretary was instructed to forward a copy, and a request that the gentleman would comply with the requisition. Two letters were received, the one stating that his compliance with the request would depend on his being furnished with the comments of the Committee on his conduct, and the other declining to appear at the Meeting on the ground that the feeling of the Committee was hostile towards him.

The Meeting named in the resolution took place last night, seventy-five gentlemen were present.

The following resolution was unanimously passed:

"That the Revd Mr Atkins, for having appeared in accordance with the request contained in resolution first passed on the 23d August, to justify his conduct with reference to his acknowledged authorship of the letter signed 'Paritas,' and having by his subsequent conduct aggravated his offence, the Committee under this opinion feel called upon, under Rule 22 of the Institution, to reject him from his present Membership."

August 27.—Hurkuru, August 30 and 31.

MEETING AT JESSORE.

On the 23d July a meeting of the residents at Jessore was held at the billiard-room for the purpose of taking into consideration the improvement of the Station, and the most feasible way, of procuring funds for carrying this very desirable object into execution.

Mr Sanlys having been requested to take the chair, it was proposed that the following European and Native gentlemen be requested to form the local committee for the improvement of the Station of Jessore, viz

E. Doole, Esq.	Rajah Burlacanth Roy
T. Sandys, Esq.	Kally Padar.
F. Lowth, Esq.	Baboo Hurry Narain,
H. C. Halkett, Esq.	and
A. I. Smith, Esq.	Baboo Boidanauth Sin

That Doctor Anderson, be requested to act as Secretary, and Mr Terraneau as Treasurer to the committee.

That a meeting of the committee be called by the Secretary, to consider the propriety of every proposed improvement at, or in the vicinity of the Station, and that a general meeting of subscribers be held on the 1st Monday of every month, to receive a report of proceedings and of the expenses incurred during the preceding month.

Proposed by Mr. Lowth and seconded by Mr. Sandys.

That Mr Parry be requested to give his valuable assistance to the Secretary in overlooking the work of the prisoners, and in putting out their daily tasks.

Proposed by Mr Sutherland and seconded by Mr Smith.

As the health of their officers has ever been a subject of the greatest attention to the British Government in India, and as the services of many of the Omlahs are lost, and public business retarded, by sickness, the consequence of the insalubrity of the climate of Jessore, that Government be requested to assist us in our endeavours to remove the causes of disease at, and in the vicinity of the Station, by placing funds for that purpose at the disposal of the Committee.

Proposed by Mr. Lowth and seconded by Mr. Terraneau.

That the local committee use their utmost endeavours to induce the owners of bamboos and jungle of all kinds about the Station, to remove the same.

Proposed by Mr. Sandys seconded by Mr. Smith.

That a well be sunk in the centre of the space opposite the Collector's Kutcherry, for the purpose of supplying the Station with wholesome drinking water.

Proposed by Mr. Lowth, seconded by Mr. Terraneau.

That immediate means be adopted for the removal of all the native huts situated to the north and the west of the Collector's Kutcherry, and south and west of the Judge's Office, and of the Court house, as they are an absolute nuisance to the Station and are supposed to be within the limits of the eschewed lands.

Proposed by Mr. Reilly seconded by Mr. Harklotts.

That proper drains be constructed where required and that the roads at and in the vicinity of the Station be mended, cleaned, and as many as possible made 'pukka.'

Proposed by the Secretary, seconded by Mr. Lowth.

As the principal cause of disease in the Station and its neighbourhood exists, in the Bhyrui, which the greater part of the year contains all the noxious effluvia of a stagnant pool, and at the termination of the rains recedes to a very great extent, exposing an immense quantity of vegetable and animal matter to the powerful influence of the sun's rays, by which these substances are rapidly converted into a state of putrefaction, the effluvia emitted from which, by contaminating the surrounding atmosphere, cannot render it highly destructive to the health of those who reside in its vicinity, that early means be taken for the improvement of the river, and that an application be made to Government for the advice of the Executive Officer of this Division as to the best mode of carrying the object into effect.

Proposed by Mr. Lowth and seconded by Mr. Stoppord.

That Mr Smith be requested to lend his valuable aid to the Committee in surveying and taking the level of the station and its neighbourhood, to facilitate draining and other improvements.

Proposed by Mr. Lowth, seconded by Mr. Reilly.

That a fund be established for the purpose of enclosing the station burial ground, and for the repair of the older tombs therein.

Proposed by Mr. Terraneau, and seconded by Mr. Lowth.

That 8 carts and 20 bullocks be entrusted by the Committee to assist in the various improvements now in contemplation.

Proposed by Mr. Lowth seconded by Mr. Sandys.

Considering the great traffic from Middelburg, Comperally, Sylhet, Decca, Futtehpore and other stations, and large commercial towns through Jessore to Calcutta and the vast importance of the road in a Military point of view, and for the speediest transmission of the eastern mails, which are at present very much delayed by the miserable state of the road, that a representation be made to the Government, shewing the necessity of putting the public hawk roads and more particularly the main road from this to Baraset, into thorough repair.

Proposed by Mr. Sutherland seconded by Mr. Halkett.

That subscription books be opened and extensively circulated amongst the European and native community throughout the district, for the purpose of collecting funds to assist in carrying the objects of this meeting into execution.

Proposed by Mr. Sutherland seconded by Mr. Sutherland.

As the greater number of the proprietors of zemindari in this Zillah reside in Calcutta and its suburbs that, the proceedings of this meeting be forwarded to the Editors of all the public papers with a request that they be published in their journals, with the view of including those native gentlemen and others liberally disposed, to give the Committee their support and assistance.

Proposed by Mr. Sandys and seconded by Mr. Halkett.

That the warm thanks of this meeting, are due, and be hereby returned to Mr. Lowth for his praiseworthy endeavours to convene this meeting and for his uniform attention to every proposition for the improvement of the station, or for the comfort or health of its inhabitants.

Proposed by Mr. Lowth seconded by Mr. Terraneau.

That our sincere thanks be given to Mr. Sandys for his attention to the business of the day, and for his admirable conduct in the chair.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

At a meeting, specially assembled, of the Members of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India (Forty Members were present.)

The Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, President, in the chair.

It was proposed by the President, seconded by James Patil Esq. and carried unanimously—

That this Meeting cordially approves of the union with the Trustees of the Public Library the Metcalfe Memorial and the Metcalfe Library Fund, for the purpose of providing a suitable building for the accommodation of the Public Library and of this Institution, and is prepared to contribute towards the object, and that a Special Committee, composed of Colonel McLeod, Messrs. Pauls, Bagshaw, Corbyn, Robinson, and William Grant, be appointed to enquire and communicate with the representatives (Messrs. Parker, Patil, Grant, Bagshaw, and Carr) in order to prepare a plan and submit estimates for a building that shall be well adapted to the purposes of the Public Library and this Society, or to the purpose of the Public Library, the Mechanic's Institute, and this Society, and that the same, when completed, be laid before the Society for its consideration and approval.

2. Moved by Sir John Peter Grant, seconded by H. M. Parker, Esq., and carried unanimously—

That an application be made to Government, by the aforesaid Committee, for the grant of a piece of ground suitable for the erection of the building now contemplated.

3. Moved by C. K. Robinson, Esq. seconded by R. J. Bagshaw, Esq. and carried unanimously, that in section of the foregoing resolutions be given in the public prints of Calcutta.

PRESENTATIONS TO THE SOCIETY.

Library.

Madras Journal of Literature and Science (No. 23) Presented by the Madras Literary Society.

Museum.

1. A consignment of "Chulchulbera" or the Dyeing Lichen of the Himalyah, to general use in the Upper Provinces as a Dye. Presented by Dr. Falconer.

2. A bag of the "Ghoonsah Gond" or Gum of the Butea Frondosa (Kiao) from Northern India. Presented by Dr. Falconer.

Note. The Secretary mentioned, in connection with the above contributions, that he had shipped to London a moiety of each sample for the report of the Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland.

3. Six samples (one Egyptian and five Upland Georgian) of Cotton the produce of the Saharunpore soil. Presented by Dr. Falconer.

4. Ten bags (each containing about 20 lbs) of acclimated Bourbon Cotton seed produced at Coimbatore (Southern India). Presented by J. Jackson, Esq. on behalf of Archibald Arbuthnot, Esq. of Madras.

In allusion to the Cotton produced from this seed. Dr. Arbuthnot states, "that the Bourbon seed Cotton grown in the Madras Presidency (in Coimbatore and Salem districts) is decidedly the best ever produced in India."

5. A specimen of Kino Gum obtained from the Butea Frondosa in the Purnea district (Chota Nagpore). Presented by Captain Haunington.

6. Two boxes of Egyptian Cotton seed of best quality, &c.

7. One box of Egyptian Indigo seed—both presented by Thos. Waghorn, Esq.

Note.—Mr. Waghorn desires expressly to state, that he will accept no remuneration for this consignment, and has to offer the seeds to the Society as a tribute of his regard for the Institution. A special vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Waghorn.

MOTION OF WHICH NOTICE WAS GIVEN AT THE LAST MEETING.

The motion proposed at the last Meeting by Major Carter, and seconded by Mr. Piddington, "that the sum of five hundred rupees be assigned for obtaining from abroad, a quantity of seed card for distribution or sale, the amount of each description to be determined by the Committee of Society"—was agreed to, and at the recommendation of Mr. Robinson, seconded by Mr. Deirie, a Committee composed of Major Carter, Mr. Piddington, and Mr. Speed was formed as a "Committee" for the economical expenditure of this grant.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

Proposed by Mr. Piddington and seconded by Mr. Hare, "that as a number of valuable agricultural papers are not strictly admissible in the Society's transactions, from having been printed in other books and pamphlets, it be referred to the Committee of papers, to ascertain whether the Society can without expense publish an appendix or volume of such useful papers."

THE NURSERY.

A report made by the Nursery Committee, was next read—the Committee state that since the last assembly of the society the members have twice met at the garden, where the store plants from Saharunpore have been received, but in a very ruinous condition, owing to the cases in which the young trees were packed, being slowed away in the bottom of the boat. A glazed case of dwarf fruit trees of various kinds have also been received from London, 48 of which are alive.

The Committee urge the contiguous hill station of Darjeeling as a locality the most desirable for acclimating these plants, and recommend that Dr. Campbell be addressed to aid the society with means for transporting them to this station, while the request of Messrs. Storn and Gibbon to be furnished with a portion for trial in their respective gardens near Calcutta be complied with.

The suggestions of the Nursery Committee were approved of.

PAPER BY MR. BRUCE, SUPERINTENDENT OF THE GOVERNMENT TEA OR UNDS IN ASSAM.

The Secretary called the attention of the meeting to a highly important and interesting communication, which had been forwarded to him by Dr. Wallich, Secretary of the Tea Committee, for presentation to the society. The report was a most voluminous one, and was drawn up by Mr. Bruce. It comprised a statement of the earlier proceedings on the part of himself, connected with the establishment of the tea manufactory in Upper Assam, and the difficulties he has had to encounter in the conduct of the enterprise. Several interesting facts are recorded of his personal exertions to discover the new tea colonies, which have been crowned with the most ample success. In fact Upper Assam, according to this valuable document, may be considered an entire tea garden. In many parts, one tea tract runs into the other, and, in Mr. Bruce's opinion, the extension of the cultivation is limited only by the means for working it. The tea trees of Assam are much more luxuriant than those of China, the one being described as two or three feet high, while the other attains double that size. Indeed, the Assam plants may be considered too luxuriant, and Mr. Bruce recommends, that the tea jungle be burnt or cut down so as to furnish a supply of smaller leaves. Much stress is laid on the fact of the Assam tea not being so good as it might, owing to the want of hands to pick the leaves at the proper moment; for the loss of 24 hours, when the leaf has attained its proper growth, is deemed of importance, and again the tea procured from leaves, which have had the benefit of the sun's rays, is far superior to that procured from shady tracts. The account given by Mr. Bruce of the process of manufacturing the various sorts of tea, both black and green, is novel and important. It appears, that the stage of growth of the plant regulates the production of one kind of tea from the other. The leaves of the upper stem being roasted into one kind, and the leaves of the lower branches into another kind, and Mr. Bruce expressly states, that the trees of one plantation produce both the black and green tea. The only difference consisting in the mode of preparing the leaves. The low and demoralised condition of the people is then alluded to, and the fact of the Assamese being great the natives. Gold dust is to be had at Dumbulbag, Dekkanol and elsewhere. It is washed for in the rivers and streams, and is melted into small lumps and carried to the merchants.

The "Kuth" (Catechu) and Gum of the Nates Frondosa (Kino) is common.

The variety of timber and other trees is very great. The better kinds, however, are not common. The Kend or "Tendu" (timber ebony) is very common and very fine logs are procurable. Lieutenant Kittoe has frequently met with loads of this timber, rough wrought, on the way to Midnapore for the Calcutta market.

The ebony is turned into rulers and clubs, &c. for the use of the natives.

The Nux Vomica tree ("Kachela") grows to an immense size, and the wood would, Lieutenant Kittoe thinks, be useful for furniture as well as for the bottoms of boxes, or for any purpose wherein the white ants are to be guarded against, for no insect will touch this poisonous material. The Sissoo tree (Dalbergia Sissoo) is common and of a very beautiful kind, particularly in the Cuttack Forests. As for the birds at present the best are found in the vicinity of the rivers. The Sabunrocks river is navigable for rafts for six months of the year. Be is the Bard Balung, the Brahminia, Salledoo, Kurra, Bystarnee, and these five rivers empty themselves into the sea near False Point. There are very good quarries of superior sandstone on the Brahminia, which might be worked and the stone brought up to the Calcutta market at a far lower rate of expense than the Chunar stone now.

Lieutenant Kittoe also mentions, that he is of opinion, that Flax could be grown in any quantity in the richer soils of the valleys. Wheat, barley, and gram (cicer arjetinum) thrive well. Of the latter Lieutenant Kittoe observed superb crops in Dholbhoon. "Wheat would also thrive, but the people, from the state of degradation in which they are kept by their Native Chiefs, cultivate only sufficient to suffice for their limited wants. From what Lieutenant Kittoe has heard of the soil, localities of Assam, and from the specimens of tea soil which he has inspected, it occurs to him that the Karjer Mountains would be well calculated for the cultivation of this valuable shrub.

Lieutenant Kittoe hopes to be able, in the approaching cold season, to open a line of road from the Bihar Province to Midnapore, and thus the trade of those parts, instead of going by the tedious and circuitous route of Cuttack, be brought into a more direct and favourable one, to the banks of the Sabunrocks, where the hill wild races who frequent this part of the Province might have a mart established for them. Threesuch places already exist, but not in such favourable localities as Lieutenant Kittoe would recommend. The considerable traffic at some former points, and the business of a few boats and the trade of the Sabunrocks river, would be greatly benefited by the establishment of the Chiefs, who exercise their power over the Chiefs Government, effectually checked, and the people to return to the former state of peace, by punishing all who in the least molest them. Lieutenant Kittoe, in conclusion of this most valuable paper, adds, that if he can be of any assistance to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, during his forthcoming tour, he shall be most happy in doing so.

PROGRESS OF THE SOCIETY'S EXPERIMENTAL GARDEN AT KATMANDOO, IN NEPAUL.

The Secretary next brought forward a letter from Captain Gordon at Katmandoo, intimating that he had despatched on the 27th June last, two tin boxes (which have not yet come to hand) containing 1 maund and twenty-six seeds of garden seeds, partly Cape, American and Nepalese, the produce of the Society's Horticultural Garden in that country, and asking whether the Society desire to continue its experiments in receiving plants for seed at Katmandoo. Captain Gordon, in the absence of Dr. Campbell, offers his services should the Society determine on keeping up the establishment, and furnishes a statement of expenses incurred, in which the Society possess a balance due to it of 56 Rs.

In connection with his subject, and referring to the recommendation of the Nursery Committee given in the former part of this Report, the Secretary read a letter from Dr. Campbell, now in charge of the Hill Station of Darjeeling. Dr. Campbell states, that if the Society will point out to him how he can in any way forward its objects at or near Darjeeling, it will afford him pleasure to make an effort. The members therefore determined, that Captain Gordon should be thanked for his polite offer and be informed, that the proximity of Darjeeling to Calcutta being so much greater than Katmandoo, that the continuance of the experimental garden for another year at Katmandoo be relinquished and Darjeeling be selected instead.

REPORT FURNISHED BY THE HOME COMMITTEE ON FAMILIES OF COTTON-GROWN NEAR CALCUTTA, BY CHARLES RUFFNAGLE, ESQ.

Dr. Royle, Secretary to the Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, furnishes a copy of the Broker's report on the sample of Cotton forwarded last year to England, marked in diamond and grown by Dr. Ruffnagle at his garden near Calcutta. This Cotton (vide the Secretary's "Summary" p. 51, June proceedings) was a second year's crop from seed imported by the Society in 1836. By the Cotton judges of Calcutta this date was pronounced to be the finest specimen that has been submitted to the Society, and the following is the report of Mr. Jas. R. Teiley, Cotton Broker of Mining Lane, London, April 17, 1839.

U G

"The Fibre (usually called the staple) is fine and pretty strong, but very uneven in length—a great part being very short. There is some longer and a little very long, which renders it difficult to manage on the manufacturing machine. The Cotton is clean and probably injured in the process of cleaning. The color is good, yet there are some stains which of course are objectionable. The value is about 7½d. per lb., rather more than the best Surat. If the staple were more even, at about the medium length, it would be worth 8½d., the present value of middling America Upland cotton.

"It is sufficient in the above to show, that with a regular supply of fresh seed from America, and the superintendence of people who understand the plant and its management, that Cotton of equal quality to that of America may be grown in the East Indies; an object of the first national importance, seeing how dependent this country is on America for the great bulk of the raw material.

For all the above presents and communications the thanks of the Society was expressed.

HENRY M. SPAY, M. D., Secretary.

SUPREME COURT.

August 1, 1839.

The third Session of 1839 commenced yesterday. The Court was opened with the usual formalities at half-past eleven o'clock yesterday, by the Hon'ble the Chief Justice, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Selon. The following gentlemen were elected to serve on the Grand Jury.

Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore.

Lewis Balfour, Esq.

John Moore, Esq.

W. Bracken, Esq.

D. McCullum, Esq.

J. Agabeg, Esq.

S. Palmer, Esq.

T. L. Thornton, Esq.

J. P. McKilligan, Esq.

W. C. Braddon, Esq.

D. Ainslie, Esq.

C. Dearie, Esq.

Baboo Mandub Dutt.

John Jenkins, Esq.

Wm. Bruce, Esq.

C. J. Richards, Esq.

H. V. Bayley, Esq.

J. Colquhoun, Esq.

Baboo Rambomul Sen.

David Lyall, Esq.

H. R. Alexander, Esq.

Thos. Cullen, Esq.

A. D. Rice, Esq.

Before the Grand Jury was sworn, Sir E. Ryan observed, that nine gentlemen, who had been summoned, had not answered to their names. They would not, he said, be subjected to a fine on the present occasion, but should be summoned for the next Grand Jury, and in case they did not then make their appearance, they would be fined and that heavily. Such conduct was unjust to other gentlemen, who were thus allotted to serve, but whose services would not, otherwise, have been required.

After the Grand Jury was sworn, they were addressed as follows by Sir H. W. Selon. Gentlemen.—The experience which you possess in the administration of the Criminal Law of this country, and my own want of it, will induce me to confine my address to you within very narrow limits. The great changes which have lately taken place in the laws of this country, were so clearly and fully explained to you by the Chief Justice, at the first Session of this year, that I will not advert to them, except to mention the progress made in their improvement, in assimilating them to the laws of England.

Gentlemen, with respect to the immediate purpose of your assembling, you will be glad to observe, that there is no case of enormity to claim your particular attention. There are six cases of burglary and one of assault of an aggravated description, but with these exceptions there is one of an extraordinary kind—none calling for the severest penalty of the law. There is no case to which I have in particular to call your attention, but if any should seem to you to merit it, you will pay every attention to it, that may be requisite. At present I have nothing further to advise.

(Before Sir H. W. Selon.)

1.—Hingun, stood charged with stealing a merasi ekhara and a dhoti, value one rupee and four annas, from a coach house in Soortia Bagan. Verdict guilty. Sentence, to be imprisoned in the House of Correction, and kept to hard labour for the term of (3) three calendar months.

2.—Joomun, stood charged with stealing a brass loah, value one rupee, from the kotoe of Brod Kisan Doss, in Burra Bazar. Verdict not guilty, and prisoner discharged.

5.—Sheik Burson, charged with stealing from Nilmonney Dhur, a pair of child's dhoties, value eleven annas. Verdict guilty. After the jury returned their verdict, the Judge called a witness, who deposed to the previous habits and conduct of the prisoner, who was proved to be an incorrigible thief. Sentenced to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour in the House of Correction, for the space of six calendar months.

6.—Kadurhus, charged with stealing from the house of Anna Doris, in the Fozdarry Batakana, an umbrella, value two rupees, and three handkerchiefs, value one rupee. Verdict guilty. Sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour in the House of Correction, for the space of one calendar month.

7.—Mejash, charged with stealing a padlock, the property of Ram Dhons Saddawn. Verdict guilty. Sentenced to be imprisoned, with hard labour, for one month.

8.—Hurrimohun Doss, charged with stealing from the house of Suddheeram Paul 142 rupees. Verdict guilty. Sentenced to be imprisoned in the House of Correction for six months.

The court adjourned at 5 P. M. to 11 A. M. to-morrow, (this-day.)

7. Peumber Baugdy, charged with burglariously entering the shop and dwelling house of Kedarbux, in Raot Kolah, and stealing therefrom 4 bundles of cotton twist, value 10 rupees 10 annas, was found guilty, and sentenced to hard labour in the House of Correction for 12 calendar months.—Hurd, August 6.

8th August.

Hackal Day, Ramchand Pyke and Luckynarain Day, charged with drilling and plugging Company's rupees, were found guilty. Sentence deferred to a future day, Saturday we believe.

Fuckroo, charged with cutting and maiming with intent to disfigure, was found guilty, and the offence having been committed about four years and a half ago, previous to the passing of the present Criminal Amendment Act, sentence of death was recorded, but will be commuted to transportation.

THE QUEEN, &C. versus JAMES JACOBI.

The prisoner, who has for some time past been in custody, and seeking the benefit of the Indictment Act, was indicted under the 73d Section of that Act, for the fraudulent concealment of his property. The indictment set out, at length, the circumstances of the case, and amongst other things, that the prisoner had filed three different schedules, (the last of these on the 17th June last) all purporting to contain a correct statement of his property; that he had been examined on the 9th February last, and on other occasions, and that in all his schedules and examinations, he had carefully concealed property to a very large amount. Some of this property, consisting of five Machine Organs and a Sraphine, he stated in his examination on oath on the 9th February last, and in his last schedule filed on the 17th June, that he had sold, partly in his shop and partly on the river, between Chundernagore and Sootsagar, for cash, to persons, whose names and address he did not know. These organs, &c. and other property to a very large amount have, it appears, been seized, and are now in the possession of the Assignee.

The prisoner, on being brought to the bar, pleaded "Guilty" to the indictment.

Mr. Leigh, on behalf of the prisoner, addressed the Court in mitigation of punishment. Jacobs is to be brought up for judgment on Saturday next, to enable him in the mean time to prepare and put in affidavits to his previous character.—Hurd, August 9.

THE QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF MOHABER LOLL DEUT, TARRACHUND.

Mr. Leigh for the prosecution stated, that the indictment charged the defendant, who was a dholi or broke, with obtaining goods upon false pretences from the prosecutor, who was the gomastah in Calcutta of a Benares Dootee. In June last, the defendant went to the dootee of the prosecutor in Calcutta, and represented to him that he had an opportunity of selling chintzes for him to an upcountry merchant of the name of Moulvie Abzul Ally, and the prosecutor accordingly entrusted him with three boxes of chintzes of the value of 984 rupees. The defendant promised that the money should be forthcoming the same evening (the 8th of June) and the prosecutor having frequently had dealings with the defendant in his capacity of broker, suspected no fraud. The money, however, was never paid, and no trace of the goods had since been obtained. The defendant afterward pretended that Abzul Ally had absconded with the property, but circumstances would be shown which would raise a clear presumption that no such person as this Abzul Ally existed, and that the whole story was a fabrication.

The evidence for the prosecution was then gone into, and the prosecutor's case having been closed,

Mr. Morton for the defence said, that before addressing the jury, he had certain objections to take to the sufficiency of the indictment. There were eight counts, laying the property in different parties, and charging different pretences. The four first laid the property in the prosecutor, who was only the gomastah, and the two last did not lay the property in any person. Now the chintzes were proved to belong to the Dootee, so that not one of these six counts could be sustained.

In the 5th and 6th property was laid rightly in the Dootee, but the intent to defraud was charged in respect of the gomastah, which was a manifest repugnancy upon the face of those counts. But there was another objection equally fatal, affecting every count in the indictment. The pretences were charged only in respect of future intentions, and these were clearly not "false pretences" within the meaning of the Act. As well might a man be charged with swindling, by cause he orders goods, to be paid for on delivery, and then neglects to pay. Such would only be a breach of contract, which might be the subject matter of a civil action, but could not be the foundation of a criminal charge. The case of Rex v. Goodhall, Bass, and Hy. Crown Co. was precisely in point.

Mr. Leth said that he had not drawn the indictment himself but he hoped to be able nevertheless to establish its validity. The first objection certainly applied to the four first, and perhaps, to the two last counts, but the fifth and sixth counts were certainly good. The intent was properly laid to defraud the gomastah, because it only appeared that the defendant was acquainted with him, and it did not appear that he knew any thing of the Benares Cootees. A man could not be said to contemplate a fraud upon persons of whose existence he is ignorant. Then as to the second objection, it sufficiently appeared from the evidence (if believed) that the whole story told by the defendant, was a pretence and a fabrication. His statements to the prosecutor were partly statements of alleged facts, as well as intentions. If the Jury were satisfied for example that no such person as Abdul Ally existed, what more could be required? Again, one of the pretences was that the defendant "had then an opportunity," of selling the chintzes. This was a substantive fact. But after all, the evidence even amounted to proof of larceny, and the 106th section of the recent Criminal Act (9 Geo IV. c. 74) provided that a man indicted for false pretences, shall be convicted if the case amounted to larceny.

Mr. Morton in reply said that his objection was not to the sufficiency of the evidence, but to the sufficiency of the indictment; and if the indictment was bad, it could not be cured by any degree of evidence. The pretences were not properly laid. As to the 106th section of the Statute, it had not the remotest affinity to the question, as the provision was only intended to aid a defect in the proof (or rather an over proof) and not to cure a vicious indictment. The other objection was equally fatal. There was neither averment nor proof that the defendant did not know who were the real proprietors of the goods, and it was very doubtful whether it would make any difference if he did or did not, as the legal presumption would be that the intention was to defraud the true owners.

Sir H. W. Seton considered the second objection, at all events, fatal; and the defendant was accordingly Acquitted.

This closed the Sessions, there being no other cases for trial.

The Court adjourned at 5 o'clock until the following day at 11 o'clock, when the coiners will receive sentence.

9th August.

THE QUEEN v. RAKALL DAY AND OTHERS.

That three prisoners, who were yesterday convicted of a conspiracy to drill holes in coin, were brought up for judgment this morning.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Cochrane appeared for the prosecution. A Counsel at the bar was prepared to move in arrest of judgment, and to argue the case on behalf of the prisoners ad amicus curie.

Sir H. W. Seton said, that he had conferred with the Chief Justice who considered the case of importance, and wished it to be heard before a full bench. It would therefore be postponed to the first day of next term.

Judgment deferred.

THE QUEEN v. JACONS.

Sir Henry Seton stated, that this case was also of very great importance, and that the Chief Justice wished the sentence to be passed by a full bench. The defendant was accordingly ordered to be brought up for judgment on the first day of next term.

Judgment deferred.

THE QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF ERENETTYY DOSSER V. BANNEY MADUB CHORSE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Morton moved that the defendant, Baneymadub, have leave to speak with the prosecutrix. The indictment was for an assault.

Mr. Cochrane for the prosecutrix consented.

No evidence therefore being given for the prosecution the defendant was Acquitted.

* Quare whether this should be by motion, as no order is ever made?

Lucknow—Found guilty yesterday of cutting and maiming, was sentenced to be transported for the term of 5 years.

The Coroner handed in a presentment against certain persons who positively refused to serve on his Jury. Sir H. W. Seton observed, that as such conduct could not be allowed, he had no alternative but to fine Messrs. J. E. Thomson, W. H. Gilbert and Mr. Anderson 50 rupees each.

The Sessions closed this day.—Hurk August 10.

INSOLVENT COURT.

August 3.

(Before Sir H. W. Seton.)

IN THE MATTER OF J. E. M. MOUNT.

The Advocate General, for the opposing creditors, examined the Insolvent touching certain defects in his schedule. The first was, as to its not being stated therein, whether the account was in Sica or Company's Rupees. The Insolvent believed that Company's Rupees were meant, but could not swear to the fact. The next point to which the Advocate General adverted, was the discrepancy between the credits of the Insolvent a few months before his insolvency, when they were upwards of Rs. 18,000, and the sum entered in the schedule, which was only Rs. 2,000. In explanation of this, it appeared, that at the time the Insolvent's property was attached, his books were lodged in the Sheriff's office, and thus he had no opportunity of completing his schedule as to the sums owing to him.

The insolvent was remanded to amend schedule and orders were given that he should have access to his books. Remanded.

IN THE MATTER OF F. B. GONSALES.

A notice of opposition had been entered by Mr. Street, but it appeared that it had not been done in accordance with the provision of the Act, which says that it must be entered three full days before the day of hearing, exclusive of that day, and the day of delivery. The notice in question had been entered only on Wednesday last, thus leaving only two clear days. Consequently the opposition failed, and the insolvent was discharged. Discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF WM. EDWARDS.

No opposition. Mr. Hudson, on behalf of the Insolvent, applied for the allowance of his full pay without the usual deductions, for eight months, to enable the insolvent, a Lieutenant of Native Infantry, to join his corps at Benares. The Court thought that four months would be sufficient, and gave an order to that effect. Discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF RAJKISO MOOKERJEE.

Notice of application for discharge had not been served on two of the creditors, but as the amount due to them was only about Rs. 60, the Court did not think it necessary longer to detain the insolvent on that account. He was therefore discharged, subject of course, to the claims of these two creditors on whom notices had not been served. Discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF NINGUN KHAN.

IN THE MATTER OF HAJMARAIN DAI.

Ms. Cochran, on behalf of the detaining creditor, explained the reason of the opposition to this Insolvent's discharge. It was to bring him to account for certain money, jewels, &c. to the value of above Rs. 10,000 which he, in company with others, had forcibly taken away from his mother-in-law Sreemutty Dossee. For this forcible seizure, the insolvent and some of his accomplices, had been prosecuted on a charge of misdemeanor before the Supreme Court, and sentenced to imprisonment. An action of trover had consequently been brought against him for the recovery of the property, and a decree obtained in favor of the plaintiff. Still nothing had been given up, and consequently the insolvent had been served with an attachment. He now sought to obtain his release, without accounting for the property in question, more particularly than by acknowledging the receipt of it by placing it on the debit side of his schedule. Two or three witnesses were examined by Mr. Cochran but their evidence went to show, only, that the property had been in the insolvent's possession.

The insolvent was remanded till he could give some more satisfactory account of the property in question. Remanded.

ESTATE OF MESSRS. MACKINTOSH AND CO.

The Advocate-General, with whom was Mr. Leith, applied on behalf of the executors of Mr. Fulton, formerly a partner in the firm of Mackintosh and Co., to be allowed to participate in the dividends payable from the estate of that house. The claim was preferred on the ground that Mr. Fulton had ceased to be a member of the firm in 1819, and consequently long before its failure in 1823, and that though he still had a balance due to him from the house, he was only on the same footing as its other constituents.

It was contended by Mr. Clarke in opposition, that if it could be shown that the house was insolvent at the time of Mr. Fulton's retirement, he would forfeit all right to the privileges of a creditor. Mr. Clarke cited the case of a partner in the same house, who had been refused a share of the dividends, for that very reason. On the other hand it was advanced, that from a judgment of Sir Benjamin Malkin in a similar case, it appeared that the applicants would be entitled to the dividend, if the retirement had been a bona fide one, and without a fraudulent intention, even if the firm was insolvent at the time.

The settlement of this question stood over for the present, and evidence was taken as to Mr. Fulton's connection with the house.

John N. Vanhart was book-keeper to the house of Mackintosh and Co. from the year 1812, to the time of its failure. Mr. Fulton left the house in 1818 or 1819.

A book was made up yearly, exhibiting a statement of the affairs of the firm, for the private use of the partners. He believed it was not usual in other houses to have such a book. It showed fully the affairs of the house. It would not show whether the house was solvent, but it would show if it was insolvent, because the actual bad debts of the house were entered in it. The balance against the firm in 1826-27 was fourteen lacs and seven thousand rupees, including the bad debts. When Mr. Fulton left the house he created a stock account of 10 lacs, to meet bad debts, and in 1826-27 the stock account was nearly 17 lacs. On the opposite side of the account were such of the old debts as were considered bad ones, amounting to nearly 33 lacs, and it was by deducting the stock account from these bad debts, that the witness ascertained the insolvency of the house. He believed the house was insolvent at the time Mr. Fulton left it. This opinion he formed in 1823 or 1824 from there being so many large balances not realised for a long time.

The Advocate-General questioned the witness as to his reasons for believing that it was not usual in other houses to keep a book like the one above mentioned. It seemed that he had gathered his information from some of his office-mates but from whom in particular, he could not distinctly remember. He had made up the book himself; the account of bad debts was not made up on speculation, but all the very old ones were considered bad, and entered as such. Some, but a very few, of these had debts had been insured, but no insurance money had ever been received.

Mr. Fulton's name was removed from the firm, and he was classed as an "Europe constituent" and treated as such, and had a statement of his account sent to him yearly.

Mr. McClintock was a partner, but he left before Mr. Fulton did. Mr. Lauruleia another partner left in 1827 or 1828; there was a balance in his favor at the time. He did not take any large sum of money out with him, but had a running account like other constituents. When Mr. Fulton withdrew from the firm, there was a private arrangement between the remaining partners (Messrs. Calder and Gordon) and himself, that he was to leave the balance to his credit, in their hands, and to receive from the firm four lacs on the 1st of May 1821. The balance so left was two lacs and seventeen thousand rupees. The arrangement was that he was to receive the four lacs, and they were to take the balance due to him. The witness did not know whether the balance included the two lacs and seventeen thousand or not, as he was not present when the arrangement was made. From the 1st May 1821, Mr. Fulton was credited with the four lacs, and about three lacs of it were paid off at different times. The witness, by Mr. Holroyd's directions, made out a statement of Mr. Fulton's claim, which was admitted by all the partners of the firm. The sum due to him, consisted entirely of that portion of the four lacs which remained unpaid.

The amount of the stock account in 1823-4, was twenty eight lacs and six thousand, the deficiency being about five lacs. In 1824-25, the deficiency was 4½ lacs and in 1825-26, it was 16½ lacs. This extraordinary increase was caused by many old debts having been carried to the account as bail ones, and by losses from speculations in opium during that year.

By Mr. Clarke. On the failure of the firm of Mackintosh and Co, the witness was employed by Mr. Holroyd the assignee of that house, as well as of those of Alexander and Co., and Crutenden & Co. Latterly the business of the three insolvent firms was carried on in one office. The witness had access to all the books except those of Crutenden and Co. The private arrangement with Mr. Fulton was made in September 1819, and the four lacs were carried to his credit on the 1st May 1821. The two lacs and seventeen thousand were carried to the account of Messrs. Calder and Gordon on the 30th April 1821. Stands over.

IN THE MATTER OF RICHARD FARMER.

Mr. Leith applied for a suspension of the attachment against this Insolvent, on the ground of the injury which his incarceration would cause, both to himself and the estate. He was in but very moderate circumstances, and dependant upon a salary of 50 rupees per month which would be forfeited on his imprisonment. Proceedings against him having been frequently postponed, the Court could not grant a further delay on the plea advanced. Mr. Stretzel then produced a document bearing the consent of two thirds of the creditors to the postponement, and on this ground the suspension was accorded. Attachment Suspended.

IN THE MATTER OF BISHENHUK DOSS.

The detaining creditor in this case was one Monick Singh Doss, who appeared in person to oppose the Insolvent's discharge, having he said, travelled 400 miles to obtain justice.

The creditor's claim was for a sum of about Rs. 5,000 awarded to him by a decree of the Court at Moorshedabad, on an action against the Insolvent for the recovery of money lent to him by the plaintiff. This decree was obtained upwards of 10 years ago, but for reasons which did not appear, the sum awarded had never been obtained. The Insolvent was a dealer in precious stones, and resided at Putnash, but had left that place, and subsequently carried on the same business in the Burra Bazar in Calcutta, in a house which Monick Singh Doss asserted was his (the Insolvent's) own property.

The Insolvent denied that he had carried on business as a lapidary in Calcutta, and stated that the house in question, though formerly his property, had been mortgaged by him many years ago, and subsequently sold in satisfaction of the mortgage.

The detaining creditor was examined by Mr. Alexander the Assignee, but there appearing no proof of fraud in the conduct of the Insolvent, he was discharged, the opposing creditor being informed, that, if he should discover any property of the Insolvent's which had not been entered in the schedule, he would be allowed to bring it to the notice of the Court.

Discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS.

Mr. Clarke informed the Court, that the property lately discovered not having been entered on the schedule, it would be necessary to remand the Insolvent, till out of its being done, before he could swear to the correctness of that document. Remanded.—Hark. August 5.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 17, 1839.

IN THE MATTER OF BRIJONATH BAHOO, AN INSOLVENT.
An order of adjudication of insolvency had been obtained in November last against Brijonath Bahoo, on the petition of Saumchund Seal, a simple contract creditor stating that the insolvent had formerly been a merchant and trader, principally in indigo, in the town of Calcutta, and that about August 1834, he had absconded from Calcutta, and had since remained out of the jurisdiction, in order to defeat and delay his creditors, and praying that the Court would proceed (under the 10th section of the Insolvent Act) in like manner as if the said Brijonath Bahoo had petitioned the Court for relief under the Act.

Mr. Clarke, for another creditor, Sibnarain Ghose, now appeared in order to oppose the discharge of the Insolvent, who had filed his schedule and regularly applied to be discharged.

Brijonath Bahoo, The Insolvent, examined by Mr. Clarke. I was formerly a zemindar. I had a talook called Mud-loobutty. It is not mine now. I used to carry on trade in Calcutta. I began it in 1810 and continued it till 1810. Since that period I have not carried on any trade in Calcutta. It was in the month of Bysack (May) that I failed in my concerns. Since the year 1813 or 1814, I traded only in Indigo. The indigo was all made at my own factories, with a single small exception. I purchased a small quantity of the value of about rs. 1000 from Guogagovind, my daughter's husband, and I paid him for it at the time. This is the only indigo that I ever bought in my life. All the rest that I ever sold was entirely made by myself at my own factories.

Mr. Clarke therefore submitted, that Brijonath was not a trader within the meaning of the Insolvent Act. This was the first attempt since the establishment of the Court to bring a mere Indigo Planter within the meaning of the term!

Mr. Leith contra contended, that bakers, shoemakers, &c. purchasing the raw material and enhancing the value by their skill and labour, were held to be traders within the meaning of the Bankrupt Laws in England. It appeared that the Insolvent had at all events purchased 1000 Rs. worth of Indigo.

Sir H. W. Seton. That was a solitary transaction, and the debt is not in the Schedule. I cannot distinguish this from a common case of husbandry.

The Insolvent was then cross examined. I dealt in several articles besides indigo before the year 1814, but not afterwards. I had seven or eight factories, where the indigo was manufactured. I advanced money to the ryots, and they bought plant on my account. This was the mode in which I cultivated indigo up to my failure in 1834.

Re examined. Sometimes I gave the ryots the seed, and sometimes they purchased it themselves with the advances made by me.

Mr. Leith argued, that this clearly established a trading.

Mr. Clarke said, that it only proved what every one very well knew, that the ordinary mode of cultivation of indigo had been adopted of making advances to the ryots. That was not a trade or dealing, and no one ever thought of calling it so.

Sir H. W. Seton. I certainly think it is not within the Insolvent Act. What do you ask for, Mr. Clarke?

Mr. Clarke said, that he had caused a petition on behalf of the opposing creditor to be prepared since he came into Court, and that he should ask the Court, first to refuse the application that the Insolvent be declared entitled to the benefit of the Act, and then, on the petition and on reading the deposition of the Insolvent (of which he should put in an office copy) he should ask for a rule nisi, that the adjudication be set aside, and that, on the payment by the insolvent of the costs of the assignee and the costs of the opposing creditor, and of this application, the assignee do re-assign to the Insolvent.

The Court granted it.

Insolvent's application refused, and order nisi granted to set aside the adjudication.—Hark. August 19,

MISCELLANEA.

CALCUTTA.

LORD AUCKLAND.—Letters have been received from Agra, which mention that Lord Auckland would positively leave Simla as soon after the 1st of November as possible and march direct to Agra, where he expects to arrive about the 5th of December.

ATTEMPT TO BURN THE ARSENAL.—It is said that recently an attempt was made to destroy the Arsenal in the Fort by fire. A large barrel of tow and tar was placed under the staircase, and set fire to. The smoke was seen by a sentry, who gave the alarm in sufficient time to anticipate the danger.

COMPANY'S PAPER.—It is said that Company's Paper to the extent of about Rs. 40,000, has been abstracted from the Government Agency Office, and pledged, under forged endorsements, to the Bank of Bengal, which, at the expiration of the term of the loan, sold the paper to different parties.

INCREASE OF THE ARMY.—The official announcement of the sanction given by the Court of Directors to the raising of three new European regiments for the three Presidencies of India, as also of their resolution to increase, by a ninth company, the establishment of all their native infantry regiments, has been published.

THE EXTERNAL COMMERCE OF BENGAL.—Mr. Wilkinson, of the Custom House, will continue The External Commerce of Bengal, the next volume of which is nearly ready for publication. Mr. W. has also for sale, on account of the family of the late Mr. Bell, some copies of the monthly and annual editions of past years.

COLONEL WADE.—Letters lately received in town, mention that Colonel Wade and his party had taken possession of Ali Musjid, which is about seventy miles west of Peshawar, and commanding the chief pass through the chain of mountains separating that place from Cabul.

SIR JOHN KEANE.—The Agra Ukhar says, that Sir John Keane has declared his determination of sending a circular letter to all the officers with the "Army of the Indus," calling upon them individually to state, whether they were or were not the authors of certain letters, which have appeared in the public journals.

INDIGO AND RADDY CROPS.—The accounts of both crops are very favourable, and a splendid out-turn is expected.

PILGRIM TAX.—It appears by the statements of people just arrived from Pooree, that the pilgrim tax at Juggernaut has not yet been abolished, it having been levied from pilgrims that had resorted to it during the last Rath Jatra, as regularly as on any other previous occasion.

SHEER SING.—The Englishman's correspondent has humbugged him. Sheer Sing is not dead.

THE AMBASSADOR OF SCINDE.—The Ambassa of Scinde, have at last ratified the treaty, as revised by the Governor-General, and returned it to Simla.

DOST MAHOMED.—The Weekly Chronicle has learnt sub rosa, that Dost Mahomed has capitulated under the rose, and that five hundred rupees per mensem, and an asylum in the British territories, have been offered him and accepted.

BURMESE WAR.—Letters from Madras state that presidency to be "alive" with preparations for the approaching campaign in Ava. In addition to the Infantry regiments, Engineers and Artillery, two squadrons of Cavalry have been warned for service.

THE JALOUH LEGION.—The designation of the "Jalouh Legion" has been changed to that of the "Bundicund Legion," and an augmentation of two companies has been directed, of 1 subadar, 1 jemadar, 6 havildars, 6 naicks, 2 baglers and 100 sepoys each. This will make the regiment 1,000 privates strong.

FULL TENTAGE.—The Court of Directors have instructed the Bengal Government to grant to Officers of European Infantry Corps, occupying public quarters in the Bengal Presidency, the privilege of drawing the full tentage of their Regimental rank, from the 19th of the present month.

DISTRICT CHARITABLE SOCIETY.—The managers, it is said, are about to do away with the workhouse attached to the district Charitable Society. The necessity that induces this proceeding we are not aware of; but, whatever the cause, it is much to be regretted, as by such a proceeding, we learn, hundreds of indigent people will be deprived of the means of earning their bread.

THE LAW COMMISSION.—It is said that there is some demur about filling up the appointment of Acting Law Commissioner, and that so far from any apprehension of this appointment becoming the subject matter of a job, in this country at least, it is thought that the Local Government feel hesitation at nominating to the vacant seat at all.

THE PILOT SERVICE.—Some time ago it was rumoured, that the pilot service would be abolished, but instead of this death-blow, Government have resolved upon and passed other arrangements in regard to the allowance of the members of the service. It is said, that the salary of the Branch Pilots is to be reduced from 700 to 550 rupees a month, and that of Master Pilots to be augmented to 520 rupees.

THE FANCY FAIR.—The experimental Fancy Fair, held at the Town Hall on the 17th instant, was satisfactory both to its originators and to those who sought a participation in its benefits. The display of knick-knackeries, mingled with articles of more generally acknowledged usefulness, was, however, rather small, the number of tables not exceeding eight or ten. But the prices were comparatively reasonable, and the demand was brisk, so that before noon the various stands began to present a very bare aspect.

CIVIL SERVANTS' TRADE.—The Court of Directors have now, for the first time, allowed their covenanted servants to be engaged in trade, by taking shares in joint stock companies. The order, however, which grants them the permission of becoming members of such companies, forbids them to take any part in the management of the concerns in which they may thus become participators. The Court appear to think that the whole time of their servants is paid for by the salaries they receive; and that every minute devoted to any pursuit in which the payers as well as the payees of such salaries are not interested, is a surreptitious subtraction from those exertions which are entirely public property.

THE OPIUM SCRIP.—The Opium Scrip was put up for sale on the 21st instant, and went off briskly, after a slight pause or two at 365 Rs. per chest! At first, bidders held back, and at one time no more than 180 a chest was expected, but after the lapse of 10 or 15 minutes, bidders became animated, and it soon rose to the price stated. There was a goodly attendance of Natives, Jews, Armenians and Europeans. The Jews in particular seemed to interest themselves much in the result of the sale.

THE RESUMPTION PROCEEDINGS.—It is said, that letters have been received in town from Mr. Crawford, the agent for the Landholder's Association, acknowledging the receipt of all the papers requisite for bringing the resumption proceedings before Parliament and the other high authorities. Mr. Crawford writes in high spirits regarding the prospects before him. He describes the feeling of hostility to the resumptions as almost universal, especially amongst the Civil Servants of the East India Company! and entertains but little doubt of a final triumph over the Government.

THE OVERLAND MAIL.—A spirited communication was addressed to the Government of India, on the 20th instant, by the Chamber of Commerce, strongly protesting against the Bombay arrangements, for the next overland mails, by which the steamer's despatch has been arbitrarily altered from the 16th to the 12th proximo, and by which alteration many persons are much inconvenienced, while all letters from the Eastward, Ceylon, &c. will be altogether too late. This application has been unsuccessful to remedy the evil, as the Government of India has declined to interfere on the present occasion, however strongly that Government must disapprove the unaccountable proceedings at Bombay.

AGRA BANK.—The Secretaryship of the Agra Bank is vacant, by the resignation of G. J. Gordon, Esq. The salary of the appointment, which had been raised to Co's Rs. 25,000 per annum for the special purpose of securing the services of that gentleman, is, to be reduced a moiety and "something more." Whether this is a prudent economy seems rather doubtful; for first rate qualifications for so responsible a situation, and for the discharge of the duties connected with it, increasing as those duties are daily, by the extended operations of the Bank, can scarcely be expected for a sum so much below their average value in this country.

BANK OF BENGAL.—Mr. Newcomen has been elected a director of the Bank. At the annual General Meeting of the Proprietors of the Bank, held on the 5th Aug. Mr. R. Davidson in the chair, the accounts and statements of profits, &c. of the Bank for the past half year, were laid on the table, approved and passed by the meeting. The following is the statement of the balance of the Bank up to the 29th of June:—On the Debtor side, Cash and Government Securities Co's. Rs. 82,56,377-4-4; loans on deposits 71,31,235-7-1; accounts of credit on deposit securities 17,70,925-15-7; bills on Government discounted 7,37,168-13-8; private bills discounted, 28,11,248-3-5; joint liability bills and notes 10,6,919-10-9; Agency at Mirzapore 12,70,000-0-0 doubtful debts 27,622-15-11; dead stock 1,32,418-15-9.—Co's Rs. 2,22,45,017-6-6—On the cr. side Bank notes and Post Bills outstanding and claims payable on demand 1,20,94,243-2-3; suspense account, 1,37,815-4-0; suspense account, R. N. 39,167-14-0; receipts on account of new stock of 1838, 40-7,04,000-0-0 Net stock 9,267,791-2-3.—Co's. Rs. 2,22,45,017-6-6. The Agency at Mirzapore, for the buying and selling of bills on Calcutta, had on the 19th June last, (the date on which the profit and loss account was closed,) been established about five months, and that account shows a profit for that period of Co's. Rs. 13,791-3-10.

BAPTISM OF A BRAHMIN YOUTH.—On the 15th instant, between the hours of six and seven, a Brahmin youth named Koylas Chunder Mookerjee, was baptized at the Mission house of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, in Cornwallis-square. The ceremony was performed in the presence of several ladies and gentlemen, who take an interest in native conversion. There were also present on the occasion, upwards of one hundred students of the Assembly's School. The convert is about eighteen years of age, and received his English education at that Institution. He is said to have declared his faith in Christianity upwards of three months since; and to have, in consequence, incurred the extreme displeasure of his friends and relatives, who left nothing untried to prevent the event taking place. They had for some time put him under lock and key and allowed him to have communication with no body, without any effect. They then sent him home to the interior, where he had been closely watched for two months, when he managed to effect his escape to Calcutta, where he found shelter in the house of a rev. gentleman, and continued to live with him up to the day of his baptism.

HARK ANTELOPE.—The following is an account of the abandonment and preservation of his little bark Antelope, which was some days ago reported to have been in a sinking state at Sauger. The vessel was discovered water logged and in a sinking state by those on board the Floating Light, on the 13th or 14th instant, and the Mate went off with a boat's crew to render the distressed vessel any assistance it might be in his power to give. Arrived alongside, he found she was from Vizagapatam, had been deserted by the Master and two or three other persons, (the Master's relatives,) and the crew left on board to meet a watery grave in the rapidly sinking hull. The Mate immediately set to work, and with the assistance of the boat's crew and the men on board the Antelope, he was enabled to settle the pumps a-going, get sail on the vessel, and after throwing part of her cargo overboard, to run her on shore at Kedgerae, where, on overhauling her bottom, he found the leak to proceed from a small hole, made very probably by a graze from her anchor—this leak he quickly patched up, got the Antelope afloat again and brought her up to Calcutta on the 17th instant. The Mate of course claims his salvage on her, but the Master, who is the Owner also, is not willing to give it, and here the question rests at present.

WAR WITH THE NEPAULESE AND BURMESE—FANE, MAJOR-GENERAL.—The following is an extract from a letter from the Northern Frontier:—

"At Simla they are in great alarm of attack from the Nepalese. The death of Runjeet has suggested to the Rattmandoo Court, an outbreak with us, by which they hope to reconquer, perhaps their former possessions as far as the Sutlege. That a war with Ava is contemplated there can be no doubt, 5 of the General Service Regiments being ordered to proceed to the Presidency by water. The troops at Meerut and upwards, would be prepared to move into the Panjab or to the N. W. The 6th Regiment at Ferozepore, which had been directed to embark for Bukkur, has been countermanded. Of the proposed siege of Jodepoor you will have heard, but I should not be surprised to hear of Maun Sing's concession to our terms on the approach of the force near to his capital. The infamous supercession of the Company's Officers is becoming intolerable. Not a command will be withheld from the Fane Major-General. The army must petition to have all these Generals removed from India. If they are to be considered bona-fide General Officers, they have no right to remain in India under the Act of Parliament; and if they are allowed to command their Regiments as Field Officers, surely it is unjust that they should interfere with the Queen's Generals regularly employed in the Company's Service. Fane Major-Generals Walker and Williams, will, I have no doubt, command the troops from Bengal in Burmah.

POST CHARGES.—The reduced rates of postage, recommended in the late Post Office Agent's Report, have been, with slight modifications, sanctioned, and are ordered to take effect throughout India from the 1st of October.

The new rates of postage, are as follows.

Schedule of postage duties on Letters, Law Papers, Accounts and Vouchers, attested as such with the full signature of the sender, and on bulky parcels, to be substituted for Tables 1, 2, 4 and 5 of Schedule 4d XVII. 1837.

MOORSHEDABAD.

SIMLA. — "The folks here have it, on the very best authority," that Lord Auckland has, in consequence of, the non appointment of a new Commander-in-Chief in England, requested Sir Henry Fane to resume the command, and proceed as speedily as may be convenient to His Excellency, towards Calcutta.

ANNA. — At the half yearly meeting of the Bank, held yesterday, a dividend at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum was declared.

MOORSHEDABAD. — The following is an extract of a letter from Moorshedabad, dated 14th August.

"Three days ago five and twenty convicts managed to make their escape from the Moorshedabad Jail, and the Magistrate, I suppose, thinking that the whole of the prisoners were about to break loose, requested that a Company of the 69th Regiment should be sent to the spot, which was immediately done; but before the arrival of the troops, I believe, that the most of the runaways had been retaken, and some of them most dreadfully wounded by the burkundazees, who, of course, could not allow so good an opportunity to escape without shewing how nicely they could cut and hack unfortunate devils who could neither run nor fight, seeing that they were all heavily ironed and unarmed! Bye, the bye, I believe, one or two of them had arms, and wounded a villager who attempted to arrest them, but they have not yet been retaken. It was rather a merry scene, seeing the Sepoys, Magistrates and Doctors douring along the road; but things, I understand, assumed a very different aspect on arriving at the Jail, where four or five men lay desperately cut and wounded; from the effects of which some have died and others are in a hopeless state."

ALLAHABAD—A Court of Enquiry, ordered by General Ogleader, is now engaged, taking evidence connected with a difference which occurred between Lieutenant S. N—t—n, of the 68th Regiment Native Infantry, and R. Lowther, Esq., at a Subscription Hall, of which the latter gentleman was one of the Stewards.—The other Stewards considered Lieutenant N—t—n's conduct so improper, that a representation of it was made by them to the Officer Commanding the Station.

NATIVE STATES.

NEPAUL—Letters from Nepaul mention, that the corpse of Bhern Sena, the ex Prime minister, who cut his throat in despair, had been refused funeral honors, and was lying by the river side half devoured by jackals and vultures! The same letter mentions, that there is a rebellion in Eastern Tibet, and, that the viceroy's troops had been beaten by the rebels of Loumi.

LAHORE—It appears from the latest intelligence from Lahore, that Cour Shere Sing on being apprized of the serious illness of his revered father, Maha Raja Kunjeet Sing, the Lion of Punjab, made every haste to reach and pay him his last dutiful respects, but he did not arrive until his remains had been consumed to ashes.

Immediately on his arrival at Lahore, he sent word to his brother, Cour Khurruck Sing, who dispatched Rajah Surhet Sing and Heera Sing, to meet and bring the Prince into his presence. These persons executed their duty of introduction with demonstrations of great respect and attention.

Cour Shere Sing, on his way to Khurruck Sing, happened to cast a glance on the spot where the corpse of his deceased father was burnt, and fell into most profound lamentation, crying aloud for several minutes to assuage his grief.

Cour Shere, on being introduced into the presence of his elder brother, the present reigning Prince, fell prostrate at his feet, imploring, in the most humble and earnest manner, forgiveness of his past transgressions and misconduct. Rajah Dhyen Sing, who has great regard for the young Prince, thought proper to intercede that moment in his behalf with the ruler, by saying that thousands and thousands of Cour Shere Sing's offences had been pardoned by the late Maha Rajah, and he hoped that the same indulgence and kindness would be extended to the penitent and submissive Prince by his successor. Khurruck Sing, paying due regard and attention to the intercession of the Dewan, raised the head of the Prince from his feet, and gave him every possible assurance of kind treatment, and strongly enjoined him not to be apprehensive of any thing cruel or unkind from him.

Thirteen days after the dissolution of the Maha Rajah, Cour Khurruck Sing sat on the public Durbar, and devoted his attention to the affairs of State. The first thing he did was to direct Rajah Dhyen Sing, the Dewan, to write Perwannahs to the Nazim or Superintendent of the affairs of Cashmere and Moultan, enjoining them to continue to discharge the important functions of their sacred trust with the same zeal, fidelity and uprightness, as they did during the happy and auspicious reign of the departed Maha Rajah, as also to bear the late severe calamity with patience and resignation. These high functionaries were most particularly enjoined to send their official despatches direct to Khurruck Sing's address.

The Treasurer of the State was directed to put at the disposal of Modhoo Soodun Pundit, the sum of 20 000 rupees, for the purpose of its being distributed among the brahmins and priests of Lahore and Umritkut. Cour Shere Sing likewise caused some thousands of rupees to be given in alms to the poor, about the place where the late Maha Rajah's corpse was burnt.

An Urzee from Cour Nownehal Sing arrived, stating that he was at Peshawur to execute his Highness's commands, and that Colonel Wade called every day to see him, and whenever that kind hearted officer found him shedding tears in lamentation of the recent melancholy event in their family, he used to wipe his tears with his own hands and did every thing to console him for their ever loss.

A reply was sent to the Cour, directing him to resort to such measures as may lead to the extermination of every enemy of the Sikh Government now in the fortress of Oohkima, directions were also despatched to Akher Roon Loll, to remit to Court two lacs of rupees from the collections of Pergunnah Jullundar, for the current expenses of the Army.

A widow having appeared with great difficulty before Rajah Khurruck Sing, represented that her only son had been imprisoned in the Fort of Govind Gurb, for 12 years, for the delinquency of public embezzlement; but now that the Court had ascended to the throne of Lahore, &c., she hoped and prayed that her son might be ordered to be set at liberty for the rest of the soul of the departed Maharajah. Her prayer being made at a very seasonable hour, was immediately complied with.

Colonel Wade had recently made an excursion in the mountains, with the view of punishing Pindah Khan, but the latter was off previous to the Colonel's arrival.

Shahzadeh Tymoore, son of Shah Shooja Oool Moolk, is employing every exertion and art of persuasion to prevail upon the Sirdars of Darch Khybur, to declare allegiance to his father, several of whom are inclined to assist the Shah, and are actually carrying on a secret and confidential correspondence with him, as to the means best calculated to protect them from the evil designs and wrath of Dost Mahomed Khan, when affording the Shah the benefit of their aid, whilst others are firmly determined to adhere to the usurper Afghans. Ukhwont Kattoobul Allun, and other persons of distinction in the Subah of Peshawur, are very favourably disposed towards the Shah, and possessing considerable influence over the obstinate and disaffected Sirdars, it is generally imagined that they will be persuaded to place themselves under the banners of the Shah, and forsake their connexion with the Khan. On the accomplishment of this most important object, the Prince Tymoore will be enabled, with facility, to pass with his troops through the very difficult paths of Khybur to Cabool.

Shahzadeh Tymoore was, by the last accounts, contemplating to march further on from the fort of Jumrood. Although the spirit of Dost Mahomed Khan was at first much depressed on hearing the defeat of the Sirdars of Candahar, yet he is not relaxed in his efforts to meet the Shah, and for this purpose he sent for the Sirdars of Barrack Zahes, Galzies and Kurral, both of whom assured him of their readiness to assist him against the Shah, but in truth, these Sirdars are his inveterate enemies, and will most assuredly betray him in the hour of danger.

A large body of Hindoostanee sepoy, who were proceeding to their homes in Hindoostan on leave, from their regiments, stationed at Candahar, were attacked by a body of robbers, who murdered several of the unarmed sepoy in cold blood; the rest saved their lives by flying back to their encampment at Candahar.

BURMAH.

While the satellites of the would-be paramount-power contend, that war with the Burmese is out of the question, because, forsooth, Tharrawaddie "is not in a condition to begin a war," by assuming, that because we have hitherto submitted to insult with impunity, that we are therefore to continue to do so in perpetuity, at this juncture news arrived from the capital, that our Resident is to quit it on the 21st instant, and our merchants will quit it on the 1st proximo. A Burmah boat brought this news. One letter is opened, and (as Mr. Judson's dictionary is in demand,) other letters are, doubtless to be opened, and intercepted by the satellites as a thing of course, by contrasting the motives of fear indicating the fact of the Government opening letters addressed to merchants, with the motives, or idea or intention to bully the British Government into a state of subserviency to whatever infringement of equity, personal, national or universal, which may suit this ambitious usurper's notions of equity, and which is indicated by building a military wall, around the big Pagoda during the height of the rains, for which purpose dilapidated pagodas are pulled down. 2ndly. By orders to build stockades, where, at high water, ships would command the interior. 3dly. By the court buying up muskets at an advance of price, some idea may be formed of the probable, vacillating policy which Tharrawaddie may adopt, seeing that all his resolutions must be adopted in accordance with the sentiments of the people—the army—who find their own commissariat, their own muskets and ammunition, and to whom it is well known from experience, to be a bad speculation and a losing game to attempt to help themselves from the Treasury of a British army. If Tharrawaddie was wise or wishes the stability of Alompra to continue to reign over the Burman Empire, he would lose no time in reinstating his brother, himself taking up his residence under the British flag. It is, however, to be hoped, that the days of despotism are numbered in Burmah."

Prospects of war here freshen much. Capt. McLeod, and all the Residency establishment, have been obliged to leave the capital in consequence of the river flowing into their houses, and the King refusing to give them any other place. They left without the slightest notice being taken of them, and are at Rangoon, waiting instructions from Calcutta.

BOMBAY.

LIEUTENANT PORTER.—Lieutenant Porter, of the Indian Navy, who has been so unjustly dealt with in the affair of the Semiramis, goes home to second his memorials to the Court of Directors.

STEAMER KILKENNY.—The name of the steamer Kilkenny, has been changed to the more high sounding one of the Zenobia.

RAJA OF SATTARA.—It is said, that the new Governor of Bombay is inclined to give an impartial hearing to the case of the Raja of Sattara, and that another Commission is about to be appointed to investigate his whole case.

CHOLERA.—It is stated that a violent cholera had broken out at Pandharpur during the late fair at that place, in which thousands of people were congregated from all parts of the country, and that hundreds of the poor pilgrims were carried off, and their bodies thrown into the Bhooma for want of the funeral rites.

SAWUNT WARR.—Letters from Sawunt Warr, represent the state of things there as pretty tranquil. The Subbees has been released from confinement, and is required to give a promise of never again offering opposition to the administration by making complaints or by any other means.

THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.—Private letters, received by the Overland Mail, state, that it was a common topic of conversation, in London East India circles, that the Madras Presidency was to be abolished, and apportioned between Bengal and Bombay, and that the seat of the Supreme Government was to be transferred to this Presidency. Mr. Melvill, Secretary to the Court of Directors, who had obtained writerships for his two sons on the Bengal Establishment, had got those appointments transferred to Bombay.

THE JAMES M'INROY.—The Mate and three seamen of the wicked James M'Inroy, died on the passage from the Maldives to Point deGalle, of hunger and fatigue. The survivors were in a very sickly condition. It appears they landed, after the loss of the vessel, upon an almost desert island, containing only one well, the water of which was quite brackish. They remained there ten days, when the natives from the neighbouring islands came to their assistance with two boats, in which they were conveyed to King's Island, and, after staying three twenty one days, the Sultan gave them a large boat in which they made their way to Point de Galle.

COMMERCIAL PROSPECTS AND PRESENT ADMINISTRATION OF ADEN. The commercial prospects of Aden begin to brighten. It is stated that two of the most influential and extensive growers of coffee had come down to visit Capt. Haines, and expressed the utmost anxiety to be enabled to dispose of their produce there, rather than at the ports of the Red Sea. Some arrangement was entered into with them, much to their satisfaction, and confident hopes are now entertained that this new trade will take root and flourish in the settlement. It is stated, that there is an intention on the part of the Government to alter the present administration of Aden, from a Military Commandant and Resident to an officer holding the rank of Lieut. Col. who shall combine in his person, the Military and Civil powers, but many of the residents are of opinion, that for the present at least, it would be advisable not to alter the present system, at all events not to remove Capt. Haines, who has the confidence of the Arabs and understands their character, until matters are established on a somewhat firmer footing.

PEWANG.

Penang papers to the 13th of July, have been received during the week, from which we perceive that the Herorder and his family had arrived at Penang from Colombo, on the 21st of June. Battenut seems not to be procurable on the Pedier Coast, which was crowded with vessels awaiting cargoes. The price of the nut was as high as ten and eleven larses per buncal, and engagements, for delivery at the several ports, remained uncompleted. Pirates had again appeared in the Straits. Two prahu, manned by a mixed crew of forty individuals, Chinese and Malays, made a descent on the district of Soonghy Dua, and plundered one of the villages in it.

Our "faithful allies," the Siamese, incited by precepts from China, had been bestirring themselves strenuously, in enforcing a law, prohibiting the importation of opium into the Siamese territories, which has been suffered to remain a dead-letter ever since the period of its enactment. Following up the inhibitory measures adopted towards the importation of the drug into Siam proper, our allies had despatched Special Commissioners to Pungah, Quedah, and the several other Siamese dependencies, with strict injunctions to require their respective Governors, to burn and destroy all the opium detected at those places.

CEYLON.

TROOPS PLACED AT THE DISPOSAL OF THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA.—It is stated on unquestionable authority, that the 18th, Royal Irish, one company of the Royal Artillery, one company of the Gun Laskars, and six companies of the Ceylon Rifle Regiment (being the force placed by this Government at the disposal of the Governor-General of India) have been warned to hold themselves in readiness to embark for Mauritius in case their services shall be required. The 61st will therefore remain for the present in the Colony; whilst the Jupiter is ordered to England direct, as the Supreme Government consider her further detention a useless expence, because, if transports are required, the Indian Seas can provide ample shipping.

COMMITMENT OF THE 2ND MATE, BOATSWAIN AND STEWARD OF THE KING WILLIAM.—The second Mate, Boatswain, and Steward of the King William, have been duly committed, by the District Judge of Colombo, to take their trial before the Vice-Admiralty Court, on charges of conspiracy, to murder the Captain of the vessel and of having stolen part of the stores and cargo on the voyage out.

CHINA.

Intelligence of an important nature, up to the 27th of June, has been received from China during the week. The following is an abstract.

Two edicts have been issued by the Canton authorities, the one prohibiting all native vessels from trading with the Foreign ships outside to any description of goods under penalty of death, and any foreign trade, except Portuguese, to be carried on at Macao; the other, ordering all foreign ships, to enter the port within five days, or to take their departure altogether, and threatening them with exterminations by fire ships, should they fail to comply! The Chief Superintendent had taken up the Cambridge, Captain Douglas, to act as guard-ship for the protection of British property—she is said to be chartered at £6,000 for four months. A private letter says, that in the event of the Commissioners taking hostile measures with regard to Macao, British residents there will find it necessary to seek shelter on board ships, as the Portuguese do not possess the power to protect them. Sales of the drug are reported at 8p. dis. 750 a 780 per chest, and the trade still going on along the coast. There were about 60 sail of shipping detained outside already, independent of the numbers that had still to arrive.

Accounts from Canton to the 24th June had reached Macao, that the Commissioners had directed the American ships that had gone to Whampoa to be secured, which it appears from other and somewhat earlier accounts, the Hong-merchants had refused to do, on the ground of their having British property on board.

The result of the Meeting of the British merchants at Macao, had not been satisfactory to all. Instead of the Resolution passed at the meeting, in favour of calling upon the Superintendent for an explanation of his public notices, we understand an amendment was proposed:—"That the notices promulgated by the Chief Superintendent were imperative as preventing British ships and British property being carried within the Bocca Tigris, until such notices were rescinded by Captain Elliot."—The original motion having prevailed, the Chairman refused to publish the amendment as part of the proceeding of the meeting! The object of the proposed amendment is stated to be, to avoid expressing doubts, after they had already acted on previous notices of much greater moment, in delivering up the opium; and in quitting Canton where they left behind so much valuable property.

An opinion is expressed, that it is not unlikely that the effect of Captain Elliot's declaration, will be to cause the Commissioners to put a stop to all foreign trade whatever for the time.

It appears there was only one British merchant residing at Canton at the date of the last accounts received at Macao from that quarter. The destruction of the surrendered opium is said to be going on at the rate of 300 chests a day. Foreigners had been invited to witness the process, but very few availed themselves of the opportunity.

"Letters received by the Corsair, from China and Singapore, state, that active speculation was revived in the trade of opium. At 'Hong Kong' sales were effected at 750 sp. dis, and on the East Coast for sp. dis. 1,000; in Singapore there were extensive orders for the purchase of the drug, and not a single chest was left in the market. It was supposed that there would be as much speculation in the article as ever there was before. The holders of opium may now sanguinely look to remunerating prices; it is most probable that from the large orders to town the price will rise to 700 rupees and upwards."

The party from whom we received the letter, is highly respectable and fully entitled to confidence. We are not, however, ourselves aware of any transactions at Macao, beyond the sale of a few chests, although the early departure of the Red Rover and Sir Edward Ryan, the latter armed, it is said, to the teeth, indicate activity in the trade.

ARMY OF THE INDUS.

There has been a report in circulation of a pitched battle having been fought between Sir J. Keane and Dost Mahomed, not far from Candahar, in which the latter suffered a signal defeat, the Lancers displaying, to the astonished Afghans, the gallantry and prowess of British soldiers.

A late letter from Peshawar gives the following intelligence of Colonel Wade and his little party, who are in a much better plight than they were represented to be.

"We are still at Peshawar, where and in the neighbourhood of which we have been for the last four months. We cannot guess the probable period of our departure, though we would fain wish it at hand. It, however, depends entirely on the movements of Shah Soojah, and until we hear of his having reached Ghiznee we shall not move. The Unshur has sent us across the Pass twice, but here we are still, not having changed the site of our Camp for the last two months, though its disposition has been occasionally altered. We have not been altogether idle during the time. We erected stockades, from one of which we treated the Khyburees to some shots, their matchlock balls reaching us from a neighbouring height. No Nihal Sing is at Peshawar, and, with his army, is encamped on the opposite side of the town. The Mosel population would gladly rise, but they are awed by the presence of so large a Sikh Army. The Sikh auxiliary force, composed of 5,000 Musulmen, are encamped on our left, at a distance of 1½ miles. General Ventura commanded them, but on the death of Runjeet, proceeded to Lahore, and another French officer has taken his place."

Candahar, 25th June 1839.—Just as I was about to close this on the 16th, fresh obstacles started up to prevent the advance of the army, and we also heard, that all our late Jaks had been plundered by the Achutziees and Ghulgies, some short distance from thence. I mentioned in my last, that the three companies of the 37th Regiment, which were left behind at Dandur, arrived here on the 5th instant, under the command of Capt.

Poole, Major Griffiths having been ordered back to Daudur by the Commander-in-Chief, and Captain Bristow left behind at Quitta, having been badly wounded in the Bolan Pass.

Colonel Denme, of H. M. 13th Light Infantry, Major Sir A. Campbell, of the 3rd Bengal Light Cavalry, and Lieutenant Burnett, of the European Regiment, with a detachment of Europeans, also accompanied the three Companies. The latter officer only, came from Sylhet, and most of the men he brought with him will have to be carried back to the Provinces, if they survive the heat of Afghanistan that is to say. After sundry orders directing the march of the troops on such a day and as many orders countermanding the march, it is at last fixed that the leading division shall move to-morrow. His Majesty (who moved out on the 23d, it being esteemed a lucky day by the Afghans) march, on the 27th, the 4th Brigade, with the Artillery Park, on the 28th, and on the 29th, Major General Willschire, with his column, is to act as wippen-in. The 37th Regiment Captain Timings's troop of Horse Artillery the 4th Company 2nd Battalion of Foot Artillery. His Majesty's 2nd Regiment of Cavalry and 2d Regiment of Infantry, the whole under the command of Colonel Herring, C. B. remain behind to garrison Candahar for the present. On the arrival of the 43d regiment from Quitta with treasure and stores, the 37th regiment N. I., Captain Timings's troop, and 300 of the Shah's 2nd cavalry are to receive charge from the 43rd and convey the treasure, &c., with all practicable speed, to the army head quarters, which are expected to be at Ghuznee where the army is to make a short halt. These are the orders, but I must now mention a small manoeuvre of the Bengal Division Head Quarters people. When first the orders for our move issued, which was the latter end of May or 1st of June the 48th Regiment N. I. was the corps named for Garrison duty, they never having been detached. This annoyed the Brigadier sadly, who sat all his wits to works to devise some plan whereby he might get the 48th drawn off duty also. The Brigadier received able support from the Assistant Adjutant-General of the Bengal Division, who managed matters at Division Head Quarters, much to the Brigadier's satisfaction. What can you expect from a man like Sir W. C. . . . who, as you have before heard, no doubt, knows no more how to command a division in the field than the child unborn. Well, Sir, a most splendid opportunity offered just in the nick of time, and which of course was eagerly caught at. A contractor was bringing up a large supply of grain for the army. When close to this, the Major-General issued an order on part of the Ghilgies making an attack on the Kafila, when it became necessary to send out the 48th Regiment to the contractor's assistance. They went out to "Koonah," the 1st march from this, kicked their heels there for a couple of days, and then wrote in that "they could hear nothing of the Kafila, which was coming by another route. Immediately the 48th were ordered out the 35th were put in orders to remain at Candahar; — a great piece of injustice certainly. Well, as the 44th could not find the Kafila, it became necessary for decency's sake, if nothing else, to send out another corps in search of the Kafila; the 35th, with a squadron of the 2d Cavalry, were accordingly ordered out sharp. They left camp a little after sun-set of the 21st, and fell in with the Kafila at day break, on the morning of the 22d, and brought it into camp on the morning of the 23d. On the troops reaching the Kafila, the Lahoree merchant, not only expressed his great surprise at the arrival of the troops, but was very indignant indeed, saying to Lieutenant-Colonel M. ———, who commanded the party, what is the use of your coming out to protect me here? Have I not brought my Kafila all the way up to this without your assistance, and then you think I can't take it on the few remaining companies Candahar?" In short there never was such a job in this world. Dr. Hamilton, of H. M. 17th Foot, died of dysentery on the 22d instant. His effects were sold yesterday, and a tumbler and wine glass fetched twenty seven rupees odd annas. Several officers are laid up with the jaundice, and many more with the dysentery.

Captain Ripley, of the European Regiment has been appointed Fort Adjutant of Candahar, and Post Master. For some days past we have had lots of pickets, cavalry and infantry, in lying and out lying. In short, one would suppose we had all of a sudden fallen amongst a civilized enemy with a well disciplined army, to contend with.

The 37th, I understand, are very well pleased at being left behind for a few days. Grain, and in short every thing, will fall rapidly in price, immediately the army leaves, and they will have a pleasant march enough under their own Colonel, who understands how work should be done, better than the whole bunch of them put together.

The Heeraut Mission started on the 21st instant. They have a hot march before them.

It is only thirty-six marches to Cabul. It is to be hoped some new arrangements will be shortly made for daks. The packets of the 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th instant were carried off, and many before them too.

P. S. The march of the army is again put off till the 27th instant, by which time the Commissariat arrangements, it is said, will be completed.

Grain still dear, and no prospect of supplies. The grapes are now coming in, and promise well. Thermometer in tents 112 at noon, and it is getting warmer every day.

Camp Candahar, 9th July 1839. — I shall first of all mention, that the army marched from this in the following order, and as I specified in my letter of the 25th ultimo.

"The Commander-in-Chief, with the Cavalry division, two troops of Horse Artillery, the Camel Battery, 1st Brigade of Bengal Infantry, and a wing of the 1st Bombay Cavalry, and 19th N. I., as an escort on the 27th. The following morning the Shah, accompanied by his rabble, and protected by a troop of Bombay Horse Artillery, moved on. On the 29th, the 4th Brigade Bengal Infantry and part moved out, and on the 30th, the Bombay column, including the Infantry and Light Field Battery, under the command of General Willschire, (alias "Tiger Tom," as he is called) marched out. On the 4th instant, the leading column arrived at "Kelat-i-Ghilgia," after a distressing march of seven days. The Infantry suffered considerably from the heat, in consequence of being kept out very late, and their tents not being allowed to come up till long after their arrival at the new ground. The road from Candahar to this, is in some places very bad for guns, and the columns had frequently to halt a considerable time, till the nullahs, &c. were made practicable for the guns, indeed during some of the marches, the bugles scarcely ever ceased sounding the halt.

"This is where we expected an much opposition, and in fact the old king was in such a stew, that to quit him Sir John was obliged to order up the 4th Brigade to take care of him. On our march to this yesterday, it was discovered, that a considerable body of horsemen were here. Sir John took on a regiment of cavalry, and after a sharp encounter of a couple of miles, discovered his friends at the opposite side of the valley. The chief expected to have caught them napping, but no such good luck. So soon as the Ghilgies observed the dust of the Cavalry, they were off like a shot. Thus commenced and ended, the attack and defence of the impregnable fortress of "Kelat-i-Ghilgia," he former headed by His Excellency in person. Such humbug, and such absurd nonsense as Col. Burnes, Major Leach, and Major Tod do tell us about these places, is quite disgusting. A company duly strong from any of the Provincial Battalions, would have been quite sufficient for "Kelat-i-Ghilzai."

"The Shah, in charge of the 4th Brigade, marched in this morning, and we move on to-morrow. I hear the 1st Brigade complain sadly of the hard duty they have to perform, and they talk of having a whole wing of each regiment on at once. I should like to know how they would have liked the conveying of the heavy train from "Dandur" through the Nuban Pass, all the way to Candahar," a job which five companies of the 37th regiment had alone, occasionally assisted by the European regiment when they came across any very out-of-the-way places; but from "Dandur" to "Quitta," it must be recollected, they had not a man of the European regiment with them.

"The water we had for the last two marches, was very bad, and ever since we left Candahar, our camels, public and private, have been dying off by hundreds; indeed it would seem as if the camels had lost instead of gained by their long halt at Candahar, for we have never before lost anything like the same number of camels in a similar space of time. In fact, I shall not be surprised if we are brought up for want of carriage in a few days, we have thrown away almost everything we possessed, save our uniform.

"I hear some of the Shah's own private Body Guard are to be left behind to garrison this place. Two old women, mounted on Candahar jackasses, would be quite sufficient. The weather has been somewhat cooler to day, and we are told it will become so daily. We are ascending very rapidly, which leads me to suppose what they say may in part be true, otherwise I should certainly not give credit to it.

"We have heard most distressing accounts from the rear regarding the suffering of the Wing of the 52d Bengal N. I., and 23d Bombay N. I., in their march across the desert, 3 European officers and 30 odd rank and file have perished from thirst and heat. All this you will of course have heard of before my letter can reach you.

"Nothing has been heard of the Heeraut mission. A party of Capt. Woodburn's regiment, S. S. F. has been cut up by a party of horsemen near "Ghrisk."—I'll write you again from "Ghuznee" or before."

Camp Kelat-i-Ghilzai, 5th July, 1839.—"We are tolerably well in health. The jaundice is disappearing but nasty troublesome sores are breaking out all over the men."

* Camp Kelat-i-Ghilzai, 10th July, 1839.—"You will have seen accounts of all our sufferings; but, however, these things have been much exaggerated, besides we have few officers who have seen service in our camp, and as for the Englishman's "Long Horn," he is a gruff in these things. Had you been here, you would have been sadly in want of beef as well as fowls. As for beer, wine, tea, coffee, &c. they disappeared long ago; but soldiers must expect these difficulties sometimes.

Letters from the Army of the Indus down to the 9th July state, that owing to a breach of covenant on the part of the Lohanees, the Cabool column were likely to be put back on the half rations, though our commissariat had procured abundance of supplies to meet a full allowance. "The Lohanees," say the letters, "refused plump to go on, on any terms, and the supplies they brought up, are now being lodged, (this letter is dated from Killa i Azeem, the 28th of June, but the same date brought that, and others of nearly a fortnight's later date) in the depot at Candahar." It was at the time hoped that the Bombay troops would not be taken beyond Ghizni; and as they had theretofore been a regular clog on the army, as touching the supplies, the more's the pity if they have been dragged on to Cabool. Another letter says, "the rascally Lohanee merchants have played us a nice trick. Having brought up the grain to Candahar, they would not budge a step further. They first demanded increased hire, twenty rupees a month, which was agreed to by our commissariat. They then said they would not hire, but would sell, their camels, and supply men to take charge of them as far as Cabool, and that offer was agreed to also, though a most inconvenient bargain—and then the murder came out. They would neither go themselves, nor let their people go, lest Dost Mahomed and the Ghilzie chiefs should play "Tommy" with them. The fact is, the rascals thought we could not move without them, but we showed them the difference, and though still on reduced rations, yet all are delighted to leave Candahar." Another letter of the 4th July says, "as there is a tradition that whoever comes from the direction of Candahar, and takes Khelet i Ghilzie, never failed to possess himself of Cabool and Peshawur. I suppose we shall not meet with any opposition at Ghilzie or Cabool. Khelet i Ghilzie is an old, ruined fort in a commanding position on a detached hill, and two small mud ones, with villages, on the low ground. There are few inhabitants in them, and those are a wretched, filthy, ragged set of beings. The Ghilzies are a clan of plunderers and thieves; some of them last night carried off a very valuable horse, belonging to Captain Outram, A. D. C. to His Excellency, from its picket. It was the finest Arab I ever beheld. Parsons, directed all the brigades to start with a month's half rations besides three days food, served out to regiments before starting; but the Bombay troops had only sixteen days, so that when that is out, they will come on our field depot all the rest of the way."

QUETTA, 12th JULY.—The Kafilah from Shikarpore reached this, a few days ago, in a very sad plight. Out of 4,200 camels, only 700 reached this, and there are in such a state that it is very problematical if they ever reach the end of their journey. Out of 14 Europeans attached to the escort, only 7 reached Datur, and the deaths amongst the sepoys and followers were immense. The Kafilah or rather the remains of it, leaves this on the 15th, escorted by the 43d N. I., and a troop of the Shah's H. A. Two Parsee merchants have reached this, and their charges are almost incredible. Wine and brandy 72 rupees per dozen, cheroots 80 rupees per box, and tea 20 rupees per seer, and so on. They encountered great loss by the road, but not sufficient, I should think, to warrant such exorbitant prices; in spite of this, however, they are selling their investment rapidly. Frith and Co.'s was left at Datur, their head people having died by the way. The weather here continues cool."

THE SANS SOUCI.

Calcutta has lost nothing of its character as a city of palaces, as far as respects the size and appearance of its buildings, but it no longer presents that scene of splendid hospitality and endless entertainment which surprised and charmed the stranger a few years ago, when the gaunt aspect of poverty was a shape unknown,

"And all went merry as a marriage bell."

The memorable and melancholy fall of our princely merchants, threw a cloud over British India that has affected the constitution of its society a most unhappy change—a change that may possibly prove as permanent as it was sudden and extensive. They who were wont to throw open their hospitable dwellings and invite half the world to share in their festivities, have now closed their hearts and doors with a dismal caution. To men who had sat out their appointed hours within the dungeon walls of our office, or had passed a long day of ennui and idleness at home, it was a pleasure and a refreshment to prepare for crowded and illuminated balls, and cheerful converse and the dance and song at night. But the reign of festivity is over. The last representative of old Indian hospitality left our shores when Sir Charles Metcalfe embarked for England. His was latterly the only private mansion where the old system prevailed. Its monthly assemblies were the sole regular resource of the young and gay. It is not, therefore, surprising that his departure created so deep a sensation. We dare say that many of his grateful guests, in passing the walls of his deserted dwelling, have thought with tender regret of the vanished genius of hospitality.

When from this earth he passed away,
The last the latest words of his

We have till, occasionally, an ostentatious Burrha Khannah or a Ball, but they are like angels' visits, few and far between. The wealthiest amongst us, seized with the general panic, seem to dread poverty like the plague. They are shut up in selfish alarm within their prison-homes, and only peep at intervals upon their neighbours through their carefully raised venetians. The place has become another London. Next door neighbours look upon each other as entire strangers, and would take a nod of recognition, or the compliment of the morning as an unpardonable freedom. They are assuming the character of church-independent, and an economy almost sordid. When a person arrives from England or the Upper Provinces, he finds that none of his old friends can offer him an empty room. They dread his activity at the table. He is referred to a hotel. A few years ago no respectable person was seen in what was called "a punch house," because every well known and well-connected individual had a seat at a hundred tables—a bed in a hundred houses. Hotels were but a disreputable refuge for the destitute. They are now filled with people of the first fashion, and increase in number and character in proportion as hospitality fails.

The foregoing remarks may seem a somewhat lengthy and awkward introduction to a notice of Mrs. Leach's theatre, but we offer them as an explanation of the importance we attach to all attempts to enliven our society. Now that the more private sources of entertainment fail us, we ought to feel doubly grateful to those who furnish us at a moderate expense with the means of obtaining an innocent and rational enjoyment. Now the Sans Souci is admirably adapted to supply us with that refreshing entertainment of which there has been so melancholy a dearth. The pieces chosen for performance at this little theatre, are humorous and sparkling trifles especially acceptable to persons who hunger and thirst for a relaxation of the mind and a hearty laugh. Since our last notice, this theatre has so advanced in popularity that when we visited it on Thursday night we found every part of it completely filled. Our individual preference for a small theatre to a large one must now give way to a desire, for the sake of the public, that the house were not so Lilliputian. And surely if the community continue to patronize her theatre with their present eagerness, we may hope ere long to find Mrs. Leach adventuring a speculation upon a grander scale. In the course of a few months, (should Lord Auckland return to Calcutta, in the ensuing cold season,) we shall have not only a considerable addition to the number of play-goers and patrons of the Drama, but a very strong reinforcement of the corps dramatique. Several favorite Amateurs, at present in his Lordship's camp, have promised to exert themselves, and they will probably be joined by some of their old comrades now at the Presidency, who, from whatever cause, have not yet come forward, though the public would be delighted to hail their return to the Thespian scene.

The pieces selected for Thursday last, were the vaudeville of One Hour or the Carnival Ball, and the farce of Natal Engagements. In the first piece Mrs. Leach represented a lively young lady, and supported the part with all her usual archness and vivacity. Her ready and lightly ringing laugh, her clear flexible voice, and her expressive features, were called into full play upon this occasion. If we fancied ourselves, like Iago, nothing if not critical, we should be inclined to be angry with her for the uniformity of excellence. Since her return from England she has burst out upon us through the cloud of absence with so bright an aspect, that she is almost like a sun without a spot. If there be a few blemishes discoverable to other eyes, our own are too much dazzled to perceive them. It is true that she has latterly appeared exclusively in comic scenes, in which her chief excellence is supposed to lie, and we may find greater scope for a qualifying criticism when we have to notice her performances in graver and more ambitious parts. At present we are compelled, in common candour, to confine ourselves to unmitigated laudation. Should any of our readers be disposed to accuse us of a want of discrimination, let them carefully study her comic acting themselves, and they will soon have reason to acknowledge the truth and justice of our praise. They will discover that her performance is not composed of a few fine detached passages or starts; but that it displays a perfect unity throughout. Her by-play is quite as good as her most laboured points; because she has a complete and ever present consciousness of the character she assumes. She never waits for her turn to look, speak or move; because she knows that it is always her turn to be doing something while she is before the audience; and this unbroken light, or continuity of truth, gives double effect to her more emphatic passages. She is not like the lady-sitter, who told the portrait painter to give her due notice when he came to the eyes, that she might fill up a look. She identifies herself with her part, and leaves the expression to come and go with the alterations of feeling; in this rare excellence she has no equal, male or female, on the Indian stage. Master Modus most nearly approaches her, but he is too much inclined to share his pleasures with the audience. His sins, however, are never occasioned by ignorance of what is right, or a want of skill to second the suggestions of his judgment. His fault is downright negligence; and perhaps he does not sufficiently respect his auditors. He knows his own powers, and feels, therefore, occasionally a little too free and easy. When he makes a good hit we often see the dramatic character suddenly disappear, and the individual, in his proper person, laughing at the wit of the part assumed.

This spoils the joke. He should endeavor to forget that he is personally familiar with half the house. While on the stage it is his business to put aside all personal associations, and to think only of his part. These truisms are as obvious to him as they are to us, but that does not render it the less necessary that we should entreat him to pay a timely attention to them. His old Admiral, in the after-piece on Thursday night, was less open than usual to the objection just urged, and was upon the whole a most excellent performance, and full of truth and humour. With the exception of a little exaggeration of one or two points, (which, however, told well enough with the audience,) we have not seen a better specimen of comic acting on the Indian stage. Algernon (the barrister amateur) improves rapidly, and was occasionally in a high degree successful, but he has not acquired the confidence or the skill (we cannot yet say which) to fill up the intervals of exertion. His acting therefore, though in other respects very meritorious, is injured by abruptness and a want of keeping. The same defect is still more observable in his brother amateur Ready, whose representation of the Irish servant in the farce of Naval Engagements was otherwise extremely good. Let us caution him, however to pay less attention to the audience to whom his eye very frequently addresses itself when it should be kept in an opposite direction. His preparation also for the delivery of a point is too manifest, and he allows his action and manner after the delivery to drop too suddenly into a dead calm.

Amateur actors in general are not perhaps sufficiently aware of the effect which may be produced upon an audience by even very mediocre talents when accompanied by perfect ease and self-possession. In their awe and anxiety, their judgment quite deserts them, and it is to no purpose they work themselves up for convulsive exertions at what they regard as the only telling points. This high straining only makes them the more deplorably nerveless and relaxed when the sudden burst of animation so suddenly sub-sides. They are then as much too low as they were before too high. Anxious and desperate timidity always misses the mark. It is better for a debutant to be less ambitious of occasional displays until he has felt his way. In the first instance he should aim rather at an uninterrupted equality of excellence than at fine starts and striking passages; because, even if he occasionally succeeds, in some measure, in a solitary and hard studied point, the contrast with his general tameness only the more conspicuously betrays his labour, and shows that he has no genuine or continuous feeling of his part. All illusion is then destroyed, his identity is no longer involved in his assumed character, and the audience recognize only the imperfect actor. It is safer, therefore to be a little too cold or tame in the emphatic passages than to make them start out abruptly from the timid restraint of the general performance, for nothing can be more strikingly unnatural and ineffective than inequalities of this nature. The finest delivery of a single highly impassioned burst, would be ridiculous in a man who, throughout the rest of his performance, should exhibit a personification of awkward apathy. He would remind us of an automaton just wound up and put into temporary motion. If an actor were to do little more than walk through his part (if we may use the expression) with entire self-possession, he would not so glaringly betray his unfitness as by these ridiculous outbreaks.

We thought Mrs. Tonson a little improved since our last. There was rather more animation in her style. Mrs. Francis in the after piece, displayed great judgment and spirit—her entire performance was remarkably correct and well sustained.

In the scene of the Ball and Masquerade (which were exceedingly well managed, considering the smallness of the stage) Mr. Ballin danced a comic extravaganza with such energy and fun, that he was warmly encored. His variety of movement was highly comical. He rose and sank, and twisted, shuffled and rattled his limbs in a style of galvanic activity that was little expected by those who had but lately seen him in the part of the fat footboy. We must not forget to mention that Mrs. Leach and the Secretary executed a very graceful dance together (the cachoucha) in a style that excited great admiration.

The Secretary's old man (an inn-keeper) in the after-piece, was in his usual style, and gave much satisfaction.

There were some judicious improvements in the arrangements of the stalls, &c. and the house was a little cooler, but another door is to be opened, which will give still freer ventilation. The scenery was very ingenious, and deserving of more notice than it obtained, for it requires no little skill and tact to fit up so small a theatre with the elegance and effectiveness that have been given to the Sans-Souci.—Calcutta Literary Gazette, September 15.

SECOND REPRESENTATION.

The second representation of ONE HOUR AND NAVAL ENGAGEMENTS, on Thursday night, was, in spite of the rain which began at an awkward moment, very well attended, the house being as full as it well could be, where the system of compression is, from the nature of the accommodations, quite out of the question. Really things wear an aspect very promising for this charming little place of entertainment and its charming proprietress.

The character which the establishment has already earned, was fully sustained by the manner in which the business of the night was executed. The stars of our eastern theatrical hemisphere, here, Mrs. Leach and Master Modou, were as brilliant as ever. The former shone particularly bright as Julia Dalton, especially in the scene in which, during the one hour's ter-a-tete, with the entrapped and disappointed Sniffly, she converted that gentleman from the unwilling and grievously bored companion, into the ardent and devoted lover. Master Modou's Admiral, was very much superior to his O'Leary, a character in which the continued attention requisite to preserve the brogue, detracts from his usual ease and spirit. Algernon has improved considerably, but his pronunciation continues too lofty and emphatic for the "free and easy" characters in which only he has hitherto appeared. The representative of Dennis, looked and acted the character very well, but he pitches his voice too high, and allows it no cadence. It is almost painful to hear him. Mrs. Francis, as Mrs. Pontifex, with her "Kingston dear," was exceedingly entertaining. Mrs. Tonson's coldness is rapidly vanishing as she acquires confidence and skill from repeated practice. The Secretary, as the garrulous old inn-keeper, maintained his unrivalled character in his own line.

The only new feature in the night's performances, was a song by that fondly remembered favourite of the play going public, Mrs. Chester, who was received in a manner that must have been highly gratifying to her feelings. Her song, introduced into the Hall-scene in the character of a Sultana, was sweetly executed, a little allowance being, of course, made for the want of power consequent on long-continued indisposition. Mrs. Leach's song "Oh Love is the theme of the minstrel," was superior in execution to the one she gave on the first night. Her voice seemed to have gathered both strength and volume.

The cachoucha by the Secretary and Mrs. Leach, was a graceful performance, and the costumes of the dancers were extremely picturesque and appropriate. Ballin's comical piece of saltation, was again encored; it was a most ingenious and laughable specimen of his power and likeness of limb.

Though so full, the house was not at all uncomfortably hot. This perhaps was owing to the state of the weather, but if due to the contrivances for ventilating the building, it is a proof that great improvements have been effected. The pieces are to be repeated on Thursday next, for the accommodation of those who were "crowded out" on their last representation; and of such as shall in the meantime, feel inspired with a wish to ascertain from personal experience, the merits of the entertainments and the performers.—Hark.

LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Committee held at the Society's Office, on Monday, the 26th Aug.

PRESENT.

Committee.—Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, Baboo Prasannocoomar Tagore, G. Vint, Esq., Rajah Radacant Bahadur, Baboo Ramcomand Sen, Baboo Raminton Roy, Rajah Rajnarain Roy Bahadur, G. F. Remfry, Esq., Rajah Kally Kissen Bahadur, T. J. Taylor, Esq., W. C. Hurry, Esq., and Biboo Kallynauth Roy Chowdry.

Prior. Moonshiee Mozoizun.

The gentleman proposed at the last meeting, was unanimously elected.

The following gentleman was proposed a member of the Society:—

Proposed per a list from Mr. Lamb, and seconded by G. Vint, Esq.

Mr. G. A. Fer Stephanuss of Dacca,

Read a letter from J. Crawford, Esq. Society's agent in London.

The answer to the above letter, prepared on the part of the Society, was also read and approved of, and ordered to be forwarded to Mr. Crawford immediately by the Overland Mail.

Read a letter from F. C. Brown, Esq. Hon'y Secretary, to the British India Society, dated in London, 11th May last, forwarding a prospectus of that Society, and requesting the Landholders' Society's aid and concurrence for the purpose of securing the welfare and prosperity of both England and India by this connection.

An answer to Mr. Brown on the part of the Society was read and approved of.

Proposed by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, and seconded by Rajah Radacant Bahadur, that the letter from Mr. Brown and the prospectus of the British India Society be published for general information.

London, 11th May, 1839.

THEODORE DICKENS, Esq.,

Chairman of the Landholders' Society.

Sir,—I do myself the pleasure of sending to you, as the Chairman of the Landholders' Society, this prospectus of a Society, which the best interests of Great Britain and of India had long required. 'The British India Society, for bettering the condition of our fellow-subjects, the natives of India.' The Provisional Committee feel persuaded that the formation of this Society will have your own entire approval, will meet with the hearty aid and concurrence of the Landholders' Society of Calcutta, and will secure the active support and encouragement in both hemispheres of every real friend and well wisher to the connection, the welfare, and the prosperity of England and India.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obdt. servt.

(Signed) F. J. BROWN.

PROSPECTUS

Of the Provisional Committee for forming a British India Society for bettering the condition of our fellow subjects the natives of British India.

It is admitted in Great Britain, and known to be but too true by all who have had personal experience of the real state of India, that, although a commercial intercourse has existed between the British Isles and India, for more than two hundred years, and the Government, of this empire now rules over a hundred millions of the inhabitants of the east, there is nevertheless a general want of information upon India affairs, and an almost total indifference felt respecting them. It must be obvious to all who reflect upon these facts, that such a state of things contrasts strangely with the duty we owe to our distant dominions, with the extent, the value, and the importance of our East Indian possessions, and with the many and vast interests involved in the question.

British India is an empire as large as Europe (exclusive of Russia) with a population, including tributary states, of more than one hundred and fifty millions. Over this empire and people, a sway is exercised, wholly British, and consequently, the want of an accurate knowledge of Indian affairs, and the absence of a proper concern in the public at large for the welfare of the natives, must operate prejudicially upon their minds, since they cannot but feel that their destinies are influenced by the disposition manifested towards them in the parent country.

From the perusal of a variety of official and other documents of recent date, it appears that ignorance, poverty, crime, and disaffection prevail to a distressing and alarming extent, throughout the British Indian territories. It also appears, that during the last twenty years, though a period of profound peace, there has been a succession of famines of the most desolating description. It has been estimated that the famine of 1837-38 in the Upper Provinces of Bengal, swept off more than half a million of the inhabitants. These calamitous events are rendered the more mysterious and affecting, when viewed in connexion with the statement, that the soil of India, is a soil of unequalled fertility, and that a very large portion of it (by some authorities, computed at one half) is unappropriated, and covered by unsubdued jungle.

Information on these subjects has, within the last few months, been laid before the public in various parts of the kingdom. The result has been a deep feeling of compassion in the minds of many humane and influential persons; and the formation of several associations for promoting the welfare of the Natives of India. A strong desire has, besides, been expressed, for the establishment of a Metropolitan Society for the same object, by whose inquiries and efforts, the friends of India in other places, might be guided and assisted in their new and benevolent undertaking.

In consequence of these circumstances, and in accordance also with their own deep feeling of interest in the subject, the individuals whose names are attached to the Prospectus, have, after frequent and mature deliberations resolved themselves into a provisional committee, for forming a Society, to be designated, "The British India Society, for bettering the condition of our fellow subjects the natives of British India."

In making known this their resolution to the public the Committee consider it their duty to state very briefly but distinctly, their motives and their plans.

The Committee has its origin in a regard for the welfare of the natives of India, who owing allegiance to the Government, are entitled to look for sympathy and succour from the people of England. The Committee desire to found the proposed Society upon the strictest principles of justice and humanity, upon a basis which will permanently exclude the adoption of party, of sectarian or mercenary views. They contemplate the use of those means only, which are moral, peaceful, and constitutional. They would suggest, and labour to secure, the delay of all specific plans of amelioration, until every doubt respecting the nature and extent of alleged existing evils, and the necessity of remedying them is entirely removed.

The primary duty of a British India Society would therefore be,—to obtain from every available source, authentic and impartial information, respecting the present actual condition of the natives of India, and the circumstances of the country, and to give to the information so obtained, the widest possible circulation. The means of accomplishing this necessary preliminary object appear to be, viz.

To bring together, analyse, condense, and diffuse, the facts already at hand.

To adopt the best means of obtaining regular and systematic information from all parts of India.

To form a Library, embracing the most useful works on every branch of the subject.

To issue, under proper management, a periodical publication, containing the most recent, important, and interesting Indian intelligence.

To reprint, in whole or in part, such works as may be calculated to elucidate particular portions of the great subject.

To employ an active, experienced, and effective, agency, for the organization of Provincial Auxiliary Societies.

The judicious and zealous prosecution of a course such as has been now described, would, the Committee feel assured, effectually remove the apathy which at present exists. The apathy, they believe, may with justice be ascribed, to the difficulty which has hitherto attended the search after correct and comprehensive information respecting the condition and character of the natives of India, and the nature and effects of British rule in the East.

The committee entertain no doubt, that when the vast importance of our Eastern possessions is understood when the claims of one hundred millions of British subjects are recognized and felt, and when the responsibility and moral obligation of this nation towards them are considered, a great and generous effort will promptly be made, to benefit a country, which contains within itself, the means of returning a hundred-fold into the bosoms of its benefactors, all the blessings they can possibly confer upon it.

The Committee prefer to make their appeal to the just principles and Christian feelings of the country. They are not ignorant, however, of the extent to which they might address themselves to the loyalty, the patriotism, and the interests of their fellow-citizens. But they believe that such an appeal is unnecessary. They feel convinced that no argument is required, to demonstrate the inseparable connexion between the bettering of the social, moral, and intellectual condition of the countless millions of India and the accomplishment of those ends which are sought by the promoters and patrons of legitimate commerce, and the advocates of the honour, the stability, and the prosperity of the British empire, at home and abroad.

The Committee having stated the objects, principles, and plans, according to which they are about to attempt the formation of a British India Society, look with confidence for the sanction, support, and co-operation of the British public. They sincerely and earnestly solicit advice. They especially desire the aid of gentlemen who have resided in India, and who, after perusing this prospectus, feel that they can cordially unite in the work proposed.

Finally, the Committee respectfully solicit pecuniary assistance. Subscriptions and donations will be gratefully received by the Treasurer, Secretary, Bankers, and members of the Committee.

The Secretary reported, that the appeal against the decision of the Deputy Governor of Bengal on resumption operations, has been forwarded to the Governor-General of India in Council.

Several notes of grievances having been submitted to the society by the zemindars of the Mofussil, and its aid in procuring redress requested by them, particularly regarding some oppressive proceedings of the magistrates, four draft applications to Government on their behalf were read and approved unanimously.

Resolved, that the above applications be forwarded to Government as early as convenient, with some alterations and additions as suggested.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Committee held at the Society's Office, on Monday, the 23d September, 1839

PRESENT.

Committee.—Bahoo Dvirkanath Tagore; Bahoo Prononnooomar Tagore; G. Vint, Esq.; Rajah Rajnarain Roy, Bahadoor; F. J. Taylor, Esq.; W. C. Hurry, Esq., and G. F. Remfry, Esq.,

Members.—W. G. Rose, Esq., and Cowar Protabhurn Singh, adopted heir of Ranny Katawany.

Visitors.—Bahoo Dabhyprostud Roy, Dewan of duto, and Bahoo Digamber Mitter.

The gentleman proposed at the last meeting, was unanimously elected.

The following gentlemen were proposed members of the Society:

Proposed by Bahoo Prononno Sen, and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.—Roger Dix, Esq.

Proposed by Bahoo Dvirkanath Tagore and seconded by G. Vint, Esq.—A. B. Baze, Esq., of Jessore.

Proposed by Bahoo Prononnooomar Tagore, and seconded by Rajah Rajnarain Roy, Bahadoor, Cowar Kisinnauth Roy, Bahadoor, of Cosimbazar.

Read a letter from Government in answer to the Society's two applications complaining of the levy of tulabannahs, and the building of ghatty ghurs in the mofussil.

Resolved, that the Society's above letters, together with the answer received from Government be published for the information of the members.

F. J. HALLIDAY, Esq., Secy. to the Govt of Bengal.

Sir,—We are directed by the Landholders' Society to state, that a practice prevails in the Mofussil, by which, whenever putwanahs are issued to Landholders or their officers on the adoption of any new rule, or for assistance to be rendered to the police on particular emergencies, the persons who carry these putwanahs exact a tulabannah or daily allowance from the party addressed, as if they had proceeded, not on public service, but on business connected with the interests of the party addressed.

2d. We therefore beg the favor of your submitting for the consideration of his honor the Deputy Governor of Bengal, the earnest solicitations of the Landholders' Society, that he will, with reference to the provisions of the fundamental Reg. I. of 1793, be pleased to order that zemindars and their officers be in future, exempted from the payment of tulabannah on the receipt of putwanahs addressed to them by the magistrates on matters of the description explained in the foregoing paragraph, as such expenses being purely for police purposes. The zemindars are exempted from such payment by the provisions of the regulation in question.

We have the honor to be, Sir, your most obdt. servts.

Calcutta, September 6, 1839.

F. J. HALLIDAY, Esq.

Secy. to the Govt of Bengal.

Sir,—Under the direction of the Landholders' Society we solicit the favor of your laying before his honor the Deputy Governor of Bengal, the subject matter of a representation made to the Society by several zemindars residing in zillah Hooghly.

2d. The Society has been credibly informed by several zemindars residing in zillah Hooghly, that a practice prevails in the Mofussil of ordering zemindars to build certain village guard houses, called ghatty ghurs and that the construction of these houses costs upon an average 15 rupees each. These houses, it is further stated, are frequently removed from one place to another, or alterations and additions made to them on every change in the existing local details of arrangement made by the magistrate and such changes often take place on the appointment of a new magistrate.

3d. Many states in the province of Bengal contain upwards of 100 village, but taking that as the average number in each pargunnah it will be found that the expense of building the said guard houses, not to mention the expenses necessarily attending their repair, would amount, on every occasion of change, to not less than 1,500 rupees.

4th. The principal object of these guard houses is stated to be the detention and safe custody, during night, of persons who had under the sentence of any criminal court, been banished or put in irons, and have since the expiration of the period of their sentence returned to their villages. It is not the intention of the Society on this occasion to notice the injurious tendency of such a practice (which is clearly contrary to every approved principle of prison discipline) on the morals of the sufferers and the communities of which they form a part. The only object it has in view at present is the bringing to the notice of his honor the expense attending the construction and repairs of these buildings and the furnishing of the oil, muskato, &c. deposited in them, which is likewise required to be defrayed by the zemindars.

5th. It has also been stated that in some instances magistrates have ordered the expenses under reference to be levied upon the ryots, whilst in others the zemindars have been compelled to incur these expenses, and their ultimate levy has been left to them. Both these alternatives, the Society respectfully submits, have a prima facie character of arbitrary and oppressive proceeding, besides opening a prolific source of abuse, either to the officers of the police, or the amils of the zemindars into whosever's hands the levy of these exactions may happen to fall.

6th. The Landholders' Society has in vain searched for any regulation authorizing the said practice, and has no doubt his honor the Deputy Governor will concur in the opinion that these exactions are illegal and that the functionaries who make them exceed their legitimate powers.

7th. If the said guard houses be necessary in some localities, the Landholders' Society begs respectfully to submit, that the expenses attending them ought to be borne by the state, whose sacred duty it is to preserve public peace, and afford security to the lives and property of its subjects and not by individual members of the community, whether a sudder or a dependant malgouzoun. After the explicit manner in which the governing authority has 'exonerated' by clause 4, sec. viii. regulation i. of 1793. all landholders from the charge of keeping the peace, it cannot surely be the intention of Government to levy an additional tax on the people on account of these guard-houses. The Society therefore confidently hope that his honor the Deputy Governor will take the grievance into consideration, and issue such orders as may effectually relieve the landholders and their ryots from this illegal exaction,

We have the honor to be, Sir,
Your most obedient Servants,

Read a letter from Mr. Dickens, stating that he had received a communication from Mr. Crawford, desiring him to inform the Society that the question of resumption would be brought before Parliament, Lord Brougham having already moved for papers. Also that a Society has been formed, the particulars of which will be found in the public papers for the protection and improvement of British India.

Resolved, that this Society is extremely gratified to learn that a Society has been formed in England for Indian objects, and that a public subscription be opened in aid thereof, the amount to be retained here till the intentions of that Society be fully understood.

In the meantime a letter to be addressed to the Secretary, expressing our gratification at what we have already heard, and our cordial wishes for its success.

BENGAL SALT COMPANY.

On Saturday last, a meeting of the Subscribers to the Bengal Salt Company, was held at the Exchange Rooms, to receive the report of the progress of its affairs, and to resolve upon measures for carrying out the objects of the Association.

Theodore Dickens, Esq., was called to the chair.

The Chairman, in opening the business of the meeting, observed, that owing to certain causes which would be explained in the Secretary's Report, so much progress had not been made since the last meeting as was then anticipated.

The further progress of the work would, however, he was sure, be steady and unimpeded, as it had now received the approbation of Government, and had been favourably recommended to the notice of the Court of Directors.

When the minutes of the last meeting had been read by the Chairman, Mr. Wm. Pinnep, the Provisional Secretary, read the following Report.

SECOND REPORT OF THE PROVISIONAL SECRETARY UPON THE AFFAIRS OF THE BENGAL SALT COMPANY.

I have the honor once more to lay before the Subscribers to this Association, a Report of the progress made in bringing the great scheme of this Association into active operation. I regret to state, however, that our advance has been slower than could have been anticipated from the position, in which I found the concerns of the Company when I had last, on the 4th May, the honor to place before you the statement which appeared in print with the proceedings of that day. I had then only just taken up the subject upon the perusal of my late brother's papers, and I conceive that the position the Bengal Salt Company then stood in, was as follows:—

That a reference had been made by the late projector to Government, to know whether the excise system could or could not be entertained.

That it had been favorably received by this Government, and had been recommended to the Hon'ble Court of Directors.

That in the interim, before the orders of the Court could be received upon the adoption of the excise system, the late projector had been permitted to lay out new works at Gordah, upon the contract system, similar to those he was carrying on at Narainpore, and at a rate nearly on a par with the Molunghee contracts.

That the Gordah premises, which were then being bundled in and cleared, in preparation for the buildings and terrace to be erected in the ensuing dry season, had been made over to the Bengal Salt Company, and which arrangement was confirmed by the last general meeting.

Such was the view entertained by the Committee and myself, and although we found that no positive reply had been given by the Board to the final propositions of the late projector, still it was understood, that the views of the Board were in accordance with our own.

Upon pressing, however, for a definitive reply before going deeply into the expenses necessary for completing the works at Gordah, I found, after considerable delay, and correspondence with the Board, that other and very different views had been entertained of the degree of encouragement this Government should give to the progress of our scheme. A positive refusal was given even after an appeal to his honor in council, to our having a contract for working Gordah upon an equal footing with the Molunghee contractors, and the rate offered of only eight annas per maund, had almost determined the Committee to abandon the object altogether, and to recommend to the subscribers the breaking up of the Association.

I found also, that the recommendation of the excise system by this Government, had not gone to England in the shape that had been supposed, and that in consequence of a material difference of opinion among the Government officers as to the propriety of adopting the scheme set forth in the original prospectus, I was called upon for further and more particular remarks upon the different points this scheme embraced, that the sentiments of Government might be formed upon the fullest and fairest information to be obtained.

It was during the enquiries that these references led to, that I was enabled to strengthen very materially the arguments in favor of the scheme, by entering minutely into the details of every point taken up by the members of the Board, in their minutes upon it, and I have now the satisfaction to inform the subscribers to this Association, that such good reasons were found for a change in the views of Government towards the working of our scheme, that I have now to lay before this meeting the full consent of Government to our carrying on Gordah under the contract system, on a par with the Molunghees of the same district, and I have further to state, that the overland mail just departed, carries the papers regarding our prospectus, backed by a strong and distinct recommendation to the Honorable Court, for the adoption of the excise system, as therein set forth, but under conditions, suggested by the Board, of a nature not materially affecting the terms of the prospectus. I have further to point out to this meeting, that the permission to proceed with the Girdah works, under contract, is accompanied with the guarantee we sought for, namely, that in case our prospectus is rejected altogether by the Court, and the continuation of a contract is denied to us, this Government will take over to themselves the works we have constructed at their cost, leaving this association to proceed, therefore, without other risk of loss, than may be attached to the original plan of production.

Upon this head, I am glad to be able to confirm to the subscribers, in the fullest manner, the opinion expressed in my last report, that the cost of production will not be found to exceed the estimate of the late projector. My conviction upon this material point, has been derived from experience of the results at Baliaghat, Bhaola and Narainpore, whilst manufacturing during the rains, and in a season which has been peculiarly unpropitious to salt-making, for it commenced raining heavily on the 24 May, and I may say has continued to do so ever since. The monthly returns of expenditure and produce, under every possible disadvantage, prove most satisfactorily, that new works substantially constructed, with all the advantage of the experience acquired in the progress of the works already finished, will yield even better results than are now obtained.

I now proceed to lay before the meeting, the abstract of expenditure to the present date, amounting to,

For expenses at the works, Establishment, including advertisements, &c., Rs.	10,118	13	4
For an invoice of cast iron pans, „	6,481	9	4
	16,600	6	8

There is an arrear of rent due for the whole of the lands attached to these works, which cannot be adjusted finally till they have been measured in the approaching dry season. Mr Barrington's report upon the present state of the premises, is also laid before the meeting.

The List of Shareholders shows, that there have been subscribed for to this date

By Europeans.....	1,600	0	0
Total..	2,462	0	0

The Union Bank book shews, that nearly the whole of the first contributions of ten rupees per share, has been realized on these shares, the credit side amounting to Co's Rs 22,790 0 0.

The balance will doubtless be realized forthwith, now that it is known, that the association is proceeding under such favorable auspices.

It now only remains for this meeting, to determine upon the measures to be adopted for completing the works, for which a sum not less than 150,000 will be required, according to the late projector's estimate. I have not yet had the power of reforming this estimate in a more detailed manner, in consequence of the flooded state of the fields, and the impossibility of making any measurements or correct ground plan of the works, but as far as a cursory view can embrace, I think the allowances for enoh item of expenditure, are liberally made.

A contribution of 59 per share will be required forthwith, to enable the committee to proceed with the construction of the works. The season is already far advanced for the necessary contracts for bricks, wood, artificers and coolies, but with exertion, I do not despair of being able to have means for commencing the brickwork by the 1st of January, 1840.

The committee will now proceed to prepare, without loss of time, the draft of a deed of co partnership, with the view of submitting the same to the consideration of Government, along with the prayer of the subscribers, for an act of incorporation similar to that granted to the bonded warehouse association.

Before closing my report, I may add, that letters from the agents and treasurers in England, report no subscription for shares there, nor was it much to be expected until it was known more precisely what the real position of this association would be. The subscription list will now most probably be filled up in this country, and it will be more convenient if it is so. Other letters for England inform me, that the prospectus is favorably viewed by many connected with the East India House, and that any recommendation from this Government for the adoption of the excise system, in gradual substitution of the present monopoly, which may, at the same time secure to Government their revenue upon this produce, will be gladly received and acted upon. Thus, there is a very fair prospect of the subscribers finding themselves next year in a position to carry out the great scheme to its fullest extent.

WM. PRINSEP, Provisional Secretary.

Mr. W. Prinsep proceeded to read the report of the Assistant at the works, stating their present position and the preparations making for the ensuing dry season.

He also read the correspondence with the Board, confirming to the association, the permission to carrying on Girdah under the contract system, on a par with the Molunghees under the guarantees required,

He also read the replies of Mr. Carey and Mr. Bamber, the superintendents of the present works, to a series of questions put to them, and which most unequivocally confirm the opinion his report contained, of the success of the plan of manufacture and the estimate of cost price.

When the Secretary had concluded the Report, the following resolution was proposed by W. Bruce, Esq., seconded by N. Alexander, Esq., and carried unanimously.

1st.—That the Secretary's Report as produced by the Chairman of the Committee, be approved and adopted.

It was then moved by F. J. Taylor, Esq., seconded by E. Barwell, Esq., and carried unanimously:—

2nd.—That the Establishment of the Bengal Salt Company being now confirmed, the thanks of the subscribers are given to the gentlemen who have acted provisionally in Committee; and that the concerns of this Company be henceforth conducted by a Chairman and eight Directors, and that the following gentlemen be elected accordingly, with authority to prepare a deed of partnership and apply to Government for an Act of Incorporation:—T. Dickens, J. Cullen, W. Bruce, N. Alexander, L. Clarke, H. Holroyd, Dwarkanauth Tagore, J. Colquhoun and W. Prinsep, Esq's.

Mr. Dickens, as Chairman of the Committee, returned thanks on behalf of that body. The acknowledgments of the association were, he said, in an especial manner, due to Mr. Wm. Prinsep, their zealous and indefatigable Secretary, to whose able correspondence was chiefly owing the favorable notice which their propositions had received from the Government.

Moved by L. Clark, Esq., seconded by H. Holroyd, Esq., and carried unanimously.

3d.—That pending the reference to Government of the draft deed of copartnership, an engagement be prepared by the Committee, for the signature of each subscriber, previous to the delivery of the certificate of his share, binding himself to abide by all rules and resolutions passed at any public meeting of the Association.

In proposing the above Resolution, Mr. Clarke observed, that some such engagement was absolutely necessary to restrain individuals from opposing themselves to the wishes of the majority, and to prevent that total anarchy and confusion which would otherwise ensue. As a model for the proposed document, he read the bond entered into by the subscribers to the Assam Company, by which they undertook to obey the laws of the Association or to dispose of their shares at their own risk, without any claim upon the Company for the restitution of paid up instalments.

Moved by W. Bruce, seconded by Rustonjee Cowasjee and carried unanimously :

4th.—That Mr. Wm. Prinsep be requested to continue his services as Provisional Secretary, until other arrangements can be made.

Moved by T. J. Taylor, Esq., seconded by N. Alexander, Esq., and carried unanimously.

5th.—That a second contribution of 50 rupees per share, be immediately called for, payable in the following manner : 10 before 1st November, 20 before 1st December, and 20 before 1st January 1840.

Moved by Jas. Cragg, Esq., seconded by R. Thomas, Esq., and carried unanimously :

6th.—That the subscription list be kept open until the 31st of December, 1839, on which date it shall be finally closed, retaining only for English subscribers, the right to take up shares according to the resolution passed at the last general meeting of the 4th May, 1839.

MR. LONDORVILLE CLARKE. —Gentlemen, I have been particularly desirous of submitting to you the Resolution which I am about to have the honor of proposing, because a fuller knowledge of the facts has induced me to alter the opinion which I originally entertained, and I wish you to be possessed of those circumstances which have convinced me that I was at first in error. The object of this Resolution is, to prevent the family of the late Mr. George Prinsep with one hundred shares in the Association. I shall not urge the adoption of this Resolution on the ground of liberality, but on the ground of justice, for I consider this transfer of the hundred shares, as the satisfaction of a claim, as the mere payment of a debt, as a part compliance with a compact, nor will I for a moment treat it as the making of a gift. As regards the family of Mr. Prinsep, it would be unhandsome, to turn the discharge of an obligation into a parade of generosity ; and as regards ourselves, it would be impolitic to let an act of justice, assume the appearance of a job. And now, gentlemen, if you agree with me in those opinions, I will briefly state to you the facts on which I consider the claim of the family to be founded.

It is known to you, that it was with Mr. George Prinsep this scheme first originated ; he devised, and he matured the plan. For ten years did he devote his property, time, talents, and health to the cause, and when it was perfected, and your Association was formed, he wound up all by becoming its victim. I will now read to you a part of Mr. Prinsep's original prospectus, prepared by himself, and containing the conditions on which the Association was to be based, and which were by them accepted. I read from the 7th page,

"That Mr. Prinsep shall engage his services to the Association as General Manager and superintendent of the works for five years certain, or at least, until two-thirds of the requisite number of salt works, shall have been laid out, and that in the mean time he shall not be at liberty to quit the Bengal Presidency, except on account of sickness, or to further the interests of the Association. That his personal allowance shall be fixed at a rate of salary corresponding with that of the lowest rate of Government Salt Agents, namely 2,500 Rs. per month."

Gentlemen, all this part of the engagement between you and Mr. Prinsep, has been determined by his untimely death, and you will observe, that it relates solely to a remuneration for his future superintendence and labors, but for his important discovery, and the benefits you were likely to reap from it, there was to be a different remuneration, and this I will now read to you from the following paragraph :

"That he shall be further allowed ten per cent. on the annual profits or amount available for dividend for twenty years, computed from the date of the first dividend, which per centage is to be considered as a remuneration to him, for making over benefits of his scheme, the result of ten years' experiments on a large scale, prosecuted under many adverse circumstances to complete success."

Gentlemen, Mr. Prinsep's death has deprived you of his future labor and superintendence, and you have not to pay the 2,500 rupees a month ; but if the plan succeeds, then you will reap the full benefits "of his scheme, of the ten years' experiments, of its complete success," and in common justice then, the remuneration is as much due to his family as it was to himself. His remuneration was to be dependent on the success of the scheme, for it was only payable out of the profits, and their remuneration is by my resolution similarly dependent, for by giving them shares, they will gain or lose alike with yourselves. I repeat, therefore, again, that this is the payment of a debt, and must not assume the guise of a gift, and as for liberality, I will demonstrate to you beyond contradiction, that it is all on the side of Mr. Prinsep's family who have offered to accept of this remuneration. A profit of ten per cent. on 3,000 shares, would have been equal to the profit of 300 shares, this was to be secured for 20 years certain, and was therefore more valuable than 100 shares in perpetuity ; but the proposal has come from the family, and to me it appears to be most liberal. But, gentlemen, Mr. Prinsep agreed to make over to our association his interests in other salt works, so that we might not have a rival at our threshold ; this, I think, should still be done, and you will perceive that it forms a part of my resolution.

It was then proposed by Mr. Clarke, seconded by Rustonjee Cowasjee, and carried unanimously.

7.—That the late Mr. George Prinsep having invented, and at a great personal sacrifice matured, the scheme for which this association is formed, as a compensation for the benefits of the plan, one hundred shares, free of all expense, be presented to his family, subject to an arrangement to be made by the Directors, for the assignment, at an adequate consideration, of the interests of the late Mr. Prinsep in the other salt works.

Mr. W. Prinsep replied, that it would be a high source of gratification to every member of his family, to find that the labours, the zeal and the never ceasing perseverance of his late brother, had thus been so liberally and handsomely appreciated by this meeting. This gratification was so much the greater, that it was accompanied by the knowledge, that should the scheme not succeed, no shareholder would individually be a sufferer ; while if it did succeed, of which he, Mr. Prinsep, had the fullest confidence, the late projector's labors would receive their well-merited reward.

He proceeded to state the position of the Narainpore property, under pledge to Government, but doubted not, that in case the Bengal Salt Company proceeded with their works, the Government would most probably be very glad to waive their prior claim in favor of the Salt Company, which he, as executor of his brother, was most ready to confirm.

The business of the day being concluded, a vote of thanks to the Chairman was proposed by Mr. N. Alexander, and awarded by acclamation ; after which, the meeting was dissolved.—Hark. September 30.

PRESENTATIONS TO THE SOCIETY.

LIBRARY.

1. No. 10 of the Transactions of the Society of Arts, London. Presented by the Society of Arts.

2. Six Copies of the Proceedings of the Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, for the year 1838. Presented by the Royal Asiatic Society.

3. Proceedings of the Quarterly Meeting of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Madras.

In allusion to a former notice of the society on the subject of pecuniary receipts, the Secretary brought to the notice of the Meeting the circumstance that the expression of the Madras Committee's report had reference to the Bombay Agricultural Society, as well as to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India.

4. A Pamphlet on the objects and history of the Thames Improvement Company. Presented by Mr. Johnson on the part of his brother, the author.

5. Abercrombie's Practical Gardener, and improved System of Modern Horticulture, adapted to small or large gardens and designed for gentlemen who manage their own gardens. Purchased by the Society.

6. A translated account of the prosperous condition of the Tea Plant on the Neilgherries, and of the advantages to be derived from cultivating it on a grand scale in the elevated parts of India. By M. Perrotet, Botanist in the French Government. Presented by the Bengal Tea Committee.

MUSEUM.

1. A Machine for cleaning cotton, which has been made at Glasgow under the auspices of the East India Association. Presented by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce.

This Machine has been sent to India, experimentally, for the purpose of being tried as an efficacious instrument for cleaning cotton. It is on the principle of the churka which was sent to the East India Association of Glasgow by the Chamber of Commerce at Bombay. It is about the same size—weighs about sixty pounds, and may be easily moved from place to place as the common churka. By it the seeds which accompanied the native Machine from Bombay were effectually separated from the kapus or cotton, and without injury to the staple, but no impression is made on the broken leaf and other impurities, for which there would seem to be no remedy but an improved system of picking.

Soft seeds are liable to the same contingency, and in order to prevent them from passing between the rollers, it was found necessary at Glasgow, to first dry the kapus on a kiln, which procedure will be obviated in the climate of India, by exposure to the sun.

In presenting the foregoing simple and apparently very efficient apparatus, the Glasgow Chamber only ask in return to be furnished with a report of the result, which has attended its use. And further entreat, that so far as lies in the power of the Chamber of Commerce of Bengal, that that body will do its best to reserve the orders for making a number of them for Mr. Houldsworth, to whose skill and attention, the Association at Glasgow is indebted for the improvement. If many are required they would not cost above £4 sterling each. The two now exhibited may be worked separately or together, and any number which there is power to work, may be united by simply lengthening the shaft. Each will outrequire one person to feed it.

The Directors of the East India Association at Glasgow have sent two each to Bombay and Madras, and the Court of Directors of the East India Company have ordered four for their Bombay Presidency.

The Members present took a great interest in the exhibition of this Machine, and the Cotton Committee were desirous to test it more fully and to favor the Society with a report on the result of the trials.

2. A sample of Cashmere Angora-goat wool, obtained at the Cape of Good Hope from an animal imported into the Colony from New South Wales. Presented by Captain Charlton.

3. Specimen of Coontchouc from Sylhet. Presented by Dr. Spry.

4. Sample of Cotton, grown at Rajmahal. Presented by Mr. Richards.

5. A small basket of potatoes, the produce of Darjeeling. Presented by Dr. Wallich on behalf of Dr. Campbell.

They are of this season's produce, and although considered by Dr. Campbell of an inferior kind, they appear to Dr. Wallich greatly preferable to any which can be procured in the Calcutta Market at this time of the year.

6. Three specimens of indigenous Bengal Cotton. No. 1, the same kind as that lately furnished by the Society for trial in Assam. No. 2 is of a coarser but longer fibre. No. 3 is a black-seeded cotton. Presented by Mr. Dearman, Secretary to the Dacca Branch Agricultural Society.

Mr. Dearman thinks, that No. 3 is fully equal to Egyptian, or Sea Island in silkiness. He states, that he obtained a clue to the discovery of this as well as to No. 2 specimen, by examining some old records; but he only became aware of their being still to be found in cultivation within the last few weeks. The specimen No. 3, was considered by the Meeting as a very superior indigenous Cotton, and Mr. Dorman was requested to supply the Society with further particulars. What is remarkable with regard to the specimen, marked No. 3, is that Mr. Dorman states, that it is obtained from a tree which is PERENNIAL of four or five years growth.

7. Eight cobs of Maize, from acclimated American Seed, grown at Patmadecah, near Sook Saugor. Presented by Mr. Quantin.

8. Four samples of Sugar, manufactured at Amherst. Presented by Mr. Riley. The whole of the samples have been pronounced of a superior quality. No. 1 is of good colour and fine strong grain. No. 2, middling quality. No. 3, a shade better, and No. 4, very coarse brown Sugar, which would meet with a ready sale in the Calcutta Market in any quantity.

9. Six samples of Grains, from the Nerbudda Territory. No. 1, is best wheat called Julalya, grown only on the Southern banks of the Nerbudda, in the Hoshingabad District. No. 2, is a second best wheat called, Kulya, it also grows in Hoshingabad. No. 3, Parbuttee, or white Cheena, a very fine grain, found only where the Julalya wheat grows. No. 4, is common Cheena, (Coveredatum). No. 5, white Til (Verbesina) — flower white and blue. No. 6 black Til, (Verbesina citra). Major Ouseley, who presents these grains to the Society through Dr. Wallich, not having observed them noticed anywhere, wishes to have information regarding them. They were referred to the Agricultural Committee.

MOTION OF WHICH NOTICE WAS GIVEN AT THE LAST MEETING.

The motion proposed at the last Meeting by Mr. Piddington, and seconded by Mr. Hare — "that as a number of valuable Agricultural papers are not strictly a liability in the Society's transactions, from having been printed in other books and pamphlets, it be referred to the Committee of Papers to ascertain whether the Society can without expense publish an appendix or volume of such useful papers" — was carried.

INTRODUCTION OF FOREIGN SEED CORN INTO INDIA.

The Report of the Corn-Committee was brought up and read. The propriety of affording the Landholders of India an opportunity of trying different varieties of the European, African, and American cereal grains on their Estates, was first adverted to and highly approved of, as being likely to be attended with benefit to the interests of the country at large, and the Committee, in consequence, in order to give as extended a range as practicable to this recommendation, begged to offer for the approval of the Society, a public notification to the effect that the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India being desirous of effecting the introduction of foreign seed corn into India, is desirous to receive and register applications from all persons who are desirous of procuring seed for trial on their lands; and will use their best endeavours to obtain the same from Europe, Africa, and America. A reference for payment to be furnished at the same time. In addition to this, the Committee desired to recommend, and the same was adopted, that a quantity not exceeding a ton of each kind, be obtained for the use of the Members of the Society.

PLANS ADOPTED TO SECURE SUCH PLANTS AND TREES AS MAY BE THOUGHT DESIRABLE FOR INTRODUCTION INTO INDIA, AS WELL AS THOSE THAT CAN BE FURNISHED IN RETURN.

The Committee appointed to assist in carrying out the views of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors contained in their despatch of the 30th February last, has twice assembled.

The Committee report as a part of the business of their Meetings, having read correspondence and Minutes of Council by the most Noble the Marquis of Hastings, contained in their journals, regarding the establishment in the year 1823 of a garden at Tuaghur near Calcutta, as a branch of the Hon'ble Company's Botanic Garden, where among other things it is stated that "a great number of curious plants, have been introduced for the trial of naturalizing them to the climate of Bengal. Food, Manufactures, and Medicines being the objects which decided the choice." Also parts of a paper conjointly addressed by the Hon'ble Holt Mackenzie and Dr. Reyle to the Members of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain.

A list of Trees and Shrubs of Asia, suitable for introduction into temperate latitudes, furnished by Loudon in his Arboretum et Fruticeum Britannicum.

A list of Medicinal plants and gum-yielding trees amounting to 86 in number, collected by Dr. Spry in 1831, while residing in Southern Bundelkand.

A list of useful grasses and other articles by Mr. John-on, and lastly a list of plants calculated for introduction and propagation throughout Lower and Upper Hindoostan by Dr. Spry.

The Committee recommend that a circular letter be addressed to a persons who may be likely to assist in forwarding the views of the Society, and desire that the information sought may be classed under three heads.

1st. Food, comprising esculent grains of all kinds, Medicinal plants, fruits and roots.

2d. Fodder and food for cattle and domestic animals, comprising grasses, seeds, fruits, roots and leaves — also any ornamental shrubs and flowers.

3d. Manufacturing and commercial articles, such as oils, gums, dyes, and barks, or any other known or unknown staples of commerce, also oaks, firs, teak-trees, &c.

The Committee desire to state that any suggestion, even of a single article only, will be deemed valuable; as it is solely by the union of the scattered practical knowledge of individuals, that the surest information can be obtained, and the development and consequent improvement of the resources and wealth of India and England be mutually promoted.

THE VALUE OF GUZERAT AS A COTTON PROVINCE.

A communication was read by the Secretary which had been forwarded to him by Mr. Owen Potter, of the firm of T. and S. Kelsall of Calcutta, on the subject of the cotton trade in Guzerat Mr. Potter who had at Manchester, lately addressed this communication to the Chamber of Commerce in that city, and the substance of it formed a portion of the business which was submitted to the Honorable the Court of Directors on the occasion of the Manchester Deputation waiting on the Court at the India House. Mr. Potter states that in the spring of 1837 he was occupied in Guzerat in purchasing, cleaning, packing, and shipping cotton. The chief cotton ports are Surat, Baroche, Tankaria Bunder, Gogo and Bownugger. All these ports are within a short distance of each other. The extent of cotton cultivation in their vicinity is very great, as will be seen by the following statement of exports:

From Baroche.....	42,000 bales,....	20,000 bales.
— Tankaria Bunder	20,000 bales,....	12,000 bales.
— Surat.....	25,000 bales,....	15,000 bales.
— Gogo and Bownugger including the whole of Cotton....	60,000 bales.....45,000 bales.

Each bale weighing about..... 400 lbs.

Nearly the whole of the Cotton here mentioned grows within 4) miles of the port at which it is shipped. The country is flat, and the freight to Bombay amounts to no more than two per cent, on the value of the Cotton. These localities on the coast are more frequently inundated than any others, and great portion of the seed when sown is frequently entirely washed away. At Omrawutle, Cotton is grown at the rate of two pounds for two pence in moderately favorable seasons; and did good roads but only exist, this article could be delivered at Bombay at a handsome remunerating price. It is now carried on the backs of bullocks, and as it now is, the extra cost amounts to a penny a lb. more. The Government levy their tax in this part of the country in kind, taking one half of the produce for the payment of their land tax, each pound of Cotton therefore stands the grower in two pence, with the additional penny to Bombay.

The Cotton of Omrawutle which is situated nearly 500 miles from any port Mr. Potter describes as little inferior to that grown in Guzerat, which is looked upon as the garden of the western side of India. But from the circumstance of the land tax being levied at a much higher rate than in the Berar Province, much valuable Cotton land still remains uncultivated. In Guzerat the rate of taxation often proves 50 per cent. on the market value of the Cotton.

Mr. Potter alludes to the total absence of all port conveniences for shipping the Cotton at any of the places before mentioned, and states that for the want of sufficient accommodation, the porters are obliged to sling the cotton bales on hammocks, and each bearing an end on their shoulders wade up to their waist in mud and water, before they can approach even a boat large enough to convey ten or twenty bales to the vessels. There is some little accommodation at Surat. At Barode there was formerly a commodious pier, but of late years though the trade of the place has rapidly increased the pier has been allowed to fall into ruins, and in 1837 was utterly useless.

The Cotton pod, in Guzerat, is overhung by a tender brown leaf, which when the dew is on the plant early in the morning, is soft, yields to the hand, and will not break; consequently all the early pickings are free from leaf. Mr. Potter thinks that a system of rewards and fines might be introduced among the Patells of the Cotton Villages with advantage, and he adds that little improvement in the preparation of the Cotton for the English market can be expected, till British capital and industry are employed in the undertaking immediately on the spot where the Cotton is grown. Under judicious management, Mr. Potter is convinced that Europeans may find ample remuneration by turning their attention to the culture of Cotton. No attempt has yet been made to any extent, and generally, Mr. Potter does not doubt, that Agriculture under the immediate management of Europeans would become common.

Mr. Potter concludes by a reference to the benefits to be expected to Cotton Culture from judicious irrigation. And he alludes to the advantage obtained in Egypt and Peru to the Cotton grower by this mode of procedure.

FACILITY OF THE PROVINCE OF AMHERST FOR THE CULTIVATION OF SUGAR.

The Secretary next submitted a paper by Mr. Edward Riley, on the nature of the Sugar-cane grown in Amherst, and the mode of cultivation adopted by the natives, with the qualities of the indigenous Cane, as compared to the Otahite kind, in order to arrive at correct data for extending this useful cultivation. The indigenous Cane grown in the Amherst Province, consist of the Rattan and Cane varieties. The former being in more general use, on account of its extreme hardness. The latter however is superior in quality, and generally attains a height of five feet.

Mr. Riley enters into details regarding the mode of procedure to be adopted in clearing the lands, and the cost of preparing a Sugar estate. He remarks, that very few Europeans will work even six months consecutively. With apathy peculiar to their character, the Europeans look no further than present gain,—the only labor required to produce a fair crop of rattoons would be merely banking the plants during the rains, and trashing them properly, neither of which duties however are done. The paper concludes by reports on the four samples of Sugar, which are recorded as having been presented to the Society among the presentations to the Museum.

PROGRESS OF THE FOREIGN CULTIVATION IN CENTRAL-INDIA.

The Secretary next read a portion of a letter from Mr. McLeod in charge of the Saugor District, acknowledging the receipt of the late consignment of foreign Cotton Seeds, and communicating some interesting details, connected with the progress of the cultivation, of a very encouraging character. Mr. McLeod considers that it is the prevalence of black basalt, where this is of a sufficiently friable character (mind in fact) that renders the Sugar country, Narsinghpore, and especially Berar so pre-eminently a Cotton country. The vigour with which Cotton thrives in it is astonishing. In Berar (the Nagpur country) the black basalt soil yields two crops of Cotton a year—the rahbee or spring harvest crop being the most esteemed. All the Cotton that Mr. McLeod sowed last year is left standing, and besides this, there are the Pernambuco and Egyptian varieties in their third year. Sufficient Cotton has been procured to make one or two bales, and next year, as there are upwards of ten beegahs (4½ acres) in Cotton cultivation, Mr. McLeod hopes to be able to send to the Society a respectable supply. Mr. McLeod has sown with both the common country, and the Decemsee plough, but the success of the latter method is doubtful, as all the country people state, that unless the Cotton seed be sown on the surface, and in land not worked deep, it all runs to leaf and stalk—yielding little flower. Some of the Cotton planted in the garden, close to the water courses has yielded a crop, and flourished with a vigour far exceeding all the rest. Mr. McLeod feels confident that the Monna or Dio Kupass of the natives is identical with the Pernambuco, an enquiry which he considers deserving of the consideration of the Society. The staple of this kind of Cotton is extremely long, far exceeding all other kinds, but it is weak. Another indigenous perennial, known as the Nadan Ban, and of which the Brahmans make their threads. Mr. McLeod finds to be stronger and finer than any of the imported kinds, but from the length and slenderness of the stalks, and abundance and firmness of the leaves, it is extremely difficult to pick clean.

A NEW HORTICULTURAL GARDEN AT DORJELING.

A letter from Dr. Campbell, the officer administering the Civil and Political duties at Dorjeling, was read by the Secretary. Dr. Campbell offers to get the English gooseberry, currant, and raspberry trees lately landed from the Malcolm, which the Society determined at their last Meeting should be despatched to Dorjeling for acclimation, with as little delay as possible, after their arrival at Fatawa. An enclosed ground for them is yet ready, but Dr. Pearson has offered to give them a place in his garden, until a suitable place can be got ready. Dr. Campbell states, that it has been suggested to him by Mr. Law, who is at Dorjeling, and has shewn the greatest anxiety to forward the views of European settlers, to make this consignment the nucleus of an experimental garden for the Society, and to this end, Dr. Campbell, Mr. Law and Dr. Pearson offered a donation of 50 Rupees each for the promotion of this interesting object. Dr. Campbell supposes, that many in Calcutta, who are interested in the welfare of the New Hill Colony, will be desirous of aiding the project.

The subject underwent a long discussion at the Meeting, and it was determined to give the new Horticultural garden support, by supplying from time to time, such plants and seeds as were likely to be suited for the Darjeeling climate, while an extract of Dr. Campbell's note, having reference to the raising of subscriptions for the promotion of the Fruit Tree Cultivation, was ordered to be furnished to the Darjeeling Committee.

ARRIVAL OF AMERICAN GARDEN SEEDS.

The Secretary informed the Meeting, that the arrival of the Active, from Boston, enabled him to have the pleasure of announcing the receipt of five cases of American Garden Seeds, of different sorts, which had been procured through the kind assistance of Mr. Hufnagle, of this city.

For all the foregoing communications, the thanks of the Society were accorded.

SUDDER BOARD—CIRCULAR ORDERS.

PRISONERS' RATIONS.—Resolution of the Honourable the Deputy-Governor of Bengal in the Judicial Department, under date the 9th April, 1839.

His Honor the Deputy-Governor of Bengal has purposely avoided recording a resolution on the subject of Rations to Prisoners confined in the various Jails under the Bengal Presidency, until His Honor the President of the Council of India, in Council, should have passed orders upon the report of the Prison Discipline Committee.

2. The Resolution of the Council upon that Report, being now before His Honor, and a letter from the Secretary to the Supreme Government, dated the 7th of January last, having subsequently been received, showing in what manner the subject had been disposed of by the Right Honorable the Governor-General in the North Western Provinces, the Deputy-Governor loses no time in recording his sentiments upon the subject.

3. It is gratifying to find that the proposed system has the support of the greater portion of the Local authorities, who were called upon for their opinions. From the returns to the Circular of the 20th December 1836, it appears, that, whilst 48 Officers are decidedly in favor of the New System, but 10 are found who object to it, and the objections of these 10 are not, in many instances to the system itself, but generally to the difficulty which it is supposed will be felt in carrying it into execution.

4. The system of Rations is, and has for some considerable time been, universal in the Madras and Bombay presidencies, and from accounts just received, it appears to have been introduced into the Agra presidency also, the Committee of Prison Discipline have likewise given it their cordial support, and the Deputy-Governor sees no reason therefore, why the same plan, the advantages of which are indisputable, should not be followed out in all the Jails under the Bengal Presidency.

5. It is proper, therefore, in the first place, that some standard of quantity should be fixed for regulating the daily supply of food which is necessary for keeping prisoners in a healthy state, and a careful revision and examination of the returns which have been submitted, and recourse to other means of information, the Deputy-Governor is pleased to determine that one seer of rice (the seer being 80 sicca-weight) 1½ seer of wood and 1 kucha of tobacco, be the standard of the quantity of food to be given daily to each convict in the Jails under this Government.

6. In addition to this, 1 pice per week should, in the opinion of the Deputy-Governor, be allowed to each man for shaving and washing. This allowance is granted to the Prisoners in the Jails of the North Western Provinces.

7. It is not intended by this resolution, that the rations of Prisoners should invariably be confined to the above mentioned quantity and quality; on the contrary, it is desirable, that a general discretion of considerable latitude should be accorded to the Prisoners, to take, in lieu of an entire seer of rice, such quantity of any other of the usual condiments which may, without increase of expense, be procurable at any particular season, as they may see fit. "The contract system for providing the food at a fixed rate all the year round, should be had recourse to, where it is found practicable. The contractor should engage to have a portion of the usual condiments always at hand, which the Prisoners may take at the bazar rate, or under local rules, instead of the whole or a portion of their allowance of rice; but due precaution must always be taken, that no money is carried into the Jail."

"The inducing the Prisoners to form into Messes, appointing one man to cook for them, with any arrangements for employing such man within the Jail, and the like, are measures of local detail, which must be left to the discretion of the District authorities."

8. The Magistrate of Sylhet, appears to have taken considerable pains with this subject, and it may be well to quote in this place, from a recent letter from that functionary, dated 7th February 1839.

"At first 2 Brahmans and 2 Musselmen Cooks were entertained to cook for the whole number of laboring convicts, but in consideration of the difficulty experienced in suiting the varying tastes of so many, with such limited agency, (to have increased it would have been too expensive a measure) I was induced to permit such convicts to divide themselves into gangs, and select for themselves a cook from each."

"At the same time, in order to obviate inequality of punishment among this class of convicts, the cooks are formed into two working gangs, who return from labour only just so much earlier than their fellows, as is absolutely necessary for the preparation of the food against the arrival of the latter. Thus, whereas the labor of these terminates at 5 P. M. daily, the cooking gangs are relieved from work at 3 P. M. and 4 P. M., respectively, according to the number of the party for which the cooks of each gang have to prepare food. The several parties assigned to those cooks of the gang which returns at 3 P. M., comprise on an average, 20 convicts, those of the 4 o'clock gang averaging only ten. That the duty of cooking is not, under this arrangement, considered to be any alleviation of the usual Jail labor, is clear, from their being no competition for the office, but the contrary."

9. It is not to be supposed that the New System will be introduced into the different jails under this Presidency, without considerable obstacles being opposed by the Prisoners themselves. His Honor the Deputy-Governor trusts, however, that the cordial support and co-operation, which it is expected the local authorities will in all cases afford, will speedily put a stop to any resistance or discontent which may in the first instance, show itself.

ORDERED.

That a copy of this resolution be communicated to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, for the information and guidance of the local authorities.

Registrar.

Circular to the Session Judges, Magistrates, and Joint Magistrates, of the Lower Provinces, dated the 23d August, 1839.

Present.—R. H. Rattray, W. Bardon and C. Tucker Esqrs., A. Dick and J. F. M. Read, Esqrs., temporary Judges.

Doubts having arisen as to the consideration of the resolutions of Government of the 9th April last, (circulated on the 26th idem) in regard to the standard of the daily allowance of convicts, I am directed to request your attention to the following explanatory instructions, which are issued for your information and guidance under the direction of the Government of Bengal.

1st. "The standard prescribed, was intended to be strictly one of quantity, and you are accordingly requested to erase the words" without increase of expense "in the 7th para. of the copy of the resolutions forwarded to you. If it be established, that in a given district a working prisoner of the agricultural class ought to have ordinarily so much of rice, and so much of pulse, or so much of fish and other additions to keep him in health, it is obvious that he must be allowed the quantity, whether the price of rice be high or low. The Government undertakes to keep convicts, in health and fit for labour, and this must be done without any reference to the state of the market; whether the cost be more or less, it must be paid and the object must be obtained.

2nd. The Magistrates are to give to the prisoners such rations as they may think fit and sufficient, consulting the inclination and the habits of the prisoners as far as may be deemed humane, and within the limits of a just economy, and bearing in mind the sound principles that no prisoner should be allowed, when in jail, luxuries not usually accessible to person of his class when out of jail, and not necessary to keep working men in a state of health. As a general rule the quantity of food to be given is to be regulated by the standard set up, viz., one seer of rice, exclusive of an adequate allowance of firewood and tobacco.

3rd. Solitary cooking is to be discouraged, and if possible prevented; and messes are to be encouraged and formed if possible. For messes cooks should be appointed either from among the prisoners or otherwise, as may seem practicable and proper. It was expected, that the Magistrates, after determining upon the diet, would divide the prisoners into messes with their several cooks, and then proceed to fix the daily meal—on one day rice and dholl, on another rice and fish, on third rice and vegetables, and so on, serving out the required quantities of each article of food, at so much of each per man (with the standard of quantity) according to the number in each mess. This is precisely what is done on board ships, in barracks, in European prisons, and whatever else rations are given, and this is all that is now required to be done in the District Jails of Bengal.

Money is not to be carried into jails; for this reason among others, that it "affords prisoners the daily enjoyment of marketing," which would be a great alleviation of the punishment of every class of men, but peculiarly agreeable to the Indian character. As this enjoyment has no good moral effect upon the prisoners, and tends to make the penalty of his crime less efficacious than it ought to be, the indulgence appears in this view, as annexed evil. "It would be to no purpose to prevent marketing with money, if it were allowed to market by barter."

The prisoners should not be permitted to barter rice for condiments. As already explained, they will receive each daily rations within the standard fixed upon, as the Magistrate may determine: a prisoner who has this day received half a seer of rice and half seer of fish, on another day, if the Magistrate thinks fit, will receive half a seer of rice and half of dholl, but he will not make this barter himself.

6th. It only remains to observe that nothing in this resolution was intended to limit the quantity to one seer, if that quantity be found really inadequate. According to the information before Government one seer seemed sufficient, but if it be otherwise, it will be the duty of the Magistrate to lose no time in reporting the actual facts.

CIRCULAR ORDERS TO THE COMMISSIONERS OF REVENUE—ASSESSMENT PROCEEDINGS.—The Secretary to the Sudder Board of Revenue has been directed by the Board, to inform the Commissioners of Revenue, that the Hon'ble the Deputy-Governor has been pleased to sanction a modification proposed by the Board of the XXXIX Rule of practice.

The modified Rule to be substituted for the old one, is as follows.

If the Collector or other Resumption officer shall decide against the assessment, he shall report his proceedings to the Local Commissioners, to whose authority he may be subject, as directed by clause IV Section IV of the said Regulation, and the Local Commissioner, if he shall disapprove the grounds of the Collector's (or other Resumption officer's) decision, shall report the case to the Sudder Board, who will determine whether an appeal should be preferred to the special Commissioner.

REVENUE FROM PILGRIMS, &c.—The Secretary to the Sudder Board of Revenue, is directed by the Board, to transmit to the Commissioners of Revenue an extract of letter No 418 from the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, and to request that after having called for a report from the Collectors of the different divisions, the Commissioners will lose no time in submitting the division report upon the subject in question.

EXTRACT.

Whether Revenue is derived from any temple or place of worship or pilgrimage under the Bengal Presidency, other than those mentioned in the Resolution—Juggettaib in Cuttack, and Gyah in the Behar district.

CIRCULAR ORDER TO THE ZILLAH AND CITY JUDGES IN THE LOWER PROVINCES.

DECREE-HOLDERS' PURCHASE MONEY.—Doubts appearing to be entertained as to whether the Civil Courts are competent to allow a decree-holder purchasing property sold at public auction in satisfaction of his decree, to file his receipt to the extent of the sum awarded him, in lieu of paying the whole amount of purchase money into Court. Mr. Hawkins, Register at the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, was directed by the Court, to acquaint the Zillah and City Judges in the Lower Provinces, that it has been ruled, that a decree holder should be permitted under the circumstances above stated, to give his receipt for the amount of his claim, in payment of so much of the purchase-money of the property sold, provided the arrangement do not interfere with the equal claims of other parties; and that as respects the delivery of possession of the property, the same rules are observed in regard to him, as would be applied to any other purchaser; and provided also, that where the property sold may be land paying revenue to Government, the demands of Government on the estate are previously settled.

The Zillah and City Judges in the Lower Provinces, are requested to communicate the substance of this, to the subordinate Judicial Functionaries of their district, for their information and guidance.—Hark, September 9.

PARTITION OF ESTATES.—With reference to the law respecting the partition of estates under Regulation XIX of 1814, doubts appear to have been entertained upon the two following points:—

First. As to the precise stage of the proceedings under Regulation XIX of 1814, which places an estate under Butwarrah.

Second. Whether the circumstance of the estate being in balance, justifies a Collector in refusing to comply with an application to bring it under Butwarrah.

1st. On the first point, the Secretary is instructed to explain, that an estate to the partition of which no opposition is made, must be considered to be under Butwarrah from the date of the proceeding held by the Collector (on the return of the Ishihar, when that process is necessary, as in Clause 11. Section IV. Regulation XIX. of 1814.) which orders that a division of the estate shall be made—and from the date of such order the co-shares are entitled to the protection of Section XXXIII of the said Regulation, for all arrears that may accrue during the progress of the Butwarrah.

2d. On the second part, the Secretary was instructed to explain, that the circumstance of an estate being in balance does not justify a Collector in rejecting the application for a Butwarrah. So soon as the application described in Clause 1. or Clause 11. of Section IV. is made, the Collector should publish the advertisement as therein directed, and at the expiration of the prescribed period, upon the formal return of the proper Officer, certifying that the advertisement has been duly published, he should, without delay, record the order for the division of the estate above referred to.

3d. Up to the date of the last mentioned order, the balances are Ijmali, and the whole estate must be brought to sale entire, for any such arrear. It will therefore be the duty of the Collector to ascertain and record the amount of all these Ijmali balances, Hal, and Bukya, immediately he passes the order for bringing an estate under Butwarrah, and to proceed to advertise the entire estate, and to sell it on the first lawful day for the said balances, just as if no application for Butwarrah had been made.

4th. When a Butwarrah is submitted for confirmation, it shall be the duty of the Collector to certify that no balance, for any period antecedent to the date of the order for dividing the estate, is outstanding against it; and he must be held to be in the strictest sense personally responsible for the correctness of such certificate, because after the confirmation of the partition, the entire estate could no longer be sold for the recovery of Ijmali balances.

REGISTER OF MUTATION.—It having been brought to the notice of the Sudder Board of Revenue, that in some districts, purchasers of estates at public auctions are required to pay fees of registry, previous to their names being recorded in the Register of Mutation, the Secretary is directed to inform the Commissioners of Revenue, that it has been ruled that Section III. Regulation XV of 1797 does not refer to transfers made in consequence of public sales by auction, for the recovery of arrears of Revenue.

Should the Commissioners find, after circulating this, that a practice exists in any district subordinate to them, of levying fees for Registry, in such cases they will direct its immediate discontinuance.

POSTPONEMENT OF SALES FOR RECOVERY OF ARREARS OF REVENUE.—With a view to check the irregularities in the adjournment and postponement of sales, which have very frequently come under the notice of the Sudder Board, the Secretary is directed to communicate the following instructions for the guidance of all officers holding public sales for the recovery of arrears of Revenue.

INSTRUCTIONS.—Whenever a sale is adjourned from day to day, conformably to Clause 11. Section VIII. Regulation XI. of 1822, the adjournments must invariably be inscribed on the Ishihar originally published, and on the copy which accompanies the sale papers, when transmitted to the Commissioner—and when the sale is postponed to a future day; in conformity with Clause 1. Section VIII. of the said Regulation, copies of each of the separate advertisements, corresponding with the several postponements recorded in the sale Roobonary, must accompany the case, when submitted to the Commissioners for confirmation, as also when the Commissioners transmit the record of appeal from their orders of confirmation for the final decision of the Sudder Board.—Hark, Sept. 13.

SALE OF DEFAULTERS' LANDED PROPERTY FOR DEMANDS OF GOVERNMENT REVENUE.—The Sudder Board of Revenue having had occasion to observe, that in cases of sale of the landed property of defaulters for demands of Government other than arrears of Revenue, due from the lands sold, Collectors not infrequently issue the prohibition to ryots and under-tenants against payment of rent pending confirmation of sale, prescribed in Section XXXII Regulation XI of 1822, whereby embarrassment is experienced in the event of its being necessary to bring the estates in which such lands are situated, to sale for the recovery of their own arrears, the Secretary is directed to request, that the Commissioners will explain to the Collectors of their Divisions, that the Section and Regulation above quoted, have reference only to sales of the latter description, viz., of estates sold for their own arrears of revenue, whereas all other sales are sales of rights and interests to recover dues of a quite different class, and should be dealt with on the same principles as sales in satisfaction of decrees of Court. The issue of the prohibition to ryots and under-tenants, in such cases, is irregular and unauthorized, and the Commissioners are requested to direct its discontinuance.

REVISION TO THE RULES FOR THE SETTLEMENT OF HOOKAMEE TREASURES.—The Secretary is directed by the Sudder Board of Revenue, to forward, for the information and guidance of the Commissioners of Revenue and communication to their subordinate officers, the accompanying copy of a letter No. 388 to their address from the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, with its enclosure, No. 45, from the Officiating Secretary to the Government of India, conveying the sanction of the Supreme authority to the rescission of Section X of the Rules for the settlement of Hookamee Treasures, circulated with the Board's letter, No 63, of 14th July 1837.

With reference to the 3d paragraph of Mr. Officiating Secretary Miller's letter, the Commissioners will be pleased to institute enquiries for the purpose of ascertaining whether any cases have occurred within their division, in which parties have been excluded from settlement under the operation of the Rule now rescinded and if it should appear that there have been such, the Board request that the Commissioners will, with the least possible delay, furnish a report of the circumstances of each particular case.

Rule X.

If the Title Deeds on which a Luckhrazdar claims to hold his lands free of Assessment, shall be declared by a final judgment of a competent Court to have been forged, or fraudulently altered, no length of possession either in the occupant or his ancestors, shall be held to entitle him to a settlement for the lands; but the settlement shall in all such cases be made with the proprietor of the lands under the general regulations.

No. 308.

In reply to the letter of the Secretary of the Sudder Board of Revenue, the Officiating Secretary to the Government of Bengal, is directed by the Hon'ble the Deputy-Governor of Bengal, to forward the accompanying copy of a letter No. 45, from the Officiating Secretary to the Government of India, conveying the sanction of the Supreme authority to the rescission of Section X. of the Rules for the settlement of Hookamee Tenures, as recommended by the Board.

The attention of the Board is particularly called to the 3d paragraph of the letter of the Officiating Secretary of the Government of India.

No. 45.

The officiating Secretary to the Government of India, is directed by the Hon'ble the President of the Council of India in Council, to acknowledge the receipt of the letter No. 246, of the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, transmitting correspondence with the Sudder Board of Revenue, on the subject of Section X. of the Rules for the settlement of resumed Hookamee Tenures.

2d.—In reply, the Officiating Secretary to the Government of India, is desired to inform him, that His Honor in Council concurs with the Hon'ble the Deputy-Governor of Bengal and the Sudder Board, in thinking that the Rule in question is at variance with the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1793, and he is accordingly pleased to sanction its rescission as recommended by the Board.

3rd.—The Officiating Secretary is further desired to express the wish of His Honor in Council, that any complaint preferred by a party who may have been excluded from a settlement by the operation of the Rule, may receive due consideration.

4th.—The original papers received with the Secretary's letter are herewith returned.

EXCLUSION FROM THE ESTIMATES OF ASSETS, BHITOURAH OR MOHTURFAH.—In conformity with the orders of Government, a copy of which is annexed, the Secretary to the Sudder Board of Revenue is directed to request the Commissioner of Revenue, that all Collectors and other Officers employed on settlement duty, within their jurisdiction, may be instructed to exclude from the estimates of assets the item variously termed Bhitourah or Mohturfah.

Copy of the Orders.

The Officiating Secretary to the Government of Bengal is directed, in reply to observe, that although the cess termed Bhitourah or Mohturfah, is considered by the several Officers who have been consulted, to mean ground rent, their definitions shew clearly that it has no property of rent, and is in fact a tax on trades, or on capital and as such, however small in amount at present, it is not such a cess as Government ought to recognize by levying a share of it, together with their lawful share of rent properly so called. His Honor desires therefore, that the item may be invariably excluded from assets of settlement.

LEVY OF FINES.—A recommendation to the effect, that the native Judges should not only be authorized to impose fines, but also to levy them, without reference to superior authority, in the manner that they execute their own decrees, subject to an appeal to the Judges, was made by the Judge of West Burdwan to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlat. The Judge observes, that the native Judges of every grade, are deemed incompetent to realize any fines, however trifling, without the sanction of superior authority, and consequently a great deal of time is taken up in the re-investigation of these comparatively insignificant cases, to the prejudice of more important business, and that as the power of these (i. e. Native Courts and particularly of the Principal Sudder Ameen) have been so very much enlarged, he cannot conceive why in this instance they should be restricted. Also, that it seems rather absurd, that a court which can decide suits to any amount, should be incompetent to levy a fine of four annas without the sanction of its superiors. In reply to this, the Court observed that the subject in question had been anticipated by it, and a suggestion made to Government, that an act be passed to carry into effect the proposal of Mr. Gouldsbury.

REGISTRY OF DEEDS IN THE PERSIAN LANGUAGE.—The Judges of Mynpoorie submitted to the Allahabad Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlat, whether Cazees and Registers of deeds, could refuse to register or authenticate any document presented to them for those purposes, on account of their being written in the Persian language; for hereafter, when that language shall have become an unknown tongue in all the courts, the filing of documents in it would create considerable embarrassment to the Judges.

The Western Courts remarked in reply, that hitherto no restrictive rule has obtained in regard to the exclusion of particular documents from the benefit of registry on account of the language in which they are written; and consequently they do not consider that the officers appointed to Register deeds would be justified in refusing to attest or register any document because written in Persian. In this opinion the Calcutta Court of Sudder Dewanny agreed. — Murkum, September 14.

QUARTERLY TOWJEEH OF MEHALS UNDER BUTWARRAH.—The Secretary is instructed by the Sudder Board of Revenue to observe, that the Quarterly Towjeeh of the Collectors, as at present prepared, contain a separate head for Mehalis under Butwarrah. As these Mehalis are now, under the Butwarrah Laws recently passed, brought to sale in the same manner as other estates, there does not appear to the Board to be any necessity for retaining this separate head, and they accordingly direct that it be struck out of the Towjeeh, and the other head to which, with reference to the amount of their Sudder Jamma, they may belong.

DELAY IN THE INSTITUTION OF RESUMPTION SUITS.—The Secretary is directed by the Sudder Board of Revenue to forward for the information and guidance of the Commissioners of Revenue, and for communication to the Officers subordinate to them, the accompanying copy of an extract of paragraph 2d from a letter No. 7, addressed by them to the Commissioner of Cuttack.

Paragraph 2d. The Board concur in the opinion of the Commissioner of Revenue, that it is not expedient to delay the institution of resumption suits, on account of the disqualification of the proprietor of the estate within which the rent free tenures are situated. Precautions must, however, be adopted for the special protection of the Wards' interests, and for this purpose, the Board desire; that the Commissioners will request the resumption officer to issue his notice to the Collector upon the institution of any suit for the investigation of a Tenure situated within an estate under the Jurisdiction of the Court of Wards. It will be the duty of the Collectors upon the receipt of such notice, to ascertain in communication with the appointed Guardians and family of the disqualified proprietor, what is the nature and origin of the tenure, and to report the case through the Commissioners without delay, for the consideration of the Court of Wards, by whom the suit will be defended through their Deputy Superintendent of legal affairs. Should it appear to them that the interests of the Wards are involved in the result, the Commissioners will further request the Resumption Officer in such cases to consider the Collector as the party entitled under Clause I Section IV Regulation III of 1828, to a Copy of his decree; &c. should the decision be against the minor, the Court of Wards will, upon the report of the Collector and Commissioner, determine as to the expediency of preferring an appeal to the special Commissioner.—Hark. Sept 16

LAKHIRAJ HOLDINGS.—The Secretary is directed by the Sudder Board of Revenue, to request that the Commissioners of Revenue will inform the Board, with the least possible delay, whether there are any large tenures within their Division in which many small sites of dwelling houses are held Lakhiraj, and in which investigation into the validity of such tenures would be peculiarly distressing, without affording any corresponding benefit to the State. Should there be any such tenures, the Commissioners are requested to state the probable number of rent free tenures in each, the average extent of the tenures, whether they are held by proprietors or tenants, and the estimated amount of revenue which would be assessable in the event of the tenures being resumed. It is not the intention of the Board that minute enquiries, such as would entail expense, or harass the people to accomplish, shall be entered upon, or the purpose of affording the information now called for; therefore, if the records of the Collectorates do not supply it, and it cannot be obtained from any other source equally easy of access, the Board request the Commissioners will report accordingly.

CHARGE OF MALIKANA TO BE BORNE BY THE STATE AND THE ENGAGING LAKHIRAJDAR.—The Secretary is directed by the Sudder Board of Revenue, to communicate, for the information and guidance of all Officers employed on settlements, that under orders of the Hon'ble the Deputy-Governor, the charge of Malikana payable to Malika, under the modified Rule of 8th May 1838, is, in all cases to be borne by the State, and by the engaging Lakhirajdar, in shares proportionate to their shares of the whole rental. If, therefore, of the whole rental taken as 100, the settlement assign 70 to the State, and 30 to the Lakhirajdar, the charge of Malikana will be borne by the State, and the Lakhirajdar in like proportion. If the settlement assign 60 to the State, and 40 to the Lakhirajdar, the Malikana will be paid by these two parties in equal shares.

APPOINTMENT OF OFFICERS TO SELL DESTRAINED PROPERTY FOR THE RECOVERY OF ARREARS OF RENT.—The Secretary is directed by the Sudder Board of Revenue to send the Commissioners for their information and guidance, and for communication to the several Collectors and independent Deputy Collectors in their division, the accompanying copy of a letter addressed to the Commissioner of Bhagalpore relative to the appointment under Act I. of 1839 of officers, to sell property distrained for the recovery of arrears of revenue.

Copy:

The Secretary is directed by the Sudder Board of Revenue, to acknowledge the receipt of the letter No. 1249, from the Commissioner of Bhagalpore, enquiring whether, with reference to the words quoted in the margin from Act No. I. of 1839, a Collector may receive in that behalf, of Revenue can, of his own authority, adopt measures for giving effect to the provisions of that Act, and in reply to communicate the following instructions:—

Instructions.

2nd.—The number of Officers to be employed in each district, for the purpose of selling property distrained for the recovery of arrears of rent, should be determined by the collector in communication with the Commissioner of Bhagalpore, and the appointments made by the collector should be submitted for the Commissioner's sanction.

3rd.—The selection of individuals for the office, must depend very much upon local circumstances; but the Board would suggest, that wherever there may be Purgunnah Cazees of good repute, (not invested with the office of Moonsiff,) they should be preferred to candidates having no particular recommendation.

4th.—With regard to the per centage to be allowed, the Board observe, that a maximum only is fixed by the act, and they desire that when the amount realized by the sale may exceed two hundred rupees, the scale annexed may be invariably adopted.

On realization of 200 Rs..... 10 per cent.

Do. do. above 200 Rs. and not exceeding 500 Rs. do. on 200 and 8 per cent. on the remainder.

Do. do. do. 500 Rs. and not exceeding 1,000 Rs. as above on first 500 Rs. and 6 per cent. on do.

Do. do. do. 1,000 Rs. and not exceeding 3,000 Rs. do. on 1,000 Rs. and 4 per cent. on do.

Do. do. do. 3,000 Rs. and not exceeding 5,000 Rs. do. on 3,000 Rs. and 2 per cent. on do.

Do. do. do. 5,000 Rs. and above on 5,000 Rs. and 1 per cent. in all sums exceeding that amount.

SETTLEMENT REPORTS.—The Secretary is directed by the Sudder Board of Revenue, to request that the Commissioners will cause to be noted, in the usual marginal statement of all settlement Reports, the date from which the settlement is to take effect.—Harkara, September 19.

SUPREME COURT.

SEPTEMBER 25.

Sir H. Selon sat to day pursuant to a Mandamus from the Court of Common Pleas in England to examine witnesses in a cause pending there as Samuel v. Rowson. It is a case arising from the defendant agreeing to accept Bills, which he has subsequently refused to do, alleging fraud and other matters on the part of the plaintiff.

There are three Counts in the declaration, to which the defendant put in sixty-two pleas, six of which have been demurred to. The damages are laid at £30,000.

The Advocate General and Mr. Clarke examined witnesses for the defendant. The points to which the evidence was examined, were to prove the signatures to numerous letters, and to shew that goods sent to Calcutta by the plaintiff, were not adapted to the India market, &c. The defendant was agent here to the plaintiff, and the goods were consigned to a firm carried on in Calcutta under the name of Smithson, Holdsworth and Co.—Englishman.

ZILLAH TWENTY-FOUR PERGUNNAHS.

SEPTEMBER 19, 1829.

(Before T. Biscoe Esq.)

Messrs. Novely, Bennett and Weston, Jurors.

GOVERNMENT VS. ED. PALMER.

The case commenced with the evidence of the witnesses for the prosecution, the first of whom was Kisto Byragee, who was sworn, and deposed as follows.

I know the prisoner, his name is Palmer. About 150 persons called Hugoreeahs live in Mr. Palmer's compound. People suspect them of theft, from the circumstance that in moonlight-night they are seen in the village and bazars of the place, but they go out to other places in dark nights. They live by dacoity, and therefore live like great people. They never work, and dress in dhooties and other clothes, of the value of 4 or 5 Rs. each piece of cloth. The whole of the Hugoreeahs dwell within the precincts of Mr. P.'s factory. I cannot say that that gentleman used to employ the people of the neighbourhood to labour for him, nor do I know to what extent the cultivation of indigo is carried on by Mr. Palmer. I am not sure how many people there are in the factory grounds belonging to defendant; but he had 20 or 25 persons who tilled the grounds for him, Cross questioned by Mr. Dias.

Q. Can you state if, since the people lived in Mr. Palmer's factory, any dacoities ever took place in or about the neighbourhood?

A. None ever did.

Q. Who sent you to give evidence in this case?

A. The Jemmadar, on the part of the Government.

Q. Did not the Jemmadar himself write your evidence given in the Thanah, or did any Zumeendars do it?

The Judges here informed Mr. Dias, that these were unnecessary questions, and if any more such were put to the witnesses, he, Mr. Dias, although the pleader for the defence, would be prevented from questioning them at all.

Mr. Dias, however, begged to acquaint the Court, that his object, in going into the above mentioned facts, was to prove the conspiracy against his client.

"Then I won't speak to you any more," replied the Judge; and the defendant was personally told, that whatever he had to say would be heard afterwards. The question which elicited the foregoing remarks from the Judge, was subsequently suffered to be put to deponent, who in reply mentioned, that the Jemmadar had written his evidence.

Q. By defendant—You know Sumboonnath Rae; what connexion exists between him and Rajeeo Mookerjee?

A. They are both Brahmins, and that is all I know.

Q. Is Rajeeo Mookerjee dead or alive?

A. Dead.

When the deposition of this witness was ended, a servant of the Court was sent to enquire the names of all the gentlemen present. Mr. Hamilton was the first whose name was asked, and after having satisfied the person who came to make the enquiry, he rose and stated to the Court, that he was not at all connected with the present case, and if the Judge had any objection to his remaining where he was, he would withdraw. He was, however, told, that he was perfectly at liberty to remain. Mr. Thomas Palmer went out previously from the Court for a few minutes, but was sent for by Mr. Biscoe, and on his return, was commanded to leave the Court room, and go to an adjoining one.

Govindchunder Dutt sworn. I am acquainted with the defendant, Mr. Palmer. The people employed in his factory lived on it. They were dacoits. About 2 or 2 and ½ years ago, a number of Hugoreeahs, supposed to be 150 in all, first came to live at the factory. I have a mooder's shop which is 5 or 6 russees from the place; but I never had any thing to do with the prisoner. The Hugoreeahs who lived in Mr. Palmer's factory, sallied out in dark nights, but never in moonlight once, for the purpose of committing dacoities. They sometimes purchased from me a few pice worth of chillies, &c. but always feasted on sweetmeats.

In reply to the Government Pleader. I have nothing to do with Sumboonnath Rae. I never saw the Hugoreeahs either sow indigo plant, or crop it.

Q. By Defendant.—How do you know that I harbour dacoits?

A. I suspect so from having heard that they steal from different places, and come back to the Factory. No dacoity ever took place in or about the neighbourhood while those people lived in your Factory; but I was informed that they generally went 2 and 3 days' journey and committed robberies.

Q. You say you have had nothing to do with me, and moreover that you never come into my Factory—then how are you aware that these people sally out in dark nights for the purpose of stealing?

A. I know this from their being seen in the village only on moonlight nights.

Q. How do you know that the people go out in dark nights?

The Judge objected to the question, on the ground of their being no necessity for it, but suffered it to be put. The reply was given in such a low tone that we were not able to catch a single word of it.

Q. You say the Hugoreeahs never worked—how do you know that they did not do so in other villages?

A. I don't know if they did.

Q. Are you aware of any disagreement between myself and Sumbhoonath Rae?

A. I don't know if there was any.

Q. Have you ever given evidence before in any case in any court?

A. No.

A native at this moment was standing near Mr. Dias, to which the Government Pleader raised an objection, at the same time stating that the man was putting questions into that gentleman's mouth.

Mr. Dias begged to intimate to the court, that the person in question was a private servant of his, and served him in the capacity of Mohair. The only thing he was now doing was reading and explaining some Bengalee written papers connected with his client's case. The man was therefore permitted to stay, but not before the Court told Mr. Dias that he ought to do those things at some other time.

Indoorooden Doss, deposed. The defendant's name is Palmer; I know him. I am aware that since the last 2 or 2 years and a half, several Hugoreeahs have resided in the compound of Mr. Palmer. He frequently got them released from the Jail of the 24 Pargunnahs and those of other Zillahs, where they were sent for having committed dacoity. They stole every kind of things—even ducks, fowls, goats, and geese. I have no other suspicion against them.

The Amlah of the Court, in taking down the evidence, wrote something quite different to what deponent stated in reply to the last question, viz. "I have no other suspicion against them." Mr. Palmer rose, and begged that the court would order the very words of the witness to be put down, and he appealed to all the gentlemen present to know what were the words of the witness. The Amlah of the court denied that the witness ever said any thing of the kind; in consequence of which disagreement, Mr. Dias ordered that the man should be questioned again upon that point. This was done, and the witness contradicted himself by saying, that he did not mention he had no further suspicion. The Assessors informed the Court, that the man did say so, and they had noted the sentence the moment it was uttered.

In answer to the Government Pleader.

The Hugoreeahs frequented the bazars of the village in moonlight nights, but not so in dark ones. I believe they used to go out of the village and commit dacoity, for so every body used to say.

Q. What benefit does Mr. Palmer derive by retaining these people?

A. They must be dacoits, or why would he keep them? Many of them were taken up in different places, on charge of theft; but the defendant managed to get them released, and brought to his own house. I believe they are 75 in number.

Q. By defendant. I cannot say in what part of the country Mr. Palmer has indigo cultivation; nor have

I ever seen any marks of indigo on the bodies of the Hugoreeahs, as there ought to be on the bodies of those who work at it. I know both Kisto Doss and Govind Chunder Dutt, the witnesses who preceded me. I am not allied to Govindo Mookerjee, who is the son-in-law of Sumbhoonath Rae. Govindo Mookerjee's house is in Panchanund Rae's Zameendary, and the latter is the son of Sumbhoonath Rae. No dacoity ever happened in the neighbourhood or its vicinity by the Hugoreeahs, but when they went out of the village we used to hear of some dacoity having been committed.

Q. Did you keep watch day and night to ascertain when the dacoits went out and when not,—or did you attend to your own business?

The Amlah informed the Court that this was not a proper question, and therefore it was not put.

Q. Did you ever give evidence in any court before?

This was also considered an unnecessary question: The prisoner begged that he might be allowed to press it, and as it was a distinct one, he was permitted to do so.

Q. Did you not give evidence in the moonlight court of Loosangur, in the case of Sumbhoonath Rae vs. Ram Pursaud?

A. Never.

Shake Urjoollah sworn. I am acquainted with the Defendant, Mr. Palmer, but have nothing to do with him. The Hugoreeahs who lived in Mr. Palmer's compound, came from Baraset. I have heard that they go out of the village on dark nights. I believe they commit dacoity.

In reply to the Government Pleader. The Hugoreeahs lived well, and often procured change for ruses in the village. They never worked if the defendant did not gain something he would not have stood security for them in the different Zillahs in which they were taken up as dacoits, nor suffer them to reside in his compound. I have nothing to do with Sumbhoonath Rae. I once saw the Hugoreeahs giving three or four thumps to a person in the village.

Q. By defendant.—Did any dacoities occur in or about the village during the time the Hugoreeahs were with me?

A. None that I know of. Although no instances of dacoity are known in the village, they used to bring spoils from three, four, and five day's journey. It is true I only heard so, and did not see them doing so with my own eyes.

Q. By Defendant. If dacoities were committed at places five or six day's journey from the factory, as you state, would not complaints have been made to the Police by the people plundered, and measures adopted to apprehend the dacoits?

The Judge here remarked, that the question was an irrelevant one and, therefore, he would not permit it to be put to the witness.

After the Judge had objected to the above question, he dictated an order to the Amlah, which was read publicly in Court, to the following effect, viz: That in the event of any such questions being put to the witness by defendant, which the Judge said he was sure came from his legal adviser, Mr. Roger Dias, Mr. Dias's mookternamah would be revoked, and another person appointed in his stead. Mr. Dias stated, that the question originated from the defendant's brother and not from him.

"I don't wish you to speak, Mr. Dias," replied the Judge; "you have heard the order just read, and that is sufficient. I do not consider a reply necessary."

The court remarked that no more evidence of the kind would be taken, as it was quite unnecessary to do so. If there were any other persons who could depose to something else, they would be heard on the following day, and likewise that no questions would be suffered to be put with regard to hearsay evidence.

Mr. Dias was not allowed to speak at all this day, after the discussion with the Judge, as we have mentioned above.—Hurkaru, September, 21.

SEPTEMBER 20.

We forgot to mention, in the above report, that when an objection was raised by the Government Pleader to Mr. Dias's mohurrir standing by him, and in reply to which Mr. Dias stated that he had brought the man to read and explain the Bengalee papers connected with the case. He was told by Mr. Biscoe that he was employed by the defendant, Mr. Palmer, for the whole day, and every day, as long the case was pending in Court, he had therefore no right to occupy his time with any other work.

Ramdhun Sing, sworn on the Huluf Namah. I arrested 22 Hagooreahs within the Calcutta Police Division, in Bang Bazar. Mahomed Alamoodeen informed Captain Birch, that on the 11 or 12 June last, three boats had arrived at a place called Banda Ghaut. Witness was ordered by Captain Birch to inquire who were in them, and to arrest the parties if necessary. On his arriving at the Ghaut he found the naib and others in attendance, who said the Hagooreahs had taken the alarm and gone down the river. Witness hired a pansawoy and taking a proper guard, went along the banks of the river to Jugurnauth Ghaut, where, among several boats, the Naib pointed out three as being those of the dacoits. Witness seized the boats and 22 men, who said that they belonged to Mr. Palmer, and that they had a certificate from him; but that the man in whose possession it was, had run away, through fear of the Police people. Witness brought the boats to the Old Fort Ghaut, when the men said Mr. Palmer's brother lived in Moneeh kholah, and had an office in New China Bazar. Witness took the whole of the men to Captain Birch, and informed him of the particulars above stated. Captain Birch said, that as the men belonged to Mr. Palmer, and that gentleman could not then be at office, witness should keep them carefully until the next day, and then take them to Mr. Palmer to enquire if they were his men. Witness called at Mr. Palmer's office and asked if any of his brother's people called on him from Hurraen ghutta. Mr. Palmer replied in the negative, and deponent then informed that gentleman of the arrest of the prisoners on the previous day. Mr. Palmer, on the men being taken to him, requested to see four of them, and after having done so, wished to say something to them in private. He likewise stated that they had a certificate from Mr. Ed. Palmer, the defendant. Witness retired for a few minutes, after which Mr. T. Palmer stated, that the men belonged to his brother and were in the habit of going to and fro. Deponent then told the gentlemen, he could not release them without Mr. Palmer gave a letter to Captain Birch, who would probably liberate them. A letter was accordingly immediately put into deponent's hands, for Capt. Birch, who, on receipt of it, ordered the release of the men. Witness has not seen them since. Witness ordered the Naib to go to the boats and give the men their release.

The dacoits were produced and identified by witness, as being among the 22 that were arrested, and four of whom he stated he had taken to Mr. T. Palmer's office.

One of the Dacoits was brought forward, and witness was desired to look well at him and say if he was one of the four whom he took to Mr. Palmer's office. He replied he could not identify him, for when he arrested the 22 men they were fair and of robust appearance, but now they had turned dark and thin. He did know the defendant, Mr. Palmer.

In reply to Mr. Palmer, the defendant. When the dacoits were arrested they were well dressed, but since then their appearance has undergone a material change. I don't know their names, as I did not write them down, nor did I take a description of their features—I cannot therefore recognize two of them out of the four I took to Mr. Palmer; but I recognize the other 8 men as being among the 22 in the boat. I have seen Mr. Thos. Palmer often, and would recognize him if I saw him again. I saw no remarkable persons in Mr. Palmer's office, and no Bengallee or European writers when I went on the occasion above mentioned. No sicar came and stood near Mr. Palmer when he spoke to me. Some Bengallee writers were writing in a corner of the room; but I cannot recognize them, as I transacted no business with them.

Almoodeen witness, deposed. I do not know Mr. Palmer the defendant. I did not arrest any Hagooreahs within the district of Calcutta. I did arrest some of them.

The defendant begged the Court to remark the contradiction; but was told in return, that if he wished to say any thing, he must do so in the shape of questioning the witness in his turn, and was desired not to interrupt any witness before that.

Witness continued. On the 2nd of June last, which fell on a Sunday, Muldoe Gonda informed me, that some Hagooreahs, who had been imprisoned at the jail on a charge of dacoity, had come in three boats to the ghaut at Bang Bazar, and likewise that ten men of the same tribe were coming at the same time to Comor-tollah, but returned to the mouth of Oornao Purnoo ghaut. I saw 3 boats, containing about 25 men, and told the chowkeedars to keep watch over them, whilst I went to communicate the circumstance to Capt. Birch, who ordered their arrest. On my return to the place, I found that one and all of them had made their escape, and was informed that they had gone in their boats towards Naryon Ghaut. I went after them and discovered the boats at Jugurnauth Ghaut. I apprehended 22 men, who said they were servants of Mr. Palmer, and had a certificate from him, but the person in whose possession it was, had escaped in the bustle. The three boats and the men were then brought to Gilmora's Ghaut. Mr. T. Palmer came to recognize them. He said they were not in his employ, but in that of his brother, Mr. Edward Palmer, the Indigo Planter, and after informing me that they were not dacoits, desired me to let them go.

At this juncture, the Fonjdaree Mohurrir was seen, going out, for the purpose, it was supposed, of communicating with the witnesses for the prosecution.

The defendant stated the fact of the men's going out, and, moreover, gave a slight hint of his suspicion of the reason for which he had left the Court, begging at the same time that the men might be prevented from leaving going out to tamper with the evidence.

The Judge said, "I can't prevent him from going-out, but if you can detect him tampering with the witnesses, I shall punish him."

The defendant here remarked, that the Mohurrir was once dismissed by the Magistrate for tampering with witnesses, and that his dismissal was sanctioned by Mr. Cracroft, the then Judge of the station,—it was therefore surprising how he was again employed.

Almoodeen's deposition continued. When I first went to Mr. T. Palmer's Office, in the New China Bazar, I was informed by the Durwan that he was not there that day, but had gone to Moneehkholah, and that he would not return before 10 o'clock the next day. This information I carried to Captain Birch, when that officer ordered the Jemadar to take 3 chookee boats and all the burkundazes and to keep strict watch over the boats of the Hagooreahs that not one might escape till Mr. Palmer's return. The Jemadar and myself did as we were commanded, and the next day, with 4 men, went over to the gentleman's office, where we found him. We asked him if the men were his people, and he said, "No, but they work in my brother's factory. They are not dacoits, so let them go. They must have had some quarrel in the factory, and have run away to this place; but you may be sure they will return in 10 or 15 days." The Jemadar stated to Mr. T. Palmer, that he could not let the men go without his receiving a letter to the effect from Mr. Palmer, certifying that they were his men and not dacoits. Mr. Palmer wrote a letter, which the Jemadar took to Captain Birch, who said that the people were servants of the gentlemen, at the same time ordering their release. After this I went to my thannah. I cannot say whether the men remained in Calcutta after this or not.

At the time the 4 men were taken to Mr. Palmer's office, Ram Dial Jemadar asked that gentleman if he should bring him the whole of the men who were arrested, and he replied it was not at all necessary.

In reply to the Government Pleader. The prisoners present are part of the 22 that were arrested.

Nothing was spoken privately by Mr. Palmer to the men who wished to speak to him.

Questioned by defendant. You twice denied having arrested any prisoners, but now you state to the contrary—how do you account for the discrepancy?

A. I thought the question related to some other case and not this one.

Defendant rose and begged to inform the Court, that he had not received a reply from witness to his question. Mr. Biscoe told him he thought the one given was very appropriate.

Mr. T. Palmer sworn. I am related to the prisoner. I am a cousin of his. A communication was made to me by Captain Birch, in June last, mentioning that certain persons of a suspicious character were apprehended by the Police, who said they were the servants of my brothers. I recognized one man as being in the employ of my cousin, Mr. Edward Palmer, and gave the men a letter to Captain Birch. I can hardly see the ten prisoners from this distance much less recognize any one of them.

"Will you go into the light then?" said the Judge.

The prisoners were taken out into the verandah and Mr. Palmer, the witness, followed. After carefully scrutinizing the prisoners' features, he returned and said, "I remember the features of one or two of the men, from their sometimes having come to me with letters from my cousin. This time they did not come to me, and I do not know what business they had in Calcutta;" but deponent said that he now recognized only the same men whom he knew on a former occasion, when they were taken to his office by the Jemadar.

Another prisoner was brought forward, and Mr. Palmer was desired to look at him. He did so and then said, that he thought he had seen some of the prisoners' features before, but he could not recognize them.

I did not tell the Jemadar that these people had run away from the factory in consequence of a dispute there, but one of them mentioned it in the hearing of the Jemadar. In my letter to Captain Birch, I stated that I only recognized one man.

Q. By defendant. Are you my Agent in Calcutta?

A. I am.

Q. Have you ever received indigo from me as the produce of my factory?

A. Yes, for the last two seasons.

Q. In my dealings with you have you ever had reason to doubt my honesty?

A. Never.—Hark. Sept. 25.

MR. PALMER'S DEFENCE.

Just as the Judge and assessors were seated, the Judge asked Mr. Palmer if he was prepared with his defence. Mr. Palmer answered in the affirmative, and requested that his legal adviser, Mr. Dias, might be allowed to read it, which request being complied with, Mr. Dias read out as follows:

The defence of Mr. Edward Palmer, as presented to T. Biscoe, Esq., Sessions Judge of Zillah 24-Pergunnahs.

Sir and Gentlemen Assessors,—The charge upon which I have been committed for trial in this Court, is as follows:

1. Harboursing dacoits and aiding and abetting in the crime of robbery, by having in his pay and employ, and located in his indigo factory, the prisoners committed in case No. 2, and other gangs of Buddiahs and Hugoreahs, robbers by profession and men of the most desperate characters whom he has released from the jails of several districts, and given his personal security for their good behaviour.

2. The first fact of this charge—"Harboursing dacoits and aiding and abetting in the crime of gang robbery," imputes to me a crime of which, if I am really guilty, I should deserve the punishment that the law has provided for such cases. But if you regard the latter parts of it, which runs as follows:—"Having in his pay and employ and located in his factory, the prisoners committed in case No. 2, and other gangs of Buddiahs or Hugoreahs, robbers by profession and men of the most desperate characters, whom he has released from the jails of several of the districts on his personal security,"—you will find that the acts of which I am accused cannot, by any interpretation of the law, be constructed into a crime. I am accused of having taken out several persons from the jails of several districts, &c. If this be a crime, then it is a crime committed with the knowledge and the approbation of the Magistrates of the several districts. Moreover, it is provided for by the very Regulations which allow suspicious characters to be released from prison on the security of respectable persons. How then can I be convicted of that which is no crime by the regulations of that which the Magistrates of several districts have approved and authorized? But I shall explain here in detail the circumstances under which I released the security prisoners; and when you have heard the statement, supported by the evidence of official documents, I trust you will find, I am far from being guilty of a crime? I therefore proceed, first of all to deny the charge in its several features, and will then enter on the explanation.

4. I explicitly and positively deny having harboured a certain number of the tribe of natives, known by the name of Hugoreahs, for aiding and abetting in gang robberies or dacoits, and I also deny any connexion, beyond what will appear below, with the prisoners Itam-bonnooh, alias Rumpershaud, Treencowsee, Menick, Dammo Koorah, Gulaub, Bahadoor, Kakeeroo, alias Ram Salmutter, Kotaub, Mudhoo, and Meenjhan, convicted of having committed a dacoity, attended with wounding and murder, at a place called Gureeahaut, within this zillah.

5. I also deny having given the prisoners Bahadoor and his companions a pass letter, dated 20th May, 1839, and I deny further having had any knowledge of it, previous to seeing it at the Magistrate's Catchery in this zillah.

6. I deny having authorized the giving of the chit alluded to in the preceding paragraph, or of any other chit, to the prisoner Bahadoor, and the twelve coolies, as that chit certifies.

7. I deny having sent the prisoner, Bahadur, and his companions, on any business to Bhagora Bazar, and their having gone to that Bazar was without my knowledge or privity.

8. I now beg leave to observe, that when I first became proprietor of Hureengutta Factory, I found it in a neglected and uncultivated state, and the servants on it were of the appointment of Sumboonath Rai, or his dependents; and as it had no labourers on it, I naturally applied to Sumboonath Rai, to know by what means I could immediately convert the lands to an useful purpose. My attention was by him directed to a number of women of the Hugoreeah's tribe, then located on the aforesaid Sumboonath Rai's estate, adjoining Hureengutta factory. Those women came to me and said, that they had lived in the place for about three years, and that their husbands were prisoners at Barasett; that if I released them, they would labour for me and cultivate my lands. I was at the time ignorant of who the husbands of these women were; on reference, however, to the aforesaid Sumboonath Rai, I was assured by him for their being no risk attendant upon the release of those men, and after consulting with other natives in the vicinity, I effected the release of those imprisoned at Barasett.

9. From the several Zillahs of Hooghly, Barasett, and 24 Pergannahs, I at different periods released in all about 32 or 33 individuals, 8 of whom, whose names I cannot recollect, died, and the remaining men continued at Hureengutta factory, cultivating the indigo lands. The allowance made to them was the same as would have been given to any other tribe of similar labourers, by an indigo factor.

10.—A considerable time after the release of the men above referred to, I became acquainted with their real characters. A party of prisoners had broken jail and escaped from Moorsheedabad Zillah, which was announced by proclamation at the Hureengutta Bazar, and at that time the establishment of a new police, affording eligible uncovenanted employment, was also publicly announced. Having no claim to public employment, I determined upon rendering myself useful by the apprehension of all the dacoits infesting the nearest lower provinces. To commence upon the line I had proposed adopting, I made strict enquiry among the Hugoreeahs of my factory, as to their knowledge of those who had escaped from Moorsheedabad, and I found that some women were located in an adjoining village named Futteepore. I also discovered that at a place called Gorachand, in which a fair or meela is held, some Hugoreeahs were living in a Talook belonging to one Bauj Choudree, and that they were in the habit of visiting Futteepore. I constructed those visits as connecting the Hugoreeahs of Gorachand with those of Futteepore, and immediately communicated the above fact to the Joint Magistrate of Barasett. That gentleman having been succeeded by another, I got no reply, but repeated the communication to his successor, Mr. Sandys. Shortly after this I traced a man named Pauchoo, one of those who had escaped from Moorsheedabad to Futteepore. I induced him by promises and persuasions, to come to my factory, which he did. The intelligence of his apprehension was immediately made to the Joint Magistrate of Barasett, and to his reply, dated the 22d of January 1839, marked A., I crave reference. It will prove an immediate promise of co-operation of the police of our district; and Mr. Sandys's reply also led me to expect the co-operation of the Moorsheedabad Magistracy. Through Pauchoo's agency, I succeeded in apprehending four other men belonging to the gang, who had escaped from Moorsheedabad, and on communicating it to Mr. Sandys, I received a reply, dated February 2d 1839, marked D., to which I crave reference. It will there appear, that gentleman was awaiting instructions, from the Magistrate of Moorsheedabad, to whom he had forwarded my letter privately. In this instance the Umdungachee daroga called at my factory, by the order of Mr. Sandys. I told him that he was at liberty to take those men away if he wished, but if they were left, I thought I would be able to arrest the others through them. The first gang released from Barasett was never secluded from the surveillance of the Barasett Police, as on my representation, the Ingoolee, Ramree jemadar and burkundazes, were ordered to watch and muster the men weekly.

12. I again wrote to Mr. Sandys, expressing my hopes to find the remainder of the Moorsheedabad gang through the five men already apprehended, and to his reply, dated 20th February, 1839, marked E, I crave reference. It will be shewn, that my communications to that gentleman, were delivered by the Umdungachee darogah, and the five men whom I had shown to that officer, are acknowledged by Mr. Sandys as being entered in the Moorsheedabad list. That gentleman placed every reliance on my proceedings, and it is evident in that document, that the Umdungachee Darogah was kept on the qui vive as to my proceedings, and ordered to abide by my advice. I should have had the co-operation of Nyluttee Police, but for some suspicion which was entertained against them, by Mr. Sandys, I promised the Umdungachee Darogah early intimation, if I got scent of any more of the Moorsheedabad gang.

13. The wives of the five men above referred to, and of the prisoner Golaub, who was then confined in the Hooghly jail, told me, that if I released Golaub, he would be able to trace those who had broken prison. I made known that circumstance to Mr. Samuella, then Magistrate of Hooghly, and was informed in reply, that if I presented a formal petition for the release of Golaub, my request would be complied with. That communication has been unfortunately lost. I petitioned the Magistrate of Hooghly, through a sircar, and the result was that Golaub was brought to my factory in charge of a burkundaz and left there. Golaub informed me of the other Hugoreeahs connected with the Moorsheedabad gang being in the Hooghly jail, and that they would enable me to trace the whole of the Moorsheedabad gang if released. I lost no time in communicating with the Magistrate of Hooghly on the subject; to whose reply, dated 14th of February 1839, marked D, I crave reference. It will there be seen, that the Magistrate expressed his willingness to release the men on my security, but could not give me a burkundaz, as requested, as my factory was not within his district. He consequently wished to know, if I had the means of preventing the escape of the men, and if I could guarantee their not returning to the commission of dacoities. Mr. Samuella was anxious at the same time of aiding me in every way in the arduous task I had undertaken; but was apprehensive of the Hugoreeahs proving a serious incumbrance to me, and he recommended their reconsideration of the subject. Mr. Samuella thought my giving information of the whereabouts of the Hugoreeahs to the nearest Magistrate, would be sufficient. That proposal, if acceded to, would have at once defeated my plan, that of collecting the whole body of dacoits, and delivering them to the authorities. I was apprehensive if I delivered over the five men, I would loose all trace of the remainder of the Moorsheedabad gang, and if I had succeeded in finding out the location of any others, and indicated the same to the Police, the fears of the Hugoreeahs would have been awakened, and my scheme would have fallen to the ground.

14. The Hugoreeahs were in utter ignorance of my intention, and gave the authorities with whom I co-operated my purpose was concealed from the people of my vicinity. With the co-operation of the Barasett Police, I felt no apprehension of the flight of the Hugoreeahs already in my factory. Mr. Samuella was answered on all the points urged by him, and after entering into the guarantee required, I procured the release of the men proposed by Golaub from Hooghly.

15. I regret I did not retain copies of my letters to the authorities, with whom I was in communication. I never thought I would require them for the defence of my character and intentions, as in the present case, in which both are impugned. Besides the original letters now filed, several have been mislaid by me. I believe, however, they would be forthcoming among the files of the records of the Magistrate with which I corresponded. I leave it to the better judgment of the court, to call for those papers, if necessary.

16. The next communication is a letter No. 116, from Mr. Trevor, Joint Magistrate of Baraset, dated 25th April, 1839, marked E., to which I crave reference. Previous to its receipt, information reached me, while at Khatghonna factory, by one of the men for whom I had become security, that those I was in search of were in a place called Toonogee, in Jessore. This was also communicated to Mr. Sandys, then in charge of that district, and in that gentleman's reply, dated Jessore, 26th May, 1839, marked F, to which I crave reference, it is stated, that the whole of my proceeding had been reported to the Superintendent of Police who approved of them, and awaited their result with anxiety. In that communication, Mr. Sandys again promised me his entire co-operation. Previous to writing to Mr. Sandys, I had sent off two Hugoreeahs named Sheeboo and Buxoo, in search to Jessore, and while at Joypore, I heard of Sheeboo's return without Buxoo.

17. With reference to Mr. Trevor's letter, marked E., I have to state, that I wrote to that gentleman of my willingness, to make the men over to the Police, and that I would consider it a favor if they were taken from me. Just a little previous to this, I had obtained the superintendence of six factories belonging to Mr. James Furlong, at a salary of two hundred rupees per month, to which I was obliged to devote my personal and strict attention. It naturally interfered with the plan I had laid for the apprehension of the Hugoreeahs, and, but for being away from Hurringhatta, and from not knowing that I could have released myself from liabilities into which I had entered, by written communications, I should certainly have followed up my reply to Mr. Trevor, with a declaration to that effect, and the delivery of the five Moor-sheeddad men. Another difficulty intervened immediately, as it were. An affray took place at the Khatghonna concern, and I was ordered to attend at Kishnagur, before the authorities, where I remained the better part of May and June last; and though I wished to return to Hurringhatta to deliver over the Hugoreeahs, the circumstances before related prevented my doing so. When about to return from a place called Gaurree, at which I was attending for an affray, I again wrote to the Joint Magistrate of my willingness to give up the men, but got no reply. I told Premchand nazir, that when I arrived at Hurringhatta, I would petition the Magistrate for a pottwannah, authorizing Premchand to take charge of the Hugoreeahs from my custody. Mr. Alexander Dathel, of Gobhurdaugh, was present during that conversation.

18. My employment in the Joypore concerns, entirely interfered with the measures I was adopting for the apprehension of the men who had broken jail from Moor-sheebad. My attention being drawn away, and being obliged to be absent from Hurringhatta for a period of about six months, and not receiving any information, I had, I must confess, become negligent of the Hugoreeahs; but on the other hand, previous to leaving Hurringhatta, I took the precaution of instructing my gomashita Isurchunder Mooroomdar, and two burkundazes, against allowing the Hugoreeahs to go abroad. The escape of Bhadoor and others from Hurringhatta, occurred during my absence; and the carelessness of allowing such an escape is properly attributable to my gomashita, in whose hands I had confided the entire controul and management of the Hurringhatta factory.

19. It is also imperatively necessary that I should bring to the notice of the Court, that before I left the station, the Session Judge of Hooghly took up the case of the ten men released by me from that district, and on reference to a Bengallee proceeding of the officiating Magistrate of Hooghly, dated the 30th July, 1839, marked G. which is an authenticated copy, it will be seen that the Session Judge did not consider any security necessary for them, and desired the magistrate to inform me of my having been released from the recognizance I had entered into. This communication was conveyed to Hurringhatta Factory in my absence, and the consequence was, that when those men heard of the circumstance, they availed themselves of the opportunity and left the factory. I did not receive this communication until the 10th or 12th of July, while at Khatghonna. I have also to explain that the remarks regarding the Baraset men herein made, also apply to those I released from this zillah. I trust I have succeeded in establishing the reasons for which I made myself instrumental in the release of thirty-two or thirty-three Hugoreeahs; and that those reasons were far from the infamous and disreputable charge with which I stand accused.

20. Having thus disposed of that part of the charge which accuses me of harboring dacoits and locating them in my factory, that is of doing what the law authorizes any one to do, and what the magistrate approved of my doing, I solicit the indulgence of the Judge and gentlemen of the jury, while I proceed to show the groundlessness of that part of my alleged offence, of aiding and abetting the crime of gang robbery.

21. To constitute the crime of aiding and abetting gang robbery, there must be proofs either that I released the Hugoreeahs for any such purpose, or that I was cognizant of their being employed in the commission of dacoities, or that I received any portion of the spoils which these men obtained by dacoity. No attempt has been made to prove any of these points. On the contrary, the witnesses, Kisto Govind, Muldusooden and Hyoolah, state positively, that to their positive knowledge, no dacoities occurred at Hurringhatta or near and about the village in its vicinity. While on this subject, I can quote documents to show, that it was attempted at one time to implicate the Hugoreeahs released by me in dacoities. Their habitations were searched, nay, dug up by the local police officers, and no property was found on them in those instances, and even then the magistrate co-operated with me in bringing to justice, if guilty, as will appear by the two letters marked H and J, dated the 23d June and the 28th July 1838, to which I crave reference. Finally, I now solicit the serious consideration of the court to the witnesses, Kisto Doss, Goroosunder, Muldusooden and Ujoolah. The characters of these four individuals are as follows:

The first is a strolling beggar, existing on village charity. The next is a vender of drugs in a small village bazar. The third is nothing more nor less than a sweetmeat vender of the same bazar. The fourth witness, to crown the character of the preceding trio, is nothing better than a coolie; and on reference to their respective asseverations, a string of hearsay evidence and of suspicious opinions are only found. I believe I am justified in protesting against their evidence—not only as to its being hearsay, but to its being merely suspicious; and lastly as to the evidence being given by men unworthy of belief. I have now again to call the attention of the Court to Subbopoth Ris, to whose zamindari, in the course of the cross-examination, I traced some of these witnesses to belong; and I believe I need not go further to develop the conspiracy of which I am at present the unfortunate object. The evidence of Mr. Thomas Palmer at once puts the Court in possession of the pecuniary means by which the Hurringhatta factory was carried on. That gentleman acknowledged himself as being my agent; that he had received Indigo proceeds in return for the advances made by him; and I trust, in your judgment, the evidence of Mr. Thomas Palmer will be considered more than sufficient to set the evidences of the four preceding witnesses altogether aside.

22. To the evidence of the next two witnesses, Ramdeen and Alleemooddeen, Jemadar and Naiba of the Calcutta Police Division, I shall now respectfully beg leave to crave the attention of the Court. Ramdeen said that after arresting the men from the boats, he took four of them direct to Captain Birch; whereas Alleemooddeen, who accompanied Ramdeen, said the four men were taken first to Mr. Thomas Palmer's office. Ramdeen again denied, that any Bengalees or English writers were in the room in which he conversed with Mr. Palmer; but in the course of his cross-examination, acknowledged that there was one Bengalee writer in a corner of the room; and I may add, that his identification of the prisoners with those he arrested at the Ghaut, was abundant discrepancy. I have thought necessary to point out the discrepancies of these witnesses to show how groundless this prosecution has been against me.

23. There is but one other witness, to a part of whose evidence I am obliged to crave serious attention, that of Romee, Madub Jummadar. When he produced a pass letter as having been delivered to him by one of the men whom he apprehended, the prosecution believing that to be a genuine document, have filed it in evidence against me. I hope I shall be able to prove by respectable and unexceptionable testimony, that the supposed signature and initials are not mine; and I believe there has been nothing offered in the course of the evidence in support of that document. If it were a genuine one, there is nothing to show that it emanated from me, or that it had my sanction, consent or approval. Nor has evidence been adduced, that the prisoner Baha loor and his companions were on my mission or on any errand in any way connected with it implicating me.

24. I am sensible of the benefit of a trial before a British Judge and I am as sensible that a Jury composed of my countrymen will record their impartial and unbiased verdict, by which I anxiously await my acquittal from a charge, dangerous to society and infamous to character; and I shall conclude by closing my case, and the evidence I will adduce, both as to certain circumstances and character, to their mature consideration.

25. The Court will now, I feel assured, exempt me from the charge of harbouring dacoits, inasmuch as I maintained the release of these men publicly, and with the knowledge and consent of the public authorities; as well as from that of aiding and abetting in the commission of dacoity; inasmuch as I have shown, that I was actuated by motives of public good, and there has not been an iota of proof of my having derived any personal benefit from these men.

The defence was listened to with great attention by the Court, and also with considerable interest by many persons who had gone to hear the trial.

Mr. Palmer was then desired to approach the bench, when Mr. Biscoe addressed him to the following effect:

Mr. Palmer,—I have heard your defence with great attention, and if the gentlemen assessors acquit you of the 2d count of the charge, I don't see the necessity of calling your witnesses.

On reference being made to the assessors, they pronounced Mr. Palmer not guilty; after which the Judge again addressed Mr. Palmer as follows. You are likewise, in my opinion, fully acquitted of the charge on which you were committed to take your trial. I have now to inform you, that in the first instance of your commitment, in case No. 2, I was of opinion that the crime alleged against you was not of a nature to warrant a commitment. I then wrote to the Magistrate to know under what Regulation he committed you? The Magistrate answered, by charging you with harbouring dacoits, and aiding and abetting gang robberies. I immediately directed an indictment to be preferred against you. I now fully acquit you of the charges. It rests now with the Magistrate to try you for locating Hagoosa reebas in your factory, if he should think it necessary.

Mr. Dias submitted, that under a construction of the Sudder Nizamut, which he had at hand, it appeared to him, that as the indictment included the whole of the charges, the Judge could record a verdict of acquittal generally. Mr. Dias was, however, told by the Judge, that no reply was necessary to what he the Judge stated, that Mr. Dias had heard the opinion of the Court, and the Court hoped he understood it.

Mr. Dias then urged, that Mr. Palmer had been a prisoner for almost a month, and begged the Court to take that into consideration.

The Judge was still of opinion, that he had no jurisdiction in the former charges under the provisions of Regulation VI. of 1810; but thought that Mr. Palmer would acquit Mr. Palmer on trial pending a reference to the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut.—Hark. Oct. 9.

INSOLVENT COURT.

Sept. 14, 1838.

(Before Sir W. H. Stoten.)

CHARLES FRIM DE COMINIE, an Insolvent, there being no opposition, was discharged.

SHANK SOHAM GOWA, an Insolvent, no opposition, discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOB, AN INSOLVENT.

Further hearing in this case, was postponed until the first Court day after the beginning of next term, when sentence will have been passed upon the Insolvent under the conviction for perjury.

IN THE MATTER OF H. SCHLATTER, AN INSOLVENT.

Notice of opposition had been put in but was withdrawn. The Insolvent made affidavit as to the non-receipt of notices of application for discharge on Major 7th.

Grant and Mr. E. J. Smith, creditors of the estate. These parties the Insolvent had ascertained, were in Europe.—Discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF J. L. M. BEAUMONT, AN INSOLVENT.

—The Advocate General examined the insolvent touching three cases of military accoutrements of the value of about Rs. 14,000, which had been consigned by parties in England to the Insolvent, and by him transferred to a Mr. Gee, of Cawnpore. The Insolvent did not consider these goods as his own property. They had been sent out to him under authority of a general order from the Insolvent to the shippers, to send him whatever they thought likely to answer his purpose. Being in pecuniary difficulties when the goods in question arrived, he had transferred them to Mr. Gee, with a request to him to sell them for the benefit of the consigners.

Mr. Clarke, on behalf of the Insolvent said, that there was no fraudulent intention in this transfer, the property having been given up to Mr. Gee on behalf of the consigners. Examination resumed. The Insolvent said that when he gave the order for those goods, he was in difficulties. They arrived here some time in "February last," before the writ of attachment had been served upon the Insolvent. He was arrested on the 24th of April last. In Jan. 1838, he communicated with Messrs. Holmes, Allen and Co., as Agents for Mr. Gee, respecting the goods which he expected, and again immediately after receiving them, he wrote to that firm. He sent to Messrs. Holmes, Allen and Co., the bill of lading of the goods. The goods are still in the possession of Messrs. Holmes, Allen and Co. The profit upon such Articles would not be less than 25 per cent., and probably might be 50 per cent. There was no connexion between Mr. Gee and the consigners.

Mr. R. W. Allen, of the firm of Holmes, Allen and Co., examined. He had received goods from the Insolvent on behalf of Mr. Gee. These were principally military accoutrements. One package, by the Bahoo they had received direct from Mr. Beaumont; but the rest through Mr. Gee. The value of each package was about £400. A letter was received from the Insolvent requesting Holmes, Allen and Co. to take charge of the goods on behalf of Mr. Gee. Inclosed in this was a letter from Mr. Gee himself.

The Insolvent said, that he was induced to transfer the property to Mr. Gee, because he thought it likely to be seized by Mr. Dickens in behalf of an estate to which he, (the Insolvent) stood indebted.

The Insolvent was discharged.

The Advocate-General on behalf of the opposing creditor, applied for allowance of costs, on the ground that the opposition had been the means of adding a large sum to the assets of the estate. Sir H. W. Seton replied, that prima facie it would appear that the creditor was entitled to his costs, but it remained to be seen how far the sums now added to the estate had been really in consequence of the opposition. He should, therefore, take time to consider the matter, and to look for precedents. Discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF RAM GOVIND DAT, AN INSOLVENT.

Mr. Turton, on behalf of the Assignee, (Mr. J. W. Alexander) applied for an order to annul the yet incomplete sale of the credits of this estate. The application was made on the ground that the Assignee was not empowered by the Insolvent Act, to sell the debts of an Insolvent, that the sale had not been properly advertised, and that only a totally inadequate sum had been obtained.

It appeared from the examination of the Insolvent, that the money due to him amounted to above three lakhs of rupees. There was one debt of 80,000 rupees, owing by a family of the name of Seal. No legal proceedings had ever been taken for the recovery of these debts. The debts were sold by Mr. Alexander for rupees 1,600; that was the upset price. About 10 or 15 people were present at the sale, and among them was Mr. Preston, who purchased the debts. A few days after the sale; one of the Seals sent for the Insolvent, and wished to make some arrangements, for the payment of the debt. The Insolvent told him the debts were sold, and that in consequence he had no power to make such arrangement. He was not told by Seal, that Mr. Preston had written to demand payment of the debt in full. When asked to make arrangement for payment of the debt, he thought it was only a joke. The Insolvent, shortly after the sale, waited upon Mr. Preston, and voluntarily offered his services and assistance in recovering the debt. Mr. Preston, however, did not accept the offer, but told the Insolvent not to come to his office again. The Insolvent believed that Mr. Preston purchased the debts in the name and on behalf of one Dwarkanauth Chunder. He had heard, after the sale, that this Dwarkanauth Chunder was a servant of one Jadub Chunder Seal, a relative of the Seals, who were so deeply indebted to the estate. Jadub Chunder Seal, with whom the Insolvent was on very intimate terms, had said, that Dwarkanauth Chunder had purchased the debts, but did not know whether on his own account or not. The Insolvent denied that he had ever had dealings jointly with Jadub Chunder. He could not give an opinion as to whether Mr. Preston, Jadub Chunder Seal, or Dwarkanauth Chunder, was the real purchaser of the schedule.

Mr. Leith, on behalf of one of the creditors, applied to stop the sale on the grounds previously set forth, viz., that the Assignee had no power to sell, that the price was quite inadequate, and that the sale had not been properly advertised. Further, he said, it appeared that there had been collusion between the Insolvent and Jadub Chunder Seal, by the former of whom the Assignee had been misled as to the amount of the assets, and the circumstances of the case.

Mr. E. Preston, an Attorney, had purchased the debts of Ram Govind's estate for Rs. 1,600. He had previously made an offer of Rs. 1,500, but it was refused, and he afterwards bought them at the upset price, viz. Rs. 1,600. The debts were purchased by him in the name of and for Dwarkanauth Chunder. This man, the witness did not know, not having ever seen him. His instructions to purchase, he received from Jadub Chunder Seal, who gave them on behalf of Dwarkanauth Chunder. [The propriety of the question which elicited this information, was discussed at some length; but it was at length decided to be allowable.] The Insolvent came to the witness on the day of sale, to offer his assistance in collecting the debts, but the witness did not employ him; but told him, that it was possibly that at a future time he might avail himself of his services. Witness applied to the Seals for payment of the debt of Rs. 86,000; but made no proposal for composition. He did not recollect informing the Insolvent of his application to the Seals. Jadub Chunder Seal is one of the witness's clients. Dwarkanauth Chunder, witness believed, was now at Berham-pore, but his permanent residence is at Chinsurah.

Sir H. W. Seton said, that there appeared abundant reason for setting aside the sale, any one of the grounds advanced being sufficient for that purpose. However, as the parties implicated were not now before him, he could not at present adjudge the matter. It was therefore postponed for further hearing. Stands over.

IN THE MATTER OF BRIJNATH BARDOL, AN INSOLVENT.

An order nisi was granted for setting aside the adjudication of bankruptcy.

IN THE ESTATE OF DAVID CHAW, AN INSOLVENT.

A third dividend of Cos. Rs. 18 per 100 Sikkim rupees was declared upon this estate.

IN THE ESTATE OF ANDREW HEDBURN, AN INSOLVENT.

A fourth dividend of Co., Rs. 10 per 100 Sica rupees was declared on this estate.

IN THE ESTATE OF JAMES CULLEN AND OTHERS, INSOLVENTS.

Mr. Leith, applied on behalf of the assignees of this estate, commonly called Crutenden and Co.'s, for authority to call certain witnesses, and to examine a certain deed, touching monies which now, on the death of the person holding a life interest in them under the provisions of the deed, revert to the above estate. The deed, whose production was applied for, was the settlement executed on the marriage of Mr. Alexander Falconer, with Miss Josephina Hume, (the late Mrs. A. F. Smith) The witnesses required were the trustees, or those who had been trustees, under that settlement, Messrs. Limond, Balfour and Judge.

Mr. Tilton, in opposition, contended that the Court had no power to compel the evidence of a trustee, or the production of deeds, in cases where it would be prejudicial to the trust estate, and stake the title of parties not implicated in the insolvency.

The case was argued at considerable length by Messrs Trotter and Leith, the latter quoting the case of Mrs. Jacob's marriage settlement, and the usage of the Bankruptcy Courts in England. The result was, that the Court, agreeing with Mr. Leith, permitted the examination of the witnesses; with a proviso that any improper question might be overruled by the Court, at the suggestion of the other party.

Mr. Leith then proceeded to examine Mr. William Limond, formerly a trustee under Mr. Falconer's marriage settlement. He stated that he had been discharged from the trust about 4 or 5 years ago. During his trusteeship, he had, by the advice of a friend, written to Mr. Holroyd, the assignee of Messrs. Crutenden and Co. This he did, on the supposition that they were creditors of the estate of Mr. Falconer. Originally there were no trust funds, but the trust was, he understood, secured by an insurance on the life of Mr. Falconer. What was the amount insured, the witness did not know, but whatever the sum, it must have been paid on the death of Mr. Falconer. The witness never received any money on account of the trust, but, on the failure of Ferguson and Co., he was required to sign the receipts for dividends, received from that estate. He also signed receipts, for the interest of Company's paper, which was handed over to Mrs. Smith, formerly Mrs. Falconer. The transactions were carried on by Mr. A. F. Smith, and the witness, as trustee, only signed the receipts. The Company's papers which were in the hands of Ferguson and Co., upon the failure of that house, were transferred to the Government Agent. He thought it probable that some portion of the trust funds was lost in the failure of Ferguson and Co. The dividends from the insolvent estate were regularly invested in Company's paper. Those papers, he believes, are now in the hands of Mr. Smith, agent, Messrs. A. F. Smith and Co. He believed that it Messrs. Crutenden and Co. were creditors of Mr. Falconer, that their estate would have an interest in the trust funds on the death of Mrs. A. F. Smith. The marriage settlement, the witness believed, had never been in his possession; and he could not say who had custody of it. About 4 or 5 years ago there was a change of trustees, and the witness then resigned. Who the trustees now were, he could not say.

Mr. Lewis Balfour, of the firm of Messrs. A. F. Smith and Co, and one of Mr. Smith's agents, was examined by Mr. Leish. The partners in the house of Messrs. A. & F. Smith and Co., were, Mr. Smith, Mr. LeBougle, and himself. The trust funds are now in their hands. They consisted almost entirely of 22 Union Bank Shares, and a small balance of cash. On the departure of Mr. Smith for England, in January last, the witness was called to act as agent for him, and then first became acquainted with the state of the trust funds.

The Union Bank shares stand in the name of the trustee, who are Messrs. A. F. Smith, David Smith, and Charles Boucher. The two former are in Europe, and the last is in Duca. The witness, as one of Mr. Smith's agents, had often received dividends on the Bank shares since Mr. Smith went to England. He believed the amount was about 800 rupees, which forms the balance of cash previously mentioned. One share has been purchased since Mr. Smith left with accumulated interest of the others, previously received. The witness had every reason to believe that Mrs. Smith died at sea on board the ship Scotia. Mr. Smith was with her at the time.

By Mr. Taiton. Believed the amount of dividends received was about 21 or 22,000 rupees but did not know what portion of the whole fund the accumulations formed. One Union Bank Share was purchased from funds not Bank dividends, but from a dividend of the estate of Ferguson and Co., received before Mr. Smith went away. None of the accumulations were invested in the name of the trustees. The witness had heard that there are funds in England belonging to the trustees.

Mr. Tutton, on behalf of the trustees offered, to give a copy of the deed of settlement, with access to the original to prove correctness, the expense to be borne by the parties requiring it. A dispute, however, ensued as to whose Attorney, was to have the copying of the document, and the benefit consequent there upon. Several plans were proposed to obviate this difficulty, but none which seemed to meet the views of both parties. At length Mr. Tutton informed the counsel for the other side, that as the expense seemed to be so material an object to the estate, he would make them a present of the co. y.—stands over.

IN THE MATTER OF RAJNARAYAN, AN INSOLVENT.

This was the case, entered upon on a previous occasion, in which the insolvent had been imprisoned with others on a conviction in the Supreme Court for a riot, and, subsequently, under a decree in an action of trover, for the recovery of money said to have been carried off by him in the riot in question. The prosecution on the charge of misdemeanor, was one Freemanly D. seen, a widow, whose son was the leader of the gang that broke into her house and carried off jewels, money, tide drugs, &c., to a very large amount. When his companions were apprehended, and brought for trial, the son contrived to escape, and though the affair took place about two years ago, the action against him came on only last Session, when, after a conversation with the prosecutor, his mother, the man was allowed to be acquitted. It is said that the jewels taken away were then restored to her.

The insolvent, Rajnarain Day, not being able to give a satisfactory account of the monies said to have been in his possession, and, indeed, denying that he ever had them, has been kept in prison for about 18 months. He was now brought up for further hearing, and the case was discussed by Mr. Clarke for the insolvent, and Mr. Chebrens for the opposing creditor Steamship Dock Co. The result was, that the Court was convinced that, even if the insolvent ever had the monies, &c. in his possession they no longer were so; and, that no benefit could be derived from keeping him longer in custody. Discharged.—Hulk, 5 pt, 16.

MISCELLANEA.

CALCUTTA.

LORD AUCKLAND.—Lord Auckland, it is stated, now purposes to be at Calcutta in the course of February next, and to return to England at the expiration of twelve months from the date of his arrival in town.

ICE.—Another cargo of ice has been received during the week.

POLICE SURGEON.—Mr. John Maxton, has been appointed Police Surgeon, by the Governor-General.

THE ONE-MAGISTRATE ACT.—The one-magistrate act has passed into law. Beshrew those who passed it.

OVERLAND DESPATCH.—The number of letters and papers dispatched by the overland mail on Tuesday the 27th ultimo, was five thousand one hundred and fifty nine.

GALLON MEASURE.—It is said that the Salt Boas have introduced the imperial gallon measure in the Algaee and Cuttums Department in Bengal.

INDIGO CROP.—The present crop of indigo is estimated at 180,000 chests. It has been a splendid season, and planters will be able to sing "money in both pockets."

ALMS HOUSE.—An Alms House is to be established by the District Charitable Society, in St. James district.

COL. JAS. YOUNG.—It would appear, that Colonel Young has resigned, or is about to resign, the Secretaryship of the Union Bank, having been permitted to recall his resignation of the Law Commission, if indeed he ever resigned it, of which we are not certain.

MECHANIC'S INSTITUTION.—The Committee of the Mechanics' Institution, has selected Mr. Alexander Anderson, the Civil Engineer, as teacher for the schools to be established by that body.

ACCIDENT TO SHIPPIER.—On the night of the 15th instant, the Fugitive parted from her moorings and ran foul of the bow of the Wild Watch, but neither vessel received much damage from the concussion.

MESSES. MACNAGHTEN AND BIRD.—It is confidently stated, that Mr. Macnaghten is to remain at Calcutta for twelve months; and that Mr. Bird, of Allahabad, will officiate as Lieutenant-Governor of Agra, on Lord Auckland's return to the Presidency.

MR. EDWARD PALMER.—Mr. Edward Palmer, of Hurlingham factory, who was tried in the Twenty-four Pargannah's Judge's Court, for being particeps criminis in several dacoities, has been fully acquitted, not a little of credible evidence being forthcoming on the side of the prosecution. In fact, the whole affair wears the appearance of a conspiracy to ruin Mr. Palmer.

SIR HENRY FANE AND THE NIZAM'S ARMY.—Letters from Aungahabad mentioned, that there was a probability of an early visit to that city from Sir Henry Fane, who had been requested by Government to inspect the Nizam's force, and report minutely upon its condition. His Excellency, it was supposed, would afterwards proceed to Morambad, to see the irregular Horse. A revised Code of Rules and Regulations had been issued to the Nizam's troops, which appears to have given satisfaction.

MR. OSBORNE.—Mr. Frederick Osborne, of the Calcutta Bar, formerly Editor of the Courier newspaper, has just left Calcutta, and intends to proceed to Madras to try his fortune at the bar there. This is the third instance of a transfer from the bar of our Presidency to that of a Sister Presidency within a comparatively brief period, Messrs. Smythe and Blunt having deserted Calcutta for Madras some two or three years since.

UNCONVENTED SERVICE FAMILY PENSION FUND.—A Meeting of the Unconvented Service Family Pension Fund, was held at the Town Hall on the 21st ultimo, when it appeared that the prospects of the Fund were most cheering, and the Report submitted in the Meeting gave general satisfaction to all present.

SALVAGE OF THE ANTELOPE.—In the matter of the schooner Antelope, the Chamber of Commerce have awarded one-third of the present net value of both cargo and block, as salvage; one quarter of which is to be distributed amongst the volunteers who accompanied Mr. Hudson, the mate of the Floating Light, and the remainder to Mr. Hudson himself.

FRENCH FRIGATE.—The French frigate, which arrived the other day has on board a Monsieur Mont Brisson, an Aide-camp of the Governor of Bourbon, who has come to this place for the purpose of endeavouring to import the art of manufacturing silk by the worm into Bourbon.

TIDE RISE.—The tide rose very high on the night of the 24th instant, and overflowed the gates of the docks at Kidderpore, a circumstance which has not occurred within "the recollection of the oldest inhabitant." On the 25th also, a great part of the Strand Road near the Fort was laid under water from the same cause—the water flowing over into the glacis for a considerable distance.

LAUNCH OF A STEAMER.—A new steamer was launched yesterday at Kidderpore. She is a fine vessel, intended to carry two engines each of 75 horse power, made by Fawcett and Preston, of Liverpool, and just arrived in the Royal Saxon. The new vessel, which went off the ways in fine style, was christened the Dwarkanauth, by Mrs. H. M. Parker, is the property of the Steam Tug Association, and the most powerful steamer yet built here.

SHIP LAUNCH.—At about half past one o'clock, on the 25th instant, a launch took place at Howrah. The vessel was saluted with twenty one guns, named the Paragon by Mr. M. Dove, and glided most majestically into the river. She is of about four hundred tons burthen. The site of the launch was numerously attended by people of every class.

SHIPWRECK.—Private letters from Penang state, that the Captain and part of the crew of the ship Manchester, which vessel sailed from Bombay on the 15th of July, bound to Liverpool, and foundered at sea on the 2d of August, arrived at Penang, in the long-boat, on or about the 14th August. The second officer, four seamen and one boy are missing.

THE LACK.—The fortunate holder of ticket No. 5,450 in the Calcutta Lottery, was on the 31st of August, made richer by a lack of rupees, than he was the preceding day, that sum being drawn to his ticket. No. 5,159 came up a prize of Rs. 10,000, and is the property of a member of a mercantile firm in this place. No. 5,285 is a prize of Rs. 5,600, and No. 5,285 5,630, and 5,027 drew each Rs. 1,000.

THE WATER WITCH.—The Water Witch has not disappointed us in our expectations of her performance. She made the passage from Calcutta to Aden in thirty-eight days, while the Orissa was forty one days, in going from Bombay to Aden. This is a triumph for the comprehensives, which will make the Bombay Exclusives look not a little sour. The Water Witch was prevented from carrying the Mail, as to Suva, as was intended, from having sprung her main-top mast. The packets were, therefore, transferred to the Constance, and left Aden for Suva on the 28th of August last.

STUDENTS OF THE MEDICAL COLLEGE.—Three students of the Medical College, viz. Calla Chund Dey, Nobin Chunder Mookerjee, and Gopaul Kist Gupto, have been sent to Assam by the Assam Tea Company, for the purpose of establishing dispensaries in different parts of the hitherto neglected, but fruitful section of the British empire, and affording medical aid to the workmen engaged in Tea Cultivation. Their salary for the present, is fixed at 100 rupees a month.

SITUATION OF POST-MASTER AT DIAMOND HARBOUR.—The situation of Post-Master at Diamond Harbour, lately held by Mr. Hindmarsh, having been given on the untimely demise of that officer, to the Commander of the Beacon Floating Light, the vacant command of the Light is to be bestowed on Mr. Hudson, who distinguished himself so much in the case of the Protector and the Antelope, lately brought to notice in the papers. The salary of the command is about 400 rupees per mensem,—double what Mr. Hudson has hitherto received.

COWARDLY ASSAULT.—During the week, Messrs Johnson, Lebridge, and Batchelor,—in consequence of Mr. Francis Heley having taken measures to prevent Mr. Johnson's committing bigamy, by marrying a ward of his, while Mrs. Anne Johnson, wife of the aforesaid Johnson, was in existence,—in concert assailed Mr. Heley. But Mr. Heley, though very bantamish in dimensions, managed to get the better of his three cowardly opponents, in two rencounters; succeeded twice, with bare hands, in disarming Johnson of his horsewhip; and after marking the said Johnson's face, bound the valiant and worthy trio over to keep the peace.

ACCIDENTS.—The following accidents occurred during the night of the 22nd instant. The Thames parted from her outer moorings, at Cooly Bazar, from the strength of the tide, but was secured again the next morning without meeting with any injury. The American ship Arab parted from her anchors in the middle of the stream, and drove afloat hawse of the Fatima, where she lay during the whole of the night, but was brought into her berth along side the Banksall the next morning.

FATAL ACCIDENTS.—The rain and gale last Saturday morning, did a great deal of injury both to pookah and thatched houses; the effects were more felt in the suburbs, where large trees even were up-rooted.

An upper-roomed house at Collingah, which was in rather a dilapidated state, tumbled down, and the pookah wall of a house in Elliott's Road, at about 2 o'clock in the morning, fell upon a thatched house, where some bakers were living, and buried three of them in its ruins.

LOTTERY.—It was part of the plan of the last lottery, that any surplus above fifty thousand rupees profit, should be transferred to the next lottery for the benefit of future speculators. Unfortunately, however, the total net proceeds of the last lottery were only twenty-two thousand five hundred rupees, and consequently the Committee have nothing to spare. The Scheme for the next lottery is now hatching, and that it will be on as liberal a scale as the last, excepting in one trifling instance, viz. the assignment of 30 rupees to the holders of blanks on a given day.

MARCH OR CHALLENGE.—A Hindoo gentleman, of sporting notoriety, had an altercation with an officer in the army, of fire-up celebrity, about a snuff box, and the Baboo, possessing a more fiery spirit than the generality of his countrymen, resented, properly, some expressions made use of by the officer, and challenged him to a duel, according to the modern code of honour. The officer, however, thought it most prudent, in consideration of running the risk of being disgraced from his rank, and suffering in the estimation of his brother officers, to cry peccavi and decline the combat.

PRINTING THE REPORTS OF THE GOVERNMENT.—At the suggestion of the Court of Directors, the Government have directed that one hundred copies of the reports on the administration of Civil and Criminal Justice, which are annually submitted by the Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlat, shall, in future, be printed. A few copies are to be forwarded to Leadenhall Street, but we have not heard what is to be done with the remainder. The Civil Report for 1833, is now in the Press. This measure will deprive the Deputies of a large portion of their income.

DEATH OF THE SULTAN OF TURKEY.—RUSSIAN FORCE.—The following extract of a letter from Bombay of the 2d instant, if it could be relied on, communicates the most important intelligence that has reached India for many years. If the Russians have advanced upon Constantinople with the force which is mentioned, it will be productive of the most momentous consequences to Europe.

"Extract of a Letter from Bombay, dated 2d September. —The Hugh Lindsay came in from the Persian Gulf last night, and brings accounts of the Sultan's death at Constantinople, and a report that a large Russian fleet and 37,000 Russians were only a very short distance from Constantinople.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—MR. COCKRELL.—At the monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, held on the 3rd instant, it was unanimously resolved, on the motion of Mr. Denrie, seconded by Mr. Cullen, "That the Chamber cannot allow the first general meeting of its members since the death of Mr. Cockrell, their late President, to pass over, without recording the high sense they entertain of his sterling integrity, independence, and moral worth; and expressing the sorrow they individually feel for the severe loss which the community has sustained by his premature and lamented demise."

THE PATSALA.—At a meeting of the Committee for the erection of a Patsala, held in the Hall of the Hindoo College, on the 28th of August, after some desultory conversation in reference to the future prosperity of the institution, the formation of which has been entrusted to their management, the Members proceeded to examine the qualifications of three candidates who have applied for the situation of teacher, whose duty it will be to initiate the boys in the method of writing a fair and neat hand with accuracy, but whose salary will not exceed ten rupees a month. The Committee's attention was then directed to the preparation of suitable books in the vernacular language, and a Bengally Grammar, a Dictionary, as well as treatises on Geography and Astronomy, will soon be published, under the superintendence of the Committee, for the use of the new Patsala, and the native community in general.

SURVEILLING OF SALT IN SAUGOR ISLAND.—It appears that, when an uncovenanted servant, on the part of Government, was deputed to visit Saugor Island, belonging to Mr. Taitou, it was discovered that extensive smuggling of salt was going on there by the residents at the place. This circumstance was duly brought to the notice of the Salt Agent, and the affair was investigated and a check put to its further progress. Consequently, an order has been passed by the Board of Customs, that the Saugor grantees should have no licence in future to manufacture salt there. It appears now, that they have applied for permission to quit the Island, and go to Narainpore, for the purpose of manufacturing salt there.

SALT MONOPOLY.—It was commonly reported, that the monopoly of salt would be given up by Government. It is now stated, on good authority, that Government have offered to increase the amount of their usual contract with the Mullungees of the Twenty-four Pargunnahs Agency, during the ensuing season. From three lacs of maunds, they intend augmenting it to eight lacs. This piece of intelligence will, no doubt, be gratifying to dealers in salt. The panic that struck the poor Mullengees, and the Sajoornahs of Jes-ore, the last year, appears now to have subsided. To each kalaree, which is expected to yield one hundred maunds of salt, five Mullengees are attached; so by this calculation the increase will give employment to no less than twenty-five thousand men.

MEDICAL COLLIER.—In consequence of Dr. W. B. O'Shaughnessy's having been engaged in the investigating the affair of the alleged attempt to fire the Arsenal of Fort William, one of the native students at the Medical College, Seebchunder Kormokar, undertook, as a day's warning, to continue the course of lectures on Chemistry, which the Professor had begun, and which was interrupted by his occupation in the Fort.

The young man, with the sanction of the College Council, entered upon his arduous undertaking the very day after it had been proposed to him, and has already delivered several lectures, in a manner that has astonished and delighted all who have attended their delivery. He speaks with great fluency, in good language, availing himself little of notes, and his experiments are described as judiciously selected and well executed. This is a fact in the history of education in India, which cannot fail to make a deep impression on every reflecting mind. It is the first result of the education given at the Medical College that practically illustrates its value as a means of providing effectual native agency, for the instruction of the people at large.

GREAT JAIL.—We feel glad to intimate, that the Jail is in almost a deserted state now; the inmates on the second floor of the building are only ten in number, and those on the third floor seven. There are very few on the crown side. The inmates invariably enjoy good health, and the sick in the hospital amount to only three, two of whom, when admitted into the jail, were labouring under complaints. There have been no deaths this season.

HOUSE OF CORRECTION.—There have been great improvements made in the House of Correction, relative to the convenience and comfort of those in duance there. The place has been considerably enlarged on the Eastern side. Twenty-four cells measuring 7½ by 4½ feet on each side, with a large hall in the middle, compose the building where the prisoners follow their usual avocation of grinding flour. Teak tables have been introduced, upon which the grinding-stones are placed. Another improvement is the introduction, by Mr. McCulloch, of leaden weights upon the stones, to give them a greater momentum.

Each cell is allotted to one prisoner, whose name, written on a ticket, is hung at the door, with the date of his admission, for what period, date of expiration, and the remarks as to his behaviour during imprisonment. These cells, though small, are properly ventilated, and white-washed every three months.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—A sad accident occurred on the river, on the night of the 19th instant. The Seetakoond Steamer, which left Calcutta on the 6th, with Mr. Moore, for a cruise at the Sand Heads, in returning with the remains of that lamented gentleman, was disabled, and the Andrew Henderson was sent down to tow her up. In conveying a hawser from the latter to the former vessel, the Seetakoond's boat was upset, and it is greatly to be feared, the entire crew, consisting of an European gunner and five lascars, have met with watery graves. Boats were lowered from both vessels, and the Andrew Henderson's fell in with the capsized one, but with none of the people. It was said, that a fishing boat had saved the gunner and two men, but from their not having returned to the Steamer up to a late hour, this report is supposed to be incorrect. The accident happened at Melancholy Point.

PERILOUS ACCIDENT.—On the 2nd instant, Captain Hindmarsh, the Post-master of Diamond Harbour, and a seaman named Glover, lost their lives by the upsetting of a boat.

It appears, that Captain Hindmarsh had gone on board the Marquis of Camden for medical aid, Mrs. Hindmarsh being unwell. As he was returning ashore with the Doctor, a squall came on, and the Doctor, who was steering, ordered the sail to be lowered. Captain H. objected to this, but the order was nevertheless obeyed. Captain H., however, again hoisted up the sail; the Doctor then refused to steer, and Captain H. went and took his place. He had not been at the helm above a minute, when the squall came on with greater violence. Instead of keeping the boat up to the wind, he kept the sail filled, and she immediately capsized. The whole of the party, consisting of Captain H., the Doctor, the man Glover, and a native, got upon the boat. They had not been many moments in this position, when Captain H. called out, that an alligator was in sight. Some precautionary measures were taken by the parties, the movement consequent on which precipitated them into the water, and the boat luckily righted, when they all got into it. Captain H. then stated, that if they remained in her, they would all be drowned, he would therefore prefer swimming ashore. He appeared determined, and was just in the act of jumping overboard, when the Doctor held him fast. Glover at this time said, "I'll swim ashore too," then jumped into the water and swam strongly, until he arrived within a short distance of the shore, when he was observed to sink.

In the mean time, Captain H. plunged into the water, in doing which he capsized the boat again. Captain H. swam towards the shore, but was scarcely twenty yards from the boat, when he was seen suddenly to turn on his back, and heard to utter a piercing shriek, after which he sunk, and was not seen to rise again. The Doctor and the native clung to the cutter of the Marquis of Camden came to their assistance, and reached them from their perilous situation. It is the doctor's belief, that Captain H. was carried off by an alligator. The bodies were found about three days after the sad occurrence—that of Glover entire, but that of Captain H. almost a skeleton, and recognised only by a ring on one of his fingers.

CONSECRATION OF BRIST'S CHURCH.—The neat little church, which has been built in Cornwallis' Square, for the use of native converts to, and enquirers after, Christianity, was consecrated on the 30th of September by the Lord Bishop and his clergy, in presence of a crowded congregation of all classes of society, but principally of Hindoos. Every seat was occupied, and numbers of people were standing in the aisles, as well as at the doors and windows.

The church is in the gothic style, with painted windows, and has a row of clustered columns on each side. The east window is of neat stained glass, and the several floors are also similarly ornamented. The altar, pulpit, reading desk, and the accommodation for the congregation, are all of teak, plain but very neat. About one half of the church is partitioned off into pews, containing not chairs as is usual in this country, but long cane-bottomed seats. The remainder of the church is unclosed, and furnished with seats similar to those in the pews.

The regular morning service was read by the Rev. Kistomohun Bannerjee. Interspersed with the usual prayers, were several, appropriate to the occasion, which were read by the Bishop himself.

After the service, an eloquent and impressive sermon was preached by the Venerable the Archdeacon.

CRACKER SHOTS.—It having come to the knowledge of the Sudder Board of Revenue, that authenticated copies of correspondence between the Board and the Local authorities on the subject of suits pending in Courts of Justice, have been filed by the party opposed to Government, as evidence in such suits, the Secretary was directed to request the Commissioners of Revenue, that they will in no case grant copies of letters of the nature referred to, without in the first instance referring to the office.

By the order of the Sudder Board, and with the sanction of Government, the following notification of the IX Rule of practice, is communicated for the guidance and observance of the Commissioners of Revenue.

RULE IX.

Should a Commissioner desire, that any case decided by the Board, be referred for the orders of Government, the Board will use their discretion, and either report the case, or decline doing so; but if the Board decline, the Commissioner will be at liberty to make the reference, taking upon himself the responsibility of an unnecessary appeal to Government.

THE MECHANICS' INSTITUTION.—The Committee of the Mechanics' Institution, have advertised for a teacher to give instruction in the Mathematical and Mechanical Sciences, &c four evenings in the week, for an hour and a half each time, and they offer him a salary of 100 rupees per month.

The members of the Calcutta Mechanic's Institution, met on the 27th Aug., and turned the reverend Mr. Atkins out of their society. They then passed a resolution, to the effect that the society approved of all the lectures that had been given ! ! ! ! The following are the resolutions.

1st.—“That the Revd. Mr. T. Atkins, not having appeared, in accordance with the request contained in Resolution the first, passed on the 23d of August, to justify his conduct, with reference to his acknowledged authorship of the letter signed Vamra, and having, by his subsequent conduct, aggravated his offence, the Committee, under this opinion, feel called upon, under Rule 30 of the Institution, to eject him from his present membership.”

2nd.—“That the lectures which have been delivered in this Institution, meet the approbation of the members and that all lectures on interesting branches of science be continued.”

3rd.—“That with reference to the proposed union of this Institution, with the Agri-Horticultural Society of India, and the Public Library, the members and friends of the Society be called upon to subscribe towards a Building Fund, but that the Committee shall be fully at liberty to appropriate such funds to the erection or purchase of a building, independent of the Institutions before named, should circumstances render it more expedient.”

4th.—“That the Committee be empowered to appoint a teacher upon a moderate salary, to instruct a class in the elements of Mechanics.”

FLOATING BRIDGE.—It is at least contemplated to construct a floating bridge across the Hooghly; and with this view the following letter has been addressed to commanders of vessels:—

To the Captains of vessels now in the port of Calcutta.

DEAR SIRS,—It being in contemplation to construct across the Hooghly, a set of steam floating-bridges, similar to those in use at Devonport and Southampton, it is of essential importance to ascertain, as near as possible, what is the greatest strength of tide with which we shall have to contend. Some experiments for this purpose are now in progress at the proposed site of the bridges; but it would be of very essential benefit to the public, if any, or all of you, especially those whose vessels lie in the stream, would aid in the good work by heaving your log occasionally during the latter part of the ebb every day, during the remainder of the present month. In this month, as you are mostly well aware, the tides are strongest, and it is of great importance to ascertain their maximum force. In a series of experiments made in 1831, the speed seldom exceeded 5 knots, and never reached 6 knots except on two occasions in violent flurries, which lasted two or three minutes each. But 1831, is said to have been a moderate season, and it is asserted that the tides frequently exceed the above rates. If therefore, gentlemen, you will kindly give me the aid of your valuable assistance, to substantiate what is the real rate of the tides, especially at the latter part of the ebb during the present month, I should esteem it a very particular favor. Should you be disposed kindly to respond to this appeal, which, in order to save time, I have ventured to make thus publicly, you will confer a further favor, by obliging me, at the office of Messrs. Cair, Tagore and Co., with the result of your several logs, as early as convenient, after the close of the present month.

I remain, dear Sirs, yours very faithfully,

Calcutta, Sept. 12, 1839.

T. J. TAYLOR.

DORJELING.—The Government have published Rules for regulating the assignment of building locations and grants of lands, in the hill tract attached to Dorjeling, to be in force from the 4th instant. Letter from the Dorjeling Company to the Government, and the Government's reply.

(A.)

H. T. PRINSEP, Esq., Secretary to Government.

Political Department.

Sir.—In a separate letter of this date, I have had the honor to address you as Chairman of the Dorjeling Committee, relative to the rules proposed for the grant and management of locations at Dorjeling.

2. The committee trust His Honor in Council will not think, on receipt of this letter, that the consideration shown towards them by those rules having been sent for their information and suggestions, had induced them to exceed due bounds with their communications.

3. The objects the Committee have in view, in now addressing Government, are, firstly, the repair and maintenance of the road from Purneah to Titalya via Khasgunge (the one the Committee believe temporarily made passable for General Oglender, but now no longer so) and the services of the convicts in the Dinagapore and Purneah jails being applied to this purpose. Secondly, the control and supervision of roads and public works beyond 15 miles from the station of Dorjeling itself, being taken out of the hands of the civil officer, and vested in the Superintending Engineer, and not partly in the one, and partly in the other.

4thly.—On the first point, the Committee would beg to remind his Honour in Council, that the steamers monthly despatched from Calcutta to the North Western Provinces, pass the spot Karagola, noted in the annexed tracing, and that from Karagola to Purneah (24 miles,) a very excellent road, which might with a very trifling expenditure of labour, be made fit for a barouche to pass, and which a member of the Committee has driven over, exists.

A good serviceable carriage road from Purneah to Titalya is, however, wanting. The Committee are given to understand by a competent professional authority, that the same would be a work of no very great difficulty or expense. Indeed the Committee are aware, from the personal knowledge of some of its members, that temporary roads can be made at a very small cost, and with wonderful rapidly and ease in the direction indicated. The judge-planter also in the neighbourhood, confirm our statements.

With reference to convicts, the Committee believe there are 1,000 convicts in the Dinagore jail actually employed in making holes in the station, made only to be filled up again, for want of any other method of employing them being recognized by Government; half that number are precisely similarly situated at Rungpore and Purneah.

The easy access to Titalya, by the route in question, for travellers, its convenience for military purposes in the same direction, and the certainty of its being so generally conducive to the welfare of both districts of Dinagore and Purneah, must be obvious to His Honor in Council on reference to the map.

Under these circumstances, the Committee would respectfully, but must earnestly entreat His Honor in Council, to make the present a special case, and allow the convicts to be employed on the construction of a road of the nature, and in the direction referred to, and to order an estimate of the probable cost of the construction with convict labor, of such a road to be made by the Engineer Department, and to sanction that estimate, and the work being executed in the ensuing cold season, if the sum does not exceed 3,000 Rs. and to authorize the expenditure of that amount on the part of Government on the condition of the Darjeeling association making up the sum the Superintending Engineer may require to complete it, if in excess of 3,000.

With reference to the second object of this address, the Committee only refer His Honor in Council to the present state of that part of the road where Colonel Lloyd forced Lieut. Gilmore, to take the line Colonel Lloyd selected, and the state of that where Lieut. Gilmore was allowed to adopt a line, unfettered by Colonel Lloyd's authority. The Executive Engineer, as road-maker and constructor of public works, we would humbly submit, should in that capacity be under the Superintending Engineer and Military Board, though as commandant of the levy, it may be deemed proper that he should be subject to other authority, and had Lieut. Gilmore not had two immediate superiors to one and the same department, the whole road would have had a much better chance of being completely opened at the present date.

I have, &c.

J. W. GRANT, Chairman of the Darjeeling Committee

Calcutta, Darjeeling Committee Office, Sept. 2.

(B.)

Extract reply.

5. In your separate letter of the 21 of September, you ask, for the aid of Government and its officers for the completion of the road from Karagola via Purneah to Titalya. It is stated by you that the first portion of the road, i. e. from Karagola to Purneah, is in good repair, requiring little new work to make it passable for wheel carriages with confidence. The continuation to Titalya is represented as not likely to be a very expensive work; indeed it is stated by the Committee that 5,000 Rs. will be sufficient for the purpose; and that if it cost more the Committee will take it upon itself.

6 Under these representations and assurances His Honor in Council will make a communication to the Deputy-Governor of Bengal, in order that the Magistrate of Purneah may be instructed to afford every facility to the preparation of the road proposed from Purneah to Titalya, employing upon it the convicts of the districts, if the means can be found of doing so with due attention to their comfort and security.

7. His Honor in Council apprehends, that the remains of a road must still be in existence, Titalya having been a cantonment fixed upon for the protection of the district, and therefore of necessity having a ready means of communication with the Sudder station, and that some of the nullahs and water-courses will, in consequence, be already bridged. The magistrate, in settling the line of this road, may consult with Lieut. Napier, the Executive Engineer at Darjeeling, but the services of Lieut. N. will not be available for its construction until the hill road be completed.

8. His Honor in Council does not apprehend that Lieut. Napier will experience any obstruction or difficulty in consequence of the relations in which he stands, to the civil officer in charge of the station of Darjeeling, and His Honor in Council would be unwilling to make any change in this respect, till inconvenience shall be experienced.

I have, &c.,

H. T. PRINCEP, Secy. to Govt.

Council Chamber, September 4, 1839.

Private accounts from Darjeeling are all highly favorable, and leave no doubt of the full success of the Committee's labors, and the realizations of the best public expectations. The new Resident, or "officer in Civil and Political charge," Dr. Campbell, is represented to be very popular—"just the man for a new settlement," and the Engineer Officer, active and "quite up to his work." Coolies are becoming abundant, and there is now no talk of "insuperable obstacles," &c. Indeed, there never existed any obstacles that might not have been speedily removed or surmounted, by a little zeal, goodwill, and cordial co-operation. All difficulties are now, rapidly vanishing, and in January or February next, one hotel on the top of the hill, and another at its foot, besides four staging bangalows, will be accessible to all those who can pay for their use.

DESTRUCTION OF A HAREM.—An interesting case, involving property to the amount of thirty lakhs of rupees, has been before the Chief Magistrate, in which Rancee Huroosondre, widow of the late Rajah Roreenauth Rai, formerly of Moorshedabad, is complainant, and her son Kissennauth Coorai is defendant.

The late Rajah Roreenauth Rai, on his death, left considerable property to his son Kissennauth Coorai, appointing the Rancee executrix and guardian, till such time as he attained the age of eighteen years. He is still a minor by three or four months, and under the will the property is still considered to be under the charge of the Rancee. On the evening of the 24th instant, the young Rajah instructed Mr. Strettell to remove twenty-one boxes from his premises, to the house of the joint executor Mr. J. C. C. Sutherland.

A Police Pike, stationed at the house, deposed almost to the same effect, and added that Mr. Strettell and others entered the premises with about fifty persons, and that when the sanctity of the zenannah was polluted, the Rancee called out "we are disgraced.—Christians have come in, and we have lost our caste." He further deposed to the removal of the twenty-one boxes.

Mr. Strettell stated, that at the request of the young Rajah he went, at half past five o'clock last Tuesday evening, in company with Mr. Lambriek, Digumber Mitre, and two Portuguese females, for the purpose of sealing property that was in the house, and which they knew to belong to the Rajah. He asked Mr. McCann to go likewise, in order to prevent any breach of the peace taking place. On his arrival at the house, he told the Rajah to desire the ladies to get out of sight. Shortly after the Rajah returned and told them, you may now enter the room where the property is. Mr.

Strettell and Digumber Mittre then went in with the Rajah. Mr. McCann stood at the threshold of the door to see that no property was taken away surreptitiously. The Rajah's servants took out the boxes, and Mr. Strettell caused them to be corded, and requested Mr. McCann to seal them. The only seal McCann had, was on the top of his pencil case, and he applied it to the boxes which were then removed on hackeries to Mr. Sutherland's house.

A Portuguese woman told Mr. Strettell, that the ladies of the house exclaimed to the Rajah, the property is yours, why then do you make this noise?"

There was no force used in the removal of the property. Mr. McCann refused to protect the property on the road. Mr. Hedger, the Rannee's Attorney, with several chowkeidars, came up to them near Mr. Sutherland's house, and endeavoured to take away some boxes from one of the carts, but they did not succeed. They said they had an order from Captain Birch to do so.

There were many arguments adduced by the Counsellors pro and con. Mr. Leith, for the prosecution, portrayed in the darkest colours the heinousness of polluting the sacred zenana, and endeavoured to bring a charge of riot against the parties. Mr. Turton, on the other hand, stated that there was no riot proved; for that the Rajah had access to every apartment in the house, and that he had removed his own property.

RANEE HURROONDREE RECHAS KISHANNATH RIE COOAR AND OTHERS.—In the depositions given by Rannee Hurroondree and Shousamohye, we omitted to mention that they were prevented from entering the Tosukhans by the two Portuguese ayahs, who shoved them about the room; and that when Rannee Hurroondree closed the door, of the room which contained the property, and stood beside it, the Coor forcibly opened the door, and it severely struck her on the head. Twenty lacs and twenty five thousand rupees in Company's papers, which were carried away with the other property, belonged personally to Rannee Shousamohye, and were left her by her late husband.

The case came on again on the 30th of September. Mr. Leith was desirous that those who aided and abetted in the affair, should be bound down, some in their own recognizances, and others to give bail. Mr. Turton objected to their being bailed. He stated that as their offence was only a civil trespass, if they were bound in their own recognizances, it would be sufficient. Mr. Turton refused to include Digumber Mittre, as no charge had been proved against him. Mr. Leith contended that the charge against him was for being one of the gang who entered the zenana, and assisted in carrying away the property, and also in aiding and abetting an assault. After some arguments urged on both sides, the depositions of two more witnesses for the prosecution were taken and the Coor was bound down in his own recognizance in the sum of 5,000 Rs. Mr. C. G. Strettell, in his own recognizance, in the sum of 3,000 Rs. Mr. J. J. McCann in his own recognizance, in the sum of 5,500 Rs. Mr. W. B. Lambick, in his own recognizance, in the sum of 600 Rs. and that of two sureties, 300 Rs. each. Digumber Mittre, in his own recognizance, in the sum of 500 Rs. and that of two sureties, 250 Rs. each; and Hunnoo Ayah, in her own recognizance, in the sum of 500 Rs. and two sureties, 250 Rs. each.

Mr. Leith wished Mr. J. C. C. Sutherland to be bound down likewise, but there was no charge proved against him.

RANEE BURSUNT COMARREE.—On the 16th instant, Mr. N. Hedger appeared in the Sudder Nizamut Adalat, on behalf of Nohra Rannee Bursunt Comarree, who had petitioned the Court against certain oppressive orders passed by the Civil and Sessions Judge of Burdwan.

This matter has been before the Court on former occasions, and the Court have had occasion to comment upon the equivocal character of some of the orders recently passed in the case by the Judge at Burdwan. It appears that Rannee Bursunt Comarree has been for some time engaged in a suit involving considerable property, against Rannee Comul Comarree and Prawn Bahoo, now pending in the Supreme Court. In January last, she caused an application to be made to the Magistrate of Burdwan and afterwards to the Judge, stating that she was kept almost in a state of close imprisonment by Prawn Bahoo and Rannee Comul Comarree, and that she daily experienced indignities and ill usage at the Rajbarree, and praying that she might be allowed personal liberty and free access to her agents and Mooktees conducting the suit in the Supreme Court. In March, Mr. Wyatt, the Judge, passed a very proper order, to the effect that the Rannee should be allowed free access to her agent's, and that unless a suitable separate residence was immediately procured for her, she should be at liberty to select any other house she pleased for her residence. The Rannee was afterwards removed from the Rajbarry to the Golahbarry; but her freedom was only nominal there. The subsequent orders passed by Mr. Wyatt, were wholly contrary to the spirit and effect of his first order, and tended to render the operation of that order utterly nugatory. Prawn Bahoo had established a large number of his armed retainers at the Golahbarry, and the personal restraint in which the Rannee was now placed, was quite as strict as before her removal from the Rajbarree. All this was not only permitted but impliedly sanctioned and approved of by the Judge's orders.

To the petition were annexed letters of Dr. G. N. Cheek, Assistant Surgeon at Burdwan, which bore testimony in the strongest terms to the reality of the indignities and sufferings to which the unfortunate lady is exposed. The letters of the Doctor, (who visited the place officially) thus speak of the place in which a Hindoo lady of rank is now immured like a convicted felon:

"I am candidly of opinion that we should be much blamable should we keep our prisoners in the state in which the Hannee is now confined." "I earnestly call upon the Magistrate (and the Judge, if necessary) to see the place of imprisonment and say whether in human probability any one could exist long in such a situation."

Mr. Baillie appeared on the 16th inst. on behalf of Prawn Bahoo, and Rannee Comul Comarree. The Court had, on a former occasion, given time to the parties to put in their statement in answer; but he had not yet received it from his clients, and he wished for further time.

Mr. Hedger deprecated any delay in the matter, and he called attention to the facts before the Court, especially the letters of Dr. Cheek. It was a matter affecting the very existence of his client.

Mr. Baillie said, it would be contrary to the practice of the Court to refuse to grant time for putting in their statement in answer.

The Judge said that he should allow the parties further time until next Saturday, when, should no statement be put in, he would certainly proceed ex parte, and pass his order on the case.

IN THE MATTER OF MOHA RANNEE BURSUNT COMARREE.—This matter, (touching which we gave in a former report some history of the most strange proceedings which have been adopted by the Judge of Burdwan) came on again this morning before Charles Tucker Esquire.

Mr. Baillie filed on behalf of Rannee Comul Comarree, the answer for which time had been given her Monday. He contended that Mr. Wyatt, the Judge of Burdwan, had acted quite legally, that he had evidently no intention of placing the younger Rannee Bursunt Comarce in custody, for he had put no police peon around her, but had merely permitted the elder Rannee's (Comal Comarce's) people to remain in attendance to watch and protect her. He said that Mr. Wyatt was not so great an ass as he had been represented! The Judge had given permission to the Rannee to reside at the Golah barres, and if being in the custody of her own relations could be called imprisonment, still it was according to the Hindoo Shastree! The elder Rannee claimed a right to have the custody of the person of the younger Rannee under the will of their deceased husband, Rajah Tezhunder Bahadoor. He (Mr. Baillie) understood that this will of Rajah Tezhunder had been considered a state-matter, and that the draft had been formally submitted in the form Sudder Judges for their approval!!

Mr. Bignell was heard in support of the position

The Judge said that he was clearly of opinion that the order of the 23rd March, and 29th August last, must be set aside as irregularly made, and illegal in themselves. The former was illegal, because it placed the Rannee under the control of her co-wife, whose rights were only equal to her own. The latter order was also illegal, and certainly calculated to create a breach of the peace, by bringing the armed retainers of each into collision. The learned Judge added, that he himself entertained no doubt about the Sudder's Jurisdiction in the case, but as some of his colleagues had entertained a different opinion, he should direct this appeal to be sent round to all the other Judges. The Rannee had a right to go wherever she pleased, and as it appeared that the Civil and Sessions Judge of Bardwan had received intimation, that the order had been appealed against before being carried into execution, it was at all events highly improper to execute it, pending the appeal, and the order, therefore, must be passed at once for its suspension. Order accordingly.

MAHA RANEE COMUL CAMARCE, Appellant, vs. MOHA RANEE BUSUNT COMARCE, Respondent, AND MOHA RANEE BUSUNT COMARCE, Appellant, vs. MOHA RANEE COMUL CAMARCE, Respondent.—These appeal cases, the particulars of which were published in the Harkura of Thursday last, came on on the 4th of October. The JUDGE (MR. RATTRAY,) on being informed that MR. TUCKER had directed the proceedings to be laid before all the Judges of the Court, said, he thought much time would be saved if the remaining Judges sat together and heard the case. There appearing, however some difficulty in ascertaining whether the other Judges would agree to this arrangement, the proceedings were then gone through.

Mr. Bignell and Mr. Baillie severally addressed the Court, and repeated their former arguments.

MR. RATTRAY said that he did not entertain a doubt respecting the jurisdiction of the Court in the matters appealed. The Regulation IX. of 1793 constituting the Court, had vested it with full power in such cases, and it was the duty of the Court to correct and check illegalities committed by any subordinate authority. As to the latter orders passed by MR. WYATT they were all clearly most irregularly made, and ought to be set aside. He would not say that the order of the 16th of March was an improper order, but the subsequent orders which placed the Rannee Busunt Comarce under restraint, were certainly illegal; the two widows had equal rights and he could not understand why the elder should be permitted to exercise any controul over the younger or prevent her from going where she pleased. The Rannee Busunt Comarce was in illegal duress, and in a place too where the Doctor certifies that he would not keep felons; she must be released and permitted to go where she pleased. He further stated, that he concurred actively in the view taken by MR. TUCKER, and in his opinion all the orders in question must be set aside as irregular and illegal. The JUDGE also possessed, the application should be made to the remaining Judges, to hear the matter together.

PROLOGUE OF A MAHARAJAH.—That celebrated individual, known as the Rajah Pertab Chund, with some half a dozen aliases, finding, probably, the public interest in his fortunes rapidly on the wane, has been doing his best to get up a sensation, and draw upon himself again the attention of the novelty loving community. The man who has asserted his claim to the title and honors of a Rajah, has subjected himself to confinement in that depository of "honest," but uproarious lars and "larcenous coolies," the Town Guard. Maharajah Pertab Chund has been bound down to keep the peace towards all the subjects of her Britannic Majesty, the lives of some of whom he has apparently, in a moment of gross inebriety, placed in jeopardy. The following are the details of the affair as deposed by Mr. McCann.

Consequent on the report of Richard Waring, Police constable, who lives next door to a house occupied by Pertab Chund, that the neighbourhood was alarmed by the dreadful screams of a female proceeding from the house of the latter, Mr. McCann proceeded to the place about 5 o'clock on the 3d instant. He found the outside door open, and sent up his name, after which he waited for about ten minutes, and receiving no answer, he went upstairs, and stood five or six minutes in the landing place. Pertab then came out, and Mr. McCann spoke to him respectfully, calling him Maharajah. Pertab looked at him for a while, and making use of abusive expressions towards him, told the servants to take Mr. McCann by the neck, and turn him out. The servants came up to him, and one of them put his hands on him. Mr. McCann cautioned the men, and told them, that he came with a message from the Police. They paid no attention, and Pertab repeated his order. He was drunk and very violent, and Mr. McCann thought proper to leave the place.

About six o'clock a report was brought down by the Sibtolah thanadar, and other police people, that a great crowd had collected at Pertab's house, and that street passengers had been forcibly taken into the house, and that as Pertab had a sword in his hand, they thought that he might murder some one. McCann lost no time in repairing to the place, leaving orders for a body of police people to follow. On getting near the house, he met Waring near the door of his own house. He then saw a man rush out from Pertab's house. He was, apparently, a stranger escaped in great alarm. The bystanders told him, that there were five persons in that house, who had been seized in the street. Before the door could be closed, McCann got in and called on the police to prevent its being shut. Seeing Pertab with a sword in his hand, he went up to him. Pertab made a thrust at him with the sword, so as to protect himself and was going to use a stick on Pertab, when one of his servants seized him (Pertab) round the waist. A burkundaz of the police seized Pertab, but his people rescued him. Pertab then ran into his house, pursued by Mr. McCann. It was dark and Pertab got into a room and was followed thereto. He was told to surrender himself, on which he seized McCann's stick and endeavoured to wrench it from him. In the mean time burkundazes came in and he was made over to them and brought to Captain Buch, who sent him to the Town Guard.

One of his servants, who was very active in aiding Pertab, was likewise apprehended by the police.

Pertab Chund, when called upon for his defence denied having committed any assault, and said that he did not bring any one into his house from the road nor flourish a sword at any one. He confessed that he had been drunk.

Thus far the case was heard in the morning, when it was postponed till four o'clock in the afternoon. At that hour, the Court was crowded with people of all classes anxious to get a peep at the far-famed Pertaub Chund. Messrs. Graham and Shah attended on behalf of the accused, who was brought from the Town Guard and placed before the Magistrate. Mr. Graham raised an objection to the conduct of Mr. McCann, who, he understood, had broken open the door of Pertaub's house. To this the magistrate replied, that according to Mr. McCann's deposition he had found the door open and merely prevented it from being shut. Mr. Graham then attempted to show that as his client had not actually assaulted any one, Mr. McCann had no right to take him into custody. In answer to this objection the Magistrate called as a witness one Ali Bux, a police official, who deposed to the following effect. Last evening, as he was sitting near Captain Birch's house, he observed people running in the direction of Bow Bazar. On inquiring what was the matter, he learnt from one Ram Tullah, a police jemadar, that there was some disturbance at the house of Pertaub Chund, who had gone mad. On proceeding thither, he saw many gentlemen and a large crowd of probably a thousand natives, collected before the house. The Rajah was in the verandah, flourishing a drawn tulwar, and crying "kill the unbelievers." On seeing Ali Bux and his comrade, he called to his attendants to bring them both before him. This appeared to be done in the way of a drunken man, between joke and earnest. Ali Bux and his friend at first refused to go, but the servants persuaded them, and they went, being partly urged along by the attendants. After talking to them in a very rough drunken way, Pertaub struck Ram Tullah with the sword, but not in a manner to hurt him. They were then allowed to make their escape, and went and informed Captain Birch of what was going on. On this Mr. McCann went to the spot, and captured the rioter, as has been previously related.

After hearing this evidence, the defendant's advisers had nothing more to advance in his defence, and could only plead in palliation, the state of drunkenness in which he was at the time.

After some conversation on the subject, the Magistrate decided that he would call upon the defendant to give security to keep the peace, himself to be bound in Rs. 1000 and three sureties, each in Rs. 500.

SUPREME COURT.

Commission of Lunacy, held in the Supreme Court House, Wednesday, 11th September, 1839.

IN THE MATTER OF BAGRAM GEORGE BAGRAM, A SUPPOSED LUNATIC.

COMMISSIONERS.

C. A. NOTT, Esq. | E. D. BARWELL, Esq.
J. F. LEITH, Esq., COUNSEL.

JURORS.

R. DAVIDSON, Esq., Foreman, | W. STORM,
H. J. LEIGHTON, | L. DE SOUZA,
J. COWIE | M. P. OWEN,
H. GUNTER, | E. OAKES,
L. A. AVISTICK, | F. BELLAIRS,
R. C. PATON, | and
JOSEPH AGAR, | C. LYALL, Esq.

Surgeon DUNCAN STEWART, — sworn and examined.

Mr. Johannes George Bagram, the elder brother of the supposed lunatic, — sworn and examined.

Verdict. — That Bagram George Bagram has been of unsound mind, and without lucid intervals, from the 1st day of July 1837 to the period of this inquisition, and is incapable of managing his own affairs; that he has lost, and other property, and that he became of unsound mind by the visitation of God. That the Lunatic's nearest relatives, are his mother and four brothers, all residing within the Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.

25TH SEPTEMBER. — Sir H. Seton sat to-day, pursuant to a mandamus from the Court of Common Pleas in England, to examine witnesses in a cause pending there as Yamuel v. Rawson. It is a case arising from the defendant agreeing to accept bills, which he has subsequently refused to do, alleging fraud and other matters on the part of the plaintiff.

There are three counts in the declaration, to which the defendant put in sixty-two pleas, six of which have been demurred to. The damages are laid at £30,000.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke examined witnesses for the defendant. The points to which the evidence was examined, were to prove the signatures to numerous letters, and to shew that goods sent to Calcutta by the plaintiff were not adapted to the Indian market, &c. The defendant was agent here to the plaintiff, and the goods were consigned to a firm carried on in Calcutta under the name of Smithson, Holdsworth and Co.

INSOLVENT COURT. — SEPTEMBER 14, 1839.

(Before Sir H. W. Seton.)

The following insolvents were discharged. Charles Frin de Cormire, Michael Schlatter, J. L. M. Beaumont, Shaik Golaun Gous and Rajnarain Day.

DIVIDENDS.

Dividends were declared on the following estates, of David Shaw, third dividend of 18 Co's Rs per 100 Sicca Rupees; of Andrew Heberlet, fourth dividend of 10 Co's Rs per 100 Sicca Rupees.

JAMES JACOB, AN INSOLVENT. — Further hearing deferred until first Court day after the beginning of next term.

IN THE ESTATE OF RAM GOVIND RAY, AN INSOLVENT. — An application on behalf of Assignee, to set aside sale of debts, due to the estate, was postponed for further hearing.

IN THE ESTATE OF JAMES CULLEN AND OTHERS. — An application for the production of the marriage settlement of Mrs. Josephine Hume and Mr. Alexander Falconer, as evidence of certain sums falling due to the above estate on the death of the above mentioned lady. Mr. Leith for the application, Mr. Turtan contra. After much discussion, and the examination of one or two witnesses, it was agreed, that a copy of the deed should be furnished by the parties holding it.

NATIVE STATES

PALLEE. — Letters from Nusseerabad announce, that the town of Pallee, in Marwar, was taken possession of on the morning of the 27th ultimo, by the Joudpore Legion, consisting of a Regiment of Infantry, one of Cavalry and two guns, under the command of Captain Maling, and the Bawar corps, under the command of Captain Dixon. No resistance was offered, although the enemy had ten guns and six or seven hundred men in the town. Mortel also fell on the same day to the 72nd and 22nd Regiments of N. I., with two squadrons of the 9th Cavalry and Light Field Battery, and Pindwarrah was about to be taken by Major Forster's Brigade. The Light Detachment from Nusseerabad, the Joudpore Legion, Bawar corps and Major Forster's Brigade, were to push on immediately on advance to Joudpore. Lutcheem Sing is reported to have fled from Joudpore.

NETAUL. — Mr. Hodson, the Nepal Resident, in a letter to a gentleman at Agra, speaks very decidedly of the hostility of the Nepalese and their determination to attack us after the Treaty is passable.

Letters from Benares also state, that the Governor-General's Agent had intercepted numerous letters tending to show the state of feeling towards us in Nepal, and to lead to the conclusion, that a campaign in that quarter is unavoidable. Mr. Hodgson also writes to his friends, in expectation of a misunderstanding with the Nepaulese, and this scrap of intelligence serves to strengthen the anticipation.

RAJPOOTANA.—The Rajpootana dāk, which, by a recent alteration, passes through this town, was on the 1st ultimo stopped, broken open, and a packet from Juepoor taken out. This robbery was committed near Bhurtpoor, and if not closely sifted, will render the dāks by this route, utterly insecure.

JOUDPORE.—A letter from camp received at Nusseerabad, on the 17th ultimo, announced the arrival of Maun Sing, with four hundred sowars, at Betelpore, about 24 miles from his capital, to make his salaam to the Agent, who it was believed, would accompany him to Joudpore as soon as joined by General Hampton. The force in advance would then be, the second brigade complete under Brigadier Rich;—the cavalry brigade (minus, one squadron left at Ajmere) with some guns and the sappers and miners. Brigadier Wild has two corps, the 30th and 39th, with a squadron of cavalry at Ajmere, leaving the 39th N. I. for cantonment duties at Nusseerabad. Brigadier Graham, C. B., was still at Ajmere, and it is said the park of artillery was not likely to go on.

THE AMEERS OF SCINDE.—The subjoined is an extract from a letter from Bombay.

"The news from Scinde, is of the most singular nature, and it is certain that the Ameers have been playing false with us in the most extravagant way. Saheb Khan, the chief of that hilly country lying between Kurachee, Soomeeancee, and Sehwan, has come into the camp of the Scinde Reserve Force, and produced a purwanna signed by the Ameers, and sent to him after Sir John Keane's Army advanced from Hyderabad towards Sehwan, directing him (Saheb Khan) to annoy the British troops in Scinde in every way, to make attacks on their camp by night, to plunder all people and stores or baggage coming into or leaving the camp, and to murder every officer and man, he or his people could find, distant from the camp. This infamous order was no doubt the cause of Capt. Haul being murdered, and Lieut. Clarke wounded severely at the same time, and there is only one opinion now in Scinde, that those three unfortunate gentlemen were murdered in Scinde in February last, by the orders of these ruthless and treacherous chieftains, when they were supposed to have been burnt by accident in a Shikargah. There have been many murders and attempts at murder in Upper Scinde likewise, and there is every reason to hope and believe that Mr. Rosa Bell, who is already so distinguished by his ferreting out the late treacherous correspondence between the Ameers and the Khilaut Chief, will also bring home these villains to the Hyderabad Princes."

CANDAHAR, AUGUST 8.—The news of the capture of Ghuznee was nearly producing a very serious disturbance here. A chief named Païndsh Khan had started a few days before to join the Shah, but being driven back by the Ghilziees, re-entered the city on the same morning as the arrival of the Convoy under the 43d Regiment N. I. Some of his followers thought proper to spread the report, that our army had been totally defeated by Dost Mahomed, and the town's people seeing the Convoy coming in, took it into their heads it was the remnant of our retreating army. On this the whole of the city was thrown into a state of commotion, and thousands of armed men turned out, and were on the point of attempting to seize the guns and attack the camp of the 37th (some had actually commenced on the commissariat go-down) when the truth transpired, that not the Shah, but Dost Mahomed was defeated. One of those most active in spreading the report, was punished by the Shah's Son, by having his nose and ears cut off and being paraded through the City on a donkey. A few days ago the grass-cutters of Captain Anderson's horse, whilst cutting grass some five miles from the City, were attacked by the inhabitants of several villages; two of them were killed, many severely beaten, and all their tattoos and grass taken away. A party was sent out next day who seized and brought in the Chief men of the village. The Shah's son sentenced the two principal men to be blown away from a gun, and six of the less eminent offenders to have their ears and noses cut off. These horrible sentences were accordingly immediately carried into effect, and the heads and mutilated carcasses are yet kicking about the street where the execution took place. We were all at first advocates for conciliation and mildness, but since the constant, cruel and cowardly murders of our camp followers, a great revolution has taken place in our opinions, and we now see the actual necessity of severe measures with such brutal savages. The accounts from Girik are not very satisfactory, from being surrounded by extensive swamps and paddy fields, the place is unhealthy, and sickness is very prevalent among both officers and men. A party of eight men of Woodburn's corps, proceeding with clothing for the regiment at Girik a short time ago, were, owing to their own carelessness, cut to pieces, and all the clothing and camels carried away. The account given by the survivors is, that they had reached their encamping ground and were busy cooking, when a party of horsemen rode up to them the Sepoys challenged them, but they replied they were mere travellers, and had come like themselves to eat their dinner. After cooking they suddenly mounted their horses, and attacked the unarmed and unsuspecting sepoy, killing five of them, and desperately wounding the others. The force now here is the 43d Regiment Native Infantry, Captain Macan's Corps, a Wing of Anderson's Cavalry, a Hussalah of the 4th Local Horse, Captain Carbet's Company of European Foot Artillery, and Anderson's troop of Horse Artillery, all under the command of Colonel Stacy. The heat still continues excessive, and there is not the slightest appearance of rain yet, but to make amends for this we are rioting in the midst of a profusion of the finest fruits I ever tasted, and they are so cheap that the humblest camp follower can afford to enjoy grapes, apricots, &c.

ATTOANI-TAN, GHUZNEE, 25TH JULY.—The body of an European was found to day, and a Bible and books with Campbell's name. His head was cut off; and as it was said, Campbell would join us here, as he would not fight against us, it is supposed the Afghans took off his head. It is reported, that the Dost is coming down upon us. The 16th Native Infantry took a pair of colours during the storm of Ghuzni, one with a Persian Inscription from the Koran, and underneath, the words "the Colours of Victory."

CANDAHAR, 23d AUGUST.—Great fears were, at one time, entertained for the safety of the force sent in pursuit of Dost Mahomed; for a swar, breathless and panting, his steed dashing the foam from his head, and his flanks reeking, galloped at full pace into the town, sweating by all he considered most holy, that he had seen the whole party attacked, and every officer killed, and even giving particulars as to what troops had been killed or wounded. The town was filled with consternation and for some days great was the suspense. This state was, however, changed, to one of delight and congratulation, when, a few days after the lying Afghan had spread his report, the force, jaded and worn out, by a fortnight's useless march, made its appearance.

Dost Mahomed, it appears, was only 40 kos in advance of his pursuers, when, from the knocked-up state of men and horses, a halt was declared. Meer Hadji Khan Kakur, who commanded the body of Afghans that accompanied the party, seems to have acted a double part, at first refusing to march by night, then conniving, it is supposed, at the desertion of the guides, thus leaving our gallant friends in a most precarious situation. In spite of the fatigue already suffered, a further pursuit was determined upon, when the Meer plainly, and perhaps with truth, told them that if they should overtake the fugitive, not a man would survive to carry the tale to Camp; for it was just as probable that his own men would join Dost Mahomed and turn upon our troops, as not. With this very pleasing prospect in view, it was decided in a council of war, that after a further halt of three days to recruit themselves, it would be more expedient to return to Camp.

The most daring robberies are nightly committed in Camp, notwithstanding the utmost vigilance on the part of the several guards and sentries. The thieves are supposed to be Pathans of this part of the country, and they are more expert in their calling, than the thieves in and about either Meerut and Kurnaul! A few nights ago, they completely gutted the tent of an Officer of the Bombay Artillery, and carried off on a camel, which they brought with them, for the purpose, his camel-trunks, to a spot a couple of hundred yards in advance of a Guard of the Royals, where the trunks were forcibly broken open and rifled of their contents! A Subaltern Officer of the Lancers, who was sleeping, in a small tent, close to his Guard, had a pair of loaded pistols taken from under his head, without having been at all disturbed!!

Doctor Harland, who is now in the City, was cruelly tortured by Dost Mahomed some time prior to the troops nearing Cabul, in the vain hope of inducing the worthy Doctor to disgorge superfluous wealth; for the Doctor had none to disgorge!

21st AUGUST.—All was sinking gradually down into tranquillity there, and the letters are filled with vivid descriptions of the beauty of the surrounding country and of the plenty therein abounding. It is described as a perfect Paradise and Sanatorium.

No farther news has been received respecting Dost Mahomed's movements, although the Natives have various reports respecting them.

Several acts of cruelty are said to have been committed by the Shah, and with the cognizance of the British authorities, and that some of the horrors and enormities, which always attend upon a siege, have not been wanting to account for the immense slaughter of 3,500 persons, though this number is perhaps an exaggeration. A look is at present thrown over whatever may have taken place.

The death of that gallant and distinguished soldier, BRIGADIER ARNOLD, Colonel of the 16th Lancers, is announced. He had been suffering greatly from a complication of internal disorders, arising from the wounds he received at the battle of Quatre Bras. He was interred in the Armenian burying ground at Cabul with military honors, and amidst the regrets of every man who was capable of appreciating his soldier-like qualities.

Shah Soojah is about to strike a medal commemorative of his own accession, and the gallant achievement by which it was assured. His Majesty also meditates the creation of an Order of Knighthood, having three degrees, the first of which will be conferred on Sir John Keane and his generals,—the second on those who will take it and the third upon those who like to have greatness thrust upon them!—All this, however, is to depend on sanction being obtained from the Sovereign Power in England.

It seems that there is enough prize money to make it worth while to nominate Prize Agents. Capt. Lawrence, of the 2d Cavalry, is named for the Bengal troops; Captain Swanton, for the Bombay division,—and Lieut. Keane to look after Sir John's share of the spoil. Many valuable horses were found at Ghuzai, and sold for the benefit of the captors.

It is rumoured on the authority of private letters from Delhi, that Sir John Keane had resigned the command of the Army of the Indus. This step is said to have been undertaken in consequence of Lord Auckland's expressed disapproval of Sir John Keane's having taken on the Bombay troops, instead of those who constituted the advanced column in the first instance.

A letter from Cabool says, that the reported popularity of Shah Soojah is incorrect, and that he can only be maintained on his throne by British bayonets.

Dost Mahomed escaped with about 2,000 men, determined to resist with him. It is said the army is to advance into Balk!

28th AUGUST.—The following General Order was issued to the troops on the 27th of August.

G. O. ARMY OF THE INDUS.

Cabul, 27th August, 1839.—Subject to the approval of the Governor-General, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct the following distribution of troops, composing the Army of the Indus:—

To remain at Cabool and its vicinity.

4th Troop 3d Brigade, Bengal Horse Artillery.
No. 6, Light Field Battery.
2d Bengal Light Cavalry.
Detachment 1st Local Horse.
H. M.'s 13th Light Infantry.
16th and 48th Bengal Native Infantry.

These troops will be under the orders of Brigadier Sale, C. B., who will receive his instructions direct from the Envoy and Minister.

To remain at Candahar.

4th Company, 2d Battalion, Bengal Artillery.
43d Bengal Native Infantry.

Under the orders of Lieut. Col. Stacy, who will also, until further orders, exercise command over the troops of H. M. Shah Soojah at Gushk and Candahar.

To remain at Shawl and to be disposed of as shall hereafter be specified 31st and 42d Bengal Native Infantry.

The following troops will be held in readiness to move towards the Bengal Provinces, on such day in October as may be hereafter directed.

2d Troop 2d Brigade, Bengal Horse Artillery.
H. M. 16th Lancers.
3d Bengal Light Cavalry.
4th Local Horse.
Sappers and Miners.
European Regiment.
35th and 37th Regts. Bengal Native Infantry.

The troops of the Bombay Presidency, under the command of Major-General Wiltshire, will be held in readiness to move on the 15th proximo, towards the provinces by such route as may be hereafter indicated.

Officers holding Staff situations in the provinces, who have been permitted to join their Regiment for the present service, and whose crops remain in Affghanistan, will return to their respective presidencies along with the troops under orders for Hindoostan.

SEPT. 20.—We have no particular news stirring. The heir apparent, Timoor Shah, and Colonel Wade, have been promising to come in for the last month. It was finally decided that they should make their appearance this morning, and parties went out to meet him, but their advent is again postponed till to-morrow. The unfortunate doomed to remain, are getting reconciled to their lot, and looking about them for the wherewithal to build some kind of habitation. No supplies for officers yet. A 2lb bottle of English Mustard, sold lately at Brigadier Arnold's (the late) sale, for 85 rupees; a dozen common Sherry rupees 150.

MORFESSIL.

NEEMUCH.—Major General Hampton, left Neemuch on the 27th, and is now at Ajmere planning the arduous campaign before him. Maun Singh is, however, said not to be making the slightest preparation to receive us, so that the gallant General will have it all his own way. The weather at Neemuch is very pleasant, and in fine order for the approaching march of the troops. Rain to the extent of 1·4 inches had fallen since the season set in.

MUSSEERABAD.—The following is an extract of a letter from Musseerabad dated 31st August. "The Artillery from Agra for the Battering Train, and the Sappers and Miners from Delhi, arrived here yesterday. The former had a very fatiguing march of it, without making one halt. They met with a great deal of rain, and, for many days, the roads were so flooded, as to be almost impassible. They also frequently found it difficult to procure supplies; and at one place, called Aia Shahur, where they were much in want of some hakeries, the people shut them all up in the ghurri or fort, and the killadar very insolently refused to let them have one. After all entreaties and remonstrances had failed, a party of gunners and kulashies, under the command of an officer, were ordered up to the fort, which stands upon a small rocky eminence, to take them by force. They quickly broke open the gate, and found inside a considerable number of hakeries and bullocks, from amongst which they selected what they required; but as they were removing them, the killadar, who had hitherto stood by aukily among some of his followers, suddenly rushed upon the officer with his tulwar. The blow he made, was fortunately parried by one of the gunners, the tulwar making a deep notch in his sword and the fellow was instantly cut down: his followers, after a little hesitation, ran away, and soon after, supplies were sent in abundance into the camp.

The Ne-much Force has not yet arrived, nor is it expected before the 3rd or 4th, so that the force will not be assembled and ready to march, until the 8th or 10th—2 troops of 9th Light Cavalry; 4 guns of the light field Battery, together with the 22nd and 52nd N. I. have been for some time at Meerut, about 20 coss from this, in the Joudpore country, and which was occupied by a very troublesome Thakoor; but they found the place deserted on their approach, and it is said that Maun Sing has carried civility so far as to order our sepoy's there to be constantly supplied with sweetmeats at his expense, indeed all accounts agree in saying, that he is leaving no means untried to cajole Government, so that he may be enabled to add some more acts to the old furce of submission in the rains, and insolence again when the warm weather comes and the wells begin to dry up. Other reports state, that he is determined to resist, if driven to the wall. The natives say, that all the fighting gentry of the country are flocking to Joudpore, where they are entertained as soon as they arrive, and other preparations secretly made for opposing us."

MORFESSIL.—A man named Sewy Sing, brother of a sepoy of the 24th Regiment, has been convicted of perjury by the Session Judge, and sentenced to five years' imprisonment, with hard labour and in irons. This fellow has been properly rewarded for his stretch of imagination in trying to save the men now in confinement and about to be tried by the Judge.

On the 22nd morning, the native portion of the community was thrown into alarm, from a jail burkundaz attempting to murder some people with his sword. It appears that this man had a cheremie, a Hindoo girl, and they had lived together for some five years. At last, about six days ago, she left the guardaman and went to her mother's house in the town. The disconsolate lover visited her repeatedly and tried to persuade her to return to his house, but all to no purpose; for he declares the mother, eldest sister and a Mohurri, prevented and persuaded her not to return. At last thinking his honor at stake, he proceeded to the house early in the morning, determined to have his desire, or to revenge himself on the supposed enemies of his happiness. On knocking at the door, about day light, he found it shut, and received a somewhat unpleasant reply from his quondam lover's mother, that she would not open the door till day light. This it seems the hot blooded man could not bear, for he ran up-stairs and attacked the Mohurri and the sister of his beloved, and wounded them very severely. The mother on hearing the scuffle, ran up stairs and received a wound or two. Fortunately for them, the sword was a very bad one, and became twisted and nearly useless, from the force with which it was applied. Had it been a good bit of steel, murder must have ensued. The man was immediately seized and brought before the Magistrate, and confessed what he had done, and seemed to regret that he has not been able to kill the mother. The Magistrate visited the wounded people and took their depositions, for fear of accidents. The offender was sent to jail.

BOMBAY:

DEATH OF APPA SAHEB.—Appa Saheb, the chief of Nipaneer, is dead. By this event his jaghete, which annually yields upwards of five lakhs of rupees, lapses to Government, as the deceased has left no male issue. Nipaneer, though one of the most favourite military Commanders of Bajee Rao, was one of the first to desert him. Appa Saheb was some years ago, convicted by the Political Agent of Bharwar of having counterfeited the birth of a son to himself, and of murdering the child's real mother. The real or pretended child died soon afterwards; but the consequence of the accusation was, that he was publicly declared by Government incapable of adopting a child at any future time.

EXTENSIVE SEA WALL AND LANDING PLACES AT MUSSEERABAD.—It is said, that Government being about to grant Luxumon Hurrichund, generally known as Bhow Russell, a contract to build an extensive sea wall and landing places at Musseerabad Bunder,—advancing to him, on loan, a lac and a half of rupees in aid of the work, and ensuring to him certain rights of impost along the same when completed,—several of the leading natives made a representation to Government against the intended contract, alleging that it would confer upon Luxumon Hurrichund a power of taxation over the poor, which would be liable to abuse, or something to this effect. This representation has, however, not been considered sufficiently well founded to prevent Government encouraging the undertaking of a great public improvement.

THE OPIUM CROP.—Advices from Rutlam, state, we learn, that the crop of Opium this season will not be less than 20,000 chests, and that there are about 6,000 of last year's crop still remaining in Malwa. The price there is Rs. 676 per chest, deliverable in Bombay.

THE SATTARAH AFFAIR.—The Governor, accompanied by Mr. Anderson, is to proceed to Sattarah, in a few days, to enquire into the Rajah's affairs. He is to be escorted by 150 irregular horse, and a body of the 4th Dragoons. It has been asserted, that the settlement of the Rajah's case had been committed to Sir Jas. Carnac, by the Home Authorities, on his departure from England.

THE REVOLUTIONARY EXPLOSION AT POONAH.—It is said, that the tremendous revolutionary explosion which lately threw the military at Poonah into such awful agitation, was brought about by an old Moonshie, a discharged sepoy, and two other poor people, whose wordly means, if all clubbed together, would scarcely suffice to compass the destruction of an old goat. And further, that the whole fuss arose from their having made use of some silly language at a bharra khana at the Artillery lines. When the cause of their imprisonment was published throughout the bazar, where they are known, it was laughed at as perfectly ridiculous.

GALLANTRY OF LIEUTENANT DANIEL OF THE INDIAN NAVY.—We observe with pleasure, the very handsome manner in which the Governor has been pleased to take notice of the gallantry evinced at the siege of Aden by Lieutenant Daniel of the Indian Navy.

The following is the General Order in which the justly-merited tribute of praise to Lieutenant Daniel is recorded.

Bombay Castle, 29th August, 1839.—No. 97 of 1839.—The Superintendent of the Indian Navy, having brought to the notice of the Honorable the Governor in Council the promotion of several Officers of Her Majesty's Naval Service, consequent on the Capture of Aden, on which occasion the conspicuous gallantry of Lieutenant Daniel, Indian Navy, Commanding the Honorable Company's Schooner, "Mahi," was particularly reported by Captain Smith of Her Majesty's Ship Volage, Commanding the Naval portion of the expedition, the Honorable the Governor in Council deems it but justice to that Officer, to mark such distinguished conduct by recommending to the Honorable Court to present him with a sword of the value of one hundred guineas, and he regrets that the graduation use of the Indian Navy, precludes him from conferring additional rank on this gallant Officer.

CEYLON.

MR. STODDART.—The Hon'ble Mr. Stoddart, second Puisne Justice of the Supreme Court of Ceylon, died on the 29th of August, of dysentery.

BURMAH.

MAULMAIN.—A few herd of cattle have come down from the Shan states. From the report made by those who brought them down, it appears that they left Dr. Richardson at Labong, about three months ago, at which period he had sent off a despatch to Maulmain, and had directed some of his men to proceed to Lagong to purchase cattle. The men who come down state, that when they left, no difficulty existed in Labong and Lagong in procuring cattle, and that considerable numbers had been purchased and would soon be brought down. At Zimmay, however, they state it was not permitted to export cattle. If what they state be true, that Dr. Richardson had sent off despatches to Maulmain some three months ago, it must be concluded that the messengers have been carried off by floods or by tigers.

Great activity is said to have been of late going on, in collecting men and arms on the other side of the river. What it is all about is not known, but in all probability the idea prevails that as the Residency has been withdrawn, we are about to commence hostilities. There can scarcely be any other object in view than defence, for the old gentlemen at Belling would never dream of attacking us with his own provincial means.

The following is an extract of a letter from

ARRACAN, 6TH SEPT.—"The Burmese are advancing and making defences as they come on; all communications of a friendly nature has ceased, and our pedlar merchants, who have crossed the Boundary to traffic as usual, have come back in fear and trembling, while orders have been issued all along the frontier, to keep back the Shan merchants, and all cattle, such as bullocks, bullocks, &c., which have till now always come across the Umadongs in great numbers, the bullocks laden—and very fine animals they were. The rains which commenced this year on the 28th April, are now breaking up, and our port, which a few days ago boasted of only three or four sail, is now crowded with shipping, all laden with Madras cloths, bullion, coconuts, and oil of the same. None have brought gram or kalai for our horses, and we are reduced to use paddy."

We copy the following important information from the Hurkaru.

Letters from Arracan state, that intelligence had been received from the out-post of Thorowah, on the Aeng route, to the effect, that the Burmese were pressing in large numbers upon our frontier, fully armed and equipped, and were constructing defences in the shape of stockades, as they approach, with guns, &c. It is therefore anticipated, that they will seize on an elevated spot on the summit of that part of the Amadong mountains, called Matzegain or Miragoin, over which lies the grand route from Aeng to Mape—or, in more generally explicit terms, the route from Arracan into the Burmese dominions; in which case it will be a matter of some little difficulty to dislodge them. The only method by which it would be achieved, would be by a movement on the Irrawaddy, and by our Rangoon force forming a position in the country to the rear, to accomplish which Shembegum must be in our possession.

RANGOON.—It is said, that the future export of gram and wheat from Rangoon, has been prohibited. This, if true, is another proof of the unfriendly disposition towards us of the Burmese King and Court.

It seems to be doubted at Rangoon whether positive orders have really been sent down to block up the river, and it is now said, that the plan has been altered into erecting stockades and batteries along all the reaches of the river, from the Elephant to the town.

Letters from Rangoon intimate, that it will be necessary to make strong warlike demonstrations, to induce the Arrawaddie to adhere to the conditions of the Treaty of Yandaboo. They add, "when he sees we are in earnest, he will strike his colours." He will of course be made to "pay the pipe" also.

PENANG.

Penang papers up to the 17th of August have been received. They state, that the remaining Malayan inhabitants of Quedah, had been carried away as captives by the Siamese to Leigore, for the purpose of being ultimately taken to Bangkok, and there sold as slaves. They were, in a most cruel manner, lashed to bamboos, in close files, and forced from Quedah. This then is the end of British interference in behalf of the Siamese—the selling of the whole of the aboriginal inhabitants into slavery!

SINGAPORE.

Singapore papers to the 1st of August, mention the death of the Sultan of Archen; the arrival of an Armenian Archbishop at Singapore, the ravages of tigers on the island, and other minor items.

MALACCA.

Malacca Registers, to the 3rd of August, have been received during the week. A number of this paper has a long article, showing up the little feeling of great men, and expatiating on the conduct of the Hon'ble H. Garling, who had declined to make use of the columns of the Register to give publicity to, by reprinting, the acts of Government, on the plea that the periodical had "lent itself as a vehicle for publications of a direct personal character," tending, in the Councillor's estimation, to the prejudice of social good feeling; to the introduction of factions, and the splitting of a small community into parties. The Editor of the Register hints, that the injudicious measures of Mr. Garling, were induced from that gentleman having been disappointed in being allowed to have the entire controul of that paper. The Resident Councillor, certainly, figures in a very unenviable position.

CHINA.

The subjoined extracts from letters from Singapore to the 17th ultimo, furnish a few further particulars of China affairs. It will be seen, that Commissioner Lin is determined to extirpate the trade in Opium at Macao as well as at Lintin, if he possibly can. The alternative offered to Foreigners to return to Canton and order their ships to Whampoa, or to "be off a-together" within five days, will be rather a puzzler.

Singapore, August 9, 1839.—The importations of Opium per Syph and other vessels, met with a ready sale at Sp. drs. 23 to 250 per chest for Benares, and there is still a demand for both Patna and Benares to execute orders for Macao. Tin continues in good request at Sp. drs. 17½ a 17¼. Rattans, Sp. drs. 2½ a 2½. Betelout Sp. drs. 2½. Pepper, Sp. drs. 500 a 6½ per picul. Exchange on England 4-10. On Calcutta 11. Freight £ 4 4 a £ 5 10 per ton.

August 17.—No alteration has taken place in our market, except a further advance of Sp. Drs. 10 to 15 per chest in Benares opium. The demand, however, is dull, and as all the outlets of the port are well supplied, the maintenance of the present rate solely depends upon the nature of our next advices from China. Private letters from Manila mention, that the Governor had refused to deliver any portion of the 3,200 chests of opium landed there, in consequence of a communication he had received from the Governor of Macao. This, however, requires confirmation.

The Ternate has just arrived, from China the 1st July. Opium was still selling in small quantities at Hong Kong at Sp. Drs. 600 to 650 per chest, but was expected to decline on the arrival of any quantity.

A riot had taken place in Canton, during which the barriers lately erected between the European and Native town, were pulled down!!

The Imperial Commissioner has issued two Edicts, one requiring all Foreigners to return to Canton, and the ships to proceed to Whampoa, within five days, or to leave altogether; and the other demanding from the Portuguese Government the surrender of a Chinese (converted to Christianity) who had been engaged in smuggling opium, failing which the Commissioner threatens at once to attack Macao with 12,000 men.

PERSIA.

From the following extracts of letters it would appear, that the British name and influence in the Gulph, are suffering deeply from the recent events.

MAHOMERA.—"Mr. Farrar, the Consul General of Syria, went to Mahomera in the Steamer Hugh Lindsay. When the coal for her use was demanded, Shaik Faris said he could not give the coal (our own coal be it remembered) without orders from a Shaik three days journey distant. An impression having been received, that steamers could not fire guns, and might be taken by the Arabs, he said he did not care if we resorted to force; but the sound of the evening gun being particularly loud, he thought it prudent to give in, and the coal was sent in the morning. A person of more than usual ability was deputed to ascertain if the Lindsay could really fire guns, and Mr. Campbell took great pains to send him away satisfied on this point. He said we had been beaten off from Bushire, our army at Candahar had been cut to pieces, Mahomed Ali had driven us out of Egypt and taken all the Arabian Coast, and they wondered we had courage to ask for the coal. Here we see British influence undiminished in the Gulph! pacific disposition in the people and pleasing prospects of uninterrupted tranquility; for the people are convinced we shall never resent an insult in time to come. Ill treating Colonel Woodfall, and pelting the Resident's son off his horse in the streets of Bagdad, are said in no way to interfere with harmony there.

Koorschid Pasha is in possession of the Arabian Coast, and notwithstanding all the expence of the expedition, up to 1820, and of the Navy and Residency since, and our treaty by Sir William Keir, the Shaiks have been abandoned, and all connection with them has been forgotten. Koorschid Pasha said, he wished them to pay him tribute, and turn their arms against any one he felt disposed, and though this was kindly published by the Pasha a year ago, we forgot they were independent, and no steps were taken to stop him, till his troops were at Cateef, Shirga and other places. We expect a brush with the Pasha in autumn.

KARAKA 23d JULY.—"The last accounts from the northern parts of Persia, state that the King of Kings was as obstinate as a mule; indeed he appears to have much of that animal's nature in him, and the business at Bushire was considered by Colonel Shiel, the "Charge d'affaires," of such importance, as to be beyond his recognizance, but must be settled by the Government. In the mean time the country is going to ruin, overrun with robbers and rebels. About three weeks since, the Commandant of the Prince Vice Roy of Fars, took away the daughter of one of the townsmen. The father applied to the Shaik Islam, who demanded the girl of the Prince and Vizier. They refused, and offered two hundred tomans to the father, who, with the Shaik Islam, called up the Shirazees, (the veriest cowards in the world) They assembled and drove the Prince Vizier, and all the regular troops out of the city, and will not allow them to return. The Vizier has been obliged to go off to Court, and unless the Prince sends off his troops, it is doubtful if he will get in again. The whole of the country on this side of Shiraz, is in a disturbed state. At Bushire, the new Governor is very quiet, as far as we are concerned, but is collecting a little among the merchants according to the approved Persian custom. "May his shadow never be less," and may he fleece them well, for they do must richly deserve it. It is a great pity a number of their brethren in Bombay are not with them. A little of the "Fellack" would be an improvement; in Bushire there is the vessel of War Clive,—the nondescript Emily,—Ganges, Fat Rowhani, Lord Elphinstone, and Nasser Khan Merchant Ships. The John Adams at Bussorah, the Tigress with the Commodore's "Pet," Dee gun boat here. The Hugh Lindsay, on her last trip down, took the Resident round to Bahrein and the Pirate Ports. The visit was not too early paid. Koorschid Pasha, as you know, has caused the chiefs of Bahrein to acknowledge Mahomed Ali, and pay 6,000 dollars annual tribute. Six months ago, all this might have been stopped, and the tribute paid to us for the name of our protection. Scijed bin Nutbuch is among the tribes, with six hundred men, and trying to establish Koorschid's authority. A partial but a doubtful stop, has been put to him on the coast, but the policy of Kuickerbucker's doubting Governor, seems to be the rage in these parts; "doubt what is to be done when you should do it."

By the following extracts of a letter, received from Karack by the Hugh Lindsay, it will be perceived that the internal state of Persia is such as to give Mahomed Shah little leisure for making a demonstration towards Herat, though another paragraph, on the exportation of horses, indicates the probability of his being by no means destitute of the will to annoy us. The heat at Karack is described as having produced dreadful effect on the Europeans, though the temperature was lower, and sickness had abated prior to the departure of the Steamer. The death of the Sultan is incidentally alluded to, as a well known fact, and communications received from other sources, tend to confirm the previous intelligence.

"Mahomed Shaw was still at Teheran, and likely to remain there till the termination of the hot weather, when it was expected he would be obliged to move down towards Isfahan and Shiraz, as that part of his dominions, especially Shiraz, was in such an unsettled state as apparently to require his immediate presence to bring matters to a peaceful conclusion. At Bushire the report was current that the King had prohibited any horses being sent to India this season, but how far this will ultimately prove correct, seems as yet doubtful, as a similar report prevailed last year, when horses, it was well known, were shipped to a great extent for Bombay. The heat of the Gulf this season has been so unusually great, that hundreds of the Natives have died from its influence. At Karrack it was so dreadful to endure and its effects such during the first week of August, that no less than twelve strong Europeans were almost instantaneously deprived of existence. The temperature of the climate had, however, moderated before the Steamer left, and the sickness diminished; but cholera still prevailed to a considerable extent along the Arabian and part of the Persian coast."

From Bagdad no important intelligence had been received since the death of the Sultan was announced; but the English packets transmitted this season by that route, are likely to give great satisfaction, as they had hitherto arrived at Beyrout in excellent time for the Steamer.

At Muscat the Imam was expected from Zanzibar in less than a month, and his son was fitting out one of his ships, when the Steamer left to go down and meet his father off Rasellhead."

An extract from another letter gives some interesting particulars relative to the movements of the Egyptian army, and the future intentions of the Pasha.

"You will have heard that the Sultan's army under Hafiz Pasha has been completely destroyed by Ibrahim, the whole Camp with 140 pieces of artillery, ammunition, provisions, 20,000 stand of arms, 7,000 prisoners, and innumerable deserters taken by the Egyptians. Hafiz fled to Malatie. Ibrahim himself is at Morah; he has four regiments, some guns, and a large force of irregular Cavalry at Orfa. He has now orders from Mahomed Ali to stop where he is, otherwise he intended to go on to Koniah. The Sultan is not expected to live any time. He is in a consumption and dropsy brought on by hard drinking.

By the bye, when I was down at Mahomarah, one of the Sheikhs there, told me that Kershed Pasha was principally supplied from them, with grain, conveyed to him by Bahrein and Catiff boats, and he at one time had an agent there.

I hear that the Russians appeared at Stamboul, with a fleet and army to act as protectors and dictators, and that Mahomed Ali will seize the Pachalic of Bagdad, if not prevented by us; so that from all appearance the Turkish Empire is in a bad way."

The following letter, dated Kurrack 22d August, speaks in the most positive terms of the death of the Sultan.

"I have just time to say Sultan Mahmoud is dead, and his son Abdul Majid Khan has succeeded him. Ibrahim Pasha is at Orfa and expected at Diarbeker, when Bagdad will be cut off. Koorahid Pasha is expected to be moving in Bussorah. Mahomed Shah is reported dead also; but this is not very authentic.

EGYPT.

JULY 6.—We closed our last by informing you of the telegraphic dispatch, just then received, announcing the total defeat of the Turkish army in Syria by the Egyptians, and we also promised, when its detailed account reached us, you should be informed of the particulars. They are as follow. On the 20th June, Ibrahim Pasha, commanding Mehemet Ali's army in Syria, left Aleppo, with his cavalry and horse artillery, to give battle to the Turkish cavalry, which were advanced in two divisions from Nizib, were the main army of the Sultan, under Hafiz Pasha, was encamped. The first division of this Turkish cavalry was about 13 miles in advance of Nezib towards Aleppo, the other division was still 12 miles nearer to Aleppo. Ibrahim Pasha fell in with this last and attacked it, on which they fled back towards the other division (12 miles as before stated) at Nezib, at a village called Negar.

Ibrahim Pasha came up with and attacked both divisions, and after a fight of an hour and a half, he totally routed them. They retreated to Nezib, leaving behind them 14 pieces of light artillery. Ibrahim Pasha halted here for two days, by which time the whole of his army from Aleppo and elsewhere joined him. On the 24th the whole body marched and took up their position within a mile of the Sultan's army. Preparations being then made a general battle began between both; but after two hours and a half the Turkish army was totally defeated, and many thousands threw down their arms and fled. The Turks left behind every thing. 100 pieces of cannon, 600 tents, 15,000 prisoners, and all their provisions remain in the possession of the Egyptians. The remains of the Turkish army retreated towards Marash next day, 25th. The Egyptian army was divided into 3 divisions,—the first division to march to and take possession of Orfa; the 2nd and 3rd to do the same respectively at Debauekir and Malathia. However, by the time, or before they had done so, the Pasha's order, through Soult's Aide-de-Camp, must have reached, desiring a suspension of hostilities.

The loss of the Turkish killed and wounded in the battle of the 24th, is stated at 7,000 men; that of the Egyptians 3,500.

JULY 7.—H. M. S. Rhadamanthus, arrived in Alexandria this day, reporting she had left the English Admiral two days ago with his fleet, off Candia. At sun set, a sailing vessel arrived in six days from Constantinople, to announce the death of Sultan Mahmoud. This vessel was despatched by the private agent of the Pasha.

9TH.—This day, a Turkish steamer entered the Port from Constantinople, being sent by the young Sultan, to announce the death of his father and his own accession; at the same time, tendering offers of peace and amity, to Mahomed Ali, and offering to guarantee him instant independence in Egypt. A Turkish corvette also came in here, with important despatches from the Captain Pasha, tendering the whole fleet under him to Mehemet Ali. We believe the same was accepted, as the Nile steamer left an hour afterwards with the return despatch. It appears, that Hourrouf Pasha, Prime Minister of the young Sultan, is at enmity with the Captain Pasha, and that this alone has prompted him to such an act of treachery.

14TH.—The whole Turkish fleet approached in the sight of Alexandria.

15TH.—The Egyptian and Turkish fleets saluted each other; and the Captain Pasha landed at this place, and was received with all honor and distinction, by Mehemet Ali, and is now residing as a guest of Mehemet Ali in one of his palaces here.

Thus between the 25th of June and 15th of July, in twenty days, the Turkish army has been totally routed in Syria. Sultan Mahmoud has paid the debt of nature, and the fleet of Turkey is now cruising peaceably off Alexandria, in company with that of Egypt. Verily, the star of Mehemet Ali is in the ascendant. We are anxiously awaiting to see what will be done, at this crisis by the Great Powers, in consequence of such ominous events between Egypt and Turkey.

25TH.—A French steamer arrived at Alexandria this day, with intelligence from England up to 5th July, but nothing of importance except in Parliamentary matter.

26TH.—For the last five or six days, the Turkish Fleet has been gradually coming in to Alexandria, and the land and sea forces have been busied in taking out their guns, &c., preparatory to coming in also. By the 28th they will be in ordinary at Alexandria.

29TH.—The English Steamer is looked for this day, therefore we close the present. If any thing of moment transpires we will add a post-script.

P. S. Another despatch, just arrived from Syria, states, that the remains of Hafiz Pasha's army, in its retreat from the late battle at Nezib, before alluded to, was fallen upon by the Kurds, in the most intricate places of their retreat, and slaughtered.—Hafiz, the General, escaping with only a small part of the whole army; the sacrifice of life, therefore, has been immense. Ibrahim Pasha at this last despatch, was encamped at Marash.

ARMY OF THE INDUS.

Ghaznie, the strong hold of Afghanistan, which was deemed impregnable, has fallen. Dost Mahomed's son has been taken prisoner, but his life has been granted him by Shah Shoojah. The total amount of killed on the part of the invading army, is seventeen, and the wounded one hundred and eighty-two. The following is the official account of the affair, and Sir John Keane's rather bombastic statement of the details.

POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, FORT WILLIAM, AUG. 29, 1839

The President in Council has much satisfaction in publishing the following Order by the Right Honorable the Governor General, with the copy of the Despatch of His Excellency Lt.-General Sir John Keane, K. C. B. referred to therein, reporting the capture of Ghuznie by storm on the 24th July.

H. T. PRINCEP, Secy.

NOTIFICATION, SECRET DEPARTMENT, SIMLA,
THE 18TH AUGUST, 1839.

The Right Honorable the Governor-General of India has great gratification, in publishing for general information, a copy of a Report this day received from His Excellency Lieutenant-General Sir John Keane, K. C. B., Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the Indus, announcing the capture, by Storm, on the 24th ultimo, of the important fortress of Ghuzni.

A salute of 21 guns will be fired on the receipt of this intelligence at all the principal Stations of the Army in the three Presidencies.

By Order of the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General of India, Head Quarters, Camp Ghuznee, 24th July, 1839.

MY LORD,—I have the satisfaction to acquaint your Lordship, that the Army under my Command, have succeeded in performing one of the most brilliant acts, it has ever been my lot to witness, during my service of 45 years in the four quarters of the globe, in the capture by storm of the strong and important fortress and citadel of Ghuznee, yesterday.

It is not only, that the Afghan Nation, and, I understand Asia generally, have looked upon it as impregnable, but it is in reality a place of great strength, both by nature and art; and in relation to the roads to suppose, from any description that I had received of it, although some were from officers in our own service, who had seen it in their travels.

I was surprised to find a high rampart in good repair, built on a steep mound about 35 feet high, flanked by numerous towers, and surrounded by a Fausse Braye, and a wet ditch, whilst the height of the Citadel covered the interior from the commanding fire from the Hills on the north, rendering it nugatory. In addition to this, the walls had been built before the Gates, the ditch was filled with water, and unfordable, and an out-work built on the right bank of the River, so as to command the bed of it.

It is, therefore, the more honorable to the Troops, and must appear to the enemy out of all calculation extraordinary, that a Fortress and Citadel to the strength of which, for the last 30 years, they had been adding something each year, and which had a Garrison of 3,500 Afghan Soldiers, Commanded by Prince Mahomed Hyder, the son of Dost Mahomed Khan, the Ruler of the Country, with a commanding number of guns, and abundance of Ammunition, and other Stores, Provisions, &c. for a regular Siege, should have been taken by British science and British valor, in less than two hours from the time the attack was made, and the whole, including the Governor and Garrison, should fall into our hands.

My despatch of the 20th instant from Nanee, will have made known to your Lordship, that the Camps of His Majesty Shah Shoojah-ool-Muolk, and of Major General Wiltshire, with the Bombay Troops, had there joined me in accordance with my desire, and the following morning we made our march of 12 miles to Ghuznee, the line of march being over a fine plain, the Troops were disposed in a manner that would have enabled me at any moment, had we been attacked, as was probable from the large bodies of Troops moving on each side of us, to have placed them in position to receive the enemy. They did not however appear, but on our coming within range of the Guns of the Citadel and Fortress of Ghuznee, a sharp Cannonade was opened on our leading Column, together with a heavy fire of Musquetry from behind garden walls, and temporary field-work thrown up as well as the strong out-work I have already alluded to, which commanded the bed of the River. From all but the out-work, the enemy were driven in, under the walls of the Fort, in a spirited manner, by parties thrown forward by Major General Sir W. Cotton, of the 16th and 48th Bengal Native Infantry, and her Majesty's 13th Light Infantry under Brigadier Sale. I ordered forwards three Troops of Horse Artillery, the Camel Battery and one Foot Battery, to open upon the Citadel and Fortress, by throwing Shrapnell shells, which was done in a masterly style, under the direction of Brigadier Stevenson. My object in this was to make the enemy show their strength in Guns and in other respects, which completely succeeded, and our shells must have done great execution and occasioned great consternation, being perfectly satisfied on the point of their strength in the course of half an hour I ordered the fire to cease, and placed the Troops in Bivouac. A close reconnaissance of the place all round, was then undertaken by Captain Thomson, the Chief Engineer, and Captain Peat, of the Bombay Engineers, accompanied by Major Gaiden, the Deputy Quarter Master General of the Bengal Army, supported by a strong party of her Majesty's 10th Lancers, and one from her Majesty's 13th Light Infantry. On this party a steady fire was kept up and some casualties occurred. Captain Thomson's report was very clear, (he found the Fortification equally strong all round) and as my own opinion coincided with his, I did not hesitate a moment as to the manner in which our approach and attack upon the place should be made. Notwithstanding the watch, the Troops had performed in the morning, and their having been a considerable time engaged with the enemy, I ordered the whole to move across the River, which runs close under the Fort walls, in Columns to the right and left of the Town, and they were placed in position on the North side, on more commanding ground and securing the Cabool Road. I had information that a night attack upon the Camp was intended from without. Mahomed Ubzul Khan, the eldest son of Dost Mahomad Khan, had been sent by his Father with a strong body of Troops from Cabool to his Brother's assistance at Ghuznee, and was encamped outside the walls, but abandoned his position on our approach, keeping however at the distance of a few miles from us. The two Rebel Chiefs of the Ghilzee Tribe, men of great influence, viz. Abdool Kullman and Goolahomed Khan, had joined him with 1500 horse, and also a body of about 3,000 Ghazurs from Zimat, under a mixture of Chiefs and Monlaks carrying banners, and who had been assembled on the cry of a Religious war. In short, we were in all directions surrounded by enemies. These last actually came down the Hills on the 22d, and attacked the part of the Camp occupied by His Majesty Shah Shooja, and his own troops, but were driven back with considerable loss and their banners taken.

At day-light on the 22d, I reconnoitered Ghuznee, in company with the Chief Engineer and the Brigadier Commanding the Artillery, with the Adjutant and Quarter Master General of the Bengal Army, for the purpose of making all arrangements for carrying the place by Storm, and these were completed in the course of the day—instead of the tedious process of breaching, for which we were ill prepared, Captain Thomson undertook, with the assistance of Captain Peat of the Bombay Engineers, Lieutenants Durriads and McLeod of the Bengal Engineers, and other officers under him, (Captain Thomson) to blow in the Cabool Gate, (the weakest point) with Gunpowder, and so much faith did I place in the success of this operation, that my plans for the Assault were immediately laid down and the orders given.

The different troops of Horse Artillery, the Camel and Foot Batteries, moved off their ground at 12 o'clock that night, without the slightest noise, as had been directed, and in the most correct manner took up the position assigned them about 250 yards from the walls in like manner, and with the same silence, the Infantry soon after moved from their ground, and all were at their post at the proper time. A few minutes before 3 o'clock in the morning, the explosion took place and proved completely successful—Captain Peat of the Bombay Engineers was thrown down and stunned by it, but shortly after recovered his senses and feeling. On hearing the advance sounded by the Bugle (being the signal for the Gate having been blown in) the Artillery, under the able directions of Brigadier Stevenson, consisting of Capt. Grant's Troop of Bengal Horse Artillery, the Camel Battery under Captain Abbott, both superintended by Major Pew, Captains Martin and Colgrave's Troops of Bombay Horse Artillery, and Captain Lloyd's Battery of Bombay Foot Artillery, all opened a terrific fire upon the Citadel and Ramparts of the Fort, and in a certain degree paralyzed the enemy.

Under the guidance of Captain Thomson, of the Bengal Engineers, the Chief of the Department, Colonel Dennie, of Her Majesty's 13th Light Infantry, Commanding the Advance, consisting of the Light Companies of Her Majesty's 2d and 17th Foot, and of the Bengal European Regiment, with one Company of Her Majesty's 13th Light Infantry, proceeded to the Gate, and, with great difficulty from the rubbish thrown down, and the determined opposition offered by the enemy, effected an entrance and established themselves within the Gateway. Closely followed by the India Column led in a spirit of great gallantry by Brigadier Sale, to whom I had entrusted the important post of commanding the Storming Party, consisting (with the advance above mentioned) of Her Majesty's 2d Foot under Major Carruthers, the Bengal European Regiment under Lieutenant Colonel Orchard, followed by Her Majesty's 13th Light Infantry under Major Trenson, and Her Majesty's 17th Regiment under Lieutenant Colonel Croker. The struggle within the Fort was desperate for a considerable time. In addition to the heavy fire kept up, our Troops were assailed by the enemy sword in hand, and with daggers, pistols &c., but British courage, perseverance and fortitude overcame all opposition, and the fire of the enemy in the lower area of the Fort being nearly silenced, Brigadier Sale turned towards the Citadel, from which could now be seen our abandoning the Guns, running in all directions, throwing themselves down from immense heights, endeavoring to make their escape, and on reaching the gate with Her Majesty's 17th under Lieutenant Colonel Croker, followed by the 13th, forced it open; at 5 o'clock in the morning the Colors of Her Majesty's 13th and 17th were placed on the Citadel of Ghuznee amidst the cheers of all ranks. Instant protection was granted to the women found in the Citadel, (among whom were those of Mohamed Hyder, the Governor,) and sentries placed over the Magazine for its security—Brigadier Sale reports having received much assistance from Captain Kershaw of Her Majesty's 13th Light Infantry throughout the whole of the service of the Storming.

Major General Sir Willoughby Cotton executed in a manner much to my satisfaction, the orders he had received. The Major General followed closely the Assaulting Party into the Fort with the Reserve, namely, Brigadier Roberts, with the only available Regiment of his Brigade, the 35th Native Infantry under Lieutenant Colonel Monteath, part of Brigadier Sale's Brigade, the 16th Native Infantry, under Major MacLaren, and 48th Native Infantry, under Lieutenant Colonel Wheeler, and they immediately occupied the Ramparts, putting down opposition whenever they met any, and making Prisoners until the place was completely in our possession. A desultory fire was kept up in the Town, long after the Citadel was in our hands, from those who had taken shelter in houses, and in desperation kept firing on all that approached them. In this way several of our men were wounded and some killed, but the aggressors paid dearly for their bad conduct in not surrendering when the place was completely ours. I must not omit to mention that three Companies of the 35th Native Infantry under Captain Hay, ordered to the South side of the Fort to begin with a fake attack, to attract attention to that side, performed that Service at the proper time, and greatly to my satisfaction.

As we were threatened with an attack, for the relief of the Garrison, I ordered the 19th Bombay Native Infantry, under the Command of Lieutenant Colonel Stalker, to guard the Cabool Road, and to be in support to the Cavalry division. This might have proved an important position to occupy, but, as it was, no enemy appeared.

The Cavalry Division under Major General Thackerell, in addition to watching the approach of an enemy, had directions to surround Ghuznee, and to sweep the plain, preventing the escape of runaways from the Garrison. Brigadier Arncliffe's Brigade (the Brigadier himself I deeply regret to say, was laboring under very severe illness, having shortly before burst a blood vessel internally, which rendered it wholly impossible for him to mount a horse that day,) consisting of Her Majesty's 16th Lancers under Lieutenant Colonel Perce (momentarily Commanding the Brigade) and Major MacDowell, the Junior Major of the Regiment, the Senior Major of the 16th Lancers Major Cusston, an Officer of great merit, being actively engaged in the execution of his duties as Assistant Adjutant General to the Cavalry Division, the 2d Cavalry under Major Walter, and the 5d under Lieutenant Colonel Smyth, were ordered to watch the South and West sides. Brigadier Scott's Brigade were placed on the Cabool Road, consisting of Her Majesty's 4th Light Dragoons under Major Daly, and of the 1st Bombay Cavalry under Lieutenant Colonel Sandwith, to watch the North and East sides. This duty was performed in a manner greatly to my satisfaction.

After the Storming, and that quiet was in some degree restored within, I conducted His Majesty Shah Shooja Ool Moolk, and the British Envoy and Minister, Mr. Macnaghten round the Citadel, and a great part of the Fortress. The King was perfectly astonished at our having made ourselves masters of a place, conceived to be impregnable when defended, in the short space of two hours, and in less than 48 hours after we came before it. His Majesty was of course greatly delighted at the result. When I afterwards, in the course of the day, took Mahomed Hyder Khan the Governor, first to the British Minister, and then to the King to make his submission, I informed His Majesty, that I had made a promise that his life should not be touched, and the King in very handsome terms assented, and informed Mahomed Hyder in my presence, that although he and his family had been Rebels, yet he was willing to forget and forgive all.

Prince Mahomed Hyder, the Governor of Ghuznee, is a Prisoner of War in my Camp, and under the surveillance of Sir Alexander Burnes, an arrangement very agreeable to the former.

From Major General Sir Willoughby Cotton, Commanding the 1st Infantry Division (of the Bengal Army) I have invariably received the strongest support, and on the occasion his exertions were manifest, in support of the honor of the profession, and of our country.

I have likewise at all times received able assistance from Major General Wiltshire, Commanding the 2d Infantry Division (of the Bombay Army), which it was found expedient on that day to break up, some for the storming party, and some for other duties, the Major General as directed, was in attendance upon myself.

To Brigadier Sale, I feel deeply indebted for the gallant and soldierlike manner in which he conducted the responsible and arduous duty entrusted to him in command of the Storming Party, and for the arrangements he made in the Citadel, immediately after taking possession of it, the Sabre wound which he received in the face, did not prevent his continuing to direct his Column, until every thing was secure; and I am happy in the opportunity of bringing to your Lordship's notice the excellent conduct of Brigadier Sale on this occasion.

Brigadier Stevenson, in Command of the Artillery, was all I could wish, and he reports that Brigade Majors Backhouse and Caghan ably assisted him; his arrangements were good, and the execution done by the Arm he commands, was such as cannot be forgotten by those of the enemy, who have witnessed and survived it.

To Brigadier Leberis, to Colonel Dennie (who commanded the advance) and to the different Officers commanding Regiments already mentioned, as well to the other Officers and gallant Soldiers under them, who so nobly maintained the honor and reputation of our country, my best acknowledgments are due.

To Captain Thomson of the Bengal Engineers, the chief of the Department with me, much of the credit of the success of this brilliant Coup de main is due—a place of the same strength, and by such simple means as this highly talented and scientific Officer recommended to be tried, has perhaps never before been taken, and I feel I cannot do sufficient justice to Captain Thomson's merits for his conduct throughout. In the execution, he was ably supported by the Officers already mentioned, and so eager were the officers of the Engineers of both Presidencies, for the honor of carrying the Powder Bags, that the point could only be decided by seniority, which shows the fine feeling by which they are animated.

I must now inform your Lordship, that since I joined the Bengal Column in the Valley of Shawl, I have continued my march with it in the Advance, and it has been my good fortune to have had the assistance of two most efficient Staff Officers, in Major Graigie, Deputy Adjutant General, and Major Garden, Deputy Quarter Master General. It is but justice to those Officers, that I should state to your Lordship, the high satisfaction I have derived from the manner in which all their duties have been performed up to this day, and that I look upon them as promising Officers, to fill the higher ranks. To the other Officers of both Departments I am also much indebted for the correct performance of all duties appertaining to their situations.

To Major Keith, the Deputy Adjutant General, and Major Campbell, the Deputy Quarter Master General, of the Bombay Army, and to all the other Officers of both Departments, under them, my acknowledgments are also due, for the manner in which their duties have been performed during this campaign.

Captain Alexander, Commanding the 4th Bengal Local Horse, and Major Cunningham, Commanding the Poona Auxiliary Horse, with the men under their orders, have been of essential service to the Army in this Campaign.

The arrangements made by Superintending Surgeons, Kennedy and Atkinson previous to the storming, for affording assistance and comfort to the wounded, met with my approval.

Major Parsons, the Deputy Commissary General in charge of the Department in the Field, has been unremitting in his attention to keep the Troops, supplied, although much difficulty is experienced, and he is occasionally thwarted by the nature of the country and its inhabitants.

I have throughout this Service, received the utmost assistance I could desire from Lieutenant-Colonel Macdonald, my Officiating Military Secretary, and Deputy-Adjutant-General of Her Majesty's Forces, Bombay, from Captain Powell, my Persian Interpreter, and the other Officers of my Personal Staff. The nature of the country in which we are serving, prevents the possibility of my sending a single Staff Officer to deliver this to your Lordship, otherwise I should have asked my Aid-de-Camp, Lieutenant Keane, to proceed to Simla to deliver this Dispatch into your hands, and to have afforded any further information that your Lordship could have desired.

The brilliant triumph we have obtained, the cool courage displayed, and the gallant bearing of the Troops I have the honor to Command, will have taught each a lesson to our enemies in the Afghan Nation, as will make them hereafter respect the name of a British Soldier.

Our loss is wonderfully small, considering the occasion; the Casualties in killed and wounded, amount to about 200.

The loss of the enemy is immense—we have already buried of their dead nearly 200, together with an immense number of horses.

I enclose a list of the killed, wounded and missing; I am happy to say, that although the wounds of some of the Officers are severe, they are all doing well.

It is my intention, after selecting a Garrison for this place, and establishing a General Hospital, to continue my march to Cabool forthwith.

I have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN KEANE.

A rumour is afloat, that a letter has been received by Lord Auckland, from Nader Raja Kurruck Singh, of Lahore, stating that Cabool had surrendered without a blow, and that Dost Mahomed was off to the mountains, perhaps to "hide his tune." A brigade of Infantry, with a European Regiment, and a troop of European Horse Artillery, were to remain at Cabool, and the Shah's Army of course. The Bombay troops, with Sir John Keane, were to return, as they came, to lower Scinde and Bama bay; perhaps also to settle accounts en passant, with the Belloochee chief of Khat, and with the amiable Ameer of Hyderabad.

The Shah arrived on August 3d at Kila Cusee, 5 coss from Cabool, and was to enter the city on the 5th.

Dost Mahomed is stated to have fled towards Bamian; with only four pieces of Artillery and 6 or 700 of his immediate followers, leaving the rest of his guns and heavy stores behind him.

The Kuzzilbashies of Cabool had refused him their assistance, and declared their adherence to the Shah.

Cabool, the Capital of Afghanistan, has fallen, and Dost Mahomed is an exile. The greatest portion of the troops, &c. of the ex-king, abandoned him and came over to Shah Soojah, who ascended the throne on the 7th of August. Cabool having surrendered the day previously. The following is the official account:

Fort William, 6th September 1839.—Political Department.—The Honorable the President in Council, has much satisfaction in publishing, for information, the following official papers received by Express from the Head Quarters of the Right Honorable the Governor-General, announcing the desertion of Dost Mahomed Khan by his Army on the 3rd of August, and the possession obtained in consequence of all his Guns, the subsequent advance of the Army under his Excellency Sir J. Keane to Cabool, which City was entered in triumph by His Majesty Shah Shooja-ool-Moolk on the 7th ultimo.

A Royal Salute will be fired from the Ramparts of Fort William, in honor of this important event; and a feu de joie will be fired in the afternoon upon the occasion of the intelligence being communicated to the troops in garrison.

By Order of the Hon'ble the President in Council.

H. T. PRINSEP,

Secy. to the Govt. of India.

Secret Department, Simla, the 26th August, 1839.

—The Governor General of India publishes for general information, the subjoined copy and extracts of the patches from His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the Indus, and from the Envoy and Minister at the Court of His Majesty Shah Shooja-ool-Moolk, announcing the triumphant entry of the Shah into Cabool on the 7th instant.

In issuing this Notification, the Governor-General cannot omit the opportunity of offering to the officers and men composing the Army of the Indus, and to the distinguished Leader by whom they have been commanded, the cordial congratulation of the Government upon the happy result of a Campaign, which, on the sole occasion when resistance was opposed to them, has been gloriously marked by victory, and in all the many difficulties of which, the character of a British Army for gallantry, good conduct, and discipline has been nobly maintained.

A Salute of 21 guns will be fired on the receipt of this intelligence at all the principal stations of the Army in the three Presidencies.

By order of the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General of India. (sd.) T. H. MADDOCK.

Offy. Secy to the Govt of India, with the Govt. Genl.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE LORD AUCKLAND, G. C. B.

8c 8c. 8c.

MY LORD.—We have the honor to acquaint your Lordship, that the Army marched from Ghuznee en route to Cabool, in two columns, on the 30th and 31st ultimo. His Majesty Shah Shooja-ool-Mulk, with his own troops, forming part of the second Column.

On the arrival of the Commander-in-Chief with the 1st Column at Hyder Khail, on the 1st instant, information reached him, and the same reached the Envoy and Minister at Haft Asmya, that Dost Mahomed, with his Army and Artillery, were advancing from Cabool, and would probably take up a position at Urghunde or Midan (the former 24, the latter 36 miles from Cabool). Upon this, it was arranged that His Majesty, with the 2nd Column under Major-General Wileshire, should join the 1st Column here, and advance together, to attack Dost Mahomed, whose son, Mahomed Ukhbar, had been recalled from Jelalabad, with the Troops guarding the Khyber Pass, and had formed a junction with his Father, their joint forces, accordingly to our information, amounting to about 13,000 men.

Every arrangement was made for the King and the Army marching in a body from hence to-morrow, but in the course of the night messengers arrived, and since (this morning,) a great many Chiefs and their followers, announcing the dissolution of Dost Mahomed's Army by the refusal of the greater part to advance against us with him, and he had, in consequence, fled with a party of 300 horsemen, in the direction of Bameean, leaving his guns behind him, in position as they were placed at Urghunde.

His Majesty Shah Shooja has sent forward a confidential Officer with whom has been associated Major Cureton, of her Majesty's 16th Lancers, taking with him a party of 200 men and an Officer of Artillery to proceed direct to take possession of those Guns, and afterwards such other Guns, and public Stores, as may be found in Cabool and the Balla Hissar, in the name of, and for His Majesty Shah Shooja-ool-Mulk, and the King's orders will be carried by his own Officer with this party, for preserving the tranquillity of the City of Cabool.

A strong party has been detached in pursuit of Dost Mahomed, under some of our most active Officers. We continue our march upon Cabool to-morrow, and will reach it on the 3d day.

We have, &c.

(Signed) JOHN KEANE, Lt. Col.
Commander-in-Chief.

W. H. MACNAGHTEN,
Envoy and Minister.

Head Quarters, Camp Shikarbad, 3d August, 1839.

Extract from a letter from His Excellency Lieutenant General Sir John Keane, K. C. B. and G. C. H., dated Head Quarters, Camp Cabool, 8th August, 1839.

"It gives me infinite pleasure to be able to address my Despatch to your Lordship from this Capital, the vicinity of which His Majesty Shah Shooja-ool-Mulk, and the Army under my command reached the day before yesterday. The King entered his Capital yesterday afternoon, accompanied by the British Envoy and Minister and the Gentlemen of the Mission, and by myself, the General and Staff Officers of the Army and escorted by a squadron of Her Majesty's 4th Light Dragoons and one of Her Majesty's 16th Lancers, with Captain Martin's Troop of Horse Artillery. His Majesty had expressed a wish that British Troops should be present on the occasion, and a very small party only of his own Hindostanee and Afghan Troops. After the animating scene of traversing the streets, and reaching the Palace in the Balla Hissar, a Royal Salute was fired, and an additional salvo, in the Afghan style, from small guns resembling wall pieces, named gingalls, and carried on camels. We heartily congratulated His Majesty on being in possession of the throne and kingdom of his ancestors and upon the overthrow of his enemies; and, after taking leave of His Majesty, we returned to our Camp.

"I trust we have thus accomplished all the objects which your Lordship had in contemplation, when you planned and formed the Army of the Indus, and the expedition into Afghanistan.

"The conduct of the Army, both European and Native, which your Lordship did me the honor to place under my orders, has been admirable throughout, and notwithstanding the severe marching and privations they have gone through, their appearance and discipline have suffered nothing, and the opportunity afforded them at Ghuznee of meeting and conquering their enemy, has added greatly to their good spirits.

"The joint Despatch addressed by Mr. Macnaghten and myself to your Lordship on the 3d instant, from Shikarbad, will have informed you that, at the moment we had made every preparation to attack (on the following day) Dost Mahomed Khan in his position at Urghunde, where, after his son Mahomed Akhbar has joined him from Jelalabad, he had an army amounting to 13,000 men, well armed and appointed, and thirty pieces of artillery, we suddenly learnt that he abandoned them all and fled with a party of horsemen on the road to Bameean, leaving his guns in position as he had placed them to receive our attack.

"It appears that a great part of his Army, which was hourly becoming disorganized, refused to stand by him in the position, to receive our attack, and that it soon became in a state of dissolution. The great bulk immediately camp over to Shah Shooja, tendering their allegiance, and I believe His Majesty will take most of them into his pay.

"It seems, that the news of the quick and determined manner in which we took their stronghold, Ghuznee, had such an effect upon the population of Cabool, and perhaps also upon the Enemy's Army, that Dost Mahomed, from that moment, began to lose hope of retaining his rule for even a short time longer, and sent off his family and valuable property towards Bameean, but marched out of Cabool with his Army and Artillery keeping a bold front towards us, until the evening of the 2d, when all his hopes were at an end, by a division in his own Camp and one part of his Army abandoning him. So precipitate was his flight, that he left in position his guns, with their Ammunition and waggons, and the greater part of the cattle by which they were drawn. Major Cureton, of Her Majesty's 16th Lancers, with his party of 200 men, pushed forward on the 3d, and took possession of those guns, &c. There were 23 brass guns in position and loaded, two more at a little distance, which they attempted to take away, and since then three more abandoned still further off on the Bameean road. Thus leaving in our possession 28 pieces of cannon with all the material belonging to them, which are now handed over to Shah Shooja-ool-Mulk.

Extract from a letter from W. H. Macnaghten Esq. Envoy and Minister to the Court of Shah Shooja-ool-Mulk, dated Cabool, 9th August 1839.

By a letter signed jointly by his Excellency Lieutenant General Sir John Keane and myself, dated the 3d instant, the Right Honorable the Governor-General was apprized of the flight of Dost Mahomed Khan.

STEAM MEETING.

In compliance with the following Requisition, a Public Meeting will be held at the Exchange Rooms, on Saturday, the 5th day of October instant, at half-past 3 o'clock in the afternoon, precisely, for the purpose therein specified.

J. YOUNG, Sheriff.

Calcutta, Sheriff's Office, October 1, 1839,

Calcutta, September 28, 1839.

To the Sheriff of Calcutta.

SIR,—The recent dispatch of the Berenice Steamer, without waiting for the Calcutta Mails of the 26th and 27th August, the latter of which days was notified by the Post Master General of Bengal as "the latest safe date" for dispatch from Calcutta, demands some expression of public opinion on the part of the Calcutta community, we the undersigned, accordingly request, that you will convene a General Meeting of the British and Native Inhabitants of Calcutta, at the earliest convenient date, to enable us to address the Government of India on the above proceeding, and to request protection against a similar evil to the Bengal community in future.

We have the honor to be, Sir,

AN APPEAL TO THE BRITISH AND NATIVE INHABITANTS OF CALCUTTA.

FELLOW CITIZENS,—It is the last straw that breaks the back of the camel. It is the last drop which causes the cup to overflow.

Heaven knows that, in this matter of steam communication with Great Britain, we have had many a last straw to bear, and many a cup, overflowing with bitterness, to drain.

I trust, however, that neither our backs nor our hearts are broken, but that we are still

Steady to resolve, and stubborn to endure; patient, yet determined; sinking not, fainting not, halting not, but pressing unanimous, right onward, with steady steps and resolved hearts towards that, our undoubted right, which was years ago recognised by the ministers of the Crown and by the Imperial Parliament,

You have determined, wisely I think, and as became you, after this last very bitter dirt which we have been made to eat, to assemble and call upon Government for relief from these intolerable grievances, grievances affecting the interests and safety of the state, as well as our own hearts and fortunes.

It is well that for such occasions we should be prepared before hand; I therefore venture to submit—not, I implore you to believe, as pressing its adoption—but merely to submit to you a sketch of a petition, such as the sheriff might, perhaps, present in your names; and in which no class, either military or civil, clerical or lay, legal or mercantile, might feel itself precluded from joining.

I offer this sketch, I cast it on the waters, that it may be pruned or expanded, cut up or cut down, by abler and better men than myself. I only hope that any more suitable memorial which may be preferred to it, will be one that every Company's servant in Calcutta and its neighbourhood may join in without difficulty; since, in pursuit of the great act of justice which we claim, unanimity is all in all. I have the honor to remain—Fellow-citizens.

Your obedient Servant,

Calcutta, 2d October, 1839.

H. M. P.

TO THE HON'BLE T. C. ROBERTSON, Esq.

President of the Council of India, Deputy Governor of Bengal, &c. &c. &c.

The Petition of the British and Native Inhabitants of Calcutta and its vicinity assembled this 5th day of October, at the Exchange Rooms pursuant to due notice issued by the Sheriff of Calcutta.

Humbly Sheweth,—That on the 5th May last, the Hon. Company's Steamer Hugh Lindsay, which had left Bombay with the overland mails on the 16th April, put back. Those mails were subsequently conveyed on the Berenice, thirty seven days after the latest safe date advertised by the Post Master General for the letters leaving Calcutta.

That on the 1st August last, the H. C. Steamer Zeno quitted Bombay without the Calcutta mail of the latest safe date notified (viz the 17th July) by the Post Master General for its leaving Calcutta. The Calcutta letters by that mail were subsequently forwarded on the Berenice, which left Bombay on the 13th September, fifty eight days after the latest safe date, notified as above by the Post Master General.

That on the 13th of September the H. C. Steamer Berenice left Bombay without the Calcutta mails of the 26th and 27th August, although the latter had been the latest safe date notified by the Post Master General. Those mails with, it is understood, leave Bombay on the 7th of the present month, being forty-two days from the date of the letters in 3073 covers leaving Calcutta.

That an English mail, via the Red Sea, was landed at Bombay on the 20th March last. Its entire contents had not arrived in Calcutta until the 4th April, being fifteen days from the period of its reaching Bombay.

That the receipt, in Calcutta, of the English mail which arrived at Bombay on the 5th May last, was not completed in less than sixteen days from the date of its arrival at Bombay.

That the receipt in Calcutta of the English mail, which reached Bombay on the 21st of June last, was not completed in less than seventeen days from the date of its arrival at Bombay.

That the receipt of the English mail which reached Bombay on the 27th June last, was not completed in Calcutta until eighteen days after its arrival at Bombay.

That the receipt of the English mail, which reached Bombay on the 6th ultimo, was not completed in Calcutta until twenty six days after its arrival at Bombay.

The above is an enumeration of some of the grievances to which your petitioners have been exposed, within the short space of half a year, by the imperfect condition of a scheme of steam and overland communications between this Empire and Great Britain, which, properly worked, could not fail to promote the power, the wealth, the prosperity and happiness of both countries.

But if your petitioners were to extend the period, a longer list of vexations, of disappointments, and of losses, might be placed before your Honor in Council, yet still without including very many from which your petitioners have greatly suffered in common with all India. In justification however of themselves, and in duty to their British and Native fellow-subjects throughout this Presidency, your Petitioners consider it incumbent upon them to notice the following. On the 22d August, 1837, the H. C. steamer Berenice left Bompay having the Calcutta mails of the but put back on the 25th; she got to sea next day and again put back on the 12th September. Her packets were subsequently taken on by the Atlanta on 26th September, or fifty-three days from the date of the mail leaving Calcutta.

In June, 1838, a notification was issued at Bombay that the Atlanta would leave that port on the 3d July for the Persian Gulf. The Calcutta mail despatched on latest safe day viz the 15th June, arrived on the 29th a few days before the advertised date of departure. This Calcutta mail was detained till the departure of the Berenice for the Red Sea on the 12th September, or eighty-nine days from the despatch of the letters from Calcutta.—The Calcutta covers on this occasion amounting to 2666, did not reach London till 135 days after their despatch from Calcutta.

In June 1838, a notification was issued at Bombay, that it was intended to despatch a steamer either to the Red Sea or Persian Gulf, on the 25th July, and the 8th of the month was assigned as the latest safe date, allowing seventeen days from Calcutta to Bombay—the mail arrived at Bombay on the 22d, or in fourteen days—but intermediately another notification had appeared intimating that a steamer would be despatched to the Red Sea on or about 1st August, and the 16th July was advertised as the latest safe date from Calcutta.—The mail of that day arrived at Bombay on the 30th July, and remained two days at Bombay before the Atlanta left; but instead of going to the Red Sea as advertised, the Atlanta was despatched to the Persian Gulf. The united mails from Calcutta of the 8th and 16th July comprised 3678 covers, the first portion of which was twenty-three days from the date of despatch from Calcutta to that of departure from Bombay. This mail was plundered by the Arabs, and the letters scattered over the desert.

In August, 1838, the Berenice was advertised to start on the 8th September, but the Calcutta mails which left on the latest advertised safe date (23d August) not arriving she was detained till the 12th, eighteen days having been required for the conveyance to Bombay.—On this occasion the packets from the Right Honorable the Governor General at Simlah did not arrive in time.

Your petitioners respectfully represent to your Honor in Council that, although there may be palliatives, there is but one effectual remedy for the state of things adverted to above,—a state of things which has involved heavy losses, great commercial injury, and much private distress to your petitioners; which has no doubt been prejudicial, at a most important crisis, to the service of Government; and which is manifestly calculated to bring the power of this vast Empire, and the character of its rulers, into discredit with our fellow subjects at home, and with foreign states.

The remedy to which your petitioners advert, was distinctly recognized by the Lords of the Treasury, by a Committee of the Imperial Parliament, and by the Right Hon'ble the President of the Board of Control in declarations to the following effect.

' Their Lordships of course assume, that the question reserved for their consideration, will embrace the communication by steam with the three presidencies.'

' That, inasmuch as in the opinion of the witnesses who have appeared before your Committee, a direct communication by steam from the Red Sea to Ceylon, Madras, and Bengal, would be practicable at all seasons of the year, by the employment of vessels of adequate tonnage and power, and as, under judicious arrangements, such extended establishment would appear to offer a prospect of an adequate return for the increased outlay, by the conveyance of the passengers and some valuable articles of merchandize, which cannot be expected from the limited communication with Bombay alone; your committee feel bound to recommend a continued and zealous attention to the subject on the part of Her Majesty's Government and the East India Company.'

' I have also to direct your attention to the concluding paragraph of their Lordship's letter, and to state that I entirely concur in the view therein expressed, as I am convinced that any plan which does not embrace a communication by steam packets with Madras and Calcutta, as well as with Bombay, will entirely fail to give public satisfaction, and to fulfil the just expectations of the people, both of England and of India.

(Signed) JOHN HONNOUR.

To the Chairman and Deputy Chairman of the Court of Directors.

That the views of the Lords of the Treasury, of the Committee of the House of Commons, and of the Right Hon'ble the President of the Board of Control, were as equitable towards British India as they are now easy of execution, cannot for a moment be questioned.

Those views required no more for their perfect accomplishment than steam vessels of a power and capacity which should ensure their making a certain and speedy voyage between Bombay and Aden; between Calcutta, Madras, Point de Galle and Aden; and between Aden and Suva, at all seasons of the year.

Such steam vessels, the property of a private Company, now traverse the Atlantic, between Great Britain and the United States, winter and summer, with a speed and regularity which leave nothing to be desired; and that with this encouraging example before the British nation and the Government of British India, similar advantages have not been extended to this Imperial dependency is a matter of equal grief and astonishment.

Your Petitioners, however, most respectfully trust and entreat, that your Honor in Council, witnessing and feeling the mischief which has been occasioned to the most important public and private interests by the present imperfect system, will urge upon the Honorable the Court of Directors, on the part of the Supreme Government—most respectfully on the part of your Petitioners—and in the name of all India, that the Honorable Court will be pleased to close with a proposition, approved by Her Majesty's Government, which has been submitted to the Honorable Court by Mr. T. A. Curtis, of London, on behalf of a Joint Stock Company; which Company is, under pledges and penalties (to be prescribed by Parliament) prepared to convey the mails between Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Point de Galle, and Great Britain, by means of powerful steam vessels, calculated to accomplish their voyages with certainty and celerity, at all periods of the year; and at a cost to the state less than that of the present inefficient system.

While awaiting an act of justice toward this Great Empire, with a confident expectation that it cannot fail to be accorded, your Petitioners solicit permission respectfully to advert to the palliative for the present state of things, to which they have already alluded.

Your Petitioners believe that it is in contemplation to make a better road between Bombay and Calcutta. But this measure as is clear to all who have considered the subject, will merely mitigate, without removing the evils which we now most respectfully place before the Supreme Government.

Imperfect as this palliative must be, with reference to the rivers on the route, at times altogether impassable, and which it is impossible to bridge;—with reference to the extreme difficulty of maintaining such an establishment as shall convey the entire Mail to or from Bombay in one despatch;—with reference to the climate on portions of the route through which the road must be carried, and where the requisite number of dāk runners can, it is believed, only be maintained at a deplorable sacrifice of human health and life—imperfect, we beg to repeat, as this palliative must necessarily be, still it can only be applied at an enormous first outlay to the state, and at an enormous and constant expenditure for repairs, as well as for increased establishment. And what is more to our present purpose, years must elapse before such a palliative can be applied at all.

In the mean time, although paying a heavy amount of inland postage for our letters, from which charge Bombay is exempt, we, your petitioners, are exposed to a repetition of evils, vexations, and disasters, most injurious to the entire public, as well as to the best interests of this wealthy and commercial presidency; and detrimental, as your Honor in Council cannot but have found them, to the service of the state.

We therefore humbly and respectfully intreat, that the Supreme Government of British India may be pleased to assume the control of the overland mails, as of the other branches of the Indian Post-office, and that your Honour in Council will issue instructions to the proper authorities, that steam vessels conveying mails from Bombay to the Red Sea, or Persian Gulph, shall not leave Bombay until they have received on board the mails despatched from Calcutta, Madras and Agra on the latest safe date publicly notified by the Post Master General at Calcutta and the Post Masters at Madras and Agra.

In submitting this appeal to your Honor in Council, your petitioners most distinctly and unequivocally disclaim any desire or intention to impute blame to the Government or authorities at Bombay, for the failures which your petitioners have adverted to, or the vexations and losses which they have endured. These failures, vexations, and losses were clearly inseparable from the imperfect system by which your petitioners have suffered so deeply, and can only be wholly guarded against by its abandonment for the Scheme approved by Her Majesty's Government.

Your petitioners further respectfully intreat, that this petition of the British and Native Inhabitants of Calcutta may be submitted to the Honourable the Court of Directors, with a favourable recommendation from your Honor in Council, respecting that portion of the prayer of the Inhabitants which it rests with the Honourable Court to have carried into effect.

Signed for the British and Native Inhabitants of Calcutta duly convened, and in the Exchange Rooms assembled, this 5th day of October, 1839.

J. Y., Sheriff of Calcutta.

Hurk. Oct. 3.]

STEAM MEETING AT THE EXCHANGE ROOMS.

On Saturday afternoon, the 5th Oct. at half past three, a very crowded meeting was held in the Exchange Rooms, pursuant to a notice issued by the Sheriff, in compliance with a requisition presented to him, bearing the signatures of 725 European and Native gentlemen. There was hardly room enough in the Exchange hall, to permit of any body moving about, and the very staircase was full of people, who could not get into the hall itself. The meeting was the largest, that has been held in Calcutta for some time, and the very largest that has ever been convened on the Steam question. The object of the meeting was the framing, or adopting, of an address to Government, expressive of the public opinion on the recent despatch of the Bernice steamer from Bombay, without the Calcutta mails of the advertised latest safe date.

JAMES YOUNG, Esq., the Sheriff, on taking the chair, read the requisition, in accordance with which he had summoned the meeting. He then observed, that he considered it better for the Chairman of a meeting of the nature of the one over which he had the honour to preside, especially if a public functionary, to take no active part in the proceedings. He should, therefore, abstain from offering his opinion on the subject in question. He hoped, that all would support him in preserving order, and said that it was desirable in meetings of that nature, that unanimity should prevail as far as possible.

CAPT. T. J. TAYLOR then rose and addressed the meeting as follows:—Gentlemen; on an occasion like the present, when there is probably not a person in this room who has not suffered by the untoward despatch of the Bernice, without the Calcutta Mails of the 26th and 27th of August, the last of which days was notified by the Post-Master-General of Bengal, as the latest safe date of despatch from Calcutta, it is necessary to dwell but briefly on the grievous injury we have sustained. Every man feels his own peculiar wrong, and sympathizes with the general grievance. The communications between parent and child,—between husband and wife,—between brother and sister,—between merchant and fellow merchant,—between agent and constituent,—and last but not least, between the Supreme Government in India and the ruling authorities in Europe—have been cut off by this deplorable resolve of the Government of Bombay. (Hear, hear and cheers.) There is, however, often some consolation to be derived from misfortunes however great, and when matters are at the worst, they sometimes mend. One good we have already derived; in the orders published in last night's Gazette, we have a guarantee that we shall not experience a like misfortune again. (Cheers.) I trust, moreover, we shall obtain some further good, as the Home Public and the Home Government, will more than ever feel the inadequacy of the present system, and the necessity for reform, and that reform can alone be found in powerful steamers on the most comprehensive line. (Cheers.)

The orders of Government in last night's Gazette, have been seen by all: they have somewhat anticipated one of the objects of this meeting, and the quiet rebuke to the Bombay authorities, conveyed in that despatch, will doubtless be felt as it deserves to be. The Government of India having already expressed its censure, it may probably be politic for this meeting to abstain now from expressing, in its petition, disapprobation of the Bombay proceedings; but, although it may be politic for the meeting collectively to abstain from such expression I see no cause for concealing individual feelings; and I will not conceal that, in my opinion, material blame attaches to the authorities at Bombay. (Hear, hear.) I will not conceal, that I think they have acted, on this occasion, with singular want of courtesy, want of consideration, and want of justice to the interests of this important and wealthy city. (Cheers.) and that their conduct is most reprehensible, whether considered as public officers—or as men. (loud and long-continued cheers.)

The British Governments are not placed in India, like the Spanish colonies in South America—as separate, independent kingdoms, warring against and plundering each other—speaking, it is true, a common language, but having no community of feeling, no common interest. No; our position in Hindostan being very different, the three Presidencies here are component parts of one empire, (hear, hear and cheers,) amenable to one law, subject to one supreme authority, (hear) and entitled to equal and impartial consideration. (Much cheering.) It cannot be too strongly impressed on every public servant in India, that all mere sectional interests should be made subordinate to the general good; (cheers) and that each individual, wherever placed, is but one of the general system, and should endeavour, therefore, to promote the general weal. Had the Bombay authorities borne this circumstance in mind—had they been actuated by those principles of regard for the general welfare, which ought to be the main-spring of every ruling power—had they recollected that whether men are situated to the east or west, or north or south—in the rice fields of Bengal, or the cotton plains of the Deccan, they are all equally entitled to the paternal care and consideration of the Government; (Cheers.)—had the Bombay authorities remembered this, we might have been spared the ills of which we now so justly complain. (Loud and long continued cheers.)

In making these observations on the Bombay authorities, it is but an act of justice to the Governor, Sir James Carnac, to state, that I acquit him individually of all blame. He was not at Bombay, at the time of the Bernice's despatch; but was at Poonah, 96 miles distant. He could not, therefore, control proceedings, of which he could only have been made aware, when too late to remedy the evil (Hear, hear). Had Sir James Carnac been at Bombay, I do not think he would have Despatched that steamer without our mails. (Hear, hear). Sir James has ever been a warm defender of the Comprehensive Steam Communication (Hear). An energetic writer in an European Magazine, Carnac first stood forth our friend; (cheers), and subsequently, as Chairman of the Honorable Court, and while strongly opposed by all the bigotry and obstinacy of that antiquated body, (laughter) he ever stood forth our friend: (Cheers) when, therefore, I review the whole of Sir James Carnac's career—when I remember that he is a soldier, a statesman, a scholar, and a gentleman, I will not believe that a change of position can have wrought in him a change of feeling; or that the mere circumstance of his being nominated to the Government of Western India, will make him belie his principles or desert our cause (Loud cheers)

But although we have reason to complain of the Bombay officials, it is pleasant to mark the contrast exhibited by the conduct of the mercantile community of Bombay on the occasion, as shown in a letter from their Chamber of Commerce to the Chamber of Commerce at Calcutta,—which letter, with the permission of the meeting, I will read. You will observe from this letter, that the Bombay mercantile community, does sympathize with the injury we have sustained, and that they would have remedied the evil, had such been within their power.

To the Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Calcutta.

Sir.—I regret to inform you, that the steamer for Suez, started this morning at daylight, I fear without any of the Mails from Calcutta; as the one dispatched on the 26th ultimo, only reached Bombay this forenoon after 12 o'clock.

A reference was made by Government to the Superintendent of the Indian Navy, who gave it as his opinion, that he considered any further detention here, would greatly endanger the arrival of the Steamer at Suez, in time for the conveyance to London of the Indian Mails by the English Steamer, to leave Alexandria on the 8th October. That at this season the time required for the voyage to Suez, was extremely uncertain, especially from the near approach of the Equinox, and the probability of strong northerly winds down the Red Sea; and that a greater number of days must, therefore, be allowed. That this was besides particularly necessary on this occasion, as the new shaft had just been fitted to the Engines of the Berenice and there had not been sufficient time to have it tried.

Considering the Season of the year, it is much to be regretted, that 18 or 19 days, for such heavy Mails as those for the Overland route, were not calculated on by, the Post Master General, in naming a safe day for their despatch from Calcutta.

The Mail of the 25th, reached this on the 9th instant but was a very tight one.

Had the decision of this Government been known in time, the Committee of this Chamber, I am requested to state to you, would have considered it their duty to have suggested to the Government, that as the convention between the British and French Governments, now provided for the conveyance of all the Mails by the French steamers (which were therein timed to leave Alexandria on the 7th, 17th and 27th of each month, and was to come into operation on the 10th September) they could only, at the most, endanger a detention of the Indian Mails for 10 days, by detaining the Berenice for the Calcutta Mail of the 27th, at all events until day light of the 15th.

The decision of the Government, however, founded on the reasons I have stated, only became known this morning, after the steamer had left, and the Committee therefore regret that they had not the opportunity of serving the interests of the Mercantile Community and public at Calcutta, which they would at all times be happy when in their powers, to do.

I remain, Sir, your obdt. servt.

(Signed) JOHN SKINNER, Chairman,

Bombay, 13th September, 1839.

This letter is most creditable to the body whence it has emanated, and is in singular contrast to the conduct of the Bombay Government; but there are one or two expressions in it, which require an observation—one as strongly confirmatory of our opinion, as to the miserable inefficiency of the present steamers; while another appears to be based on misapprehension, which it is proper to clear up.

Firstly, it appears that with such vessels as the Berenice it is necessary to allow not less than 26 days between Bombay and Alexandria, and that even then, the arrival of the mail at Alexandria in time, is a matter of doubt. Why, with a proper ocean steamer, (such as the Achilles, the Great Western or the British Queen,) the voyage would be made in 13 days between Bombay and Suez—or 6 days less than the time now contemplated.

Again, the Chamber lament that the Post-Master General at Calcutta had not calculated on 18 or 19 days, at this season, for heavy mails! Now, it should be stated, that between Poonah and Bombay, the mail travels regularly within 18 hours,—the road is excellent, and the mails are conveyed by cart and by boat. From Poonah to Calcutta the distance is 1,090 miles. Now at 5 miles an hour, this distance would be performed in 9 days and 2 hours; at 4 miles an hour, in 11 days and 8 hours; and at 3 miles an hour, in 15 days and 3 hours—so that adding the time between Poonah and Bombay, the whole time occupied between Bombay and Calcutta, would be, at 5 miles an hour, 9 days 20 hours; at 4 miles, 12 days 2 hours; and at 3 miles, 15 days 21 hours.

Now, our Post Master General allowed 16 days! and yet the mails were left behind! That of the 26th was 13 days and 16 hours on the road; but the delay was in the Bombay Post Master General's jurisdiction. The mail reached Nagpore, 670 miles, in 193 hours; but between Nagpore and Poonah, 420 miles, it was 108 hours—that is, 5 hours less than from Calcutta to Nagpore, though the difference in distance was 250 miles! From Nagpore to Poonah the mail did not exceed 2½ miles an hour! It was hardly to have been expected, that the Post Master General of Calcutta, could anticipate that the mail's travelling in the Bombay Presidency—would be at a pace little better than a snail's gallop, or that of a Freemason's funeral. (Cheers.)

Having made the above explanation—I have only to repeat, that the Bombay commercial body, deserve our best acknowledgements for their courtesy, so strongly contrasted with the discourtesy of the Bombay authorities. (Much cheering.)

H. M. PARKER, Esq.—I should not have ventured to trespass on your time, gentlemen, by addressing you, since there is little to be said beyond what has been said already, with respect to the great cause which assembles us here this day; had it not seemed to me desirable that something definite should be proposed to the meeting. I find no other gentleman apparently disposed to make such a proposition, or I should gladly leave it in worthier hands—nor indeed am I about to make any distinct proposition myself; but I will endeavour to explain.

The draft or sketch of a petition, suggested as the sort of address it might be desirable to present to the Supreme Government on the present occasion, has been going the rounds of the newspapers, for the past few days. It has been suggested by a set of initials, which I am a little alarmed to find, bear no inconsiderable resemblance to my own ; (much laughter) and I even imagine, that have a sort of acquaintance with the gentleman who uses or misuses them. (Laughter.) But be that as it may, the draft Petition, a copy of which, altered to suit the altered circumstances of our case, and express our sense of the admirable conduct of the Supreme Government, I now hold in my hand, seems to have been cast by its projector on the waters. If any gentleman is prepared with another, which can scarcely fail to be equally good or better, this can sink gently in the stream, and no harm be done beyond a little waste of ink. If there is no other, I will, with your permission, read my absent friend's production to the meeting, merely craving your patient endurance of its length, which I would gladly have curtailed, both for yoursakes and my own.

Before doing this, however, I would solicit your permission, as a deeply interested friend of the great cause, to submit one or two remarks.

In the first place, although he is more likely to be correct on such a subject than myself, I do not altogether adopt my friend Capt. Taylor's views, with respect to the degree of blame attaching on this occasion to the authorities at Bombay. At all events, those views have been spoken by a voice more potential in such a matter, and more likely to make itself heard in the echoing halls of Bombay Castle, than any sound which even this numerous assembly—the most numerous which our wrongs have yet driven into communion, could utter.

But if I did consider the Bombay Authorities blameable, I do think, that our time would only be uselessly occupied, in any longer trying to make petty streamlets pure or passable, while the great fountain in which they have their source, is welling up, like some mighty Geisler, with a volume and power as great as ever. If Mahommed of Ghiznee, betook himself, as was his "gracious custom in the afternoon," to destroy an Idol, I am much mistaken if he set about his laudable undertaking, by inflicting a multitude of small taps upon its ear, or knocking off an occasional little filiger. No, assuredly,—but with a great swing of that mighty mace, which men can scarcely lift from the conqueror's tomb,—with blow and dint and crushing thump, like thunders strokes, showering upon trunk, and limbs, and head of his grim enemy, he broke and smashed it utterly into vile fragments—and, mark, gentlemen, usually found some most comprehensive jewel in the shattered mass, amply remunerative of his holy toil.

Thus we, gentlemen, have our great incomprehensive Idol to subdue, and a grim and ugly monster it is in all conscience ; but to waste time on its mere extremities, will be waste indeed—or to drop metaphor before it drops me,—It is the whole rickety, lopsided system of the incomprehensive scheme, that we must struggle against with all the power that is in us, and not with the little miserable failures, from rain in this place, or the want of runners in that ; a broken shaft, or a Steamer sent off too soon, or unfit to go at all, in another. This is our course, gentlemen ; let us pursue it honestly, temperately and unanimously, and God defend the right.

But one more remark. My friend, Capt. Taylor, has read you a letter from the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, and a very pretty, civil, spoken letter it is. But as my friend, I should rather say my acquaintance, H. M. P., was told the other day, when he flattered himself he had said something particularly touching to the Agra people, "Fine words butter no parsnips," (much laughter)—why, I ask, did not the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, stand forward and say, like manful British merchants—"You tell us that the Berenice can't do this, and can't do that, and may arrive too late, and may not reach Suez in nineteen days. Why, we demand, in the name of all India (since you insist upon all India being dependent upon this port)—why, we demand to know, are we in this year of Grace 1839, left with such wretched, inefficient steamers to carry on the service? Why have we not a Great Eastern, which would make her voyage with certainty in a known time, moonsoon or no moonsoon, and thereby spare us this present pain of leaving all our Calcutta friends in the lurch?" (Loud and long-continued cheers.) This, gentlemen, would have been the attitude for British merchants to have assumed ; and they might, occupying a proud position in the eyes of all India, have paused for a reply.

I shall detain you no longer, gentlemen, but with an apology for having detained you even so long, proceed to read the sketch of the quasi-anonymous petition.

TO THE HON'BLE T. C. ROBERTSON, ESQ.

President of the Council of India, Deputy Governor of Bengal, &c. &c. &c.

The Petition of the British and Native Inhabitants of Calcutta and its vicinity assembled this 5th day of October, at the Exchange Rooms pursuant to due notice issued by the Sheriff of Calcutta.

Humbly Sheweth,—That on the 5th May last, the Hon. Company's Steamer Hugh Lindsay, which had left Bombay with the overland mails on the 16th April, put back. Those mails were subsequently conveyed on the Berenice, thirty seven days after the latest safe date advertised by the Post Master General for the letters saving Calcutta.

That on the 1st August last, the H. C. Steamer Zenobia quitted Bombay without the Calcutta mail of the latest safe date notified (viz the 17th July) by the Post Master General for its leaving Calcutta. The Calcutta letters by that mail were subsequently forwarded on the Berenice, which left Bombay on the 13th September, fifty-eight days after the latest safe date, notified as above by the Post Master General.

That on the 13th of September, the H. C. Steamer Berenice left Bombay without the Calcutta mails of the 26th and 27th August, although the latter had been the latest safe date notified by the Post Master General. Those mails will, it is understood, leave Bombay on the 7th of the present month, being forty-two days from the date of the letters in 3073 covers leaving Calcutta.

That an English mail, via the Red Sea, was landed at Bombay on the 20th March last. Its entire contents had not arrived in Calcutta until the 4th April, being fifteen days from the period of its reaching Bombay.

That the receipt in Calcutta, of the English mail which arrived at Bombay on the 5th May last, was not completed in less than sixteen days from the date of its arrival at Bombay.

That the receipt in Calcutta of the English mail, which reached Bombay on the 21st of June last, was not completed in less than seventeen days from the date of its arrival at Bombay.

That the receipt of the English mail which reached Bombay on the 27th June last, was not completed in Calcutta until eighteen days after its arrival at Bombay.

That the receipt of the English mail, which reached Bombay on the 6th ultimo, was not completed in Calcutta until twenty-six days after its arrival at Bombay.

The above is an enumeration of some of the grievances to which your petitioners have been exposed, within the short space of half a year, by the imperfect condition of a scheme of steam and overland communications between this Empire and Great Britain, which, properly worked, could not fail to promote the power, the wealth, the prosperity and happiness of both countries.

But if your petitioners were to extend the period, a longer list of vexations, of disappointments, and of losses, might be placed before your Honor in Council, yet still without including very many from which your petitioners have greatly suffered in common with all India. In justification, however, of themselves, and in duty to their British and Native fellow-subjects throughout this Presidency, your Petitioners consider it incumbent upon them to notice the following. On the 22d August, 1837, the H.C. steamer Berenice left Bombay, having the Calcutta mails of the 15th but put back on the 25th; she got to sea next day and again put back on the 12th September. Her packets were subsequently taken on by the Atalanta on the 26th September, or fifty-three days from the date of the mail leaving Calcutta.

In June, 1838, a notification was issued at Bombay, that the Atalanta would leave that port on the 3d July for the Persian Gulf. The Calcutta mail despatched on the latest safe day, viz the 15th June, arrived on the 29th a few days before the advertised date of departure. This Calcutta mail was detained till the departure of the Berenice for the Red Sea on the 12th September, or eighty-nine days from the despatch of the letters from Calcutta.—The Calcutta covers on this occasion amounting to 2,666, did not reach London till 135 days after their despatch from Calcutta!

In June 1838, a notification was issued at Bombay, that it was intended to despatch a steamer either to the Red Sea or Persian Gulf, on the 25th July, and the 8th of the month was assigned as the latest safe date, allowing seventeen days from Calcutta to Bombay—the mail arrived at Bombay on the 22d, or in fourteen days—but immediately another notification had appeared intimating that a steamer would be despatched to the Red Sea on or about the 1st August, and the 16th July was advertised as the latest safe date from Calcutta.—The mail of that day arrived at Bombay on the 30th July, and remained two days at Bombay before the Atalanta left; but instead of going to the Red Sea as advertised, the Atalanta was despatched to the Persian Gulf. The mail mails from Calcutta of the 8th and 16th July comprised 3,678 covers, the first portion of which was twenty-three days from the date of despatch from Calcutta to that of departure from Bombay. This mail was plundered by the Arabs, and the letters scattered over the desert.

In August, 1838, the Berenice was advertised to start on the 8th of September, but the Calcutta mails which left on the latest advertised safe date (23d August) not arriving, she was detained till the 12th, eighteen days having been required for the conveyance to Bombay.—On this occasion the packets from the Right Honorable the Governor-General at Simlah did not arrive in time.

Your petitioners respectfully represent to your Honor in Council that, although there may be palliatives, there is but one effectual remedy for the state of things adverted to above,—a state of things which has involved heavy losses, great commercial injury, and much private distress to your petitioners; which has no doubt been prejudicial, at a most important crisis, to the service of Government; and which is manifestly calculated to bring the power of this vast Empire, and the character of its rulers, into discredit with our fellow subjects at home, and with foreign states.

The remedy to which your petitioners advert, was distinctly recognized by the Lords of the Treasury, by a Committee of the Imperial Parliament, and by the Right Hon'ble the President of the Board of Control, in declarations to the following effect.

' Their Lordships of course assume, that the question reserved for their consideration, will embrace the communication by steam with the three presidencies.'

' That, inasmuch as in the opinion of the witnesses who have appeared before your Committee, a direct communication by steam from the Red Sea to Ceylon, Madras, and Bengal, would be practicable at all seasons of the year, by the employment of vessels of adequate tonnage and power, and, as, under judicious arrangements, such extended establishment would appear to offer a prospect of an adequate return for the increased outlay, by the conveyance of the passengers and some valuable articles of merchandise, which cannot be expected from the limited communication with Bombay alone; your committee feel bound to recommend a continued and zealous attention to the subject on the part of Her Majesty's Government and the East India Company.'

' I have also to direct your attention to the concluding paragraph of their Lordship's letter, and to state that I entirely concur in the view therein expressed, as I am convinced that any plan which does not embrace a communication by steam packets with Madras and Calcutta, as well as with Bombay, will entirely fail to give public satisfaction, and to fulfil the just expectations of the people, both of England and of India.

(Signed) JOHN HOBHOUSE.

To the Chairman and Deputy-Chairman of the Court of Directors.

That the views of the Lords of the Treasury, of the Committee of the House of Commons, and of the Right Hon'ble the President of the Board of Control, were as equitable towards British India as they are now easy of execution, cannot for a moment be questioned.

Those views required no more for their perfect accomplishment than steam vessels of a power and capacity which should ensure their making a certain and speedy voyage between Bombay and Aden; between Calcutta, Madras, Point de Galle and Aden; and between Aden and Suez, at all seasons of the year.

Such steam vessels, the property of a private Company, now traverse the Atlantic, between Great Britain and the United States, winter and summer, with a speed and regularity which leave nothing to be desired; and that with this encouraging example before the British nation and the Government of British India, similar advantages have not been extended to this Imperial dependency is a matter of equal grief and astonishment.

Your Petitioners, however, most respectfully trust and entreat, that your Honor in Council, witnessing and feeling the mischief which has been occasioned to the most important public and private interests by the present imperfect system, will urge upon the Honorable the Court of Directors, on the part of the Supreme Government,—most respectfully on the part of your Petitioners—and in the name of all India, that the Honorable Court will be pleased to close with a proposition, approved by Her Majesty's Government, which has been submitted to the Honorable Court by Mr. T. A. Curtis, of London, on behalf of a Joint Stock Company; which Company is, under pledges and penalties (to be prescribed by Parliament) prepared to convey the mails between Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Point de Galle, and Great Britain, by means of powerful steam vessels, calculated to accomplish their voyages with certainty and celerity, at all periods of the year; and at a cost to the state less than that of the present inefficient system.

While awaiting an act of justice towards this Great Empire, with a confident expectation that it cannot fail to be accorded, your Petitioners solicit permission respectfully to advert to the palliative for the present state of things, to which they have already alluded.

Your Petitioners believe, that it is in contemplation to make a better road between Bombay and Calcutta; but this measure, as is clear to all who have considered the subject, will merely mitigate, without removing the evil, which we now most respectfully place before the Supreme Government.

Imperfect as this palliative must be, with reference to the rivers on the route,—at times altogether impassable, and which it is impossible to bridge;—with reference to the extreme difficulty of maintaining such an establishment as shall convey the entire Mail to or from Bombay in one despatch;—with reference to the climate on portions of the route through which the road must be carried, and where the requisite number of dāk runners can, it is believed, only be maintained at a deplorable sacrifice of human health and life—imperfect, we beg to repeat, as this palliative must necessarily be, still it can only be applied at an enormous first outlay to the state, and at an enormous and constant expenditure for repairs, as well as for increased establishment. And what is more to our present purpose, years must elapse before such a palliative can be applied at all.

In the mean time, although paying a heavy amount of inland postage for our letters, from which charge Bombay is exempt, we, your petitioners, are exposed to a repetition of evils, vexations, and disasters, most injurious to the entire public, as well as to the best interests of this wealthy and commercial presidency; and detrimental, as your Honor in Council cannot but have found them, to the service of the state.

We therefore humbly and respectfully intreat, that the Supreme Government of British India may be pleased to assume the control of the overland mails, as of the other branches of the Indian Post-office, and that your Honour in Council will issue instructions to the proper authorities, that steam vessels conveying mails from Bombay to the Red Sea, or Persian Gulph, shall not leave Bombay until they have received on board the mails despatched from Calcutta, Madras and Agra on the latest safe date publicly notified by the Post Master General at Calcutta, and the Post Masters at Madras and Agra.

In submitting this appeal to your Honor in Council, your petitioners most distinctly and unequivocally disclaim any desire or intention to impute blame to the Government or authorities at Bombay, for the failures which your petitioners have adverted to, or the vexations and losses which they have endured. Those failures, vexations, and losses were clearly inseparable from the imperfect system by which your petitioners have suffered so deeply, and can only be wholly guarded against by its abandonment for the Scheme approved by Her Majesty's Government.

Your petitioners further respectfully intreat, that this petition of the British and Native Inhabitants of Calcutta may be submitted to the Honourable the Court of Directors, with a favourable recommendation from your Honor in Council, respecting that portion of the prayer of the Inhabitants which it rests with the Honourable Court to have carried into effect.

Signed for the British and Native Inhabitants of Calcutta duly convened, and in the Exchange Rooms assembled, this 6th day of October, 1839.

J. Y., Sheriff of Calcutta.

Gentlemen, you have heard the proposed petition, such as it is. Most happy, I am sure, would the author be, to see in substitution for it, something more likely to forward the great scheme. For my own part, I have merely been the reader, that it might be redde, and I now cast it amongst you to be rejected or adopted, cut up or cut down, not having the slightest intention of either proposing its adoption myself, or of seconding such a proposition by another. (Laughter and cheers)

It was then moved by T. E. M. Turton, Esq., and carried by acclamation,

“That the Petition just read be adopted by this meeting and be presented by the Sheriff on behalf of the British and Native inhabitants of Calcutta.

After which it was proposed by Colonel McLROD, seconded by DWARKANATH TAGORE, Esq., and carried unanimously.

That the Sheriff be requested if not inconvenient to himself, to select twenty or thirty gentlemen from amongst those who signed the requisition for this meeting, in order that they may accompany him on the occasion of his presenting the petition to the Honourable President of the Council of India.

Proposed by W. PATRICK, Esq., seconded by JAMES HUMPHREY, Esq., and carried unanimously.

That the Steam Committee be requested to forward copy of this petition, with such explanatory and other observations as they may consider necessary, to their Agent in England, and that they will be pleased to instruct Captain Barber to print two thousand copies of the petition and observations, for distribution to the members of the House of Commons, taking an interest in Indian affairs, to the most influential members of the Court of Proprietors, to the British India Association and to the Chamber of Commerce at the Principal Trading cities.

T. E. M. TURTON, Esq., recommended that a copy of these should be printed in particularly large type, and presented to Sir John Hobhouse, who had said that the communication betwixt Calcutta and Bombay, could be performed in 10 days. Mr. Turton then spoke as follows:

Gentlemen,—we have had a great deal of complaint, and that of a kind which our friends at Bombay are apt to consider as peculiar to the dwellers within the Mah-ratta Ditch; but we have not yet said any thing of a remedy for the evils of which we complain. I congratulate the meeting who, I am sure, will agree with our friends at Bombay, that it is not quite certain whether our letters will ever find their way to England by their conveyances or not. (Laughter.)

That the present system of communication with Bombay is a bad one, is beyond a doubt. It is no matter whether the fault is owing to natural causes or to the want of due care in forwarding the mails. There may be mountains, there may be rivers, there may be jungles in the way; no matter what the obstructions are, they cannot be satisfactorily removed, and they are all arguments in favour of a better system. (Cheers.) Our friends at Bombay ought to join us, heart and hand, in forwarding the comprehensive scheme. Communication by steam will be infinitely more advantageous to them, as well as to us, than the existing exceedingly defective system. So much for that (Cheers.) But I do not like mere complaint—I would rather look for a remedy for the cause of it. I would wish to start the great comprehensive at once; but since we have not the means of doing that at present, let us do the best we can with what we have at command.

It was proposed sometime during my absence from Calcutta, to start a steamer quarterly from hence to Suez, to accommodate the inhabitants of this city. I have turned my attention to this scheme,—I have calculated what would be the expense of a quarterly steamer. The use of a quarterly steamer, though an imperfect communication, would be great, especially as far as passengers are concerned. Moreover, it would pay (Loud Cheers.) It is of no use addressing a meeting, whether a Calcutta or a London assembly, on behalf of a scheme that will not pay. Such may flourish for a time, but ere long will languish and die.

We must go on by degrees. The Steam Tug Company here, began, I understand, with one vessel. Can not we begin with one steamer? (Hear, hear and cheers.) We may do that for £60,000. For that sum we can get a vessel of 1,000 tons with engines of 450 horse power. If this would injure the prospects of the comprehensive scheme, I would say nothing about it; but it would not do so—it would forward, it would expedite its completion. It would, to use a somewhat fashionable phrase, be a "precursor" to it. It would show that our strength did not evaporate in mere talk, but that we could do for ourselves, what we could not wring from the justice of others. (Cheers.)

I have had conversations on the subject of this plan with the members of many mercantile firms here, and several of them have expressed their readiness to take as many as 50 shares of rupees 1,000 each, and 600 shares are all that would be required. We will have a public meeting to consider this scheme shortly. In the mean time, I may state that a communication has been made to parties in England, authorising them to buy, if possible, and if not, to build, a vessel that could triumphantly face any monsoon. (Cheers.) No doubt this plan will meet with the approbation of all in the room, but that approbation will be useless unless you come forward and subscribe to it. (Laughter and cheers.) There is no test like the money now. (Laughter.) Show me the man that freely puts down his money—he is a real friend of the Comprehensive Scheme. (Cheers.) I would not give a penny for the man that always keeps his breeches pocket buttoned up. (Cheers.)

But I don't want to take away your money from the Comprehensive. Those who have subscribed to that, will let their money lie. I want you to come forward anew in support of this proposed experiment, and I have no doubt of our triumphant success. (Loud cheers.) Then, if our Bombay friends behave handsomely, we will perhaps take them in at Aden. (Laughter and Cheers.)

But now, to leave these matters for a while; let us think of those who have done us good service in England. I think you will agree with me, that there is no man there who has done more for us than Mr. Timothy Curtis. (Loud cheers.) And yet he has received but cold thanks—such in appearance but not really so. In England, it is not in the nature of things, that his labours in this cause can be so universally known and appreciated; but here such an acknowledgment is a matter of course. Therefore, to give the meeting an opportunity of testifying its gratitude to Mr. Curtis for his exertions in the Comprehensive cause, I will put to it the following resolution:—

"That this meeting returns its hearty thanks to Mr. T. A. Curtis, for his valuable persevering and unabated exertions, in the cause of Comprehensive Steam Navigation."

Mr. Curtis, gentlemen, will be glad to hear, that when met together to complain of the injuries we have received, and to utter our wailings to the Government that had power, in some degree, to remedy the evil, our hearts turned to those who were boldly fighting in our cause in England, and that we did not forget him who has done his best to forward that cause.—Mr. Turton then sat down amid loud cheering.)

CAPTAIN T. T. HARRINGTON.—While we are so ready to return thanks to people in England, let us not forget those who have done us service here. We have just heard a petition read, which expresses in the happiest manner all we want to say to the Government. That petition was read to us by a gentleman who told us that he had some slight knowledge of the author of it. Now we do know that this petition, when it appeared in the newspapers, was adorned with the well known initials H. M. P.; I therefore beg to propose, that the thanks of the meeting be awarded to H. M. P., with three cheers.

This appeal, though quite out of order, was instantly responded to, and the cheers were given with the utmost enthusiasm.

LONGFVILLE CLARKE, Esq.—I am aware that to call my friend Captain Harrington to order, would be entirely useless. I know that it is extremely difficult to keep him in order, when he is disposed to obey the dictates of his heart, as in the present instance; but I would suggest, to my friend, that the motion we have in hand at present, relates to Mr. Curtis only, and I think it is but justice, to award him a distinct and substantive vote of thanks. Gentlemen, I would not have intruded upon you, only for one expression which dropped from my friend Mr. Turton just now. It was when he said, that the obstacles in the present line of communication cannot be removed. Gentlemen, but a quarter of an hour ago one obstacle was made known to me, and it is such a one as I dare say never fell within the observation of any one here. Our mails have been left behind, and the excuse made by the Bombay Government is, that they could not detain the steamer a few hours, for fear it might not arrive at Suez in time for the English boat from Alexandria—(Hear, hear.) But they can find excuses for waiting some times, and I will make you acquainted with one of them. The anecdote I am about to relate to you, was given to me by one who came out in the January steamer, and if any one should doubt its truth, I can refer you to my authority. The steamer was waiting at Suez all ready to start, the passengers were there, the mails were there, and all were impatient to get under weigh; but the Captain refused to proceed. There were, he said, certain engineers, half a dozen in number, on their way down to join the vessel, and he had orders not to sail till they arrived. They did arrive, gentlemen—drunk (much laughter.) The cause of the delay in their transit across the desert, was that whenever they became sober they had stopped to get drunk again (Laughter, and an enquiry "what kind of engineers were they?") They were civil engineers, gentlemen. Now, gentlemen, I have told my tale, and will trespass on you no longer, but to ask your pardon for the interruption.

The vote of thanks to Mr. Curtis, proposed by Mr. Turton, was seconded by Captain T. J. Taylor, put to the meeting from the chair, and carried nem. con., with much applause.

CAPTAIN HARRINGTON was again about to propose a vote of thanks to H. M. P. in a more formal manner, when.

H. M. PARKER, Esq. said:—My worthy friend Captain Harrington, has been so good as to make favourable mention of a gentleman with initials, and with whom I must confess a certain degree of acquaintance. Such a degree, indeed, as emboldens me to say for him, that without troubling you, Mr. Sheriff, to put the sense of this Meeting on record, he will feel proud indeed, when I convey to him the estimation in which you have been pleased to hold his humble services; and most grateful to the mover of the contemplated resolution, as to all here present, for the infinite honour they have done him. Indeed, gentlemen, it would be impossible to say what effect a repetition of your three tremendous cheers would have upon this shadow of a shade—the poor little individual H. M. P., might be startled out of their attenuated existence, and he might become an invisible ghost of himself, before his mission in favor of the Great Comprehensive has been fulfilled. (Laughter and cheers.)

CAPTAIN J. H. JOHNSTON arose and said:—Gentlemen; we have said a great deal; and returned a great many thanks to Mr. T. Curtis and others, who have done much to establish the Comprehensive Scheme, but there is one gentleman, who though absent on this occasion, can never, I think, be forgotten by us. For six years, all the time that he might have set apart for domestic entertainment and relaxation, has Mr. Greenlaw devoted to the furtherance of the Comprehensive Plan of Steam Communication. (Enthusiastic cheering.) With him it originated, and to it almost every hour that he could spare from his official duties has been dedicated (Cheers). I therefore beg leave to propose the following resolution

“That the thanks of this Meeting, be given to Mr. C. B. Greenlaw, for his unceasing exertions, through a period of more than six years, in collecting the suffrages of the people inhabiting India, for the maintenance of a regular Steam Communication with Europe, and in directing that influence towards the establishment of the Comprehensive Scheme; and that Mr. Greenlaw, be entreated to continue his exertions with the same untiring zeal, to the full accomplishment of the only measure, that will satisfy the just expectations of the Indian public.”

The resolution being seconded by Dwarkanath Tagore, Esq., was put by the Chairman, and carried unanimously, amid hearty cheering.

H. M. PARKER, Esq.—I have restrained my wish to second Capt. Johnston's resolution, which I should with pride and pleasure have supported, only because I desired that some one might come forward of the many anxious to do so, who was not a member of the Steam Committee,—a body happy in the possession of the most indefatigable, the most able, the most zealous and the most conscientious of Secretaries, Charles Becket Greenlaw—(Cheers.) I have for years had daily, hourly opportunities, of seeing all his admirable qualities, for the promotion of our great cause, put to the test, and never for a moment found him wanting. Vehement as our excellent friend is known to be for right and justice, and in the pursuit of all honest and worthy objects, his mind is, I am sure, more deeply interested in none, more than in the good cause we have met to promote: so much so indeed that, as Nelson said of his frigates, I verily believe that if Mr. Greenlaw were now to die—as Heaven forbid, for the sake of many who love, honor and esteem him, no less for the sake of our great enterprise;—the word “Comprehensive” would be found written on his true and honest heart. (Cheers.)

JAMES HUME, Esq.—Mr. Chairman and gentlemen; an inhabitant of Calcutta a few months only, and wholly unknown to nineteen out of twenty in this meeting which you have heard a gentleman well known to you say, is the largest he remembers to have attended on any similar occasion,—I may perhaps be thought presumptuous in coming forward to address you; but gentlemen, I have thought that this was an occasion on which the humblest member of the community might be expected to feel acutely, and that one might look for indulgence at your hands, even though he should venture to take an active part in the proceedings of this day. Grant me, gentlemen, that indulgence, and I promise not to abuse it. (Cheers.) It is not my intention to reiterate facts with which you are unfortunately already too familiar,—it is not my intention to attempt to add any thing to that mass of evidence which month by month, and year by year, has been accumulating, to prove that the Steam Communication between England and India is a disgrace to the mother country, and, if I am to speak the truth, I must add, to the Government of this. (Cheers.)

It has been often well, and always truly said, that facility of communication breeds intercourse,—intercourse begets enquiry—enquiry knowledge, and knowledge is power. Gentlemen, the last link of this chain comes inevitably into the hands of the people: they forge it into weapons of offence, and defence, against arbitrary power and all its offspring; the strongholds of exclusion, monopoly, and injustice are successfully attacked, the treasures there stored up are scattered abroad for the amelioration of the many, instead of being hoarded as luxuries for the few; parties, sections, factions, are annihilated, and fortunately find their ruin in the public good. Gentlemen, it is not necessary that I here enquire how far this is, wholly or partially proved to be the truth, by the past history of this country during the years that we have been its masters; it is sufficient for my present purpose, that there are some here who believe it, and in England many; and this brings me directly to the subject which has more particularly influenced me in addressing you. Gentlemen, you cannot fail to have observed, that a Society has been recently established in London—The British India Society, for the purpose of watching over the interests of this country; for promptly exposing, if they cannot promptly redress, its grievances; for extending its commerce, augmenting its resources, befriending its people, and, in the emphatic language of O'Connell, doing justice to India. That Society, gentlemen, already numbers amongst its members some of the best and ablest of England's public men; and, pray pardon me if I pay a just though inadequate tribute to the nobleman,—noble by patent, but thrice ennobled by nature,—who, if not directly originating this Society, and upon that point I will not speak positively, became at once, what he ever has been, the ready, warm, and enthusiastic advocate of a cause seeking to promote the civilization, liberty, and happiness of his fellow men. His philanthropy is for no sect. Nor latitudes nor longitudes can limit it. It traverses the world seeking objects to serve; and, as no scheme for human amelioration is too large for its benevolence, so no human creature is too humble for its exercise. Men may be of different politics, ranging with this party or that: but when I mention the name of Lord Brougham, it is impossible but that every one should agree with me in saying, that he is in the largest sense,—the friend of the people. No matter whether they be his fellow countrymen among whom he lives, or the people of a distant clime, he is alike prompt and energetic in the defence of their liberties; he has one general, undeviating aim, which is to secure constitutional freedom to all, to spread the blessings of education, to elevate morals, to improve the social condition of the world. This is the man who has placed himself in the van of a large body of gentlemen who are ready to emulate each other in a noble cause,—to run a race of honourable rivalry,—to match their exertions against each other in ministering to the enlightenment, and securing the liberties of this great and distant portion of a mighty Empire. The British India Society, has been formed for no sinister purpose; it is above suspicion, for it numbers men of all parties. Tory, Conservative, Whig, and Radical, are combined in one common cause; and sure I am, that the least we can do, is to acknowledge our sense of their devotion, and to express our thanks as gratefully as we may. Sure I am, that it is our interest to do so; even as far as efficient Steam Communication is concerned; for I am convinced, that such a body of noblemen and gentlemen, acting in co-operation with us, will do more towards securing the Great Comprehensive, than the most untiring and exemplary services of any private individual. From the British India Society, the Government, whether of Downing Street, or Leadenhall Street, could not escape. In Parliament and out of Parliament, in the public Halls of London and throughout the provinces, agitation would be kept up, and the cause we have so much at heart, advocated by men whose public lives are our evidence that neither opposition can intimidate, nor delays weary them.

"I venture then to conclude with proposing, "That a Committee be appointed from this Meeting, to communicate with Mr. T. Crawford, and to request that gentlemen to urge on the British India Society, the importance of their co-operating with the friends of Great Comprehensive."

T. E. M. TUNTON, Esq., said, that he agreed with every syllable that had fallen from his learned friend, but he begged to call his attention to a resolution that had been passed, in which the British India Society was alluded to. Mr. T. having read the resolution, remarked that he thought that that was sufficient on the present occasion; but he agreed so cordially with what had been said respecting the British India Society, that he conceived that its formation merited a distinct and public acknowledgment.

JAS. HUME, Esq., said, that he was in the situation of many others at his end of the table, in not having heard a word of any of the resolutions read. This was the first moment he was aware that the Society in question had ever been alluded to. He agreed with Mr. Tunton, and begged to assure the Meeting, that he would not have troubled them at all, had he understood what had passed.

On Mr. Hume sitting down, he was greeted by loud and continued cheers. When order was restored.

LONGUEVILLE STARKS, Esq., rose and said—There was one expression which escaped my friend, Mr. Hume, which I think, on maturer consideration, he will recall. He has told us that he has been but a short time in the country and I am sure if he had been here longer he would not have used it. He has stated that the Steam scheme has met with considerable opposition from this Government. I am sure he could not mean to convey any reflection on the Supreme Government, which has ever done its utmost to further the rapid communication between this country and England; but as he made use of the term this Government, I would give him an opportunity of explaining.

JAS. HUME, Esq.—My friend is so much used to address public meetings, that he thinks he has, and he possibly may, in fact and memory, have, the advantage of a young speaker addressing a public assembly for the first time in his life (Loud cheers.) But I submit it to the meeting, whether I did make use of the word ascribed to me by my friend. I submit that I did not use the term. But if he wants to know whether I blame the Bengal Government or not, I give him the simple answer—I do (Cheering.) It is but the answer—it is but the assertion of an individual,—of one who has been in the country but a very short time; but I have been in India 16 years ago, when Mount Stuart Elphinstone was here. My friends my nearest relatives, both male and female, were all in India, and though I came out here by the overland but a few months ago, yet I came as it were to my home, and was not in such profound ignorance of its affairs as my friend may think (Loud cheers).

LONGUEVILLE STARKS, Esq.—I am glad that my observations have elicited from my friend that he did mean this Government, as his words certainly were, as I can prove both from my own recollection, and from that of friends around me. I think I can contradict the calumny which my friend has uttered against the Supreme Government, by pointing out to him the conduct of that Government, and its heads, for several years past. Did Lord William Bentinck throw obstacles in the way of the Comprehensive Scheme (Cries of no! and cheers.) He was a staunch friend of the cause. (Cheers.) Nor have I found Lord Auckland at all behind hand with him in that respect; and if we look at the papers of last evening, we shall find that his successor, his deputy, was not slack in promoting the success of the cause. Looking at these things, I think my friend will agree with me, that we are much indebted to the Bengal Government for its exertions in our behalf.

JAS. HUME, Esq.—Not being the cool and practised speaker that my learned friend is, I find it a little difficult to remember the precise words or turn of expression I have used. I believe I spoke of this Government, generally,—the Government of India. But if my learned friend is desirous of having my opinion definitively, and asks me, do you think the Bengal Government to blame? I answer boldly,—let my opinion be worth what it may—that I do; and in my own justification I will give my reason. Because it did not do long ago what it did last night.

J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq., here rose and remarked, that within last fortnight the Bengal Government had shown a disposition not to forward the interests of Steam Communication. When the Chamber of Commerce requested them to keep back the Steamer for a few days, they answered that they would not do so. (Hear and cheers.)

CAPT. R. J. H. BIRCH inquired, if the meeting was to separate without expressing its opinion on the conduct of the Post-Master General, of Calcutta, who had been impeached in some quarters of having in some measure been the cause of the late disappointment. He trusted that every one would agree with the Government, which stated that Mr. Alexander was not at all to blame for the delay which had occurred in the despatch of the mails. He would, therefore, propose, that the meeting should express its concurrence in this vindication of Mr. Alexander from the charge which had been thoughtlessly brought against him.

J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq., suggested, that as the Post-Master-General was connected with the Government, it would be better when they were assembled to canvass the acts of that Government, not to meddle with or to pass any opinion on the acts of any individual member of it, either in the way of praise or of blame. This view of the case appearing to meet the concurrence of the meeting, Capt. Birch declined pressing his motion.

There being now no other question before the meeting, the Sheriff was moved out of the chair by Mr. Parker, and Col. McLeod invited to take his place. When this had been done.

T. E. M. TUNTON, Esq., in a brief address, proposed the thanks of the meeting, to his old, kind and true-hearted friend James Young, Esq., their late Chairman, whose heart, though he had deemed it proper not to express his opinions, had, he was very sure, gone along with them in all that they had done and said."

The motion was carried with loud acclamations, and the meeting then separated, at a little before five o'clock.

REPLY OF GOVERNMENT TO THE STEAM PETITION.

No. 197,

To J. Youvo, Esq., Sheriff of Calcutta.

General Department—Marine—Steam.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of a Petition signed by you on behalf of the British and Native Inhabitants of Calcutta, assembled at the Exchange, on the 5th instant, enumerating the grievances to which the Petitioners have been exposed by the present imperfect system of Steam and Overland Communication between this empire and Great Britain; praying that the Supreme Government will urge upon the Honorable Court of Directors, to close with a proposition approved by Her Majesty's Government, and submitted to them by Mr. T. A. Curtis, on behalf of a Joint Stock Company, to convey the mails between Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Point de Galle, and Great Britain, by means of powerful Steam Vessels; likewise, soliciting that the Petition may be submitted to the Hon'ble Court, with the favorable recommendation of this Government.

2. In reply, I am directed to state, that copies of the memorial have been forwarded to the Hon'ble Court, with the expression of a strong opinion from the Local Government, in favor of establishing a scheme of Steam Communication with all the presidencies, either through individuals and private Associations, or through Government Steamers.

I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,

(Signed) H. T. PRINSEP,

Secy. to the Govt. of India.

Council Chamber, the 9th Oct. 1839.—Hark. Oct. 23.

STEAM TUG ASSOCIATION.

The seventh half-yearly Meeting of the members of the Steam Tug Association was held at the office of the Secretaries, Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., on Tuesday at noon. The accounts were laid upon the table, and the Secretaries' report read, which showed the affairs of the Association to be in a very flourishing condition. A dividend of Rs. 100, equivalent to 20 per cent. per annum on each original share, and of Rs. 23, equal to 9½ per cent. per annum, on each of the new shares was declared.

The draft of a petition to the Board of Control was read in, and approved by the Meeting. Its object was to induce the Board to prohibit the unrestricted employment of Government Steamers as Tugs on the Hooghly. It has been rendered necessary by the Government having expressed its intention of reimbursing itself for the expenses of its Steam establishment by letting out its boats (including those expected to arrive here shortly) on hire, as Tugs, when not otherwise engaged. The report, and probably the draft petition will be published shortly.

The following resolutions were submitted to the Meeting and carried unanimously.

Proposed by Mr. Hill, seconded by Capt Sewell.

1st.—That the accounts for the half year ending 31st August, 1839, be passed and approved, and that the report of the Secretaries be approved and published.

Proposed by Mr. W. Bruce seconded by Dwarkanauth Tagore.

2nd.—That a dividend of 100 Rs. per share, being the equivalent of twenty per cent. per annum, be declared upon shares from No. 1 to 200 in the Association, being upon the capital originally subscribed, and that a dividend of 23 Rs per share, being equivalent to 9½ per cent. per annum, be declared upon shares Nos 201 to 400 in the Association, being upon the amount of increased capital subscribed.

Proposed by Mr. W. Bruce seconded by Mr. J. Carr.

3rd.—That from the further amounts of the profits upon shares No. 1 to 200, a loan of Rs. 3,100 be made to the Association, bearing interest at 6 per cent. per annum.

Proposed by Capt. Taylor, seconded by Mr. W. Bruce.

4th.—That payment be declared of the interest due to the subscribers to the increased capital to 31st May, 1839, from which date they enter upon the receipt of dividends from the profits of the Association.

Proposed by Capt. Richards seconded by Mr. Hill.

5th.—That the Association address to the Board of Control, a petition against the competition of Government vessels as Tugs on the River Hooghly, and that the petition read to this meeting be adopted subject to such modification as the Committee may suggest.

Proposed by the Chairman—

6th.—That the meeting record its sense of obligation for the services rendered by Capt. Henderson to the Association, and vote to him a piece of plate value one hundred guineas, with a suitable inscription.

REPORT OF THE ASSOCIATION.

GENTLEMEN,—On the last occasion of our having the pleasure to submit our usual half yearly statements of accounts and proceedings, we reported to you that the Andrew Henderson had been recently launched, and was then receiving her engines, that the new Steamer then on the stocks, had been lengthened in order to adapt her for Engines of greater power than had previously been expected for her, and that as soon as the Andrew Henderson should enter upon regular work, it was intended to take the opportunity of laying up the Forbes and the Seetakaund for a few necessary repairs.

The Andrew Henderson entered upon her first engagement on the 1st June, and we are happy to say that she has afforded very great and general satisfaction, and has fully answered the most sanguine expectations that could have been entertained of her.

The Forbes was put into Dock during the month of May, and re-coppered, and some necessary repairs having been effected, she has since worked as satisfactorily as ever. In the absence of any immediate engagement, the thinness of some of her Boiler plates occasioned our lately again laying her up to have new plates put in, rather than risk accident in the midst of our busy season, by delaying a repair that would soon have become inevitable.—She again began to work this morning, and, both in respect of her Hull and Engines, is, we believe, in excellent order.

The Seetakoond during the past half year has earned a greater amount of hire than at any previous period; but of late has constantly required more than usual attention and repair to her Engines, which are now much worn. We trust that she will continue as she has hitherto done, to contribute her fair proportion of profit to the association, until an arrangement can be made for placing in her new Engines, and of greater power, to which the proportions of the boat are well adapted. Now, however, that we have two more powerful and efficient boats, and shall shortly have another at work, more powerful than any, the Seetakoond will naturally fall into less urgent requisition, as we of course make it a rule to give the best and most powerful Steamer that is available whenever the services of all are not required at the same time.

Our fourth Steamer was launched since the close of the half year now under consideration. She is named the "Dwarkanauth," and is at present in Dock receiving her Engines, which arrived on the Royal Saxon a few weeks ago. The Committee have appointed Capt. Randle, a well-known commander of this port to the charge of the Dwarkanauth until she is completed, when the choice of the Steamers will probably be thrown open to the commanders in order of their seniority of appointment, unless the committee should have reason to make some other arrangement.

Mr. Forgan, who served for many years on the Mermaid, and is very strongly recommended, has been appointed mate.

Preparatory to her being launched on the 7th ultimo, and for a few days afterwards, we are unwilling to withdraw from the new vessel the services and attention of the builder and of other persons at the Dockyard whose assistance we required in making out the statements which are now submitted. To this circumstance, and the interruption of frequent references to Kidderpore and Howrah, which became necessary in checking the statements, must be attributed our having delayed somewhat beyond the usual period presenting to you the general accounts of the half-year which, however, we hope will now be found sufficiently clear and satisfactory in their details.

In addition to the usual account of receipts and disbursements we have drawn out a more comprehensive statement of the position of the Association, embracing, besides the entries included in the half yearly account, an exhibit of that general expenditure which represents the value of our block against the amount of capital realised, and liabilities incurred to meet the excess of that value beyond the capital subscribed.

In the statement referred to, the Forbes and Seetakoond stand at their first cost of Rs. 1,10,000 or Co.'s Rs. 1,17,333-5-4 and Rs. 90,000 or Co.'s Rs. 96,000 but a more just comparative valuation of Hull and Machinery, would perhaps admit of adding Rs. 6000 to the value of the Forbes, and deducting a like amount from that of the Seetakoond; and if this proposal meets with your concurrence the Forbes will stand upon the Books at 1,23,333-5-4 and the Seetakoond at 90,000, as we are assured that the Forbes is well worth the increased amount.

The Andrew Henderson's Block it will be seen is stated to have cost Rs. 1,40,000, of which amount the expense of her engines has been Rs. 58,400, and of her Hull 64,500.

The further expense of 17,100 has been incurred in landing and fitting her Engines, and in Dock hire, Stores, Crew, and Establishment to the date of her undertaking her first engagement. In the latter item are included, besides the salaries of her own Commander, Mate and Engineer, those of the Engineer and Boiler maker who accompanied the Engines from home. There are also many payments included, such as those for Crew, &c. which do not usually fall to the estimate of a ship's cost, but which we have placed to the Block account as they are necessarily incurred in completing the vessel preparatory to her entering upon employment.

Statements in detail, with full particulars of all materials used in her construction, are upon the Table, and we hope will be considered satisfactory.

Similar statements in regard to the Dwarkanauth, embracing all expenditure to the 31st Aug., are also before you. The amount standing at debit of this vessel is Rs. 59,986-2-8, and since the date to which these accounts have been brought up, we have paid Rs. 25,000 on account of the cost of her Engines, and have come under acceptance for Rs. 52,993-6 for the balance of that account.

Proportionally to the cost of the Andrew Henderson, the Dwarkanauth ought to cost, when completed, about 1,75,000.

It will be seen that the cost and building the Andrew Henderson and of her engines, scarcely, if at all, exceeds the amount originally estimated; but in completing her equipment for service, and in the heavy cost of fitting her Engines an amount of outlay has been incurred which was not sufficiently allowed for. And in regard to the Dwarkanauth, a further unavoidable increase has attended our receiving engines of increased power.

During the past half year, we have had also to meet the cost of Machinery received from England as advised in our last report. Premises have been taken at Howrah where the machinery is set up, and it enables us now with comparative ease and cheapness as well as with greater quickness and better dependence upon the quality of materials and workmanship, to undertake many repairs for which we had previously been dependent upon other establishments.

But these unexpected disbursements, falling extra upon an estimated cost of block which even in the first instance was in excess of the amount of capital which it was proposed to raise, has already thrown the association somewhat into debt upon its block account, and the amount must necessarily increase before the Dwarkanauth can commence working. When in addition to this debt must be further contemplated the eventual provision of new Engines for the Seetakoond, it may become a question whether at no distant date it would not be desirable to form another addition to capital which it is now ascertained can always be employed profitably.

Returning however to the subject of the accounts now before you, it will be recollected that the amount of increased capital subscribed was to bear interest at the rate of six per cent. until the date on which the first of the new steamers should commence working, and that after that date the new shareholders were to receive one third of the profits of the Association, until in, like manner, the second steamer should be ready, after which they would share equally with the old subscribers.

The date on which the Andrew Henderson commenced working, exactly divides the half year into two equal parts. And we do not think that by any more intricate division of accounts, a more correct result would have been obtained, than by the more simple mode which we propose with the sanction of the Committee, of dividing the entire profits of the six months into two equal parts, and considering the one-half to represent the net earnings from the 1st March to the 31st May, the period anterior to the completion of Andrew Henderson, and the other half as belonging to the earnings of the joint steamers and subject to the apportionment above explained.

Thus: the profit of the half year being in the aggregate..... Rs 27,720 13 0

The first half as referring to the period from 1st March to 31st May belongs to the old shareholders..... Rs 13,860 6 6

And to this must be added two-thirds of the remaining half, or..... 9,240 4 4

Making a net profit to the original shareholders of .. Rs 3,100 10 10

While the new shareholders receive one-third of the earnings from 1st June to 31st August 4,620 2 2 27,720 13 0

Small as is the amount falling to the new shareholders upon so short a period of earnings, we trust, that this will not be considered unsatisfactory, when it is recollected that it is at the rate of more than 9½ per cent, per annum, upon the entire amount of new subscription, and is derived from the earnings of only one of the two new boats for which that subscription was paid. When the Dwarkanauth shall begin also to contribute to the profit of the Association, which we hope will be during the current half year, the new shareholders will enter upon the full rate of profit enjoyed by the original subscribers.

The interest payable to the new subscribers to 31st May last, is an item which should fall against profits. But until the equalisation of profit and liability occurs, it will be perhaps better not to debit the amount as against the profits of any particular half year. Nevertheless, we think it would be satisfactory, on declaring a first dividend to the new shareholders, to pay off their claim of interest at once, and debit the amount subject to future adjustment. This, accordingly, with the sanction of the Committee, we shall have the pleasure of proposing for your approval.

The original proprietors, we trust, will find every reason to be satisfied, if after a half-year in which we have had to contend with, the total stagnation of one principal branch of trade which, hitherto, has most constantly employed our steamers, we are yet prepared to propose to them the usual dividend of Rs. 100 on each share, and a reserve of Rs. 3100 in further loan to the joint fund. The total profits of the old Association to the day on which the junction of the old and new capitals was effected, has been no less than the mere fraction under 607 realised in the course of three years and a quarter. We are sanguine in our hope that the joint fund will work not less profitably: especially so soon as the first difficulties shall have been surmounted of having had to meet the charge of a Block account of greater value than is compassed by the amount of our subscribed capital.

Our report having somewhat exceeded the usual limits, we shall pass over any further subject of remark that might occur, in order to request your attention to the circumstance of a correspondence which we have lately had relative to the employment of Government steamers as Tugs upon this River.

We have understood that instructions were recently sent out by the Court of Directors, requiring that all those steamers which are now building in India, or at home, for the Government service, should be employed here as Tug vessels, upon a calculation of the probability that their earnings may cover their expenses. We have no great apprehension on this latter score unless enhanced rates of hire be charged; but whether working to a profit or loss it is evident that the employment of a Government vessel whenever one of our Tugs remains idle, does a positive injury to this Association, and one which can have no excuse of necessity, or even of convenience to the public, while we believe it to be also in utter disregard of the spirit and letter of the East India Company's Charter.

Being well assured of the correctness of our information, we addressed Government on the subject, and pointing out that we now should shortly have no fewer than four Tugs available to the general wants of the river, we urged their declaring an intention no longer to compete with us, more especially on the extended scale, which we understood to be contemplated by the Court of Directors.—The answer of Government was, necessarily unfavorable to our request, the orders of the Court of Directors being of course regarded as paramount to every other consideration.

We have consequently to suggest that the entire Association should directly address the Board of Control of whose decision we believe little doubt need be entertained. In the event, however of disappointment in this respect, we would even press the subject, in appeal to still higher authority.

A petition to the Board of Control has been prepared, and is submitted for your general adoption; but there has not yet been time to place it before the Committee for consideration, and therefore it is merely offered, under such modification as they may direct; after which we shall propose obtaining your signatures thereto, and forwarding it to England at as early a date as possible, as it might be essential that the interference of the Board of Control should be in time to prevent the new competition on the part of Government, which it might be easier thus to anticipate, than to resist when once actually commenced upon.

The grounds of objection that we would urge are, we trust, set forth with sufficient clearness to prevent their being in any way misconstrued into the depreciation of any other than a Government competition. From any other which may arise, we can only desire to meet an open, fair, and generous struggle for public preference and patronage; and we shall only further say in the spirit of these remarks, that if indeed the Satellite which arrived in our River but yesterday, should thus be destined to compete with us, we hope only that without trenching upon the profits of our own business, she too may equally find employment as profitable to the port and to her owners as our Boats have ever proved themselves.

CARR, TAGORE AND Co., Secys. Steam Tug Assn.

Calcutta, August 31, 1839.—Hark, Oct. 10,

ADDRESS TO SIR HERBERT COMPTON.

We have much pleasure in giving publicity to the following correspondence, relative to an address, and a valuable testimonial transmitted from hence to England to Sir HERBERT COMPTON. The presentation of these would have taken place here, previous to his departure, but the compliment was declined by Sir HERBERT, as he had not then received the acceptance of his resignation from England. We believe it met him at Suez,

A number of the opulent and influential heads of the Natives, met on an invitation at the residence of Sir J. AWDRY a few days ago, for the purpose of hearing the reply of Sir HERBERT. Sir JOHN AWDRY had the honor of communicating to his former colleague, the wishes of the Natives, and was accordingly made the channel of his answer.

Alluding to the subject, on which they had assembled His Lordship expressed his gratification in having such agreeable duties devolved on him; he expressed his pleasure at seeing the talent and integrity of his learned friend duly appreciated, he hoped that the sentiments delivered in the reply he had the honor to read, were in harmony with their own feelings, and hoped, that nothing should tend to damp or retard the spirit of improvement which was now abroad. His Lordship concluded with some other remarks of a congratulatory nature, and shortly afterward the gentlemen took their departure all apparently highly gratified.

TO THE HON'BLE SIR JOHN WITHER AWDRY
KNIGHT, ACTING CHIEF JUSTICE OF HER MAJESTY'S SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY.

HON'BLE SIR.—At the request of our Countrymen, who have signed the accompanying address to Sir Herbert Compton, late Chief Justice of Her Majesty's Supreme Court of this Presidency, expressive of their respect and gratitude, for the manner in which he discharged the important functions of that high office, and the benefits which the native community have derived from his endeavours to promote their welfare, we most respectfully beg you will do them the favor to forward that document to Sir Herbert Compton.

The subscribers to the address hope, Hon'ble Sir, that you will kindly excuse the liberty they have taken in making this request, as they were precluded from giving expression to their sentiments before Sir Herbert Compton's departure, owing to his retirement from the Bench not having, at that period, actually taken place, and they feel, that there could not be a more appropriate channel of conveying those sentiments to Sir Herbert Compton than his late colleague and able coadjutor in devising and giving effect to those measures connected with the administration of justice on this Island, which must ever claim their grateful acknowledgments.

The service of plate which the native community request Sir Herbert Compton to accept as a memento of their respect and gratitude, Messrs. Forbes and Co., will be solicited to present to him in their name.

We have the honor to be,

Hon'ble Sir,

With the greatest respect,

Your most obt. humble Servants,

Bombay, 23d March, 1839.

TO THE HON'BLE SIR HERBERT A. D. COMPTON, KNIGHT, LATE CHIEF JUSTICE OF HER MAJESTY'S SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE, BOMBAY, &c. &c.

HON'BLE SIR.—It would have been a relief to us, the undersigned natives of Bombay, could we have given expression in this form, to our deep feeling of sorrow at your departure, when you left this country for England in January last. The consideration, however, which then restrained us from doing so, having been removed by your retirement (officially announced within the last few days) from the high office of Chief Justice of Her Majesty's Supreme Court of Judicature at Bombay, which you held at the time of your embarkation, we can no longer refrain from giving utterance to our sentiments, and offering you the tribute of our respect, esteem, and gratitude, not only for the manner in which you have discharged, for the last seven years, the arduous and important functions of that elevated and responsible office, but also for the many measures of public utility, convenience, and safety, for which the community of this Island, and the native portion of it in particular, are indebted to you.

When we call to mind the benefits which you have conferred, or were mainly instrumental in procuring for us, we cannot but regard it as a most happy event for us, that the choice of our sovereign, in the selection of the individual to preside over the administration of Justice at this Presidency, fell on one who, to your legal attainments, and other eminent qualifications, added an intimate acquaintance acquired during a long residence in India, with the laws and institutions, the manners and customs, of the various castes, composing the population, joined to a kindly disposition towards the natives of this country. In the fulfilment of the high trust thus reposed in you, you have made us feel it a blessing to live under the administration of the powers of the Supreme Court, for we have not only been protected in our lives and our property, our characters, and our liberty, but we have ever found you solicitous to apply and enforce the laws which secured us those inestimable benefits, with a liberal regard for our diversified manners and usages, and the peculiar circumstances of our situation.

Among those who now address you, there are not a few who marked with admiration, the eminent talents, the observing and sagacious mind, the sound and accurate judgment, through which you obtained the confidence of the public, and a just and honorable distinction at the bar, ere you were called upon to fill the high office which you have just vacated. The hopes which your appointment excited, have been fulfilled beyond our most sanguine expectations.

It is not for us to dwell in this place on the unwearied application, the unvariable solicitude, with which your judicial duties have been performed, but when we consider the nature of those duties, the time, the thought, the deliberation which they demanded, and reflected that you still found leisure, and condescended, to devise and advocate various measures calculated to promote our best interests, we should justly incur the reproach of ingratitude, did we omit to acknowledge how much we owe to your good will and generous exertions on our behalf.

Immediately on your assuming the function of your responsible office, the defective state of the Police system attracted your anxious consideration, and the result of your and your colleague Sir John Awdry's recommendation to Government on the subject, was the remodelling of the whole Establishment, and placing it on a very efficient footing. The effects of the salutary reforms, then introduced, are generally felt and acknowledged, being conspicuous in the diminution of crime, and the extended security of persons and property, which is now enjoyed by all classes of the population of the Presidency.

Adverting to the wise and benevolent enactment passed by the British Legislature some years ago, declaring our countrymen eligible for the honourable offices of Justices of the Peace and Grand Jurors, we are fully persuaded that we may state, without detracting from the praise due to the enlightened nobleman, who presided over the Government of Bombay, at the time when the provisions of the Act in question were carried into effect at the Presidency, that the prompt execution of the wishes of the Home Government, and the election of the Natives of this Island to those important situations, long anterior to the introduction of the law at Madras and Calcutta, was in a great measure owing to your powerful advocacy of the claims and fitness of our countrymen.

The inhabitants of Bombay are not less indebted to your zeal and anxiety for their welfare, for the judicious and highly desirable improvement introduced by you in the several branches of the Supreme Court under its various jurisdictions, and particularly the change effected in the Insolvent Court, and the Court for the trial of Small Causes.

The Parsee Community take this opportunity of expressing their great obligations to you, for the support and assistance which you were pleased to extend to them, and to which they are principally indebted for the benefits secured to them by the Act of the Government of India, passed in 1837, which provides that the transmission of immovable property within the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Supreme Court, on the death or intestacy of Parsees, having an interest in the same, be taken, under certain restrictions to have been of the nature of chattels real and out of freehold, whereby the doubts and uncertainty which existed in regard to such property, and which caused much anxiety to parties, have been removed.

The lively interest felt by you in all that concerns our welfare, evinced in the active and valuable aid given by you to the cause of native improvement, to the establishments in general for imparting to them the benefits of a sound and liberal education, and to the Native Education Society in particular; manifested also in the prominent part you have always taken in measures for the advancement of the natives of India in the scale of Society, and the amelioration of their political condition, could not but command our respect and esteem, and will not fail to cause your name to be associated in our minds, and in the minds of our children, with the respected names of those great and good men, the Governors and Judges, who will ever be remembered by the people of this Presidency as their friends and benefactors.

It ought could strengthen our obligations to you, it was the example of one in your exalted station, exhibited in your intercourse in private life with natives of this country, marked as it was by affability and unaffected kindness, springing from a genuine benevolence, which could not fail to win their regard and esteem, while your urbanity and condescension, engaged the affections of all those who were honored with your acquaintance or friendship.

We beg you will do us the honor to accept in token of our respect, our gratitude, and our esteem, a service of plate, to bear an appropriate inscription, of the value of £1500 Sterling, which will be presented to you on our behalf by Messrs. Forbes and Co. of London.

With earnest wishes, that, in the bosom of your family in your native country, you may enjoy health and happiness, and with fervent prayers that the best gifts of bountiful Providence may ever attend you.

We beg with sincere respect to subscribe ourselves.

Honored Sir,

Your most obedient and very grateful servants.

Bombay, 3d March, 1839.

TO JAGGONATH SUNKERSETTI, DHACKJEE DADAJEE, JAMSSETJEE JEEJEEBHOOY, FRAMJEE COWASJEE, MAHOMED ALLEY ROGAY, AGA MAHOMED RAHIM SHERAZEE, ESQRE, AND OTHER GENTLEMEN, NATIVES OF BOMBAY.

GENTLEMEN.—I have much difficulty in expressing to you in suitable language, the great gratification which I have derived from the perusal of a document addressed by you to me, and which, at your request, has been transmitted to me, and in a manner most kindly, by my respected friend who has succeeded me at Bombay as Chief Justice. The satisfaction which an avowal of your sentiments must have occasioned, however conveyed to me, has been much increased by the channel, which you have chosen for the communication.

Greatly as I value the testimony afforded by your assurance, that in discharging my judicial duties, I have not disappointed your expectation, and that I have contributed to promote the public good, I gladly perceive that you have been aware that some of the measures to which you have alluded, could not have been carried into effect, if I had not been assisted by my learned colleague, or if the Government of Bombay had not been disposed to comply with our joint recommendations.

Many of you, I believe, are persuaded that much is yet required to prevent crime, and to improve the Police of Bombay, and I confidently expect that measures will be devised by the Legislative Council of India, to provide for the better security of your persons and property, and to remove from your Island some of the numerous aliens who have resorted to it, to escape punishment in other countries, and who live by depredations on the public. I moreover trust, that some of your countrymen will be found competent and disposed to perform the duties of Police Magistrates. The ability and impartiality with which the Native justices have discharged their functions at the Petty Sessions, have, in my opinion, fully justified a measure, which in its nature was experimental, and demonstrated the fitness of the Native Magistrates to be included in the General Commission of the Peace.

For the important enactment, which I trust, has effectually set at rest the vexatious questions respecting title to immovable property at Bombay, possessed by or descended from deceased Parsees, you are in a great degree indebted to a member of your present Government, who, being at Calcutta, induced his coadjutors in the law commission to recommend that measure to the early consideration of the legislative council; and although I was instrumental in collecting information, and in explaining the mischief which required remedy, yet, without the assistance of your present Chief Justice, the necessity for immediate legislation might not have appeared sufficiently urgent.

Having passed nearly half a century at the different presidencies of India, and in the course of my professional career, having been placed in intimate communication with your countrymen, I could not fail to become acquainted with their habits and feelings, or to take a lively interest in their welfare. If I have discharged my duties as a Judge in a satisfactory manner, as you have kindly testified, I have merely followed the example of my predecessors in office, but if in private life, I have conformed myself, so as to conciliate your esteem, and to merit the friendly expressions of your regard, which have been conveyed to me, I have yet but imperfectly fulfilled my intentions. From your assurance that my name will be associated in your minds with those of the friends and benefactors, who I know, are by you remembered and revered, my gratification is much more complete than I can adequately express.

The advantages which have been derived from the Native Education Society, from the Elphinstone College, and from other institutions which have promoted the diffusion of useful knowledge at Bombay, are now sufficiently appreciated, and I hope, that your countrymen of all castes and classes, following the laudable example set by many of you, whom I am now addressing, will avail themselves of the advantages of education to improve their moral and political condition, and to ascend to a position in Society, equal to that of their European fellow subjects.

The service of plate which you have directed to be presented to me, shall during my life, be regarded as a most munificent testimonial of your kindness, and I hope that it may be duly estimated and preserved by my children's children.

With my most sincere wishes for the welfare of you all individually and collectively, and for the prosperity and happiness of your countrymen in general.

I have the honor to subscribe, myself, Gentlemen,

Your Sincere Friend,

Seen to the Dorjiling Garden and Plantation Society, Dorjiling, 4th October, 1839.

(Circular)

SIR,—I am directed to forward for your consideration, a copy of Correspondence relating to the establishment of a Society to be denominated the "DORJILING GARDEN AND PLANTATION SOCIETY," and to express the hope of the present Subscribers, that you will support an Institution likely to be of very great public utility by becoming a Member.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient humble Servant,

J. T. PEARSON,

Seen to the Dorjiling Garden and Plantation Society, Dorjiling, 4th October, 1839.

NOTE.—Subscriptions of any amount received by Messrs. Cantor and Co. of Calcutta, and Mr. Pearson, Secretary to the Society at Dorjiling. A subscription of 50 Rs. and upwards, within the first twelve months, will constitute the person so subscribing, a Member of the Society.

To A. CAMPBELL, Esq., &c. &c. &c., IN CHARGE OF DORJILING.

SIR,—As the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India desire to send some plants to Dorjiling to insure them to the climate, the undersigned are of opinion, that the following plan, for this and still more important purposes, may be advantageously adopted

2. We propose to form an establishment, which shall be—

I. A Nursery for Oaks, Chestnuts, Maples, Rhododendrons, Pines, and all other Forest Trees growing in these mountains, to supply the Agricultural and Horticultural Society in India, and establishments and individuals in Europe, America, the Cape, and New Holland, free of expence beyond carriage and packing.

II. A Nursery for Fruit Trees of all kinds, particularly European, such as Gooseberries, Currants, Cherries, Apples, Pears, Plums, &c. &c., which cannot be raised in the Plains, but which, by being first reared and planted out here, may either supply Seed, which can be raised below, or the young Trees themselves can be supplied to parties who wish to try the experiment of inuring them to the climate of India

III. A Garden for the purpose of growing Vegetable Seeds of the best quality ; and to ensure this, the Vegetables planted, will be entirely appropriated to the raising of Seed, and not for the supply of Vegetables for the table.

IV. A Garden for Flower Seeds on a like principle. And should the circumstances of the case admit, we further propose that—

V. The whole establishment shall, as much as possible, be formed on the model of a Botanic Garden, and be specially adapted, in the strictly Botanic part, to the Vegetable productions of these regions, not however excluding those of other countries.

3d. To accomplish these things, a portion of ground will be required at the Station, which it is probable you may be able to grant free of cost, in consideration of the great public benefit such a scheme is calculated to confer; but if not, we are willing to pay such yearly quit rent as may be reasonable.

4th. As no plan can be permanent without a permanent income, we propose to raise by subscription a sum, the interest of which may (together with what we hope to obtain from the Agricultural and Horticultural Society,) be sufficient to maintain the establishment; and in that case, to prevent loss, all funds will be invested in Government Securities.

5th. To effect this, it will perhaps be expedient to form a Society to be called "THE DORJILING GARDEN AND PLANTATION SOCIETY," which will act in conjunction with, and as a branch of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society; and of which, all persons subscribing to the amount of 50 Rs. and upwards within the ensuing twelve months, will have a right to be Members, without being ever afterwards called upon for any further subscription.

6th. The produce of the Garden, Trees, Plants, Seeds, &c. will be distributed as those of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society are, giving the preference to Members, who will receive them free of all expence except that of carriage and packing; and such as remain will be open to the public, at a reasonable extra charge, to be hereafter determined upon.

7th. As no profit is to be expected, the establishment will be extended according to the extension of its means.

8th. We have thus stated the object and means proposed to accomplish it, of a Society which, if properly conducted, will be of very great benefit both to this and to other countries. More particular details must be left for future consideration by the Subscribers, and a Managing Committee at Dorjiling. We have only further to observe, that this climate is particularly adapted for raising Vegetables; the Carrots, Potatoes, Cabbages, Peas, Beans, and in short all yet tried, are quite equal to those of Europe; and the importance of an abundant supply of good Garden Seeds, growing in the country, and consequently not liable to fail like those brought from Europe, the Cape, and other distant places, need not be dwelt upon.

The introduction of Forest Trees of an noble description as those of this region, into our own country, and the temperate latitudes of Europe, America, New Holland, and the Cape, would, of itself, if nothing else of immediate benefit to this country were to arise from it, be an object of incalculable value. We cannot doubt therefore, of raising a sum fully adequate to the end in view, and as a beginning, the undersigned beg to subscribe the sum of 50 Rs. each, and one of our Members, Mr. Pearson, has agreed to act as Secretary and Manager.

We have the honor to be Sir,

Your most obedient humble servants,

Dorjiling, 28th August, 1839.

DORJILING, 29th August, 1839.

To COLONEL LLOYD,
LIEUTENANT NAPIER,
H. M. LOW, AND
J. T. PEARSON, ESQRS., DORJILING.

GENTLEMEN,— I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your Letter of the 23rd instant, containing proposals for the establishment at this place of a Garden and Plantation Society, stating the various objects to be attained by the same, and submitting an application for a suitable piece of ground free of cost if possible, but if not, stating your willingness to pay a reasonable quit rent for the same.

2. The scheme appears to me full of usefulness to the Settlement of Dorjiling, admirably calculated to aid the objects of the Agricultural Society of India and to meet the wishes of many persons in our own country, and throughout Europe, who are anxiously desiring to transfer the treasures of the Himalayan forest to those countries.

3. I beg leave however to suggest, that as a portion of your proposed plan, an arrangement for supplying the Lapchas about Dorjiling, and the Hill people generally of the neighbouring countries, with improved descriptions of Wheat and Barley Seed, is much to be desired, while the introduction of the Potatoe into use among the same people, is an object well worthy your care and attention.

4. The most eligible piece of Ground at the Station for your purpose, and one not well suited for building on is, I think, the cleared space to the South and West of Colonel Lloyd's location and to the North and West of the road leading to the Spring; it is of considerable extent, of varied form and aspect, and close to the water. As the expected arrival of Trees and Plants from the Agricultural Society renders it necessary to afford you the early means of receiving them, I shall take it upon me at once to grant you the Ground above alluded to, free of all charge for rent for five years, and subject to quit rent afterwards of 2 Rs. per acre per annum; and at an early date, should you still desire it, I will submit your wishes for a free grant of the land for the consideration of Government.

5. The ground alluded to, is bounded on the South and West by the Bamboos now defining Colonel Lloyd's location, on the East and North by the Road leading to the great Spring, and the House of the European Sergeants; the boundary towards the valley will be the junction of two Streamlets, which have their sources in the ground itself.

6. In furtherance of your project, I beg your acceptance of 100 Rs. donation as my private subscription, and I shall annually, while in my present office, pay you 50 Rs. towards the current expences of the establishment.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient Servant.

(Signed)

A. CAMPBELL,

Asst. to Resident in Nipaul, in charge of Dorjiling.

To A. CAMPBELL, Esq., &c. &c. &c., in charge of Dorjiling.

Sir,—We have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of this date, and in reply to inform you, that we accept the Ground therein described on the terms offered.

We are also of opinion, that your suggestion to introduce wheat, barley, potatoes, and other agricultural products among the natives of these mountains is a very valuable one, and it shall be adopted accordingly. (Indeed it has already been done, to a considerable extent, by Colonel Lloyd.)

We further beg to express our thanks for the cordial manner in which you have joined the Society.

We have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient humble Servants,

(Sd.) G. W. A. LLOYD, Lieut.

THE SANS SOUCI.

It would seem, that not all the good people of Calcutta have, during the late holiday times, got a surfeit of pleasure, or exhausted the portion of their funds consecrated to amusement. As evidence of this, the overflowing state of the Theatre on Thursday night, may be triumphantly adduced. It was, probably, the best house that has yet been congregated within the walls of the New Drury. Every chair in the stalls was occupied, and even good standing places, were at a premium. Now, that the cold weather has set in, the audience, though closely packed, will feel very little inconvenience from the heat, and this will probably embolden many to visit the Theatre, who would otherwise, through an allowable regard for their personal comfort, be deterred from attending.

Of the three highly amusing farces provided for the night's treat, the first in order of representation, was the "Affair of Honour." As a dramatic composition this piece is not of very high pretensions, and depends almost entirely on the merits and exertions of the actors for any applause it may draw down. The good thing—the joke of it, lies in the arrangement made by a young military Surgeon, for settling a quarrel between his two warlike rivals, Major Limkey and Captain Carnage, to whom the ordinary process, by pistols, is interdicted. He offers them two pills, one of which is harmless, and the other said to be of such poisonous ingredients, that the unhappy chooser of it would be defunct in twenty minutes after he had swallowed it. This, of course, is a hoax, and the boluses are both of them innocuous, but the manœuvre has the desired effect of stifling their enmity, and of consoling them, in the joy of a new lease of life, for the loss of Madame Tourville, who becomes, of course, the prize of the ingenious young Doctor Henry Clements.

Master Modu's representation of the drawing, affected, conceited Major Limkey was in his best manner. The character, it is true, was a little highly coloured, but, perhaps, not more so than was absolutely necessary for stage effect. But, surely, never such a consummate puppy wore uniform, either English or French. The manner in which his vanity made its way through his affected modesty, his contempt for his diminutive rival Carnage, and his notion of his irresponsibility with the fair sex, were admirably given, and won for the character, the applause, which it deserved, as the best in the piece.

Ballin is very great in characters of very broad humour, and appears in general to have a very good conception of the ludicrous; but he seemed to have missed its true spirit in his personation of Captain Carnage. He was too apt to allow those irresistibly laughable looks and motions which made his Tom Short so entertaining, to display themselves in the pompous and pugnacious little hero. The most effective way of portraying such a character, would have been to have maintained an immoveable solemnity and loftiness of tone, gait and gesture, which, by contrast, with his dwarfish person, would have been ludicrous in the extreme. At times, these traits were exhibited in Ballin's representation, and were applauded accordingly; but, as before observed, he seemed too ready to descend from his "high estate."

Nonpareil's Vincent would have been excellent, if he had thrown a little more warmth and spirit into it. He seemed to have acquired the knack of managing his voice more perfectly than he has heretofore done. There was none of that startling abruptness which disfigured his former representations; but there was a coldness in his love-scenes, especially, that would have augured ill for the success of his "addresses" in real life. On the whole, however, the performance on Thursday night exhibited great improvement in this promising young amateur.

The only female characters in the piece, were Madame Tourville and her maid, Martha, represented by Misses Learch and Tonson. Neither of them were parts of much importance, and it would have been selfish to have wished for the former of these ladies, in the present state of her health, one of greater interest, and consequently of greater labour and excitement. The little that, as Madame Tourville, she had to do, was, however, done in her usual pleasant manner. Mrs. Tonson is still improving. Let her acquire yet more warmth and spirit, and not speak to the audience, more than is absolutely necessary, and then she will be an useful and praise-worthy actress.

The humour of the second piece, Shocking Events, is in the system pursued by an old Veterinary Surgeon, Griffinhoof, to restore the faculty of speech to the supposed dumb youth Pugs. His theory is, that a person so circumstanced, will, on experiencing sudden pain or alarm, endeavour to express his feelings in articulate sounds. He, therefore, tries the effect of sundry violent shocks, such as shouting in his patient's ear, unexpectedly firing a pistol, snatching away the chair on which the youth is about to seat himself, &c., &c. All, however, is ineffectual. Mr. Pugs, who is in reality a singer at public dinners, and famous for the depth of his double G., has reasons for remaining silent, and does so, until a dig in the stomach is too much for his resolution.

The best characters in this farce are, those of Griffinhoof and Pugs. The Secretary, as the former, was very lively and animated, and made a most decidedly good thing of it. The zeal and earnestness of the old Horse Doctor—the "medical adviser to four-footed animals" (as the dumb youth dubbed him, behind his back) in the prosecution of his favourite scheme, and his extravagant and rampant exultation on the supposed attainment of success, were most amusingly exhibited.

Pugs was most cleverly performed by Bailin, whose skill in pantomimic acting, the character was admirably adapted to display. His dumb show, so expressive and so ludicrous, called forth roars of laughter. Altogether it was one of his best parts.

The ostensible hero of this piece is Captain Spoff, a dashing militaire, but with very little, either to say or do. He was enacted by the new amateur of the Algeron-school, Mowbray, who must throw into his performances a little more of life and vigour, before he will be able to create much of a sensation as an actor. Let him not despair, however; practice will increase confidence, and with confidence (in acting at least) usually comes skill.

Mrs. Francis, as the buxom servant-girl Kitty, displayed all her usual excellence, and did full justice to the character. Mrs. Tolson as Miss Dorothy Griffinhoof, was somewhat more lively and animated than she usually is.

The last piece was the famed and favourite farce of "The Wandering Minstrel," performed "by particular desire." The farce itself is, in truth, an exceedingly trivial affair, and, robbed of its incomparable Jem Bage, would be in a worse predicament than the tragedy of Hamlet, with the character of Hamlet omitted. But, with the aid of the said Jem Bage, it is one of the drollest and most laughter-moving little pieces that ever was concocted.

The plot is simply this, Mrs. Crineum, a vain and foolish woman, who was admirably represented by Mrs. Francis, learns from the papers, that a certain nobleman, who is wandering about the country in the guise of a wandering minstrel, is daily expected in the town in which she resides. Thereupon she bares her husband, Mr. Crineum, (the Secretary) till he consents to offer to the disguised peer, the use of his house, while he remains in town. On proceeding in search of him, they find at their door, Jem Bage an itinerant clarionet-player, who lives by the uttering of bad notes and who "never moves on under a shillen." Mrs. C. accosts him, as the disguised nobleman, and he, spying profit in the adventure, favours the delusion, which is kept up until another "Wandering Minstrel" appears in the person of a lover of Julia, Mrs. Crineum's niece. This gentleman has no difficulty in persuading the old woman, that he is the real "Simon Pure," and in consequence, marries the niece.

Master Modus in dress, manner, voice, and dialect gave a most accurate and amusing portraiture of the vagrant musician. It was the grand attraction of the night and kept the audience in a continued roar of laughter, and will, no doubt, induce many of them to witness it once more on Monday night, when the three pieces will be repeated for the last time.

A great improvement is about to be made in the boxes, the seats of which are to be raised six inches each. By this arrangement, those patronising that part of the house, will be able to see on to the stage, as well as those who are located nearer to it.—Hurkara, October 26.

The stalls of the Theatre were again completely filled on Monday night. Sir Jasper Nicholls, the new Commander-in-Chief with his lady and some of the members of his family, were present, and seemed highly amused with the humour of the performances.

The pieces represented were "Naval Engagements," (substituted for "The Affair of Honour") "Shocking Events" and the "Wandering Minstrel." The two former pieces part off in the usual smooth and effective manner;—Master Modus's "fine old English Admiral" in "Naval Engagements" was better than ever, and the Secretary's Griffinhoof gained him at least as much applause as it did on its first representation.

To the conclusion of the second piece all went on in the customary pleasant manner, but, at the commencement of "The Wandering Minstrel," to which all looked forward with eager anticipation of merriment and delight, it was announced that Mr. Leach, who had performed Miss Mortimer in "Naval Engagements" with much esprit, was suddenly become so unwell as to incapacitate her from undertaking the part assigned her in the last piece. This intelligence, as might be expected, threw somewhat of a damp upon the audience, but the drolleries of Jem Bage soon restored it to all its accustomed cheerfulness. Robbed of two scenes, the farce proceeded, until the presence of Mr. Tweedle, the professor of music, was required, when, lo! that gentleman was not forthcoming. Search was immediately made for him; but it was some time before his "whereabout" was discovered. When at length he did appear, and the business of the piece proceeded, he received a wiggling, which set the house in a roar of laughter, and which, it is to be hoped, he will never forget. Sir you're a humbug, and never is o he found ren you're wanted." This, of course, was from Jem Bage, or rather from his personator Master Modus, to whom great credit is due for the manner in which his ready wit enabled him to fill up the gap in the performance. So well was this done, that, it is a fact that some of those who had not previously seen the farce played, were not conscious of the actual deficiency.

Altogether, the serious interruptions to the smooth flow of business, occasioned by Mrs. Leach's illness and Mr. Bailin's unaccountable absence, were surmounted in an admirable manner; but it is unfortunate that such accidents should have occurred on that night, above all others, when the theatre was honoured by the presence of the gallant Sir Jasper and his amiable family. It is to be hoped, however, that some of their friends will kindly assure them, that such untoward occurrences are unprecedented in the brief annals of the Sans Souci, and it is to be hoped, may never again take place.

It is a painful duty to allude to the disorderly and violent conduct of those whose rank & presumed gentlemanliness, lead to the expectation of better things from them. But it is necessary to denounce the contemner of salutary and well established regulations, and the disturber of public tranquility, whether he hold a commission in Her Majesty's army, or only a subordinate situation in a Government Secretariat. It is, therefore, needful to record the misconduct of certain hooligans, several of them in red jackets who, in spite of repeated interdictions, persisted in smoking cigars opposite the entrance to the theatre, much to the annoyance of the ladies inside. The consequence was, that it became necessary to attempt the forcible removal of one or two of these nuisances, and this produced a collision between the military officers and those of the police. A row ensued, in which it is said one of the red-jacketed youths became so valiant, and showed such strong symptoms of an inclination to draw his sword upon the constables, that one of his more prudent comrades was under the necessity of depriving him of it for a time. How true is the adage, that "fools and children should never be trusted with edged tools." It is to be hoped that some of these presumptuous brawlers, who showed so little of gallantry to the fair sex, or respect for the presence of their Commander-in-Chief, will be brought to the Police Office to answer for their conduct, and if so, they shall have all the glory that the announcement of their names, rank, and individual acts of heroism, can confer upon them.—Hurk. Oct. 30.

MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

Proceedings of the Fourth Quarterly General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund for the year 1839.

At a quarterly general meeting of subscribers to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, held at the Town Hall, Calcutta, on Monday, the 14th day of October, 1829, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Present.—Alex. Smith, Esq., M. D., in the chair; Thos. Smith, F. Corbyn, John Grant, Alex. Garden, M. D., W. Raleigh, H. H. Spry, M. D., H. S. Mercer, H. Chapman, and H. H. Goodeve, M. D., Esquires.

The Officiating Secretary read the proceedings of the last quarterly general meeting held on Monday, the 8th July last, and the following report of the proceedings of the committee of management for the quarter ending this day.

REPORT.

Bengal Medl. Retirg. Fund Office, Calcutta, Oct. 14.

The ten annuities declared at the last quarterly general meeting have been offered to subscribers duly qualified by advertisement, which has appeared in the public papers of the day, and agreeably to the regulations, the letters of application will be opened on the 31st instant.

On the subject of resignation the committee of management has also to report the retirement on half pay of Mr. William Bell, who has furnished the requisite medical certificate, and agreeably to section XXXIV. has had the amount of his accumulated subscription returned to him. The rule, however, which authorizes such a refund, being one which militates against the principle of benefit of survivorship, as shown in Mr. Griffith Davies's report, (page 41) the committee of management would recommend to this meeting the abolition of this rule, and if so determined on, the committee will submit the question for the consideration of the subscribers at large.

The committee of management, in reference to the circumstance which led to Mr. Grimes's (since dead) resignation and departure from India, without having paid into the Government Treasury, the balance due on his account, to entitle him to an annuity, has to report the receipt of a note from Mr. F. Bathie, Assignee of the estate of F. H. Bathie & Co., requesting to know at the desire of Mr. Bathie whether Dr. Grimes' annuity fee may now be paid, and what will be the consequence to that gentleman of its not having been paid in due course. The Secretary intimated in reply, that under the peculiar circumstances of Mr. Grimes's case, it is probable the committee of management will forego any penalty on the amount of annuity fine being immediately paid into the General Treasury with interest at 5 per cent. on account of Mr. Grimes, since which no further communication on the subject has been received.

Adverting to the necessity or otherwise, of continuing the present maximum rates of subscriptions, the Committee of management begs to submit the following schedule of paying subscribers at present in India, by which it will be seen that, should the applicants for annuities come forward to the extent specified in the public advertisement, in order to provide for the six annuities for the year next ensuing, maximum rates must continue in force.

The following abstract shows that the funds required for (6) six annuities amount to Co.'s Rs. 1,57,412, 10 4 one lakh, fifty seven thousand four hundred and twelve, ten annas and four pie, and that the subscriptions at the maximum rate can only provide Co.'s Rs. 1,39,153 1 0 one lakh, thirty-nine thousand, one hundred and fifty three and one anna, which leaves a deficit of Co.'s Rs. 18,259 9 4 eighteen thousand, two hundred and fifty nine, nine annas, and four pie.

Value of (6) six annuities at the average age of 42 years is Sa. Rs. 31, 419 each or Sa. Rs. 1,38,514 for the six which is equal to Co.'s Rs.

Deduct amount of half value of above 6 annuities payable by applicants previous to admission on the Fund is Co.'s Rs. 1,00,540 12 9

By order of the Committee of Management,

HENRY H. SPRY, M. D. Offg. Secy.

Proposed by Dr. Smith, seconded by Dr. Spry, and resolved,—That the report now read be received and adopted.

Proposed by Dr. Grant, seconded by Dr. Goodeve, and resolved,—That as the amount of loss likely to be entailed on the institution by the operation of Section XXXIV. of the fund regulations, will in all probability prove very great, and interfere most materially with the possibility of arriving at perfectly accurate conclusions in the calculations of chances, it be abrogated from save as respects incumbents, who having entered the fund upon the faith of that rule's continued operation, the present motion is not to be considered as having retrospective effect.

Resolved.—That the maximum rates of subscription be continued as at present.

Resolved.—That the thanks of the meeting be given to the chairman.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society, Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, the 5th October, 1839.

A. C. McRae, Esq., M. D., proposed at the last meeting, was ballotted for and duly elected.

R. Kinsey Esq. Bengal Medical Service, was proposed as a Member by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. O'Shaughnessy

The following letters were read —

From Dr Morehead, forwarding for the Society's Library, a copy of the 2d vol. of the transactions of the Medical Society of Bombay

From Baboo Rajkrishna Dey enclosing an account of a case of Hydrocele, which, with the concurrence of Dr. Ranken, he treated successfully by a puncturation. The Hydrocele contained about 20 ozs of fluid, 7 punctures were made with a common sewing needle, and a few globules of serous fluid exuded from each opening. Scarcely any pain followed the operation, and on the 5th day the tumour having subsided entirely, the patient was discharged cured

Dr Jackson's cases of Dracunculus, presented at a former meeting, were then read and discussed,

In connection with this subject, it was proposed by Dr Stewart, seconded by Mr R. O Shaughnessy, that a Committee be formed to investigate the nature of Dracunculus as it appears in this country.

A paper upon the popular and medicinal uses of the Gunja or Indian Hemp, especially with reference to its use in the treatment of convulsive disorders, by Dr W. B. O Shaughnessy, was read by that gentleman.

Specimens of the various preparations of the Drug were laid upon the table and the properties of some of these were exhibited upon Dogs.

H. H. GOODRVE, M. D.

Secretary Medical and Physical Society,

Hurk. Oct. 12.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting was held at the Society's Room, Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 5th October, 1839.

C. K. Robinson, Esq., Vice President, in the Chair.
(Twenty Members present)

The Proceedings of the last Meeting were confirmed.

The Gentlemen proposed at the September Meeting were elected Members, viz

Captain Mylius,—Major Colnett,—Lieut. Eld,—Lieut. Rowley Hill,—Messrs. W B Jackson, B. H Hodgson, Wm. Prinsep and P. Macdonald.

The names of the following Gentlemen were read as candidates for election at the next Meeting —

John Storm, Esq.,—proposed by Mr. Wm Storm,—seconded by the Secretary.

M. D. Cohen, Esq.—proposed by Dr. Spry,—seconded by Mr. Wm. Storm.

A. T. Smith, Esq. (Jessore), proposed by Mr. F. Lowth,—seconded by the Secretary.

G. Shearwood, Esq.—proposed by Mr. W. P. Grant,—seconded by the Secretary.

L. Quantin, Esq.—proposed by Dr. Spry,—seconded by Mr. Wm. Storm.

John Cernan, Esq.—proposed by Dr. Spry,—seconded by Mr. Wm. Storm.

Lieut. Killoe,—proposed by Dr. Spry,—seconded by Mr. Wm. Storm.

James Hume, Esq.—proposed by Mr. C. Hufnagle,—seconded by the Secretary.

Lawn Durup de Dombal, Esq.—proposed by Mr. J. St. Pourcain,—seconded by Mr. H. Piddington.

LIBRARY

1 Six copies of the proceedings of the American Philosophical Society, No. 1 to 6, Presented by the Society.

2. Flora de Filipinas, segun el sistema sexual de Linnæo. Por el P. Fr Manuel Blanco Agustino Cruzado Purchased by the Society.

MUSEUM.

1 Eight packets of Fruit and Flower Seeds from Caubul—consisting of stones of the best sorts of Apricots from Candahar, weighing from 10 to 15 to the lb Caubul Cherries, about 14 to the ounce, without stalk. Large, red Plums 14 of 16 to the pound 1 from Ghuzni, Mellon Seeds, Grapes, large sorts, Quince, Apple, and Pear Seeds and three papers of China Asters. Presented by Colonel Smyth.

2. A specimen of cloth impregnated with a solution of Caoutchouc in Linseed Oil and Turpentine, which, after being tested for twelve hours with water was found to be quite impervious to its influence. Presented by Mr. Linton of the Government Dispensary.

3. A paper of Madia Sativa and English Linseed, Presented by Dr. Falconer.

4. A quantity of Maize, grown at Dum-Dum. Presented by Lieut. Burnett, of the Artillery.

5 Two plants from the Deccan, called in Southern India 'Wondee.' The tree is described to be superior to the lechee, and the fruit very luscious. Presented by Mr. Chew.

6. Specimen of Cotton grown in the Sunderbunds. Presented by Mr. Harris.

7. Specimen of Assam Caoutchouc. Presented by George Pratt, Esq.

REPORT BY AGRICULTURAL CHAIRMAN SUBMITTED AT THE LAST MEETING

The two samples of Wheat from the Nerbudda valley submitted to the Agricultural Committee for report have been pronounced superior to any that the Members have ever before seen in this country. They both weighed full six pounds to the bushel. The white Til is also pronounced good and a distribution of the seed is recommended for sowing.

COMMUNICATION ON COTTON SEED AND THE STATE OF AGRICULTURE IN UPPER SCINDE.

The first communication which was submitted to the Meeting was one to the Secretary from the Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, the President of the Institution, dated Allahabad, September 8th 1859. The Hon'ble President mentions that a letter had just been received by him from His Excellency Sir Henry Pons, who alludes to the published proceedings of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society for June, and states that he was not before aware of the failure of the President of the Board of Trade in England to carry into effect the wishes of the Society relative to American cotton seed. That by the next packet he will transmit to him (The President of the Board of Trade) the last paragraph of page 45 and the second paragraph of page 56 of the report.*

Sir Henry mentions that the Cotton appeared to him a very flourishing plant wherever he saw it during recent marches in Upper Scinde. He states that the finest sugar cane that he has seen in India was in that country south of Roree. That he had no opportunity of ascertaining whence it came. That several large plots of it were cultivated with great care. Sir Henry further mentions, that there had not been rain in Scinde for three years and that more is done by irrigation from the Indus than he had ever seen anywhere. The water from the river is conveyed far into the interior by deep canals, whence it is raised by Persian wheels and distributed with much skill over the surface of the soil. Sir Henry adds that the process was very interesting to an Agriculturist and the President thinks that these particularly cannot fail to interest the Society, coming from one whose practical skill and knowledge on such subjects is so extensive.

INTELLIGENCE REGARDING THE FRUITS OF CAUBUL AND THE VARIETIES OF DIFFERENT SEEDS.

The Secretary submitted a communication which he had received from Colonel Smyth, dated Cabul, September 7, forwarding to him different kinds of Fruit seeds including Grapes, Cherries, large red Plums, Apricots, Melons and China Asters. Although seedling fruit trees seldom prove good, yet Colonel Smyth mentions that as some do, it is worth a trial till the Society is able to get down grafts which Colonel Smyth thinks that no time should be lost in accomplishing. It might be easily managed through the civil authorities, and as Colonel Smyth had Pirs, Cedars, Poplars, Cherries, Barberries and Apricots and Barrells, transplanted from the Hills, and conveyed some some of them to Neematch where he left them thriving last Oct., Colonel Smyth does not see why they should not be introduced into Bengal, where the climate is so much more mild. It is the great heat of the hot winds that kills these trees when growing. Although they come from a cold climate they do not require great cold to make them thrive.

* These paragraphs refer to the Secretary's summary, which was forwarded to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and subsequently inserted in the proceedings for June.—Secretary.

In Malwa and Mysore, where the climate is mild, Colonel Smyth is convinced that Europe trees will thrive. The China Aster is the only flower that Colonel Smyth has seen at Cabul worth sending. They have a large, many of them double flowers. In color they are white, purple, dark pink and light pink.—Colonel Smyth states he has been disappointed in the apples, but the pears are very fine, so are the Cherries. Grafts from them as well as from Vines, which bear remarkably fine Grapes, should be forthwith obtained. The Melons are most delicious.

STATE OF TWO CROPS IN UPPER INDIA—IMPORTANCE OF INTRODUCING FOREIGN SEED CORN INTO INDIA, AND THE ENLARGEMENT OF THE PRESENT BOTANIC GARDEN AT SAHARUNPORE AND THE RE-ESTABLISHMENT OF THE FORMER HILL GARDEN.

Mr George Henry Smith, of the Civil Service, at present residing at Mumsoree, in a communication dated September 5th, writes in approbation of the conduct of the Society in voting a sum of money for the purpose of introducing foreign seed-corn into India and mentions that the last Rubbi* crop in the Upper Provinces was most promising and an abundant harvest was anticipated. The hopes of the farmers however were disappointed—an universal blight having occurred a few days before the corn was ripe, and the grain when thrashed out was shrivelled up to such a degree as to give a return in most instances not equalling one half what was expected.

Oats thrive remarkably well in the Upper Provinces, and Mr. Smith states that he never saw a finer specimen than was presented this year at his farm in the Dhoon, where there were about one thousand beegahs grown. Mr. Smith has only met with one description of oats in the Upper Provinces, and it appears to him to be much inferior to the finer sorts grown in England.

The finest wheat that Mr. Smith ever saw in his life is what is grown in a district of Cabul named Hayarah. A small supply had been received by Dr. Falconer, and distributed in various directions, but although it grew most luxuriously and gave promise of turning out well, not a single grain came to perfection, the whole of the plants having been destroyed by the blight already alluded to.

Mr. Smith communicates the gratifying intelligence, that the Court of Directors has sent out by some of the late Overland Packets, a variety of seeds to Dr. Falconer, the Superintendent of the Government Botanic Garden at Saharunpore, and amongst these some of the Barbary wheat which has been noticed by the Society. Several of the seeds have vegetated and Mr. Smith hopes in a few years to see most of the most popular of the European fruits introduced into the Upper Provinces. Mr. Smith knows of no place in India so well calculated for agricultural and horticultural purposes as the Dhoon, where he is glad to hear that Government is about to establish a garden. It is thought by Dr. Falconer and other scientific persons, that the climate and soil of the Dhoon is admirably adapted for the growth of the tea plant, and Mr. Smith understands that two boats loaded with tea plants are now on their way up the Ganges, a portion of which will probably find their way to the experimental farms and gardens now established in the Dhoons.

Mr. Smith recommends the introduction generally of the American Maize into the Dhoon, in consequence of experiments already made on rather a large scale proving that it is superior to the country kind in every respect.

Mr. Smith concludes his very interesting communication by mentioning, that he feels assured that the

* A, ring ha, vest crops.—Secretary.

Society will be glad to hear that Government has sanctioned a considerable increase of the establishment of the Saharunpore Botanical Garden, which Lord William Bentinck's niggardly policy reduced, and have, moreover, ordered the re-establishment of the Muscouri Garden, which a recommendation to the Court of Directors that the salary of Superintendent (Dr. Falconer) be placed on a footing more commensurate with that gentleman's distinguished abilities and scientific attainments has been made—such augmentation to have a retrospective effect in consideration of the valuable services which he for years past has devoted gratuitously to the promotion of Botanical objects and other Scientific pursuits.

AN EXPECTED NEW CONSIGNMENT OF FRUIT TREES FROM THE GOVERNMENT BOTANICAL GARDEN AT SAHARUNPORE—PROGRESS MADE BY THE COURT OF DIRECTORS IN FURNISHING SUPPLIES OF SEEDS FOR INTRODUCTION INTO INDIA.

The Secretary next submitted to the Meeting the pleasing intelligence conveyed in a letter to his address from Dr. Falconer, Superintendent of the Saharunpore Botanic Garden, that he intends to make up for the loss sustained by the Society in the last consignment of fruit trees owing to the negligence of the boatman, by preparing another early despatch, and states that Messrs. Gibbon and Co. of Meerut, have with great liberality offered, through Mr. Cope, a Scientific Botanist of Meerut, to freight a boat at their own expense with a fresh collection of plants.

The Court of Directors have already, in pursuance of the arrangements alluded to in the despatches published by the Society, commenced sending supplies of seeds, &c. and from the services of so zealous and accomplished an Agent as Dr. Royle, having been engaged for the home management, Dr. Falconer considers that the best results may be expected very shortly. Some bulbs sent by the June Mail, reached the Saharunpore Garden in excellent order. Another article in the package was the Madia Sativa a South American plant, which has been cultivated lately to great extent in Germany, "and found to be the richest oil seed known in Europe."

By the same dawk Dr. Falconer sends a small quantity.*

A supply has been furnished to Captain Kirke in the Dhoon and to other parties. Now that the oil producing seeds are likely to be of so much importance in Indian Commerce, it will be a matter of much interest, Dr. Falconer considers, to ascertain the value and productive qualities of the Madia. Dr. Royle, who communicates the above about the cultivation of the plant in Germany, refers Dr. Falconer for an account of its growth to the XV vol. p. 142 of the Gardener's Magazine, and Dr. Falconer recommends the subject strongly to the notice of such of the Members of the Society as are interested about Indian oil seeds.

Dr. Falconer also sends some linseeds previously received; which is not so large and fat a grain as what is cultivated in the Upper Provinces, at least in the neighbourhood of Saharunpore, with the varieties of which Dr. Falconer has instituted a comparison; and Dr. Falconer mentions the valuable fact, that he finds the Saharunpore linseed to be exactly 20 per cent. heavier as a grain than the English. Quere, with the same proportion held in the quantity of oil afforded by each kind. If so Dr. Falconer remarks we had better send home the Indian seed to improve the English stock!

Dr. Falconer mentions in conclusion, that he can supply the Society with English white and black Mustard and Rape seeds, if any be desired, as some of them will most probably be found deserving to supplant the corresponding Indian grains now cultivated. The Mustards especially are much larger.

PRACTICAL NOTES OF THE SYSTEM OF COTTON CLEANING AND THE MODE OF PURCHASING COTTON IN GUERAT.

The accompanying valuable practical remarks by Mr. Owen Potter, on the system of Cotton dealing at Baroche, in March and April 1837, were submitted by the Secretary.

To clean a large quantity of Cotton Baroche * it would be necessary for those who undertake it to leave Bombay about the end of October, so as to arrive in Baroche early in November.

The monsoon by the time is fairly over and the Patrels are able to estimate at what price they can contract for the kupasat deliverable in March and April.

In this they are almost entirely governed by the last season being favorable or otherwise.

As Company's rupees are the only ones taken at the Government Treasuries in payment of duty on produce, the pattele are always desirous to make their contracts payable in this currency.

The best method of placing funds in Baroche, is by negotiating with the Collector (who is always desirous of placing the Company's revenues in Bombay, selling to him your drafts on Bombay, the proceeds of which are paid over to the drawer or seller at Baroche as soon as advice has been received of such drafts having been liquidated. The rate of exchange is fixed at the time the drafts are sold, and is generally about one and a half per cent, in favour of the seller. There are at present two kinds of rupees in circulation at Baroche—the Baroche rupee and Company's rupee †—it has been customary to pay for ready cleaned cotton in the former and for kupas with the latter. As the whole of the kupas comes to maturity from February to April, and the full duty must be paid upon all that is removed, Company's rupees are in great demand in those months as the cleaners and declers are always desirous to prepare their Cotton in time for shipment to Bombay, before the setting in of the monsoon at the end of May, as no Cotton can be shipped to the southward during the three subsequent months. After April the Baroche rupees begin to come into demand, to make the payments for the cleaned Cotton, and it was these circumstances that gave rise to the following exchanges during the first five months in 1837; during which season it must be borne in mind, that money was extremely scarce and as it advanced this difficulty was more generally felt by advices having been received from home of the very disastrous state of the money market, which from time to time were confirmed.

The exchange during March and the first two weeks in April, was Baroche rupees 101½ a 102½ per Co's Rs 100 in draft on Bombay at 8 days' sight. For Co's Rs, on the spot during that time Baroche rupees 102½ a 103½ could have been obtained. At the beginning of May

* Baroche is situated on the banks of the Nerbudda, river, about 28 miles from the open sea.

† Kupas is Cotton with the seed.

‡ It is expected the Baroche rupees will be entirely done away with next season and that Company's rupees only will be in circulation.

* The Secretary announced the receipt of the seeds of the Madia Sativa and informed the Meeting that he had distributed a portion, while the remainder he had himself put in the ground, but only one seed had vegetated.

Barocha-rupat 105 per Co's Rs. 100* was given, whilst at the same time only Barocha Rs. 99 were offered for the same currency in drafts on Bombay at 8 days' sight. The destruction of property by a serious fire at Surat, made the general scarcity of money to be more felt at Guzerat than elsewhere, and on the other hand the crop of Cotton being very deficient, little more than half to the previous season, the amount of capital in circulation was comparatively small in this district.

In contracting for kupass, which may generally be done in December, an advance of Co's Rs. 5 to 8 per bhar would be required by the pattels. A contract for kupass might be made with ten or more pattels, each to be held responsible for the others, and encouragement held out to them by a system of rewards and punishments to induce them to improve the kupass by a more careful preparation.

The pattels are men of high caste in the villages, each village having a head pattel who is responsible to Government for the amount of duty on produce grown in his "Gaum" or village. In this office the son succeeds the father, and in this manner the same family manage the affairs of one village for many generations. Their characters and standing are well known at the Collector's office—they have been always known to fulfil their contracts, and indeed they have hardly the power to evade them even were it their best policy to do so. When the kupass is ready for delivery on which you have made an advance, the pattel gives information to that effect, and upon the contractor paying the difference between what has been advanced and the price agreed for, into the Government Treasury† on account of the pattel with whom the contract is made, he receives an order from the Collector to the sepoy in charge of the Government Kullia to deliver such quantity of kupass, the duty on which will not exceed the payment made into the Treasury.

After it is determined what quantity of kupass is to be purchased, it then becomes necessary to erect suitable sheds for cleaning it at the least possible expense, and so situated that the superintendent may be continually on the spot.

To gain the latter object it would be well if he could rent a dwelling house with sufficient available ground immediately around it so as to build the required quantity of sheds to enable him to clean considerably more kupass than that which he has contracted for; for it will be found, in good seasons, that the pattels, finding the upright and prompt manner in which Europeans transact their business, would willingly deliver to them any kupass they had on hand uncontracted for, at the market price, in preference to many of the native dealers here, whose exactions and treatment they find to be very arbitrary. The materials most available for erecting the sheds are bamboos and mats, both of which are plentiful in Barocha.

The sheds should be built entirely to surround the residence of the Superintendent; the whole square having only one inlet or outlet where a sepoy should be stationed to prevent pilferage. They are generally built about 6 feet high and 3 yards wide, open to the inside of the square—the space between the shed and the bungalow should be levelled and the surface hardened as usual. For an outlay of Rs. 600, in addition to the rent of the bungalow and ground (about Rs. 60 per month,) sheds sufficiently large might be erected to accommodate 150

Churkas. One Churka, if well worked, will turn upwards of 23 lbs. of Cotton per day, so that 3,000 lbs. of Cotton per day might be cleaned, and calculating that there are 80 days available for cleaning Cotton before the setting in of the monsoon, 300 candies—about 600 bales, might be prepared in this manner. It would be desirable to engage the Churka workers, in December for the whole season—their pay varies from Rs. 1 for every 3½ maunds of seed they produce; down to as low as Rs. 1 for every 4½ maunds, according to the demand there may be for their services. The seeds are the property of the purchaser and are always disposed of on terms that will defray the expense of cleaning, and generally there is a gain.

One wooden screw (value Rs. 600) similar to that used in Bombay, should be shipped from thence to arrive in Barocha in February. The kupass is almost always delivered mixed with dirt, which arises from the ryots having no place to stow it in when it is taken from the plant, but bury it in the ground where it remains until the full duty is paid upon it, when it is removed for cleaning.

To separate the dirt and other rubbish from the kupass, it should be gently shaken out (not beaten) over bamboos tied together with coir, in such a manner as not to allow the kupass, but to admit of the dust and dirt falling to the ground beneath.

After this has been done, the kupass is left for some time spread out in the sun, and when fully warmed through the fibre, leaves the seed easier than in any other state—when the Cotton has passed through the Churka it should then be shaken out over a fine net work of coir so as to permit all the leaf which has been loosened in the process of cleaning to fall out. Cotton procured in this manner is called 2nd Toomul—Toomul Cotton is produced in a similar manner, but the kupass is hand-picked before passing it through the Churka. The extra expense of Toomul Cotton is fully Rs. 30 per Barocha Candy of 890 lb.

One Bhar of a middling quality of kupass yielded 8 maunds 2 seers set of clean Cotton (leafy) which is equal to 352 lbs English. This kupass was contracted for at Rs. 52 per bhar, in January 1837; the price being very high on account of it being well known that the crop of Cotton in Guzerat would be deficient. At this rate a Surat Candy of 784, would cost § Rs. 2 per bale—Rs. 1-2 per Candy would be saved by having the bales half proved at Barocha independent of a saving in freight from the Cotton being lighter compressed than is now customary.

(a) We think that this has already been done, and that an improved machine for this kind has been sent from England.—Ed.

* Only Co's Rs. 96 per 100 in drafts on Bombay at 8 days' sight, were given by the Shroffs at Barocha in May 1837.

† The duty on Cotton paid by the pattels to Government generally, amounts to one-half the value of the whole, and sometimes to two-thirds of the whole value.

It cannot always be expected, however, that one bhar will yield 352 lbs. of clean Cotton. This season the cotton has been unusually heavy upon the seed, and I believe the fairest estimate to be is 72 maunds of clean Cotton to every bhar of kupass, which is equal to 321 lb. which at the above rate would make every 784 lb. cost..... 127 0 0

PROGRESS OF HORTICULTURE ON THE TABLE LAND OF MYSORE.—REPORT OF THE BANGALORE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

A communication containing a Report of a Meeting of the Subscribers to the Mysore Agricultural and Horticultural Society, held at the Society's Rooms in the Gardens on 7th August 1839, was next read.

The Joint Secretary, George Gough, Esq., in his official letter mentions, that the Mysore Society is in a very prosperous condition, and that a large portion of the hitherto uncultivated ground is being laid out in Coffee trees, which in Mysore is most productive. Mr. Gough states that the experiment of grafting Apples upon Loquat stocks has succeeded to perfection, and in less than half the time required on Apple stock's. Apples have also temporarily succeeded on guava stocks. When Mr. Gough also thinks it right to add that the Society at Bangalore has for the last six months thrown the Gardens open to all respectable natives without requiring them to bring tickets of admission.

At the Meeting of the Members, Major General Sir Hugh Gough, K. C. B., K. C. S., the Patron, was in the Chair, and a series of resolutions were passed, having for their object the advancement of the interests of the institution.

ORDERS FOR SEEDS FOR NEXT YEARS CONSUMPTION.

The Secretary next brought to the notice of the Meeting, the propriety of making arrangements for the supply of seeds for next year, and the meeting decided that he be empowered to take the necessary measure for doing so.

For the presents and communications the thanks of the Society were accorded HENRY H. SPIRY, M. D. Secretary.—Hurk. Oct. 17.

SUPREME COURT.

FOURTH TERM OF 1839.

TUESDAY, 22ND OCTOBER.

This was the first day of Term. Mr. Justice GRANT and Mr. Justice SETON took their seats on the Bench at eleven o'clock.

There are some cases on the Crown side standing over for judgment from last Sessions; but they were not taken this morning. In the case of Queen v. Jacobs, some doubts have been started as to the sufficiency of the indictment; and in the case of the coiners who were found guilty last Sessions, the Court will be moved in arrest of judgment.—Hurk Oct. 23.

WEDNESDAY, 23RD OCTOBER.

GRANT and SETON, Justices, sat this-morning at eleven o'clock. Nothing was done but the taking of common motions. There appears little prospect of a press of business this term. At present the board is almost a blank.

THE QUEEN v. JACOBS.

SIR J. P. GRANT said, that a doubt had occurred to the learned Judge, who heard the case, touching the sufficiency of the indictment, and that the matter had been mentioned to the Counsel for the prosecution. The Court wished to know, whether the Counsel for the prisoner intended to move in arrest of judgment.

Mr. Leith said, that he had not yet had time to look into the authorities, but that he would do so this day, and satisfy himself whether the objection could be sustained.

SIR J. P. GRANT said, that an early day ought to be named.

Mr. Clarke, for the prosecution said, he was ready now, and he was quite satisfied there was nothing in the objection.

Mr. Leith said, he should be ready to-morrow.

The Court appointed Friday for the defendant to be brought for judgment.

THE QUEEN v. REKHAL DAY AND OTHERS

SIR J. P. GRANT said, that in this case also a doubt had arisen, and that it was standing over for judgment. The prisoners had been found guilty of a conspiracy to debase coin.

The Advocate-General said, that the prisoners had not been defended by Counsel at the trial, and that the Court had nominated a Counsel to argue the question on their behalf.

Mr. Morton said, that he was prepared to move in arrest of judgment on behalf of the prisoners, upon any day that the Court should appoint.

The Court directed, that this case also should come on next Friday.

GOPEEMOHUN DEB v. THE EAST INDIA COMPANY AND OTHERS.

This case still stands for judgment, and is likely so to stand for a long while.—Hurk. Oct. 24.

THURSDAY, 24TH OCTOBER.

SHEEMUTTY PARAMONEY DORRIS V. SHEEMUTTY UNNOO-POORNAH DORRIS AND ANOTHER.

Mr. Clarke requested permission to mention this case to the Court. The action was Trover to recover certain jewels, and the plaintiff had described the defendants as "executor and executrix." At the trial in the term before last, a verdict was found against the female defendant, but the other defendant obtained a verdict. An objection was taken at the trial that the parties were misdescribed as executor and executrix, because no action ex delicto was sustainable against an executor as such; but the Court overruled the objection on the ground that the description might be considered mere surplusage and might be rejected altogether. A rule nisi for a nonsuit was afterwards obtained, but on a totally different ground, and that rule had been discharged. The Prothonotary, however, now refused to make out the judgment against the defendant otherwise than as executrix; and it was clear that such a judgment in an action of tort would be nullity! Perhaps in strictness the record ought to have been amended at the trial; but still the description having been declared to be surplusage in the plaintiff, there was no earthly reason why it should be repeated in the judgment. It was clear the defendant must either be charged de bonis propriis, or not at all.

Sir J. P. GRANT (after consulting with Sir H. SEW) said, that the Judges were unable to find any note of the objection in their notes of the trial of this case. The Court would only grant a rule nisi, because they thought the other side had a right to be heard against it if they pleased.

Mr. Clarke said, that he should move then for a rule nisi, and that the rule would be drawn up, calling on the defendant to shew cause why the words "as executrix" should not be struck out of the plaint, or at least omitted in the judgment. Rule nisi accordingly.

IN RE THE FIVEEN BOUN.

The Advocate-General requested that this case, which is a Salvage case on the Admiralty side, might be postponed until Monday, as they had not had time to see the additional affidavits which the other side had obtained leave to file.

Mr. Clarke consented.

The Court accordingly allowed the case to stand over until Monday next. Stood over.—Hark. Oct. 25.

FRIDAY, 25TH OCTOBER.

THE QUEEN V. RUKHAL DAY AND OTHERS.

The Advocate-General moved for judgment against the prisoners.

Mr. Morton then moved in arrest of judgment, on the ground of the insufficiency of the indictment. This is an indictment for a conspiracy at common law, the first count, charging the prisoners with conspiring and confederating to defraud certain persons to the Jews unknown, by drilling holes in rupees, and plugging up those holes with baser metal; and the second count, charging them with conspiring to drill holes in rupees, and other current coin of the realm, and to circulate the same among the public. Both counts are bad. It is admitted, that the substantive act, which the indictment charges by way of conspiracy, would not be a cognizable offence in this country, either by common law or statute; because, at common law, the offence is incomplete, and under statute law, at least as regards this country, it is causa omnis. The 9 Geo. IV. c. 34 contains two sections, (ss 73, 74) relating to offenders against coin, but neither touch the present case, and the defect has only been recently remedied by a legislative enactment, passed in consequence of this very case. Then, the question arises, whether it is indictable as a conspiracy. Now, the cases shew, that the act which is the subject matter of the conspiracy, must either be illegal per se, or distinctly shewn to be injurious by reason of the conspiracy to the public, or to some individual. The first objection here is, that the individuals intended to be defrauded are not stated with sufficient certainty. The charge is an intent, to defraud persons unknown. In Rex v. Fowle, 4 Carr. and Payne 602, a conspiracy "to defraud the just and lawful creditors" of a man was held too general. But the main objection against both counts is, that no fraud or intended fraud distinctly appears, on the face of either, because the drilling holes in coin may be a very harmless action in itself, and it only becomes an offence by reference to the presumed intent. The intention, however, cannot be supplied by intentment, because material averments cannot be left to inference. If so, how then can the public be defrauded by holes being drilled in coin, without something further being done? To complete the contemplated fraud, the intent must be to circulate or utter the debased coin, and not only that, but to utter it as for lawful coin. There is no such averment in either count, and if the prisoners should be adjudged guilty on this indictment, the common native practice of drilling holes in rupees or gold-mohurs, and stringing them on a necklace, will become an indictable offence!

The Advocate-General and Mr. Cochrane argued in support of the indictment. It is by no means clear, that the act itself would not be indictable as a cheat at common law; but whether it would be so or not, it is clear, that it may form the subject matter of conspiracy. Far more trivial acts have been laid as the foundation of such an indictment,—such as indictments against several parties for conspiring to hiss at a theatre, although the act was perfectly indifferent in itself. In the present case, the intent of the conspiracy, namely to defraud the public, is sufficiently apparent, and the means by which the object was to be accomplished, are quite immaterial, and need not be stated at all: Rex v. Eccles, 1 Leach. As to the alleged generality of the charge, it was impossible to charge it otherwise, because while a mere intent existed, no one could know who were the persons to be defrauded, and they are properly represented as "persons unknown."

The Court said, that they did not consider this objection of much weight. But the main question appeared to be, whether the alleged fraud appeared distinctly on the face of the indictment; and this did not constitute the means but the very object and nature of the conspiracy charged.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Cochrane contended, that the alleged fraud was distinctly shewn. The intent was stated to be to circulate the current coin in which the holes were drilled. Now this could only import, that they intended to circulate it "as lawful coin of full value," because rupees thus debased were not in fact current coin at all, but mere bullion.

Mr. Morton in reply was stopped by the Court.

Sir J. P. GRANT said, that the Court were satisfied the indictment could not be sustained. The only objection which it was necessary to consider, was the objection that no fraud appeared at all; and this the Court considered a good objection, because further averments were necessary to complete the allegation and to shew an offence. The first count did not charge any intent to circulate and utter; and the second count, only charged such intent, but omitted to add "as lawful coin of full value."—Judgment arrested.

THE QUEEN V. JAMES JACOBS.

The defendant had pleaded guilty last Sessions to an indictment under the Indian Insolvent Act, 9 Geo. IV. c. 73 s. 73, charging him with embezzlement of his property after the filing of his petition for relief; and he was brought up this morning for judgment.

Mr. Turton and Mr. Leith moved in arrest of judgment, on the ground of a repugnancy in material dates. The filing of the petition was alleged to be on "19th of September," and the embezzlement was laid to be "after the filing of the petition, to wit on the 26th of August." This was a clear repugnancy on the face of the indictment, which vitiated it altogether, because the averment of time was material to the case, and could not be rejected as surplusage. The fact of the defendant having pleaded guilty, made no difference in the matter, but rather put him in a better position, because he could only be taken to have admitted himself guilty in respect of the matters charged in the indictment.

And even if the videlicet could be rejected as surplusage here, the indictment would be in this predicament, that no time would be laid at all to an allegation to which time was material. The well-known rule with respect to "videlicets" was that matter so laid, if material, did not thereby become immaterial, though it was doubtful whether an immaterial averment might not become material and necessary to be proved where the videlicet was omitted. Here the averment was material, because if the alleged offence was committed in August, it was no offence at all! The new Act, 9 Geo. IV. c. 73 s. 12 did not aid, the defect, because it was specially restricted to cases where time was not of the essence of the offence.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Barwell contra, contended, at great length, that the averment as regarded the mere date laid was immaterial and might be rejected, and that the repugnancy was cured both by the precedent and subsequent matter. In support of this position they cited many learned authorities. Time was certainly the essence of the offence here, but only thus far, that it was necessary to shew the embezzlement to have been after the filing of the petition, but not of any particular day. Now it was here expressly averred to be after, and the mere erroneous dates laid for form and under a videlicet, might have been departed from in evidence. But besides, the statute cured the defect, if defect there were. The exception about "where time is of the essence of the contract," had reference only to the omission of time altogether, and could not be extended by any rational construction to the other clauses. If so, the mere mis-statement of time was cured after verdict whether time was of the essence of the offence or not.

Mr. Turton was not called upon to reply.

SIR J. P. GRANT delivered the judgment of the Court at great length. Their Lordships were clearly of opinion, that the error vitiated the indictment; though they came to the conclusion with very great reluctance, as an error so trivial and excusable would allow the defendant thus to escape upon an indictment for so serious an offence, of which he was in reality beyond all doubt guilty. Although he had escaped this Court, however, he was still in the hands of the Insolvent Court, and that Court would certainly deal with him most severely.—Judgment arrested.—Hulk, Oct. 26.

MONDAY, 28TH OCTOBER.

SWANKANAUTH MULLICK V. GONSALVES AND OTHERS.

Mr. Turton and Mr. Clarke shewed cause against rule nisi, calling upon Messrs. Mackillop, Stuart and Co. to pay over to the Sheriff a certain sum extended in their hands, under a judgment obtained by the plaintiff against the defendants in the above cause. The affidavits upon which cause was now shewn, stated circumstances from which it appeared that Messrs. Mackillop and Co. had counter-claim against the defendants to the extent of the sum of money in their hands. The learned counsel contended that this claim in effect cancelled the debt due to the defendants from Messrs. Mackillop and Co., and although the facts were disputed on the other hand, it was not competent for the Court to go into the question and try the disputed facts on affidavits.

The Court stopped the learned counsel, and said, that it was unnecessary to go into the merits of the case until the question had been determined, whether the Court could try, upon affidavits, the disputed fact of the existence of a debt.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith were then heard on the preliminary question. It is clear that the provision in clause XV. of the Charter, which related to the seizure of debts under a judgment, would become almost inoperative if the objection were sustainable, that a mere denial of the existence of the debt precluded the Court from inquiring into the fact. In a case last term, where certain monies were in the hands of the Collector of the 24 Pergunnahs, the Court granted an order, that it should be made over to the Sheriff, although there were many opposing claimants.

SIR J. P. GRANT, That case was different from this, because the Collector admitted the fact of the money being in his hands, and third parties only claimed an interest. But suppose a man obtains a judgment against another, and suggests that my house is the property of the debtor, am I to be put to proof of my title on a mere rule to show cause?

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith. But the fact of the money being in their hands, is admitted by Mackillop and Co., though they allege facts to shew that the admitted debt is extinguished. But we can shew upon the face of their own accounts that the debt still exists, and that the counterclaim arises in respect of an unaccepted bill of exchange, which clearly raises no claim at all! It is therefore a question of law, not of fact. But it is submitted that except where the case is one of great complexity, the Court may even try facts upon affidavits, and, if necessary, direct an issue to satisfy themselves upon any doubtful matter. Such an objection has never been taken in this Court before.

The Court said, that they should consider the point, and, if necessary, the case might be gone into on the merits, on a future day.

LUCKEYNARAIN MOOKERJEE V. JENKINS AND LOW.

Mr. Turton moved to set aside an award on the ground of irregular and improper conduct on the part of the arbitrators. The submission was to the two arbitrators, with power to appoint an umpire by any writing under their hands. In the first place the umpire had been insufficiently and informally appointed, no writing having been made, but merely a note written by one arbitrator to the other, inquiring whether he had any objection to the appointment, to which the second merely wrote, in reply, across the note "no objection." Besides, notice of the appointment was not given to one of the parties, while it was given to the other; and not a single witness had been examined by the umpire himself. It was not intended to impute any misconduct or impropriety, other than carelessness and an irregular course of proceeding. As the objections did not appear on the face of the award, they could not be urged in answer to an application to compel performance of the award. It was necessary therefore to adopt the present course, and move to set aside the award for irregularity. Bule nisi granted.

DOORGADOSH MOOKERJEE V. SREENUTTY BINDABUSARY
DOSSEE.

Mr. Clarke moved upon notice, for an injunction, and for the appointment of a Receiver.

Mr. Turton said he had a preliminary objection on a point of form. It was irregular to include the applications for an injunction, and for a Receiver, in one and the same motion. The case of Lawson v. Morgan, 1 Price's Reports, was expressly in point, and Chief Baron Richards there put the complainant to his election.

Mr. Clarke said that he should make his election at once, and he should apply for a Receiver.

Mr. Turton, however, begged to observe, that there was a counter-motion on his part, standing for this morning, which ought to come on first. This was a motion for an attachment against the Attorney and the Sheriff's officer, for abuse of the process of the Court, and for violating the orders of the defendant. The matter had been before Mr. Justice Seton, who made an order in Chambers that the two motions should come on together.

Mr. Clarke said he should have inexpressible pleasure in accommodating his learned friend, and he should therefore shew cause against the motion for an attachment before pressing his motion for a Receiver. And following the example of his learned friend, he had not one, but two preliminary objections to urge. In the first place, it appeared, that the order nisi for the attachment had been obtained while the defendant was in contempt for not putting in her answer, and the rule was expressed that no step in the cause could be taken by a party in contempt, and that the party could not be heard at all, save and except only to clear contempt. It might indeed be answered that the motion for an attachment was against different parties; but if so, why was the rule and why were the affidavits entitled in the cause? His learned friend was in this dilemma;—if the motion was in the cause, it was irregular, because the defendant was at the time in contempt; and if it was not in the cause, the motion ought to have been on the Crown side, and the rule and affidavits ought to have been entitled, The Queen against so-and-so. Either way it was a puzzler.

Mr. Turton said he had authorities to shew that the rules as to contempts did not apply to a motion for an attachment but,

Sir J. P. Grant said, that the Court were satisfied that the objection could not be sustained, for that even a party in contempt was not precluded from making an application vindicatory of the dignity of the Court.

Mr. Clarke then stated his second objection, that this motion ought, under the new Rules, to have been made on notice, and that the rule nisi was irregular. The Court had so decided in two recent cases, and had discharged a rule nisi with costs, where it did not come within the specific exceptions to the general rule that motions on the equity side shall be upon notice.

Sir H. Stow said, that the matter had come before him on the 8th inst., when an order was made that both motions should come on in Court together. No such objection was then taken, and the complainant must be taken to have waived the irregularity altogether.

Mr. Clarke said that the rule nisi had not then expired, as it was a four-day rule, and three days only had elapsed. He was reminded that it could be suggested that the objection had been waived when he had not had an opportunity of shewing cause against the rule.

Mr. Turton said that he on his part was equally astonished with his learned friend, and astonished that the objection should now be taken!

The Court over-ruled the objection on the ground of waiver.

Mr. Clarke then proceeded to shew cause on the merits; and his address and the reading of the affidavit occupied nearly three hours.

At a late hour the further hearing was postponed. Mr. Leith will be heard to-morrow, on the same side.

Adjourned.

Several motions and other business are standing over. It is supposed that this long matter of the attachment and receiver will occupy the whole of to-morrow.

Besides motions, there was an admiralty case, and also two common law demurrers, and a plea in Equity, standing on the Boards for to-day.—Hurkuru, Oct. 29.

The continuation of this argument commenced yesterday, and occupied the Court the entire day. A report will appear hereafter.—Hurkuru, October 30.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 30.

DOORGADOSH MOOKERJEE V. SREENUTTY BINDABUSARY
DOSSEE.

This was a motion for an attachment against R. Allan, Esq., the complainant, and Mr. Board, a Sheriff's Officer for an alleged contempt in executing the process of the Court. The defendant having been in contempt for not filing her answer within the limited time, the complainant had issued the several processes of contempt, to compel the answer; and the alleged contempt was in executing the writ of sequestration. The affidavits on both sides were very voluminous. The charge against the Sheriff's Officer was the having entered the zenana or private apartments allotted to the females of a Hindoo family, and having forcibly removed property therefrom, under the writ of sequestration. The charge against Mr. Allan consisted in the alleged sanctioning and directing such removal of the property sequestered. It appeared that Mr. Allan was not personally present at all, but that he had gone to the Sheriff's office, and given directions about the execution of the writ.

Messrs. Clarke and Leith shewed cause against the rule, and Messrs. Turton and Cochrane were heard in its support. The addresses of the learned counsel on each side extended to very great length, the argument having commenced on Monday, and having only terminated this day (Wednesday) at a late hour!

For the attachment, it was contended that it appeared clearly, even from the affidavits of the other side, that the Sheriff's officer had entered the zenana or female apartments, in express violation of the rule of Court. (Gen. Rule 25.) It was urged besides, that the writ of sequestration on the equity side of the Court, authorized the sequestration only, and not the removal of the property, and that sequestration removing property, were liable to an attachment. Upon this point, however, the authorities were not quite consistent with each other. It was further contended, that the attorney, by giving the directions under which the sequestration proceedings were had, became liable for the consequences, and subject to the pains and penalties of attachment for contempt of Court. (Ex parte King, 7 Vesey Junior.)

E. contra, it was contended, that the apartments entered by the Sheriff's Officer did not constitute any part of the tenant's, and that it so appeared from the affidavits for the defence. With respect to the charge against the attorney, it was urged, that there appeared nothing whatever even prima facie to implicate him in any proceeding, which could subject him to attachment for a contempt. It was extremely doubtful whether the writ of sequestration on mesne process in equity, did not fully authorize the actual removal of property, and it certainly was the every day practice to remove from the premises sequestered property under process in law. From a certificate of the Sheriff's too, it appeared, that in certain cases it had actually been done in cases of sequestration in equity. But whether it was the practice or not, or whether such practice were legal or illegal, neither the attorney nor the Sheriff's officer could be held liable for the consequences of the illegality. The attorney merely gave directions which the Sheriff was in no way bound to attend to and which could not therefore affect his responsibility; and the Sheriff's officer acted under a writing in the nature of a warrant and was protected. If any sort there were, the remedy was against the Sheriff.

The Court, at the close of the arguments, intimated, that they would give judgment on the motion, when the motion for a receiver had been heard.

Cur. adv. vult.

SAME V. SAME.

The motion for a receiver was then gone into and occupied the rest of the day. The Court adjourned before the argument was nearly concluded. Adjourned.—Hurkaru, October 31.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 31.

DWAKANATH MULLICK versus P. B. GONSALVES AND OTHERS.

The judgment of the Court was delivered this morning by SIR J. P. GRANT.—This was a rule calling upon Messrs. Mackillop, Stuart and Company to shew cause why they should not pay over a sum of Rs. 4,039, alleged to be money belonging to defendants and extended in the hands of the said firm of Mackillop, Stuart and Co., under a writ of feri facias upon a judgment obtained by the plaintiff against the defendants in the above cause. It appears from the affidavits filed on behalf of Messrs. Mackillop, Stuart and Co., that the existence of the alleged debt (except a trifling balance of Rs. 69) is in effect denied. The affidavits state, that Mackillop, Stuart and Co. acted as the agents and factors of the firm, since insolvent of Muddosoodhun Airdy and Co. (the name under which the defendants traded), and consigned goods on their account to China, Bombay, and London. In December 1836, Mackillop and Co., in the course of business advanced to the firm a considerable amount upon a consignment of Cotton shipped upon the account of the firm to their agents in China, and in the January and February following they made further large advances upon goods shipped to London on the account of the firm and received the shipping documents of the goods as a collateral security. Against these last mentioned goods Messrs. Mackillop, Stuart and Co. drew bills upon the consignees, their agents in London, Messrs. Palmer, McKillop, Dent and Co., who of course, in accepting the bills held their immediate consignors, McKillop, Stuart and Co. responsible. And it is further stated in the affidavits that Messrs. McKillop, Stuart and Co. did not expect the proceeds of the London consignment to cover the amount of the advances, and that they would not therefore have made such advance except upon the understanding that they would be entitled to reimburse themselves for any loss out of the surplus monies in their hands on any other account with the same party. It further appears, that the proceeds of the China consignment exhibited a surplus over the advances of Rs. 4,039, while there was a deficit on the London consignment of about Rs. 3,970, and setting off one against the other, the actual balance in the hands of McKillop, Stuart and Co. due to the defendants is only the sum of Rs. 69.

The Court are clearly of opinion, that they cannot go into the question upon affidavits. Where a debt in the hands of a third party is extended under a fi. fa., if the affidavits upon which cause is shewn against the paying over such debt to the execution creditor, do not deny, or do not plainly deny the existence of the debt, the Court will entertain the application. But where the debt (as in the present case), is positively denied, the Court will not in this summary manner, and upon affidavits, go into and determine questions whether of law or fact, upon which such denial is founded. There may be some cases in which the Court will direct an issue; but in the majority of cases the claimant must be left to adopt such remedy as he may be advised is necessary against the alleged debtor. This rule must be discharged, but without costs.

SIR H. W. SETON concurred.—Rule discharged.

The argument on the motion for a receiver was continued to day, and occupied the entire day.—Adjourned.—Hurkaru, Nov. 1.

MISCELLANEA.

CALCUTTA.

LORD MINTO.—Amongst the rumors which reach this country, in private letters, there is one which wears an air of probability upon its face. Lord Minto, it is said, is to succeed Lord Auckland as Governor-General, and will bring out the Honorable Member for Roxburghshire, Mr. John Elliot, our quondam Post Master General, as Private Secretary to His Lordship.

LOWERING OF THE PRICE OF BOOKS.—The Calcutta Booksellers, have found it best for their interests, to lower the price of books fifty per cent.

NEW REGIMENTS.—There is a letter in town which states positively, that twelve new regiments of Native Infantry were to be raised forthwith, six for Bengal, four for Bombay and two for Madras, and that nine hundred Cadets are to be sent out forthwith.

HOPE INSURANCE COMPANY.—A dividend of £50 per share by bill on England, was declared at the ninth half yearly meeting of the members of the Hope Insurance Company.

MURDERS.—Eleven travellers have been found murdered on the Ganjam road; and it is supposed, from the appearance of the corpses, that they have fallen victims to Thugs.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.—The repairs of St. Andrew's Church having commenced, the congregation have been informed by circular that, for a time, Divine Service will be performed in the Trades Hall, in Council House Street, at the usual hours on Sunday, and Prayer Meetings will take place on Wednesday evenings at half past 7.

POST OFFICE ARRANGEMENT.—The Government have been pleased to direct, at the instance, as they were led to believe, of all the editors, that packets by the overland mail, addressed to the newspapers, shall be delivered immediately after their arrival, at whatever hour of the night or day that may happen, to the persons waiting for them.

EXTENSION OF THE USE OF STAMPED PAPERS.—Orders have been issued at the Accountant-General's Office prohibiting the registration of Powers of Attorney, for sale of Company's Paper, &c. unless duly prepared on stamped paper.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Jasper Nicolls, after keeping the good people of the City of Palaces on the tip toe of expectation for two days, landed on the 25th instant at half-past ten, with the usual ceremonies.

FIRE.—A fire broke out on the night of the 22nd instant, at Molah Parah, Entally, and was caused by the firing of some crackers and squibs, one of which fell on the roof of a thatched house and put the inflammable materials on fire; but the timely assistance of the neighbours quickly put it out.

Another fire broke out on the 23d, between the hours of two and three, near the Gowkahanna, Circular Road, which consumed between one and two hundred houses. It originated in the shop of a vender of fried-peas, gram, &c., and lasted about two hours.

NEW POLICE COMMITTEE.—It is said, that Messrs Dampier, Lewis, Patton, and Hawkins, and Captain F. Birch, have been appointed a Committee to report on the organization of a Police force for the Behar districts of this presidency. Mr. Dampier is to be President, and Captain Birch is to act as secretary. The Government expect a report from the Committee on the 1st of December next.

SECRETARYSHIP OF THE BEGAL BANK.—Mr. J. B. Plumb, the assistant accountant of the Bank of Bengal, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Henderson, as the Deputy-Secretary of that institution, on a salary of nine hundred rupees per month. Mr. Plumb's knowledge of office routine, and general experience will, no doubt, render his services highly valuable to the Bank.

CAPTAIN TROVER.—Captain Trover, who was formerly the Secretary to the Government Sanscrit College of Calcutta, has lately communicated with a native Baboo of respectability and talents, requesting him and his able coadjutors to translate the Mahabharata, and other Sanscrit works into English, and at the same time assured him of the encouragement and good reception which this venerable language now meets with on the continent.

DOCTOR RANKEN.—Doctor Ranken has been appointed Superintendent of the Post Office Department, in the North-Western Provinces, on a salary of one thousand four hundred rupees a month; and an arrangement will be made to relieve him from his duties as Civil Surgeon of Delhi.

MEDICAL SECONDARY SCHOOL.—The Secondary School in connection with the Medical College will open in the beginning of the next month. Its management is to be entrusted to the care of three teachers, of whom Sib-chunder Karmocar—the student who, some time ago, delivered a course of lectures on Chemistry during the absence of Dr. O'Shaughnessy—is to be the head. A number of students, whose names have already been enrolled by the College Council, are now living in the Medical College, their food and other necessities being supplied by Government.

TRANSLATIONS OF THE LAW INTO ORIYA.—The Government have decided, that the Regulations and Acts of the Legislative Council, applicable to Orissa, should be translated into Oriya.

COORDOO AND BENGALIEE TRANSLATORS.—The Government of India have determined, that the salary attached to the situation of covenanted Deputy Registrar to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, which situation is abolished, shall be appropriated to the payment of translators of the Legislative enactments and their establishments. The translation of the Circulars of the Sudder Court and those of the Sudder Boards of Revenue, is to form a part of the duty of the translators. It has not yet been decided which of the candidates for these offices are to be appointed.

RAMPORE BAULFAN.—We are told, that "during a storm which took place at Rampore Baulfau on the 23rd instant, the whole fleet of boats belonging to the establishment of the Superintendent of Police in the Lower Provinces, were completely wrecked,—most of them foundering before the occupants could save the most trifling articles. The fleet consisted of Pinnaces, Hudgerows and Beaulfauhs. The greatest sufferers are Mr. Smith himself, Messrs Hutteman, Thompson, Potter and Hodgson, Dr. Kennick and the Sheristadar. The whole party, after the storm, in which, happily, no lives were lost—were received into the circuit house and treated by the Civil Officers with characteristic kindness.

AFFRAY.—A serious affray took place on the 28th of September between some English and American sailors in Chunam Gully, wherein one of the latter stabbed two of the former with a clasp knife. One of the wounded men had a very narrow escape; he was cut on his belly, and the incision measured about six inches in length and nearly half an inch in depth. The other man was stabbed in two or three parts on his thigh. The police immediately came to the spot, and had the wounded men conveyed to the Police Hospital. The desperate Yankee somehow managed to escape at the time, but could not long elude the vigilance of the police. He was apprehended on the following day, at one of the ghauts, in a closed palankeen, just as a boat was ready to take him on board of his vessel.

DORJELING GARDEN AND PLANTATION SOCIETY.—A society is to be established at Dorjeling, under the designation of the Dorjeling Garden and Plantation Society. The objects and views of this proposed association, may be briefly expressed, as the establishment of a nursery garden for the supply of European forest plants, fruits and vegetables, to all parts of the world, free of expence beyond that of carriage and packing. Mr. Campbell, now in charge of Dorjeling, has made over a grant of land for the purposes of the Society, free of rent for five years, and subject to a yearly quit rent, afterwards, of two rupees per acre. As the object of this Society is solely the public benefit, not of Dorjeling alone, but generally wherever agriculture and botany are cultivated, we think the grant might have been made with still greater propriety, for a longer period, free of rent.

DORJELING.—The Secretary to the Dorjeling Society, returned to Calcutta on the 19th instant, and reports the following:

The road to Punkabarree was opened for hackeries on the 11th, and the whole way upwards has been open for ponies since the beginning of October. Between the 1st and 15th, (the day the Secretary left Kurnong) upwards of 1,200 loads of rice and other bazar provisions had been sent to Dorjeling by native merchants. One hundred coolies, with a party of Lepchas, had been employed since the 10th, in constructing large sheds along the whole line of road for native travellers. Artificers of all descriptions had been engaged from Patna, Rungpore, Berhampore, and Calcutta, and are now on the road to join the settlement. One thousand Dhaghurs are likewise en route, and may be expected to reach Punkabarree about the 5th proximo.

PUBLIC DEPUTATION.—The petition resolved on at the Steam Meeting on the 5th instant, was presented on the 11th inst., to the Hon'ble the President in Council by a deputation consisting of the following gentlemen: General Napier, Colonel Macleod and Piddar—Mr. Secretary Halliday, Messrs. Pattle and C. H. Smith, of the Sudder Board of Revenue, Messrs. H. M. Parker and J. Trotter, of the Salt Board, Messrs. W. Braddon, C. Tucker and J. F. M. Reid of the Sudder Adawlut—Messrs. W. Patrick, W. F. Fergusson, J. Allan, T. J. Taylor, C. Lyall, Messrs. Turton, H. Holroyd, J. Hume of the Bar, Major Forbes, Mr. D. Elliot of the Law Commission, Mr. Rud, Mr. Baillie, Mr. J. S. Stopford, Capt. Harrington, Mr. C. B. Greenlaw, Mr. Larpent and Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, Prosopo Comar Gopore and Rustomjee Cowasjee, accompanied by the Sheriff, Colonel Young.

Mr. Robertson received the deputation very graciously, and promised that the objects of the petition should experience his warmest support, and, he doubted not, that of his colleagues, with whose sentiments, generally, on steam matters, he was well acquainted, although in respect to this particular petition, he had of course not yet enjoyed an opportunity of collecting their sentiments; but he had no doubt of their entire support. The application of an effectual remedy for the evil complained of, must, however, be sought from the Home Authorities. It could not be effected by the authorities here, who could only recommend the improvement required. The Government here had had its full measure of disappointment and suffering, with the community. The interests of the Government and the public were, therefore, on this subject, the same.

Some conversation then followed, in which the Sheriff and Mr. Turton took part, respecting the extent of support that a private Company would expect from Government, which ended satisfactorily, and the deputation then retired, well satisfied with the reception that had been accorded them.

ANSWER TO THE STEAM PETITION.—The following answer has been returned by the local Government, to the Steam petition.

No. 197.

To J. YOUNG, Esq., Sheriff of Calcutta.

General Department—Marine—Steam.

SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of a Petition signed by you in behalf of the British and Native Inhabitants of Calcutta, assembled at the Exchange, on the 5th instant, enumerating the grievances to which the Petitioners have been exposed by the present imperfect system of Steam and Overland Communication between this empire and Great Britain; praying that the Supreme Government will urge upon the Honourable Court of Directors, to close with a proposition approved by her Majesty's Government, and submitted to them by Mr. T. A. Curtis, on behalf of a Joint Stock Company, to convey the mails between Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Point de Galle and Great Britain, by means of powerful steam vessels; likewise soliciting that the Petition may be submitted to the Hon'ble Court, with the favorable recommendation of this Government.

2. In reply, I am directed to state, that copies of the memorial have been forwarded to the Hon'ble Court, with the expression of a strong opinion from the Local Government, in favor of establishing a scheme of Steam Communication with all the presidencies, either through individuals and private Associations, or through Government Steamers.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant.

(Signed) H. T. PRINSEP,

Secy. to the Govt. of India.

Council Chamber, the 9th Oct. 1839.

THE WRECK OF THE BARK EQUITABLE.—The following are the particulars of the wreck, by grounding, of the bark Equitable, off Fulta point. It is taken from the report sent up by the Pilot.

"I weighed in the first of the ebb tide on the 4th instant from Peer Serang, and dropped down. I entered Fulta reach at about 5 p. m., and when there, intended going down and anchoring off Fulta big tree, below Fulta house, a place generally noted for riding an easy tide, and proceeded down with all confidence, not supposing any obstacle in the way to my getting to the place. Vessels of all drafts having proceeded down for some time past, without having made a stay above Fulta house for water, it never entered my head to make one with so light a draft of water as 13 feet and 6 inches, which was what the Equitable drew, neither had I any warning of the approaching danger, for I went down in the usual water looked for in the reach, until I felt all at once from 4 fathoms into 3, which soundings were barely given before the vessel touched, and was instantaneously thrown over on her starboard side, so as to bring half her deck and even her tops into the water, the water at this time rushing down her companion and sky-light, with difficulty the ladies and children were extricated from below, they being at dinner at the time. At this crisis nothing was or could be done; every one considered their lives in jeopardy, and shifted for themselves by getting out on the larboard side of the ship, and there remaining until boats should come and taken them off, which, from the strength of tide then running, they could not accomplish, although there were many boats in attendance. My own two tow boats, I regret to say, shamefully deserted us on the accident occurring. On the coming in of the flood, the only part of the vessel left to us, was a portion of the larboard bow, the rest of the hull being entirely under water.

The vessel at this time is lying on her starboard side nearly athwart the channel, completely covered, with the exception of her larboard yard arms at low water. At high water she must be completely covered, and dangerous for vessels passing and repassing, for she lies, according to my idea, as nearly in the heart of the channel as she well can."

STEAM TUG ASSOCIATION.—The following resolutions were passed at the seventh half yearly meeting of the Steam Tug Association, held on the 5th instant.

1st.—That the accounts for the half year ending 31st August, 1839, be passed and approved, and that the report of the Secretaries be approved and published.

2nd.—That a dividend of 100 Rs. per share, being the equivalent of twenty per cent. per annum, be declared upon shares from No. 1 to 200 in the Association, being upon the capital originally subscribed, and that a dividend of 25 Rs. per share, being equivalent to 5 per cent. per annum, be declared upon shares Nos. 201 to 400.

in the Association, being upon the amount of increased capital subscribed.

3rd.—That from the further amounts of the profits upon shares No. 1 to 200, a loan of Rs. 3,100 be made to the Association, bearing interest at 6 per cent. per annum.

4th.—That payment be declared of the interest due to the subscribers to the increased capital to 31st May, 1839, from which date they enter upon the receipt of dividends from the profits of the Association.

5th.—That the Association address the Board of Control, a petition against the competition of Government vessels as Tugs on the River Hooghly, and that the petition read to this meeting be adopted, subject to such modification as the Committee may suggest.

6th.—That the meeting record its sense of obligation for the services rendered by Capt. Henderson to the Association, and vote to him a piece of plate value one hundred guineas, with a suitable inscription.

THE NEW CATHEDRAL.—The first stone of the New Cathedral was laid by the Bishop on the 8th instant. The building is to be called St. Paul's Cathedral. The inscription, together with specimens of the currency of the presidency and an English sovereign, were inclosed in a bottle among dry sand intended for its preservation. It was read to the assembly by the Revd. Mr. Pratt, the Bishop's Chaplain, and was as follows:—

MOPUSSIL.

SIMLA.—Lord Auckland will leave on the 1st proximo. It is confidently stated that "an offensive war" with Nepal is certain, and that with Burmah we shall for the present, assume only a defensive attitude, as far as possible, on the divide et impera principle. It is believed that an order has just been despatched to detain the whole of the Bengal Army in Afghanistan.

NATIVE STATES.

LAHORE.—Rumours have reached Calcutta, of a serious disturbance having occurred at the Court of Lahore. It appears that the Maha Rajah offended with his prime minister, Rajah Dhian Sing, dismissed him, and appointed Cheyt Sing in his room. Khuruck's son, Noor Nehal Sing, whom his grandfather had placed especially under Dhian Sing's care, objected to this arrangement, and insisted on Dhian Sing's restoration. Khuruck peremptorily refused, and the result was, that on the next Durbar, before the assembled courtiers, the unfortunate Cheyt Sing was shot, either by Noor Nehal himself or by one of his partizans. Whether the matter ended here or not, has not transpired.

SCINDIA.—The latest accounts received from Tatta, represent the troops at that station to be suffering most severely from the prevalence of fever. Eight officers have been laid up. The 22d Regiment has 137 men in hospital and two thirds of the hospital establishment unfit for duty. The 26th Regiment is in an equally bad state, having 100 cases of fever. Of sixty Artillery men 38 are in hospital; Sappers and Miners in the same proportion. The high ground on which the encampment is formed is surrounded by a swamp which will become more extensive as the floods subside. There is consequently every reason to believe that Tatta will, during the dry season, be still more unhealthy than it now is.

Accounts from Kurachee are of a much more favorable nature. Her Majesty's 40th Regiment has only one officer sick, whose disease is said to have been contracted at Tatta, and 40 men in hospital, with every prospect of the number being considerably reduced on the setting in of the cold season. The 1st Grenadiers have only one case of fever. From the above statements, it may be safely asserted, that as a military station, Kurachee is far preferable to Tatta. The mornings and evenings at the former place, are stated to be particularly pleasant, owing to the fine cool breeze; the nights such, that sleep could always be obtained.

JONDPORE.—The Fort of Jondpore was taken possession of at 10 o'clock on the morning of the 29th ultimo, and is now garrisoned by the 22nd Native Infantry, supported by the 52nd Native Infantry, and a detail of Sappers and Miners, under the command of Brigadier Rich. The troops were to have advanced at day-light, but during the night a message was sent by Maun Singh to Colonel Sutherland, intimating that a party of Rhatorees had made a vow to fight and die at their posts; and suggesting that our troops should wait until the Maharajah had endeavoured to restore these fanatics to reason. The Resident went to the Maharajah in the morning, and told him the troops were advancing, and that if the Maharajah could not subdue or seize the Rhatorees, the troops would advance, blow open the gates, and take them. This derisive measure was more than Maun Singh was prepared for. It was however, determined that he, accompanied by the Resident, should go up to the Fort. Colonel Sutherland was attended by Major Smith, Chief Engineer, and Captains Ludlow and Bruere. On going to the Fort, they found not more than 200 or 300 men; the whole of the Maharajah's troops, and the Sirdars with their followers, have been withdrawn. The Rhatorees looked unutterable things, but were not apparently intoxicated; on being spoken to, they were persuaded to accompany the Maharajah, Colonel Sutherland, and Captain Bruere to the foot of the Hill; on reaching which our troops were to advance.

It will be seen that Major Smith and Capt. Ludlow remained behind, awaiting the arrival of the 22d Native Infantry: this was in consequence of some arrangement with the Killahdar's people. They had not been long alone, before an infuriated Rhatore dashed out of an adjoining house, and fired his matchlock in Major Smith's face—luckily it missed fire. He then drew his sword, and rushed on them. Major S. parried his cuts, and Captain Ludlow snatched a sword from a person standing by, and broke it on the man's head. Captain L. was then, unfortunately, wounded though not severely: he succeeded in getting out his own sword, and the man was killed on the spot. Happily our officers escaped with their lives, and with no very serious wounds; but had the attack at all been supported in the Fort their lives must have been sacrificed.

In consequence of this commotion, the inner gate was found closed on our troops advancing, and a shout of defiance was raised from within. The Sappers and Miners advanced with the powder bags; but before they came up the gates were opened, and our troops marched in and took possession without molestation.

The conduct of Maun Singh is described as being altogether admirable; and the coolness and firmness displayed by Colonel Sutherland, exactly accord with the estimate formed of his character and judgment.

AFGHANISTAN—CANDAHAR, Aug 30.—I sit down to give you the little news of this place. Of the troops a-head we know nothing, having received no intelligence of them since their arrival at Cabul. From the want of proper arrangements regarding the dawks, the man in charge of the department at Kelat i Gixi has just returned all the packets from the provinces and this place, sent during the last week, asserting he has received no money to pay the suwars. In like manner I fear all our dawks from Head-Quarters have been sent back to Ghuznee or Cabul. We have received accounts from Herat up to the 12th of this month. Major Tod had arrived and met with a most friendly reception. When he first went to pay his respects to Kamran, a slight disturbance took place, in consequence of the former's soldiers attempting to prevent the Major's followers entering the Court of the Palace along with him; on this Todd returned to his tents without having the interview; but as soon as Kamran Shah was acquainted with the circumstance, he made an ample apology, and sent the offenders to the Major to punish, as he thought fit, and since then all has gone on most amicably. Kamran has acceded to the treaty, and signed and sealed it; which he might well do, for, like the Irishman's reciprocity, it is all on one side. By it, we agree to put the city and fortifications of Herat into thorough repair, and to indemnify the Shah for the loss sustained by the ravages of the Persian army, a sum which will amount to a full year's revenue of the whole country. In return for this, he agrees to hold no correspondence with any of the states to the Westward of Herat, without our express concurrence, an article which he can of course evade, whenever he feels disposed to enter into intrigues with any of them. He also assents to acknowledge Shah Soojah as King of Afghanistan. This he at first objected to, stating he considered himself as the legal heir to the Throne; but when given to understand that such acknowledgment must be the base of all negotiations with us, he at last consented. Considering he has in Persia an inveterate enemy on one side, and ourselves and the Shah on the other, I think we might have got him to accede to the treaty without any expenditure of money. It is not mere throwing away of a few lacs of rupees which is objectionable, but the paying of money to Native Princes is always looked upon as a sign of our infirmity and weakness. It is the universal custom for the strong to extort from the weak, not for the weak to pay to the strong, in Eastern Countries. Lieutenant Pottinger has left Herat, via the Hauzarea country for Cabul, on his way to visit Mr. McNaghten, and ultimately the Governor-General. He feels justly indignant, at being superseded by a diplomatist of some six months standing, after bearing the whole brunt of the war, and contributing so essentially by his gallantry to the saving of Herat. I hope he will not require to exclaim of Todd, "his solid pudding mine, but empty praise," after the high compliments paid him by Lord Auckland in announcing the defeat of the Persians. We have Native reports from Cabul, that the King has seized Hajee Kakur, Hajee Dost Mahomed Khan, and several other powerful chiefs, who have been playing a double game with him, the former is a most notorious traitor, has betrayed every chief he has served, and been involved in every crime committed since the murder of the Vuzer Sulh Khan Barukzil. It is not three months since he upset the cause of the Candahar Chief, by deserting to the Shah, and thus causing a want of confidence, and dissension among the remainder of their troops, and in the advance of our Army to Cabul, he, under some pretext, kept in the rear, with 30,000 horse, ready to attack us, had we unluckily met with any reverse. It is to be hoped the Shah will make a severe example of some of these scoundrels, for till he puts them down with a strong hand, he can acquire no permanent power over the people of the Country. The Prince who governs here, discovered the other day, that Mehin Shah Syed, "Connolly's Companion," had an immense quantity of property of the Candahar Chiefs hid in his house.

On this he helped himself to some twenty camelloads of their effects, at which the Syed was much annoyed, and he is about to set off for Cabul, to frighten the Shah by threatening to curse him, in the same way he humbugged those who attacked himself and Connolly. Many of the followers of the Sirikars have lately returned. They represent the Chiefs to be in the greatest distress, deserted by their people, and robbed of almost all their property. They had attempted to enter Meshad, en route to Persia, but were refused permission. At last Kohin Dil Khan and four followers, have been allowed to go on to visit the King of Persia. Candahar continues very quiet, the people seem to like our rupees, however they may dislike our religion. One poor devil was detected the other day mixing lime with flour. For this he was sentenced to have his hand cut off, which barbarous punishment was duly carried into effect, and in this state the poor wretch was kept all day with his ear nailed to the gallows. You would suppose the man would have died to death, but this was prevented by, immediately after the amputation, dipping the stump in boiling oil. We have still accounts of the sickness at Quetta. Captain Meik of the 31st, much esteemed both as an Officer and man, died there a few days ago of fever, and numbers of the men have fallen sacrifices to cholera.

CABUL, 6TH SEPT.—"On the 4th instant, the army advanced 18 miles to Milan, on the following day to Deghunde, from whence a reinforcement of some hundred Affghans and thirty troopers, under Captain Taylor, Brigade Major 4th Brigade, was sent off to Captain Outram; and on the 6th it reached the neighbourhood of Cabul. The route on the 4th and 5th lay over hills and passes, which an active enemy might have guarded with the greatest ease, and have cost us very dear. Our camels and supplies must altogether have been abandoned, but the victory and its effects would have been well worth even the greatest possible hardships. As it is, these Kuzilbash gentry pretend to attribute our safety to their forbearance, and we shall have a bloody account one day to settle with them. They are fine men, very well mounted, and endowed with all that haughtiness peculiar to household troops, to which when you add, the most bitter hatred to us and our presence, their readiness to grossly insult, and the British promptness to resent the same, you will perceive a pretty heap of combustibles, which cannot in the course of nature long remain unignited. Here are two instances of their feelings towards us. An officer who was fishing a day or two ago near the camp of the Kuzilbashes, found that three of them were throwing stones at him from a tent close by, and this in the heart of the camp of the army? Again, in riding along the road, they amused themselves by drawing their knives and making signs to the sepoy as if they were stabbing them, accompanied by looks of the most bitter hatred. A batch of them rode through the ranks of the 35th N. I. on the march; not paying any attention to the sepoy who forbid them; the latter hit them with their musquets. The chief of the party instantly drew his knife, and was with difficulty restrained from using it on the sepoy, by the Sergeant Major. Many of them have been heard to exclaim, "If it were not for all those white men, what a thrashing we would give the Hindoothanes!" A fight would not only have put a good many of these vaunting Red Caps hors de combat, but would have lowered the pride of all, and would have taught them that the sepoy is as superior an animal to them, in courage and military acquirements, as he is in moral worth and rectitude of conduct. The very low scale of morality among the Affghans to a man, has astonished every one since we entered the country, and consequently the natives of India have risen a hundred per cent. in our estimation by the comparison.

On the 3d instant, the detachment under Lieut. Col. Herring, marched to "Hyder Khail." In the afternoon the Lieut. Col., accompanied by Lieut. —, went to take their evening's stroll in the vicinity of the camp, as they had been in the habit of doing for some days previous. Shortly after leaving camp, they were joined by Lieut. C. — and H. —, who proposed going to the top of a hill in the rear of the camp, and from which it was supposed they would command a fine view of the valley on either side. The four officers accordingly started, accompanied by the Colonel's orderly Havildar, two sepoy orderlies, and a bearer, carrying the Colonel's telescope. After stopping to take breath several times, they at last reached to within a few paces of the summit, when the Colonel, being somewhat blown, sat down to recover his breath. Lieut. R. — was pushing on to make the top, when the Colonel called to him to stop for him. On the Colonel's request being repeated, Lieut. R. — stopped, and was in the act of striking a light with his flint and steel for his cheroot, when two shots were fired from above and from the right a little. The position of the party appeared to have been as follows. Colonel Herring on the left; above him a few paces, and a little to his right, Lieut. R. —, whose right and some paces distant stood the orderly Havildar, and near him one of the sepoys. Below these were the other two Lieutenants, an orderly sepoy, and the Colonel's bearer. When the two shots were heard, every eye was turned in the direction the sound came from. It was too evident that whoever fired the shots were very close, and it was supposed by some that the sepoys had fired at some hill quadruped for both Havildar and sepoys had their arms. The Havildar was then seen in the act of loading, when, to the surprise of all, a volley of some 9 or 10 shots was fired from the very summit of the hill. The shots passed so close to some as to lead them to suppose they must be wounded somewhere. Every one looked confounded, the idea of running appeared out of the question, and what was to be done. At this crisis, about from 15 to 20 armed men, who had been lying down on the top of the hill, gradually rose up and commenced re-loading. They looked at their prey, raised a yell, and rushed at the officers. Lieuts R. — and C. — called out for the sepoys, but they were nowhere. The four officers then instantly ran, closely pursued by the ruffians, who fired at them and began throwing down large blocks of rock and stone, endeavouring to throw them over. The Colonel who was in advance a pace or two, was passed by the three officers successively, when Lieut. R. —, from fatigue and exhaustion, fell in rear of the other two. Soon after, Lieut. R. — heard the Colonel call out, "atop, don't run." He stopped, expecting to find the ruffians retreating, or that the sepoys had come to the Colonel's assistance; instead of which he saw the villains close upon him, and one man he saw knock the Colonel down with his sword. The Colonel almost instantaneously jumped up, seized the villain by the throat, threw him on a large rock which was close by, and began to hammer away at the rascal's face with his thick walking stick. While the Colonel was thus engaged three of the ruffians, in advance of the rest, closed upon him. The front man stood holding his sword parallel over his shoulder, while the second man cut at the Colonel's loins. On the Colonel turning round, he received the sword which had been kept waiting for him on the left side of his neck. He instantly fell, rolled over, and apparently expired. The ruffians then collected round the body, each man taking his cut, and began to strip it. The watch was the first thing that appeared to attract their attention. During this shocking scene, Lieut. R. — was lying prostrate on the ground, about 30 yards below, he having met with a blow from a stone on his knee, and being unable from exhaustion to get up. When the others were engaged in stripping the body, Lieut. R. — observed the man who had put an end to the Colonel running towards him, carrying the very sword with which he had just committed the atrocious deed, and which was streaming with the poor Colonel's blood. The idea was altogether so horrible, that having recovered a little breath, Lieut. R— made an effort, got up and ran to the end of the ridge, where there was a very steep rock, and under it a steep descent, down which the Lieutenant contrived to get before the murderer could overtake him. On looking back, he saw his pursuer standing on the top of the rock, and in the act of firing at him. The shot passed close by, and the man returned. The alarm had reached Camp, and by this time parties of the Shah's 2d Cavalry and the men of the 37th, were seen running in every direction, making the best of their way up to the spot where the sad tragedy occurred. Lieut. H— was seen running (if it could be called running) down this rugged hill, covered with the worst description of thorns, bare footed, he having lost his shoes early in the affair. Lieut. C— stood it out better than the others, and was making the best of his way to Camp, with his knees sadly cut from the number of falls he had sustained. Lieut. R— was quite done up, as much perhaps from the shocking sight he had witnessed, as the fatigue he had undergone, and was picked up by some of the sepoys, who carried him down some distance, when they met a dolly in which he was conveyed to Camp. About an hour after, the Colonel's body was brought in, as also the Havildar, the former, I am told the most shocking spectacle it is well possible to conceive, 19 dreadful cuts, and the head hanging by the windpipe. At the particular request of a native gentleman, attached to Shah Soojah's Court, and who had accompanied the detachment from Kandahar, the body was sent in here for interment. It arrived yesterday at noon, and in the evening the remains of the late Colonel were conducted to the Armenian Burying Ground, where they were deposited by the side of the late Brigadier Arnold and Captain Fothergill, attended by almost every officer in Camp, as well as the Envoy and Minister, surrounded by the officers of the Mission, the band of the European Regiment playing the dead march, and the 35th Regiment N. I., paying the last and mark of respect to the memory of the deceased. Every officer in Camp appeared, as if they had lost some sincere friend. The regret which must have been felt by the many friends the Colonel left behind him, seemed to prevail in every breast present. He was beloved and respected by the men of his regiment, and was the pride of the corps in which he had served some four and thirty years.

In him the army have sustained a heavy loss. He was a soldier at heart, a mild, gentlemanly and truly good man, and a true and sincere friend. He had been selected and nominated to the command of the Shah's Force, in succession to Major General Simpson, but the letter containing the offer of the appointment, couched in the most handsome terms, did not reach Camp till the shocking deed had been committed.

The orderly Havildar, who accompanied the late Colonel, was brought into camp in a sad state. His face was almost cut to pieces. The man is in hospital, and I believe is doing well, though from the nature of his wounds is not allowed to speak. The two sepoys returned unhurt.

Captain Barstow had assumed command of the detachment, and expected to reach this by the 8th or 9th at the latest.

SEPT. 10.—The detachment under Captain Barstow, marched in yesterday morning. Captain Timings, of the Horse Artillery, has scarcely left his couch since he quitted Kandahar, and from all I can learn, is in a very hopeless way. It is to be hoped that he will have some chance, being attended by Drs. R. M. M. Thomson, Ross and Paton.

The 48th Regt. N. I. and Shah's 2d Cavalry, move on to Ghuzni, on the 12th instant. The latter corps goes on to Kandahar, under Captain Walker of the 4th Local Horse, who has been appointed to it in room of Captain Anderson who has obtained leave to visit the Provinces. Timour Shah, the King's eldest son, accompanies the force to Ghuzni, where he is to be Governor, and the 48th are to bring back Hyder Khan, the Dost's son, and the other prisoners, who are all to be provided with an honorable asylum in the Fort of Chunar. Hajee Khan (acker, will be one of them, The 13th Light Infantry lost 61 men between Kandahar and this, and the H. C. European Regiment 4—a great difference this.

Accounts have been received from Major Todd, who, together with the rest of the mission, had arrived safe at Herat. They had found the place almost uninhabited, instead of the 50, or 60,000 souls it was said to contain. The surrounding country had been laid waste by the Persians. Every body appeared to be in the greatest distress, and the fortifications were nearly destroyed. So much for Herat.

Lieut. Maul, of the Bengal Artillery, has been placed at the disposal of the Envoy and Minister, for employment in the Shah's service. Colonel Wade talks of leaving this about the 18th. He will be accompanied by several officers who are anxious to get away.

The present arrangements are, the Bombay Force to move en route to Bombay on the 30th instant, and the Bengal Force (save the 1st Infantry Brigade, the 2nd Cavalry, Native Troop of Horse Artillery and Camel Battery) early next month. The troops mentioned are to remain here, and such fighting and manœuvring as there has been, each man trying to make out his own particular corps and detachment as unserviceable, in order that he might get back to the Provinces. It is really amusing to hear the many and different excuses which have been advanced by the different commanders, as reasons for their not being detained here, and funny to say, Sir John has not been talked over yet. Captain Timings's Troop of Horse Artillery, 1st Cavalry, and 300 of the Shah's and the Shah's Ghookah Corps, march for Bamacan on the 12th instant, it having been reported that Dost Mahomed with 4,000 Horses, is in the immediate vicinity of that place. Captain Hay, of the European Regiment, and M. B. at Agra, has changed appointments with Captain Handscomb of the 26th, who commanded the Ghookah corps, the latter officer having become tired of the work, and the other preferring the climate of Cabul to the hot winds of Agra. Smith Golding of the 35th, has also been appointed to the Ghookah corps.

We had a storm last evening, and the hills N. W. of the town, were covered with snow this morning.

SEPTEMBER 14.—I omitted to mention in my last, that a party had left this, some days before, for the interior, and for the purpose of touching up the refractory Ghiljies, and also, if possible, to pay the gentlemen a visit who so brutally murdered the late Colonel Hering. Captain Outram, of the Bombay Army, and A. D. C. to the Chief, accompanied the party. They had three nine pounders from the Camel Battery, which has been horsed for service here, the Camels being found not to answer so well in hilly countries. The Camels will return to the Provinces under Major Few.

SEPTEMBER 16.—The Bombay column under Tiger Tom (Major General Willshire) marched this morning en route to Kelat and Seind. They are to strike off the high road a march the other side of Ghuznee, and proceed direct, instead of via Kandahar. The Kelat Chief is to be turned out for the assistance he rendered the Army on the march up, but who, in to be his successor, I have not heard. The weather during the last few days, has been rather warm; but another snow storm will set us all right again.

It is said that the 2nd Brigade is to move up to Moosung, where it will remain during the winter.

Sir John Keane intends accompanying the Bengal column, but for how long we are to be honored with his Excellency's Company, seems uncertain. We have had quite sufficient of him already, and I am certain every ear will be raised when he takes his final departure. Have you heard of the murder of the Trooper of the 2d Cavalry, if not, you will doubtless do so.

The Bengal Force is to be reviewed on Wednesday or Thursday, the Shah being anxious to show his subjects what we can do. The Afghans are more astonished at our squares than any thing else. They say they are very strong forts indeed.

To give you an idea of the value of articles here, let me quote the prices a few fetched at the late sales, viz :

1000 Manilla Cheroots.....	Rs. 1042
3 Bottles of French Brandy.....	73
3 Half Bottles of Mustard.....	69
2 Bottles of Cherry Brandy....	42
2 Bottles of Saurce.....	49
2 Wine Glasses.....	16
Hough's Military Courts,.....	2-8

It is supposed we shall march en route to the Provinces by the beginning of proximo—some say the 7th is the day fixed for our departure.

By the General Orders I find officers are invited to attend at the Balla Hissar (Kings' Palace) this evening, to witness the ceremony of the Shah, investing the chief with the order of the "Grand Cross of the Dooranee Empire." It is supposed, that the order of the "Great Bear" would be a far more appropriate order for Sir John. Something also, might be invented to mark the respect we entertain for the loose language he prides himself on indulging in on all occasions, viz his polite speeches to Major P and Colonel (now Brigadier) P**.

Camp, Cabul, Monday 16th September, 1839.

GENERAL ORDERS.

By His Excellency Sir J. KEANE, K. C. B., Commander-in-Chief. "Parola Futtehpoor."

The Commander-in-Chief has much pleasure in publishing the following notification, which he has had the honor to receive from the Right Honorable the Governor-General of India, expressing the sense the Government entertains of the good conduct, the gallantry and discipline of the troops composing the "Army of the Indus" throughout this campaign, the result of which happily, has been the accomplishment of all the objects for which it was designed and undertaken by His Lordship.

Simla, 26th August, 1839.

The Governor-General of India publishes for general information, the subjoined copy and extracts of letters from His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the "Army of the Indus," and from the envoy and minister at the Court of His Majesty Shah Sojah Ool Moolk, announcing the triumphant entry of the Shah into Cabul on the 7th inst.

In issuing this notification, the Governor-General cannot omit the opportunity of offering to the officers and men composing the "Army of the Indus," and to the distinguished leader by whom they have been commanded, the cordial congratulation of the Government upon the happy result of the campaign, which, on the sole occasion when resistance was opposed to them, has been gloriously marked by victory, and in all the many difficulties of which, the character of a British Army, or gallantry and conduct, and discipline, has been duly maintained.

A salute of 28 guns will be fired on the receipt of this notification, at all the principal stations of the Army at the three Presidencies.

By order of the Right Honble the Governor-General, (Signed) T. H. MADDOCK.

In addition to the above gratifying testimonial of the Government, the Commander-in-Chief has received the gracious commands of His Majesty Shah Sojah Ool Moolk, to express to the Troops, his warm acknowledgments and the deep sense of gratitude he feels for the great service they have rendered him in the recovery of his Empire and his Throne, of Candahar, Ghuznee, and Cabul, and that the impression made on his mind by what he witnessed at the storming of Ghuznee, of the prowess and gallantry of British Soldiers, will be as lasting as his life.

His Majesty has further requested Sir John Keane, to signify to the Troops, that His Majesty has, in token of his gratitude, determined on conferring the decoration of the order of the "Dooranee Empire" on certain officers, and to present every Officer and Soldier present at Ghuznee on the 23rd July last, with a medal.

That His Majesty has addressed a letter through the Right Honble the Governor-General of India, to our most Gracious Sovereign Queen Victoria, requesting that Her Majesty may be graciously pleased to permit the officers and soldiers to wear these marks of distinction conferred by him, in testimony of his gratitude, and his admiration of their gallant conduct.

The Bengal column of the "Army of the Indus," will be prepared to march, as indicated, in the early part of next month, on a day which will hereafter be named, and to be under the personal direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to march by the Kyber Pass, through the Punjab, into the Sikh states in the Bengal Provinces.

Sir John Keane cannot omit the opportunity of assuring the troops, that it will be a proud reflection to him throughout his after life, to have had the honor of commanding troops of such high character and bearing, and who have surmounted difficulties of all kinds without a murmur; but, on the contrary, a cheerfulness which does them honor, and which marks their high discipline and good feeling. These qualities combined with gallantry, they gave the enemy a signal proof of, on the memorable day when their strong hold Ghuznee, fell, and which must have impressed them with the utter hopelessness, of further resistance to the British Power and arms.

The conduct of the troops has been no less marked by their gallantry and high bearing on this occasion, than it has been all along by the cordial good feeling which has subsisted between the combined Forces of Bengal and Bombay, throughout this service, and to which it will be the pleasing duty of Sir John Keane, to call the attention of the Right Honble Lord Auckland the Governor-General, and he is convinced it will be equally gratifying to His Lordship to learn, as it is to him to report it.

(Signed) P. CRAIGIE, Major,
Depty. Adj. General.

SEPTEMBER 26.—"Captain Outram, who has gone against the Ghuzies with 400 of Anderson's Horse, has had a skirmish with them, killed some and taken 120 men, women and children. Baldeison, the Adjutant 16th N. I. has been wounded. Major Maclaren was in the fray, but escaped unscathed."

The latest letters from Cabul mention, that in consequence of the impracticable nature of the country between it and Bameean, and the increasing severity of the weather, which was considered too much for native troops, hostile demonstrations in that direction had been postponed to a more favorable season.

A letter from Central Asia, dated 7th Oct. 1839. Says:—

The Kafilah which left Lahore on the 5th August with treasure, rum, and other stores for the Army of the Indus, reached Sulthanpoor on the west side of Khyber Pass on the 28th September, having got through the Pass without molestation from the Khybarees. The troops at Ulli Musjid are in a most dreadful state from sickness, fever and dysentery; hardly a man has escaped, and many have died. Of the company of the 20th N. I., left there with Captain Ferris, commandant of the Fort, a subadar, a havildar, and eleven sepoy died during the month of September. Captain Ferris himself was so ill that he was forced to quit the place. Out of three thousand five hundred men, Hindostances and Punjahees, in and about Ulli Musjid, there were not, at the end of September, five hundred fit for duty.

Mr. Baness, merchant, left Lahore on the 16th September, on his way to Cabool with supplies for the sahiban.

CABUL.—Letter have been received from Cabul to the end of last month. The news from Cabul is not of the most agreeable kind. The army was on the point of returning to the British Indian territory, when circumstances suddenly occurred to render a further onward movement necessary for some part of the forces, and a halt for an indefinite period for the greater portion of the remainder!

It appears that intelligence has been received at Cabul that Dost Mahomed who made his way to the other side of the Hindoo Kosh, has allied himself by marriage with the Chiefs of Koondooz and Khoolum (nearly in the latitude of Balk) and is gaining great ascendancy in Toorkistan. Dr. Lord was about to proceed to Koondooz across the mountains, with the view of endeavouring to place matters on a friendly footing between Shah Soujah and the tramontane chiefs; but he had not proceeded more than forty miles on his journey (to Kareak-kur) before he heard of Dost Mahomed's plans and intrigues, and immediately retraced his steps to Cabul. It was not quite certain whether any advance had actually been made by the Dost's new forces, but the report prevailed that his son Akbar Khan had reached Ghoreebund—a pass over the mountains about sixty miles from Cabul,—and was endeavouring to raise a rebellion. This, it was supposed, would not be attended with any difficulty, for the Shah is so extremely unpopular in that quarter, that when he sent people lately to collect taxes, they were, every one of them, murdered.

The British Envoy, it seems; on receiving Dr. Lord's report, immediately determined on pushing forward troops to Khoolum. The fourth Brigade of infantry, the 4th Local Horse, a company of Sappers and Miners, and the 35th and 37th Regiments were accordingly to leave on the 4th of this month, with supplies for six weeks, and an express had been dispatched to the troops which had previously moved on to Bameean, (viz. the Goorka corps, a troop of Horse Artillery, 3 mortars, 1000 Afghan cavalry and 600 infantry) desiring them to halt until joined by the latter.

8TH OCT.—The 3d Cavalry, escorting treasure, arrived from Jelallabad this morning. The Regiment had been sent out for the express purpose of annoying Colonel Mynah and the Officers of the Corps, by knocking up both horses and camels, the road between this and Jelallabad being worse than it is well possible to conceive, and without a particle of forage of any description.

Now that they have the means, the Commander-in-Chief, Heads of Departments, 16th Lancers, 3d Light Cavalry and 4th Local Horse, will move hence for Hindoostan on the 12th instant. Sir Willoughby Cotton remains in command here, with Captains Douglas, Patton, and Watt, the Deputy Assistants of the different departments.

I am happy to inform you, that the gang who so brutally murdered Colonel Herring, have all either been killed or captured.

A Wing of the 16th Regt. N. I., from Ghuznee, got on their track and chased them into a small Fort on a hill which they surrounded. On their approaching the Fort, the fellows rushed out and came boldly down to the attack. Major McLaren had made such a judicious disposition of his Wing, as to cut off all chance of their retreating, and met them with two of his Companies, while the other two had been sent round the hill unobserved by the gang. They stood the fire some time, when they began to think it high time to be off, and just as they reached the top of the hill, (the flanks being lined by a party of Skinner's Horse) they were met by the other two Companies of the 16th. So great was their surprise that they instantly laid down their arms and gave themselves up. Every man, woman and child was taken. Several of our sepoy were killed and the Adjutant of the 16th Lt. Balderston, wounded. Major McLaren has had a high complimentary order issued on the occasion. A Wing of the 25th N. I., under Capt. Cowley marched this morning for Ghuznie. They are to remain there till Major McLaren, with his Wing, returns, and then come back here with the captured Ghiljies, who are all to be put to death, at least such is the report. Major McLaren is still hunting parties of Ghiljies, and reducing their strong holds.

This morning we had a hard frost. There was ice in all the water-vessels, half an inch thick. The Thermometer in my tent, after sun rise, stood at 33°. We are all busy, making up scales.

JELALLAHAD 4TH OCT.—The passage of the Khyber pass is of course stale—not so the hostility of the Khyberies. They continue to vow vengeance, but they lack the necessary courage to put their resolutions into execution. Alee Musjeed is a horrible place. There is not a man there now who is fit to shoulder a musket.

The Shah winters at Jelallabad—an Engineer officer (Lieut. Pigou) is on his way hither to build hospitals, barracks &c. Lieut. Conolly and Dr. Berwick, have passed through on their way to Simlah to fetch Mrs. McNaghten. * * * Lieutenant Dowson's crops is to be kept up; but he loses the command and becomes second. * * * Lieutenant Mackeson started for Cabul five days ago—he leaves Hitterdon in charge of this place. * * * The murderers of Colonel Herring have been taken, I would not give much for their heads.

HERAT.—Accounts from Herat state, that the Mission sent to Shah Kamran, under the direction of Major Todd, had arrived. This once magnificent town was found to be comparatively deserted, in consequence of the desolation inflicted on the surrounding country by the Persian army. The fortifications, moreover, were in so dilapidated a state, that the successful defence of them by Pottinger appeared little short of a miracle. Information has also been received, that Major Todd has assumed the office of British Envoy at the Court of Herat, thus superseding Capt. Pottinger, who had retired in deep disgust at the unworthy treatment to which he had been subjected. Letters from Candahar written at the time when the Mission was despatched, stated, that a series of intrigues had been for some time at work, to wrest this ambitious post from the gallant youth who had earned it by his merit, and that they had at length succeeded in triumphing over the principles of justice and equity. It was decreed that Capt. Pottinger should be removed, and that Major Todd should take charge of his office.

* A letter from Herat, of later date states, that Major Todd will remain at Herat, during the winter, to accommodate Capt. Pottinger, who is desirous to visit India for a few months!

AFGHAN.—The following are extracts of letters from Gurden Demaur, Sept. 29.—In the Uirghundee pass we met Captain Thompson, with some sappers and miners, on his return from Bameean. He reported the road impracticable for wheeled carriages; and the consequence was, that a letter reached us at Youatt, after we had passed the Onai pass, directing us to halt. Captain Thompson had reported the road to be a mere mountain pathway; and the letter stated, that, therefore, 3 guns and all the waggon's were to be sent back, whilst for the transport of the three remaining guns, and then ammunition, elephants were to be sent. We could not halt at Youatt, there being no supplies or forage there, therefore we came on to Gurden Dewaar, where Lieut. Mackenzie (in temporary charge of the Horse Artillery,) and Lieut. Broadfoot, of the Engineers, went on to examine the Irak pass, some 20 miles distant, and reported it practicable, so we have received permission to advance with the whole of the Artillery, belonging to the detachment. According to the native accounts, we shall find forage plentiful at Bameean; they talk of the snow lying there 3 yards deep. Whilst that is the case of course, the grass will not be found; so we must lay in straw. I don't know where Lord is now; he started from Cabul on an endeavour to reach Kooloon by a different route from this. Should he meet with an unfriendly reception, he is ordered to fall back on us, and is empowered to take us on to Kooloon.

The Army expect to commence their march back on the 15th. A detachment, consisting of a squadron of the 2nd Cavalry, the 48th N. I., and 3 guns of Capt. Abbott's Battery, marched from Cabul on the 12th towards Ghuzul. The 48th were to escort back the Dost's son.

Irak Valley (October 4).—We crossed the Irak pass yesterday, with less difficulty than we expected. But our troubles, in the way of passes, are not near over yet. Our destination is no longer Bameean, but Kooloon in Fartary. Mr. Lord has returned to Cabul, and reports that the Dost is gathering strength in Fartary. Consequently a Brigade is ordered thither, consisting of the 35th and 37th N. I. and the 4th Locals. Our detachment, that is, the Native Troop of Horse Artillery, 200 of Christie's Horse and the Gookah corps, wait for them at Bameean, thence we all proceed to Kooloon and there winter. We have 3 passes to surmount the Ukrobut, Dundan Shikon and Kara Koolul—none so high as the Irak, but the Dundan Shikon is said to be very steep. Kooloon is only 1,500 feet above the sea, so we may expect a milder winter there than at Bameean. The cold is even now severe in the extreme—it freezes during the greater part of the 24 hours. This is an inhospitable valley—narrow, with steep wall like hills enclosing to. The sun set (to us) at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and up to this (8, A. M.) we have seen nothing of it. We found some snow (perennial) in ravines on either side of the Irak hill, and at an elevation below 12,000 feet, it is so cold I can scarcely hold my pen. I'm afraid the communication will soon be cut off by the snow.

Thermometer at 7 a. m. 6 degrees below freezing.

MADRAS.

THE BISHOP OF ST. THOME.—The long pending dispute regarding the exercise of the functions of Bishop of St. Thome, has been finally settled by the Court of Directors, who have confirmed the decision of the Madras Government, which installed Dr. O'Connor, the Vicar Apostolic, setting aside the claims of the Portuguese Acting Bishop.

KURNOOL.—The whole of the Nuwab's suwars, who were ten months in arrears of pay, came forward on the 15th Aug. and the Fort Gates being kept constantly closed, they posted themselves outside and declared that they would not move until they got their money. On the following day their example was followed by a body of 150 Rohillas, who claimed three months arrears, but no one dared report the circumstances to the Nawab. On the 17th Namdar Khan Dewan informed the Nawab of the conduct of these men and that they were very clamorous for their pay, whereon he fell into a violent passion and ordered that they should be at once paid up and discharged which was done accordingly. On the 18th the Dewan made a similar report touching the Suwars, this rendered Nawab furious and he directed that they should be beaten away: Bheem Singh their Jemadar, hearing this, said, 'very good, but we will not stir from here till we get our money.' The Nawab was consequently obliged to come to terms and at length satisfied the suwars by directing the Dewan to give them orders on the Talooks. A report having been made that some of the Ryots were unable to commence cultivating, the Nawab ordered that 100 bullocks and 1000 rupees should be distributed amongst them. On the 21st the Town duties were less than 300 rupees, the minimum fixed on by the Nawab, he therefore ordered that the Cutwall should receive corporal punishment, and the next day levied a contribution from all petty dealers each according to his means. On the 25th the fort gates were thoroughly repaired. The Nawab on the 26th sent for Namdar Khan Dewan and told him that he had heard the Company's Army was coming against him, but this the Dewan assured him was all false, and pledged himself to be responsible for it. On the 27th the Nawab rose at midnight, left the fort and was occupied all next morning in exercising his troops. On the 28th Meer Sada Mohdeen, a Faqeer greatly in the Nawab's favour, communicated to him that the Company's Army was about to assemble at Adoni for the purpose of attacking him, the Faqeer concluded with these words "you fancy yourself in no danger but your Dewan has betrayed you and will cause your ruin." The Nawab upon this sent for the Dewan and repeated the Faqueers words. The Dewan replied that the whole was false, and that he had better not attend to such people who always were about inventing lies; this completely satisfied his master, who was so enraged with the Faqeer that he sent for an ass, and ordered that he should be mounted thereon and conducted out of the Fort; but subsequently relented; in the evening the Nawab requested the attendance of the Company's Vakeel and asked him what news was stirring. The Vakeel presented a receipt for the last Khist to Government and said that orders had arrived for payment of a further one. The Vakeel next enquired by order of the Collector respecting the family of Daood Khan, a deceased brother of the Nawab, and Aluff Khan son to Moosaffer Khan, these persons having been seized and forcibly brought into the fort. The Nawab replied that they were part of his own family with which the Company had no concern whatever. After the Vakeel's departure, the Nawab sent a Hukaru to the Cotwal with orders to take up any person who might be found talking of the approach of the Company's Army. The next day he sent for his brothers, and after acquainting them that the Company's Troops were assembling to attack him, asked their advice. They one and all recommended him to keep friends with the Company and mind their orders, as if it came to fighting, the Nawab and his people must inevitably be defeated and lose their lives. The Nawab shook his head at this and said "how long can a man expect to live, it is better to die, at once than be despoiled of one's hereditary honours and possessions; would you have me live and see others enjoying my rights?" On the 30th it was well known in the fort that the Company's army was coming, and great numbers of the people residing within the fort, and who were not permitted to leave it, made their escape by stealth, letting themselves down from the walls.

KURNUL.—Letters have been received from Kurnaul Field Force of the 26th ultimo, still in Camp at Kuppatal. The force was appointed however to march the following day to Codamoor, where the Hyderabad Brigade and mortars would join, and the whole then await the Commissioners' orders, to enter the Kurnaul territory. This 18 Pounders and 12s, with 1 howitzer, and 1 Mortar, supplied from Bellary reached Camp on the 26th. Working parties from the line were being employed under the Engineers making gabions and fascines, and on the advance from Kuppatal the Sappers and Miners with two Companies of Native Infantry, would be left behind to carry on the same work.

They had still no accounts from the Commissioners; but native information said, that they had paid but one short visit to the Nuwaub, noticed above, and that since then the Nuwaub's brother and his vakeel had had daily audiences of them in their Camp. The prevailing opinion amongst the inhabitants of the pettah, was that no resistance would be offered; but still the gate leading from the fort to the Pottah, which extends to the bank of the Hindry is carefully guarded, and all ingress and egress, except by express permission, forbidden.

The whole force was generally extremely healthy though one or two cases of cholera had occurred.

On the 12th instant last, it was understood at Madras, that an express had arrived, announcing the quiet and unresisted occupation of the Kurnaul Fort, by our troops, but that the Nuwaub had been held off and carried off a prisoner by his own Patans, who vowed they would not give him up until he paid them their arrears. This was confirmed by letters received on the 13th. It appears that the troops marched in on the night of the 6th inst., without the least disturbance occurring on the occasion. The Rohillas and Patans were previously turned out of the fort; and, on the following morning, these collected round the gate, refused to let the Nuwaub enter as he wished, declared they would not part with him until they were paid up their arrears, and finally they carried him off into the pettah. The artillery at that time found him in the fort was very insignificant, there were a good many swivel wall pieces, but only seven or eight brass and iron field pieces of small calibre. It was generally suspected, however, that much lay concealed; and the result of the labours of a Committee, appointed to search, was accordingly looked forward to with impatient curiosity. Their discoveries did indeed prove most extraordinary and important, and have been almost exclusively confined to the Nuwaub's Zenana, which proves to be a perfect arsenal upon a most extensive scale; and there have been found concealed in various ways—underground and in godowns, whose doors and entrances had been built up, between four and five hundred pieces of artillery, of which fully one hundred are in such a state of equipment as to be ready for active service in the field at a few days' warning. A great many exceedingly well constructed furnaces, now standing in perfect order for casting guns and shot, and the ruins of many more, have been found in various places: an immense quantity of shot of all sizes; grape and canister, langridge, hand grenades and shells of various diameters, all made of a species of pewter, but containing more lead and less zinc, than the compound so called usually does—have been found, while of copper, lead and zinc a considerable store has been ferreted out. Several very fine brass guns have been dug up, and 2 mortars of the same metal, which for size,—and perhaps also for beauty of casting—promise to rank as the most remarkable of their genus in Europe: the bore of the largest is twenty-six inches, thickness of metal nine inches, and length from muzzle to cascabel about seven feet; the other has a bore of twenty-two and a half inches, and the other dimensions in proportion. A great many muskets, musket-locks, pistols and swords, have also been turned up: heaps of cartridges ready to be filled—also port-fires, fuzes, fire-balls, slow matches, a large store of sulphur, rosin, fine charcoal for gunpowder, in short every material required to constitute a large and most valuable arsenal are here:—and it is evident, from the workmanship of his gun carriages and limbers, the beauty and correctness of casting, and boring of his guns, the construction of his furnaces and the general order and arrangement of this most extraordinary military workshop and store-house, that the master hand has been that of a practised and scientific man, whose subordinates must have been artificers well qualified to conduct gun founding and carriage buildings, as well as laboratory work, in all their departments.

Letters from Kurnaul of the 18th inst., communicate the gallant and desperate affray with the Rohillas. The intelligence runs as follows:—

This morning the person of the Nuwaub was seized after a short but desperate resistance by the Rohillas. The Force under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Dyce—consisting of 2 Companies of H. M. 39th, the 34th Light Infantry, 1 Company of Foot Artillery with 2 Howitzers, one Brigade of Horse Artillery, 1 squadron H. M. 13th Light Dragoons, 1 squadron 7th Light Cavalry—marched at an early hour from their encampment outside the Fort, and took up a position near to the enclosure (a burial ground) occupied by the Rohillas. The dispositions made were in all respect admirable; the Artillery were posted in a field commanding the enclosure and in such a position as to cover the advance of the line by an oblique fire, the 39th on the left at a distance of about 150 yards from the wall of the burial ground, whilst the 34th were extended from them to the guns. After some delay occupied in negotiations for the surrender of the Nuwaub—a space of upwards of 3 hours having thus been allowed for an acceptance of the terms proffered—the word was given by Colonel Dyce to commence the attack. After 7 or 8 rounds of round and grape from the Guns and a smart fire of musketry from the whole line, the bugles sounded "the Advance," and the Rohillas' position was speedily carried at the point of the bayonet by the 39th and 34th; and the person of the Nuwaub seized.

"The resistance may safely be pronounced desperate, as the loss sustained by our Troops will testify. Lieut. White, of H. M. 39th Regt and Lieut. Yates of the 34th L. I. were killed in the enclosure, and Lieut. Colonel Watson of H. M. 39th was mortally wounded—our loss in Non Commissioned and Rank and File I have however not yet been able to ascertain correctly, but it amounts in all to 20 or upwards, killed and wounded.

"It is difficult to pronounce at present how many of the Rohillas have fallen; the number probably falls short of 100. A considerable number made their escape across the river, where they will doubtless be intercepted by the body of the Nizam's Cavalry under Capt. Blain, which has been stationed there for the purpose. Many prisoners have been secured by the Dragoons and the Native Cavalry, a large party of whom crossed the river in pursuit by a most dangerous ford, where a trooper of the Dragoons was carried down by the current and lost. A great portion of the Rohillas were destroyed by a well directed fire of a party of the 34th Light Infantry, stationed on the bank of the river to arrest their retreat.

"A Detachment from the Head Quarter Camp, under the command of Lieut. Colonel MACLEAN of the Dragoons,—consisting of 4 Companies H. M. 39th, a Corps of Native Infantry, and a Detachment of Dragoons and Light Cavalry,—have been sent across the river to Rachore for the purpose of intercepting any parties of the Rohillas who may attempt to escape into the Nizam's country."

We subjoin the official despatch on this occasion.

Fort St. George, October 22, 1839.

The following despatch from Lieutenant-Colonel Dyce, reporting his proceedings in fulfilment of instructions issued by the Kurnool Commissioners under orders from Government to attack the Jaghirs and secure the person of the Nabob, who has failed in his allegiance to the East India Company and been detected in treasonable designs against their interests, is published for general information.

TO THE COMMISSIONERS FOR THE AFFAIRS OF KURNOOL.

GENTLEMEN,—Agreeably to the instructions conveyed in your communication of last evening, I have the

* The terms tendered to the Foreign Troops near Zorapoor, were a guarantee for the payments of all arrears which might be due to them, and Passports to enable them proceed to their own Country with security of life and property.

Other interviews proved unsuccessful, and as upwards of two hours had now elapsed, I determined to try the effects of intimidation and immediately placed the Troops in position to attack if necessary the Durgah and stone enclosure occupied by the Nabob and his followers, this produced an immediate visit from the before named parties accompanied by several others, and among them the Rohilla Shah Wully Khan, who seemed chiefly to direct the negotiation.

On this occasion (anxious to avoid unnecessary bloodshed) I again used every endeavour to induce them to agree to the terms offered pointing out the inevitable consequences of refusal, but in vain, the conduct of Shah Wully Khan amounted to extreme insolence and he distinctly crowed his determination that the Nabob should not surrender, unless I would on the spot adjust all claims of arrears of pay and furnish them with passports to Mecca, stating that the paper alluding to the communication addressed to him and the other Chiefs by the Commissioners (which I should here remark he positively refused to receive) was useless and that he placed no faith in promises, the party then withdrew to the Durgah and did not again make their appearance.

After this there appeared to be considerable commotion at the Durgah and parties of the enemy moved out and joined the walls,—three hours and a quarter having now elapsed, I sent the Persian Moonshee Abdul Ally to beg the Chiefs would consider the terms offered and accede to them, or that I should be obliged to attack them, to this they replied "attack us, we also are ready." I now ordered the guns to open, which was done with admirable effect by Major Bond which was instantly returned by a very heavy fire of Mucketry and Ginja from every direction; finding the enemy determined to hold his position behind the strong stone walls at which he had taken post, I charged and drove them out at the point of the Bayonet, the struggle at the Durgah and its enclosures was for some minutes very desperate and hand to hand, the men confining themselves almost entirely to the bayonet opposed to the swords and daggers of the Rohillahs and Arabs.

The conduct of the detachment of H. M. 39th Regiment was such as always characterizes British Soldiers—but nothing could exceed the behaviour of the 34th Regiment L. I. I beg particularly to bring to the notice of superior authority the conspicuously gallant conduct of Lieutenant Colonel Wright of H. M. 39th Regiment, who has been dangerously wounded—of Major Bond, Commanding the Batteries, of Major Montgomerie Commanding Detachment of Cavalry, of Major Armstrong 34th L. I. who himself seized the Nabob, and to Captain Balfour, B. M. of Art., who acted as my Staff throughout the morning, and for whose exertions and assistance I feel much indebted. The loss of the enemy has been severe and the bodies of the Rohilla Chiefs Shah Wully Khan and Noor Khan and of the Arab Demolers Shark Saad have been recognised among the killed.

The Patan Chief Ushreef Khan and 98 Prisoners have been brought into Camp.

The Cavalry have been employed in cutting off and securing fugitives were not under my immediate observation, but Major Montgomerie who commanded them, has reported in the highest terms of the conduct of Officers and men, more particularly of Captain Lawrence 7th L. C. of Lieutenant Cameron H. M.'s 13th Dragoons, and of Cadet Hoosain, Subadar 7th L. C.

I beg also to report that Captain Pears the Commanding Engineer, was with me the whole time, and that Lieutenant Quinterion of the Engineers, in a personal encounter with some of the enemy, has been severely wounded.

A number of Elephants, Horses, Treasure and other property have been captured—a list of which I shall do myself the honor to forward as soon as the Committee now sitting closes its proceedings. A return of Killed and Wounded is herewith enclosed.

I have the honor to be &c.

BOMBAY.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL D. CAPON.—Lieutenant-Colonel D. Capon, of the 16th Regiment, has been appointed to command the station of Aden. It is intended to relieve the native troops there before the commencement of next monsoon, they having suffered very severely from scorbutic ulcers, and in the mean time Government are preparing to erect a large hospital on the esplanade, for the sick details as they arrive from that place and Scinde.

GUJARAT.—Letters from Guzerat mention the deplorable condition to which the 12th Regiment N. I. is reduced by sickness at Rajcote. It has scarcely an officer for duty, while 300 rank and file are in hospital with fever. To meet this exigency, there has been only one sickly medical officer, Assistant Surgeon Gray; but the commander of the forces has not only ordered prompt medical aid, but has also directed Superintendent Surgeon Bell to proceed to Rajcote to report on the state of the corps.

Drowned in the Troubadour.

THE DEWAN OF THE EX-RAJAH OF SATTARA.—It is said, that the Dewan of the Ex-Rajah of Sattara was released from prison on the 27th ultimo, under certain conditions and restrictions. He is now either at Poonah or Sattarah. It is further said, that he has contributed to the dethronement of his late master, by divulging the secrets of his durbar, and that he is to be rewarded with a pension for this important services.

The new Rajah is still living out about the camp. He is said to have imprisoned some of his deposed brother's vakeels, and to have discovered a deficit of five lacs in the treasury. The Ex-Rajah is still at Nimbgaum, waiting to see what is to be done with him.

The interior of the Deccan appears in a state of great prosperity, owing to the abundant crops. The weather is described to be delightful.

DESTRUCTION OF THE STEAMER ATALANTA BY FIRE.—The Atalanta has been burnt. The following is the account the Editor of the Bombay Gazette gives of the affair.

We think we are not wrong in saying destruction, for, at the moment we are now writing, 11 o'clock, the whole seaward face of the town, the surface of the waters, and every spire and steep are wrapt in a sheet of lurid light, proceeding from the flames, which are now devouring the Atalanta.

The whole town is at this hour astir, and the outward banians, and the bunders, are full of people gazing on this very melancholy spectacle.

We have not, at present, learned how the fire originated. It seems to be confined to the after part of the vessel, but while we now write it is fast spreading fiercely and rapidly, all over her. We believe, that the getting her near to the shore, in order to have the engines out of deep water is the principal exertion now making under the direction of the Superintendent.

Subsequent intelligence states that the cause of the conflagration in the Atalanta, is yet unknown; but that it appears that through the exertions made to save her, the damage she has sustained is not irreparable, and her machinery has escaped without the slightest injury.

SATTARA.—The following is the proclamation of Government on the deposing of the Rajah of Sattara and, the setting his brother upon the throne.

PROCLAMATION

Issued by the Resident at Sattara, under the authority of the Hon'ble SIR JAMES REYNETT CARNARVON, Governor of Bombay, dated Sattara, 5th September 1839.

1. When the British Government was compelled, by the unprovoked hostility of Bajee Rao to declare war against him, a Proclamation dated the 11th February, 1818, was issued by the Honorable Mr. Elphinstone, sole Commissioner for the settlement of the territories conquered from the Peshwa, setting forth the circumstances which had rendered that measure imperative. In this it was announced as follows.

"The Rajah of Sattara, who is now a prisoner in Bajee Rao's hands, will be released, and placed at the head of an independent sovereignty of such an extent as may maintain the Rajah and his family, in comfort and dignity. With this view, the Fort of Sattara has been taken, the Rajah's flag has been set up in it, and his former Ministers have been called into employment. Whatever country is assigned to the Rajah will be administered by him and he will be bound to establish a system of justice and order. The rest of the country will be held by the Hon'ble Company. The Revenue will be collected by the Government, but all property, real or personal, will be secured. All Watum, and Euam, (hereditary lands) Watsla shans, annual stipends, and all religious and charitable establishments will be protected, and all religious sects will be tolerated, and their customs maintained, as far as is just and reasonable."

2. The Rajah of Satara having been rescued from captivity on the defeat of the Peishwa at Ashtes, was, pursuant to the above declaration, placed on the Throne and a Treaty of alliance and friendship was concluded between His Highness and the British Government dated the 25th September 1819. By the second article of this compact, the Rajah for himself, and for his heirs, and successors, engaged to hold his territory in subordinate co operation with the British Government, and to be guided in all matters by the advice of the British Agent at his Highness' Court. By the fifth article, the Rajah, for himself, and for his heirs and successors, engaged to forbear from all intercourse with foreign powers, and with all Sardars, Jagheerdars, Chief and Ministers, and all persons of whatever description, who were not rendered subject to his authority, and to abstain from all connection or correspondence with them. It was further stipulated by the same article, that any affairs that might arise with the aforesaid state and persons, relating to His Highness, should be exclusively conducted by the British Government, and that if (for the purpose of forming Matrimonial connections) His Highness should have occasion to communicate with persons not rendered subject to his authority, such communication should be made entirely through the Political Agent. Finally it was declared that this article was a fundamental condition of the agreement and that any departure from it on the Rajah's part, would subject him to the loss of all the advantages secured to him by the said treaty.

3. Notwithstanding this solemn compact it has been conclusively established, to the conviction of the British Government, that the Rajah, unmindful of his obligations, and of the generosity which restored him to liberty, and conferred on him a Throne, has for a series of years, held clandestine communications, contrary to the stipulations contained in the 5th article of the Treaty; that he has cherished ambitious designs hostile to the British Government; that he has advanced claims and pretensions incompatible with the letter and spirit of the Treaty; and that he has conducted himself in a manner subversive of the alliance formed between the two states.

4. Nevertheless, the British Government willing to believe that the Rajah had been betrayed into these arts by the counsels of evil and designing men, and in the hope and expectation that the Rajah would appreciate its clemency, and abandon the dangerous course into which he had been seduced, had resolved to overlook and forgive the past, on his agreeing for the future, to act strictly and in good faith according to the Treaty, to dismiss from his counsels the minister who had been chiefly instrumental in creating disunion between the two states; and to abstain from injuring those persons through whose information his violations of the Treaty had been established.

5. With this view, the Honourable Sir James Rivett Carnao, Baronet, Governor of Bombay, vested with full authority from the Right Hon'ble Lord Auckland, Governor General of India, proceeded in person to Sattara and having explained to the Rajah the dangerous position in which he had placed himself, and having communicated both verbally, and in writing the conditions on which the British Government was willing to grant an amnesty for the past, urged him to the compliance with these terms, as the only mode by which relations of amity, and friendship with him could be restored.

6. The Rajah, after repeated conferences, and ample opportunity for reflection, and after having been explicitly warned of the consequences rejected these conditions, and the British Government being therefore convinced that it is impossible any longer to maintain friendly relations which a Prince who has shown himself so regardless of a Treaty, entered into under the peculiar circumstances above recited, hereby declares the alliance between the two states dissolved, and its intention to enforce the penalty specified in the 6th article of the Treaty entered into by the Rajah, and dated the 25th September 1819

7. The British Government, however, having no views of advantage and aggrandizement, has resolved to invest the Brother and next in succession to the Rajah, with the sovereignty of the Sattara state, according to the limits fixed by the Treaty of the 25th September 1819. He is therefore hereby proclaimed Rajah of Sattara, under the title of SHREEHUMT MAHARAJ SHAHJEE RAJEE CHUTTURPUTTER OF SATTARA, and all persons residing within his territory, are hereby required to render to him allegiance.

(Signed) C. OVANS,
Resident at SATTARA.

GUZNER MEDAL.—A medal is being struck at Bombay, to commemorate the Storming of Guznee, and is to be represented by Shah Shoojah to the Officers concerned in that affair. It is about an inch and a quarter in diameter, and is to weigh about four gold-mohurs. The words.

CONSPIRACY TO MURDER THE CAPTAIN OF THE KING WILLIAM.—Robert O'Toole, Ed Mate, George Thompson, Boatswain, and William Wright Steward, of the ship King William, being convicted of an attempt to poison their Commander, George Thomas, were sentenced, O'Toole and Thompson, to fifteen years' transportation to New South Wales, and William Wright to two years' imprisonment in the jail of Colombo

BURMAH.

MOULMEIN.—Private letters from Maulmain of the 9th of Sept. state, that Tharawaddie is adopting the principles of political economy too largely copied upon by Mahomed Ali of Egypt. He is establishing trading monopolies on his own account, and making large importations of muskets and timber, and other commodities, thus ruining the general trade of the country, in order to enrich his treasury.

RANGOON.—Letters from Rangoon to the 24th ultimo, state, that Tharawaddie had become alarmed at certain rumours afloat in the Bazaar, the tenor of which was that it is in the intention of the British Government of India to espouse the cause of the old, dethroned King and reinstate him on his throne. There were various other reports in circulation, among the rest, that the Wounghee had avoided transmitting to Tharawaddie, a letter said to be from the heir apparent, who they persist in believing to be still alive, which epistle it is stated, was withheld under the apprehension, that Tharawaddie would harass the whole male population till he had hunted out the young Prince, or his ghost. It was, moreover, rumoured, that several French spies, were in the country, with a view of tampering with Tharawaddie after the fashion of M. Vicovitch. This, is not very credible, and may probably have its origin as our correspondent observes, in the machinations of the Russian agent just mentioned at Caubord Tharawaddie appears to have laid aside warlike intentions for the present; and probably may feel sufficient satisfaction, at having got rid of a British Resident, to keep him quiet for a while, independently of his fears of what he may expect at our hands.

Private letters from Rangoon mention, that our firm friend and faithful ally Tharawaddie, begins to find himself on no bed of roses, at least that his bed of roses—blood red roses no doubt they are if any—is pretty considerably sprinkled with thorns, which prick his coward conscience and disturb the serenity of his repose. It seems that he is alarmed by causes domestic as well as foreign. He dreads his own unpopularity, and he fears that if the British Government, attack him in one quarter, the Peguises will have at him in another, which in all probability would be the case. He is perplexed what to do with his unfortunate brother, who, it is generally supposed, will furnish an additional evidence of the truth of the observation, which has been made respecting the proximity of a monarch's death to his dethronement. It is generally thought, that if the British Government would espouse the cause of the dethroned King, a revolution in his favour would take place in Ava; but it is the opinion of a very intelligent correspondent on the spot, that it is by no means unlikely that Tharawaddie himself may voluntarily replace his brother on the throne.

CHINA.

China news to the 18th of July, has been received during the week, via Bombay. The chief items we give below.

All the English papers hitherto published at Canton, have been removed to Macao, and are published there, with the sanction of the Macao authorities.

Commissioner Lin, has addressed a letter to the Queen of England, in which he rates her soundly for the misdeeds of her subjects, and winds up with the following advice:—

“ Let the Queen of the said honorable country, on receipt of this letter, immediately take all the circumstances connected with the stopping the Opium, rush from her different sea ports and communicate the same to us in reply. Do not on any account make use of falsehood or evasion, seeking to delay or procrastinate!”

MEETING OF BRITISH MERCHANTS.—The following resolutions were adopted at a meeting of the British Merchants, held at the office of Messrs. Dent and Co., at Macao, on the 12th of June

1. That this Meeting sees with regret that there are parties preparing to send British ships and property to Canton, in opposition to the strict injunctions of H. M. Chief Superintendent.

That with the view of ascertaining the position of British ships and property, a requisition be made whether the several public notices issued by him are to be considered as placing a positive embargo on British ships and property by the Government of Great Britain, and secondly whether he considers the present tone of his negotiations with the Chinese Government such as to warrant a belief that at no very distant date, we may expect such an arrangement of existing differences, as to admit of British property being sent within the Bocca Tigris.

2. That a Committee be formed, to communicate with Captain Elliott, such Committee to consist of Messrs. G. T. Braine, Chairman; A. Jardine, W. Thompson, W. Dent, W. F. Gray, D. Rustomjee, C. B. Adam and C. Kerr.

3. That this Meeting be adjourned, pending receipt Captain Elliott's reply.

The above resolutions were communicated to Capt. Elliott, who returned the following answer.

Macao 14th June, 1839.

Sir,—“ I have the honor to acknowledge your letter of yesterday's date.

“ The meeting will permit me respectfully to remark, that I understand an embargo to be an act of the government of a country prohibiting the departure of the ships and goods of another.

Founding my reply to the first question proposed to me on that impression, it will be obvious that the several public notices issued by me cannot place an embargo on British ships and goods.

Their purpose and effect remain to be noticed.

A crisis of a nature unparalleled in point of importance has recently supervened, in which I have found it my duty for the general safety of the public interests under my Superintendence, to issue certain prohibitory injunction to Her Majesty's subjects, and careful reflection upon the act of Parliament, the orders in Council, and all previous analogous practice pending our intercourse with China, has carried me to the conclusion that I have not transcended my lawful powers in the notices in question.

I am of opinion, therefore, that the ordering of British ships of goods within the Bocca Tigris, under the present circumstances, may, and most probably will, involve persons, upon whom such a responsibility can be fixed, in consequences of the most serious description.

The stringency, however, of these instruments, the construction of their language, and the liabilities of every kind to be incurred by a departure from their terms, must be felt to the attentive consideration of parties (if such there be) proposing to postpone public authority, and general consideration, to their own views, and particular interest.

At all events it is my duty again to warn H. M.'s Subjects in the most emphatic manner, that the entrance of British ships and goods within the Bocca Tigris, in the present state of affairs, appears to me to be perilous in the highest degree.

Beyond this consideration of danger, too, such a measure would be intensely humiliating and mischievous, because it establishes the principle that British subjects entertain a confidence in the justice and moderation of this Government, notwithstanding all that has passed consenting for themselves and their countrymen to trial and condemnation by Chinese officers, and forms of Chinese Judicature for Capital, and, a fortiori, all lesser offences.

I trust, I shall never be placed in the painful situation of addressing a special injunction to any subjects of Her Majesty's, requiring them to desist from a course so unworthy of their country, and so dangerous to innocent men, whose lives may fall a sacrifice to their reckless cupidity, before the certain and powerful intervention of the Queen can reach these shores, and disabuse the Chinese Government of imagination that such will never be tolerated.

I am conveying the plain sense of the Instruction under the Sign Manual, when I declare that it is impossible of admission at least till our relations with this Empire are more extensively modified. After this exposition, it is to be concluded that we shall hear no more of the entrance of British ships within the Bocca Tigris under actual circumstances.

In reply to the second question submitted to me, I beg to say that I see no present reason to believe, that H. M.'s Subjects may expect such an arrangement of existing differences, as to admit of British ships and goods being sent within the Bocca Tigris under the sanction of my authority, before the pleasure of Her Majesty's Government be known to me.

I have the honor to remain, your most obedt. humble servt.

CHARLES ELLIOTT, Chief Superintendent.

Minutes of an adjourned General meeting held on the 17th of June, at Messrs Dent and Co.'s Office, G. T. Braine, Esq., in the chair.

1. That it is the opinion of this Meeting, that the Public Notices of H. M. Chief Superintendent, coupled with the explanations contained in his letter of 14th instant, are to be considered as conveying a positive order from him, as the Organ of his Government, prohibitory of British ships and property being sent within the Bocca Tigris in the Chinese Government.

2. That it now becomes necessary for British Subjects to make some proper arrangements for the present disposal of ships and property in the outer anchorages; and that the Committee be authorized to communicate with the Chief Superintendent, with the view of determining what course is most proper to be pursued.

3. That Mr. A. C. Maclean, Thomas Fox, Gilbert Smith, be added to the Committee.

4. That with implicit reliance on the Chief Superintendent, and the most entire dependence on the justice wisdom, and power of the Government of England to, redress the wrongs of British Merchants, this Meeting is of opinion that the interests of all connected with the China Trade will be best promoted by a cordial unanimity, and strict adherence to the orders of the Chief Superintendent.

5. That the proceedings of this Meeting be submitted to the Chief Superintendent at an early date; and that they be printed in the Canton Newspapers.

MEETING OF AMERICAN MERCHANTS, &c.—On Monday the 1st July, at noon a meeting of the American merchants, supercargoes, and captains, took place at Mr. Delano's rooms; Mr. Wetmore in the chair. It was resolved unanimously that Mr. Wetmore, accompanied by Mr. Lejee and four captains (whose names are not reported to us) should wait upon Howqua, and state to him the impossibility of their putting their names to a Chinese document which they did not understand. Howqua replied, that such an excuse could not be admitted, that the Chinese must be signed, and that he had been credibly informed that there were parties among them quite willing to do so. At 5 o'clock the same afternoon the parties met again, when Mr. Wetmore reported Howqua's answer, and it was then agreed among the parties that they should dissolve the meeting, and that the Captains should go back quietly to their ships at Whampoa, and not think of doing any thing till Saturday. Their object was, that Howqua, seeing the parties determined, might be induced to yield the point, and, had this arrangement been carried into effect, it is very probable that they might have succeeded. But we regret to add, that while most of the Captains left for Whampoa on that understanding, Capt. Benson was prevailed on by Mr. Morse of Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s house, to remain behind, who contrary to the resolution; and wishes of his countrymen next morning handed into Howqua's hands, the bond signed in English and Chinese! This having been done by one, was of course done by the rest, though under protest. Thus Messrs. Olyphant and Co. have the questionable honor of being the first to give in to a very tyrannical Chinese law which compels people to put their names to they know not what.

The follow is extracted from a letter dated Canton, 2d July:

"The ships are at length secured; but that is a matter of little moment in Canton to day, compare with the interest felt in the visit of all the coral, blue, crystal, white, and gold bottoms and peacock's feathers in the province. This has indeed been great a day for us poor "devil" here. The Yumchae, Viceroy, Fooymen, Hoppo, Judges, Magistrates of Nankiao and Pwanynue, &c. &c. &c. have visited the British hall, and shown themselves to admiring?—barbarians. Many of us had a very good view—almost face to face of the Commissioner and the minor staff, in all some twenty or thirty in number. We find him, the great I-fra—under the middle size, but good looking and quick in his motions. The linguist went to inform one of the American residents, that the Yumchae wished to visit his house, and some preparations, such as laying planks (the square being then under water) were made, but the announced visit did not take place, I know not from what reason.

The following are rumours.

That Lin either had offered 250 dollars per chest for the Opium destroyed, or was sounding how such an offer would be received.

That many villages had openly rebelled against the Police authorities, and had set up a board with these words—"Opium smoked here, come in freely."

That the Emperor had addressed Lin to the effect that he should never see him until friendly relations were established with the British, and their flag, as before, flying at Canton.

News has been received from China, to the 27th of August. A fresh prohibition of food and servants, to the British residents, had been issued by Lin, in consequence of the non-delivery to the Chinese authorities, of a sailor who killed a Chinaman in a brawl at Hong-kong. The man had been committed for trial, by a court of Oyer and Terminer, held by Capt. Elliott, on board of the Fort William, at Hong-kong, on an indictment for murder, which indictment was ignored by the Grand Jury. Five other seamen were tried on an indictment for riotously, unlawfully and injuriously entering certain dwelling houses in a village, on the eastern shore of the anchorage of Hong-kong, in search of spirits, and for then and there riotously assaulting the inhabitants, men and women, cutting, beating, and otherwise dangerously ill using them. Also for having, on the 7th July last past, riotously damaged and injured a certain joss-house in the neighbourhood of the above said village.

These men were convicted and sentenced to be imprisoned in any of her Majesty's goals or houses of correction in the United Kingdom, which her Majesty may be pleased to command, there to remain and be kept to hard labor for the space of six calendar months; and further, each to pay a fine to the Queen of £20 lawful money of England; and that they be kept in safe custody until they shall have paid the said fine.

The respective imprisonments adjudged, will take place from the date of the respective committals within such of her Majesty's goals or houses of correction in the United Kingdom, as her Majesty may be pleased to command, and that till a suitable opportunity presents itself to send the men to England, that they be detained in safe custody according to the customs and usages of the Sea Service on board such ship or ships as the Chief Superintendent of the Trade of British subjects in China may think fit to appoint from time to time.

In consequence of the edict of Lin, on the non-delivery to him of the British sailor, many of the servants have left, and market people have been punished for selling food to foreigners. Under these circumstances a meeting of British residents was convened at the Superintendent's office, at which a committee was appointed to deliberate on the best means to be adopted. British residents were rapidly leaving Macao, and most of the ladies had embarked. Capt. Elliot had stated, that he held the most positive orders from his Government, under no circumstances whatsoever to deliver a British Subject over to the Chinese, and unless these latter withdraw their pretensions, there is no saying how the present difficulty can be arranged. The Commissioner and Governor of Canton, were, it is said, on their way to Macao, accompanied by a strong detachment of troops, which were, however, as a proclamation from the Kien-min-fu, Governor of Macao, not to enter this place, but to remain at Cassim's, to avoid causing unnecessary alarm. The Chinese authorities appear to be very anxious to obtain possession of the person of some British subject, or other, for in Canton, about a week since, on their entertaining suspicions of the Captain of an American ship at Whampoa being an Englishman, a warrant with some police were sent, and it was only by the most solemn assurances from his consular officer of his being an American, that he remained unmolested.

The following is an extract from the Canton Press of 17th August, and from the Free Press of yesterday's date, containing the latest China intelligence we have seen. The Moulmain was not intended to touch at Singapore, being bound for Bombay, and brought few letters for this place. We learn from Captain GUY, of the Moulmain, that sales of opium on the coast were very difficult to effect, in consequence of the vigilance of the Chinese customs. The Ann was attacked while at anchor by two junks, and would have been taken had she not slipped her anchor. It will be seen from the annexed extracts that there is little probability of any arrangements being speedily made to admit of British vessels proceeding to Whampoa. The Charlotte for Calcutta, was the next vessel to leave after the Moulmain.

PERSIA.

Letters have been received from the Persian Gulf, dated 4th and 14th September. These state that the King's brothers and the people of Teheran had risen against his Majesty, the Shah, who was in consequence shut up in the Ark or Palace, and kept in a complete state of blockade. Lophahan is also said to be in a very disturbed state. At Shiraz, the Prince Viceroy having attempted to punish those, who a short time since caused him to be expelled from the city, an out-break took place. Near one hundred persons were killed, and by the desert accounts, the Prince was blocked up in his Palace.

Bushire, people of had risen and turned out Abdallah Khan, the Military Governor, and appointed in his place the brother of the late Sheikh Abdallah Rassool, in the capacity both of Civil and Military Governor. An insurrection had also taken place at Shiraz, in consequence of an attempt made by the Shahzadah to appropriate to himself all the rice in the place, which so irritated the people in the Buzars that they rose in a body, and overpowered his guard and forced him to take refuge in his Seraglio, where he is kept under restraint. Mahabber Khan, Ameen Adanlet, had been ordered down to Shiraz, to his rescue, and to restore order. The Persian Government had issued a peremptory injunction against the exportation of horses.

The plague from Kermanshah, that the disease, among the Persians, had entirely disappeared, and that the place was now quite healthy.

It has been reported that the disease, among the Persians, had entirely disappeared, and that the place was now quite healthy.

August 3rd, 1839.—The whole of the Turkish Fleet, having moved to the harbour of Alexandria. We are anxiously waiting to see what course of policy the Governments of London and Paris intend to pursue with reference to the maintenance of Turkey as a kingdom, now that she has her army and navy, and Russian influence more than ever growing at Constantinople. Kossuth Pasha, now prime minister and brother of the Sultan, being considered among the Turks as the chief mover of Russian intrigues there.

August 4th.—A Steamer arrived this-day from Constantinople, offering Mahomet Ali the acknowledgement of independence in Egypt, to himself and heirs, and to his son Ibrahim, the Pashalick of Syria during his life time; but this offer of course, has been declined. A virtually independent in both of these countries since 1832; therefore will not strengthen Turkey's position. That can only be done by the wonderful power and ability they possess; being now employed in Constantinople to prevent its becoming more and more Russian. The French Steamer also arrived this-day, with letters from England up to the 16th of July, which were promptly forwarded express to the Maha at Suva, the Commander of which vessel, L. Daniel, most probably, of his own accord, waited for them. These letters, on that occasion, owing to this officer's judgment, received very late intelligence of the momentous events now in the tapis in most countries.

11th.—The Consuls of the great powers at Alexandria, waited upon the Pasha to-day to make him a particular notification, which they each received orders to do, from the Ambassadors at Constantinople, about the Vienna Congress.

14th.—The French Steamer arrived here to-day, as usual, but brought no very particular news from any country.

20th.—The Turkish Fleet still remains motionless in the harbour of Alexandria. A fire, which burnt down 23 houses, took place at Cairo yesterday. There never was less excitement in Egypt during our sojourn in it, than at this present moment. Trade and commerce are at a stand still, and all the merchants here are waiting the result of the Vienna Congress, as to the future peace and tranquility of Egypt, or the war and misery which it will prepare the way for. One or the other is certain.

The French Consul General, accompanied by Colonel Campbell, waited upon the Pasha and requested him in the name of the French Government, to give up the Turkish Fleet, and also stated, that in case of a refusal, the Pasha would find a fleet off the port of Alexandria. His Highness replied, that he intended to keep the Turkish Fleet until all his demands, which were all just and reasonable, were agreed to—that if the fleet came with amicable intentions, it should be received with every honor; but if otherwise he should also be prepared to receive it (that he should put a chain across the mouth of the harbour, and place both the Turkish and Egyptian fleets in order of battle, and that he had no doubt he should be able to maintain his rights, and that he should order Ibrahim Pasha to march to Constantinople. Since then the greatest activity has existed in Alexandria, the forts are being manned and filled with munitions of warlike stores—the ships likewise are preparing to take in their powder, and in the arsenal the people are at work night and day here—in Cairo, the Pasha continues the conscription with the greatest rigour, all the boys from the school and factories have been removed to Alexandria, to be placed in the Army or Navy.

The Russian Fleet is at present cruising in the Black Sea, off the mouth of the Bosphorus, the English fleet, at the mouth of the Dardanelles, and Admiral Stogoroff has gone to Constantinople, where he has hoisted his flag on board the "Ceresford."

It appears the internal state of Asia Minor, is most wretched, the Army of reserves, which occupied many of the cities has disbanded, and Hassan Pasha, with 8,000 men, the wreck of his army, has openly declared for Mahomet Ali. Russia is supposed to be the cause of all this treachery, and wishes so to place Constantinople in the most ultimately be called in as an arbitrator. The allied powers have however resolved, both the British and Russian Governments, that any treaty entered into between them without their sanction, will be considered as null and void.

PRECURSOR STEAM MEETING.

A General Meeting of the Friends of the Precursor Scheme of Steam Communication, was held at the house of T. E. M. Tuttle, Esq., in Old Post Office Street, on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. It was not very numerously attended, the number of gentlemen composing it, being somewhat under thirty; but it would appear from the accommodations provided, that not many had been expected.

The following trifling circumstance has rendered it impossible to give more than an idea of the one or two resolutions which were passed by the meeting. William Cobb Hurry, Esq., Secretary to the meeting, on being applied to, on behalf of this paper and the Commercial Advertiser, for leave to copy the report and resolutions, refused, for various weighty reasons, to allow copies to be taken. He, however, kindly informed the applicants, that as it was his intention to transmit the documents in question to the Englishman, newspaper, on behalf of which no applicant appeared, and for which, we may hence infer, Mr. Hurry was acting as reporter, they might, if they liked, beg, borrow, or steal them from the office of that paper; in short, that they might get them in any way they could, except through the politeness of William Cobb Hurry, Esq.

JAMES PATTLE, Esq., was called to the chair.

Mr. TURTON then explained the objects of the meeting, on the subject of which, he said, so much discussion had taken place in the newspapers lately, to the great disadvantage of the editors, who would have been much better pleased to have seen all the long letters which had been written on the subject, inserted as advertisements. Instead of bestowing upon the meeting, one of those long speeches for which it was said he was noted, he would read to them an article from the Friend of India, which fully explained the objects of the projectors of the Precursor plan. This article, he hoped to see copied into all the papers. It was then read, and Mr. T. went on to say a few words in addition and illustration. He had, he said, no desire to say or do anything that could give offence to the most staunch advocate of the Comprehensive Scheme, or to interfere with the interests of that scheme. If that scheme could, in a reasonable time, be carried into effect, he would be most anxious to give it a trial. But he did not think it likely that it would be in operation in any reasonable time. He thought they were unnecessarily delaying the communication, by considering it requisite to commence on the other side of Egypt before it was complete on this. The first object, Mr. Turton thought, was to get to Suex. Once in Egypt they might rest there for a while. They might visit Thebes, the Pyramids and the other wonders of the land. They might go Home via Turkey, Italy or France. A thousand schemes would suggest themselves when once in Egypt, and he hoped that all would join heart and hand in the effort to get there. There are already steamers now on the other side of Egypt, to take on to England every body that may go from there to Egypt to join them; and there could be no doubt that if the present means were not enough, the companies already plying in the Mediterranean, would be glad to provide more. But if it will not, let us, said Mr. Turton, get the line formed on this side, and I will be ready to join any body to Montemise the other. Six years had now passed since the subject first began to be discussed, and still nothing had been done. There had been nothing but what was emphatically called shuff. It was time to do something for themselves, and not to be still following the example of the foolish waggoner, who prayed to Jupiter for assistance without putting his shoulder to the wheel to help himself.

Mr. TURTON then said, he would read to the meeting a statement of what had been already done by the Precursors. From that Report, it would be seen, that they had not hesitated to give immediate orders to have their plans carried into execution. Not orders that would interfere with the interests of the Comprehensive, but orders which, if the Comprehensive should not forthwith do that, which after two years' incessant correspondence and agitation was not yet begun, would show that the Precursors were determined to do it for themselves, and he hoped that no one would interfere with them. If the supporters of the Comprehensive plan did not, before the 15th of February next, give orders to procure a vessel which should be ready to start from here within two years from that date, the projectors and supporters of the Precursor plan would do it themselves. He believed, that the friends of the Comprehensive scheme did not expect, under the most favourable circumstances, to have a vessel ready in less than three years, and he thought that the saving of one year was a great object to be gained.

The proceedings of the provisional Committee, anterior to the Meeting, were then read and approved of.

A conversation then took place on the propriety of building their vessel here, or in England. A gentleman seemed to think it would be better to build here, but it was explained to him that although in point of durability the advantage was unquestionably in favour of this country, yet with regard to economy both of time and money, there was no doubt that to build in England was most advisable. A vessel built here, would have to be sent home for her fittings, and this would occupy twelve months before she could be here again, whereas the vessel built in England could come out complete at once.

The propriety of allowing the Precursor Association to merge into the Comprehensive on the full establishment of the latter, was then discussed and assented to without a dissentient voice. A resolution to that effect was therefore prepared, and after one or two modifications to suit the wishes of gentlemen present, it was proposed by Mr. Turton, seconded by Mr. M. D. Shaw, and carried unanimously.

Mr. TURTON then proposed the election of a new member of the London Committee, and after a short eulogy on the talents and industry of that gentleman, proposed Major Head as a very fit and proper person to fill the situation. Mr. Turton's resolution to the above effect was seconded by Capt. T. J. Taylor, who said, that having been acquainted with Major Head, and knowing him to be a likely man to do them good service, he had much pleasure in seconding his appointment, and hoped that the notifications of that appointment would be accompanied by a handsome letter in acknowledgment of his former services. The motion was carried unanimously.

The Meeting then proceeded to the appointment of a permanent Committee. It was thought expedient that not more than one member of the same mercantile firm should be elected a member of the Committee, but it was agreed, that in the absence from sickness, &c. of that member, any other partner of the house might act in his stead. The list of the provisional Committee was then read to the meeting, and with three exceptions the Members of the Committee were confirmed in their situations. The exceptions were Messrs. Pattle, Princep, and Taylor. The first of these gentlemen, Mr. Turton observed, felt it incumbent on him to request them to strike his name off the roll, as the orders of those whom he now served, prevented him serving any body else. Messrs. Princep and Taylor being Members of the firm of Carr. Tagore and Co., were omitted from the list in accordance with the rule just mentioned, Dwarkanauth Tagore being elected a Member of the Committee. In the room of those three gentlemen, Mr. Cullen and Baboos Muttylool Seal and Ramcomul Sen, were nominated and appointed without opposition. W. C. Hurry, Esq. was appointed Secretary.

The form of an engagement, to be signed by all subscribers to the firm, was then adopted, and ordered to be circulated in the subscription books.

Business then being finished, thanks were voted to the Chairman and the Meeting was dissolved.

Just as we were going to press, we received from the Englishman Office, a rough proof, from which we collect the following Resolutions:—

Mr. Furton moved the following resolution, which was seconded by Mr. A. Shaw and carried unanimously.

I.—That it is the opinion of this meeting, that in case the Comprehensive plan shall be carried into execution an immediate offer shall be made to its Directors, by this Association, of our vessel and engines upon equitable terms.

Moved by Mr. Furton and seconded by Mr. T. J. Taylor and carried unanimously.

II.—That Col. C. Head be added to the London Committee.

III.—That a permanent Committee be appointed to consist of the following gentlemen:

W. Bruce, J. Colquhoun, J. Cullen, Dwarkanauth Tagore, W. Grant, W. Fergusson, Mutty Loll Seal, W.

Newcomen, Ramcomul Sen, G. F. Remfray, Rustonjee Cowasjee, W. Turner and T. E. M. Turton, and that Mr. Hurry be requested to continue his services as Secretary.

IV.—That the above Committee be empowered to form Rules and Regulations for the general government of the Association, which shall be submitted to a general meeting of the proprietors for the purpose of confirming such rules.

V.—That the following form as to subscription, be printed in a book, and a copy furnished to each member of the Committee, that he may receive and enter the names of subscribers, viz.

Form.

We the undersigned agree to take the shares opposite our respective names in the Joint Stock Association, to be established on the plan printed and published in the annexed prospectus for a direct Steam Communication between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon and Suez. Provided, that if the whole 800 shares be not taken by the time the vessel is ready to start on her first voyage, any shareholder shall have the power to call on the Association, either to take over his share for the amount paid up by him, or to dissolve the Association by sale of the property. Binding ourselves to abide by such regulations and bye-laws as shall be made by a majority of votes, the Association is not to be considered as formed until four hundred shares have been taken.

Two hundred and forty-five shares were subscribed for in the room.—Hurk., Nov. 25.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

The COMMITTEE OF THE NEW BENGOAL STEAM FUND have much pleasure in reporting, that in the last advice received from Mr. Curtis, under date the 16th September, that gentleman expresses himself gratified with the amount of subscriptions to the proposed London Steam Company, on which 1st instalment has been paid. He trusts that the effect of them, and the progress making in the subscriptions at Madras, will be to assist greatly in removing many of the objections of the Hon'ble Court of Directors, and in smoothing the way to the accomplishment of the great object in view. Mr. Curtis expresses himself especially gratified by the subscriptions of the Natives of India, which, with the proceedings had in the Mofussil, he describes as having a great influence at home, and being more likely to bring the question into its proper position, than any other movement which can be made; and he trusts that the desire thus expressed by the Native Inhabitants of India, to participate duty in the advantages which Steam Communication between India and the reigning country, properly organized, must produce, will be echoed from one end of the Empire to the other, as an incentive to the sympathies of all Englishmen, if the Court of Directors should still refuse to listen to the appeal, which, on behalf of the Committee, he has again made to them, in a letter dated 10th September last, copy of which will be found below. Mr. Curtis states, that he has every reason to believe the India Board is highly favorable to his proposal; but the Court of Directors has declined entering into it, under two pleas, first, that the experiment required of them by Parliament be made has not had sufficient time for trial; and secondly, that the Company which proposes to undertake the Communication is not yet formed. He states that an answer something to this effect was prepared by the Court, and sent for approval to the India Board, which would not sanction it. On this the Court expressed its desire, on being again pressed by Mr. Curtis for an answer, that the India Board should revise its decision;

but the reply returned from the India Board was, that having expressed in writing its approval of the plan submitted, no revision of its objections to the proposed answer of the Court could take place. Finding he could not get an official answer from the East India House, and anxious that the public, both in India and England should know that the important question entrusted to his care and management, in conjunction with his colleagues, had not been neglected, Mr. Curtis requested Mr. Mark Phillips, M. P. for Manchester, to move for copies of the correspondence between him and the India Board, and East India Company; and also for copies of any communication which might have taken place between the India Board and the East India Company, on the subject of Steam Communication to India, by way of the Red Sea. The first was refused on the ground of its being in Mr. Curtis's possession, and that he had full power to publish it, if he thought proper; and because he had no right to load the public expenditure with the charge of publishing his letters! The second was refused, on the ground of its not being expedient to publish the confidential Communications of the two bodies for objects of private enterprize. The Committee were thus baffled in their attempt to effect their object by the want of any reply from the India House, and in their desire to shew the world where the fault really lay, by the refusal of the only means of doing so. It happened, however, within a few short days after the rejection of the proposal of Mr. Curtis by the East India Company, on the ground of its coming from "a Company not yet formed," that the Treasury and Admiralty entered into a contract with "a Company not yet formed," for the conveyance of their mails to and from the West Indies, and Mexico, at the rate of £2,40,000 per annum, for ten years. Mr. Curtis regrets that he was unfortunately absent on official business of the Bank at the time this became known in Parliament, or he would have immediately used his utmost endeavours to found a substantial claim upon the East India Company and the India Board, for the adoption of his proposal before the Session of Parliament ended. But although this opportunity was then lost, Mr. Curtis took advantage of the ground afforded by the transaction referred to, when he again addressed the Court of Directors in the letter above noticed. That letter, Mr. Curtis states, had already been read in Court and referred to the Committee which has that subject under its charge. The intention of Mr. Curtis and his Committee, was to wait a fortnight for a reply, and if none should have been received by that period, as if it should be unfavorable, to call public meetings in different parts of England, to memorialize the East India Company and the India Board. Mr. Curtis, however, expresses himself sanguine that the Court of Directors will enter upon the subject with a greater inclination to see the proposed Company established than before. He has prepared an approximate calculation of the actual cost of the present very imperfect communication between Bombay and Suez, and has procured also an estimate of the outlay, expenditure, and income, of the proposed Company, both of which will be found below. Mr. Curtis trusts the London Public will see that the subject has lost none of its interest in the hands of his Committee, and that it has not been their fault that so many months have been lost in bringing it to bear.

LETTER FROM MR. CURTIS.

TO THE CHAIRMAN AND DIRECTORS OF THE HON'BLE
EAST INDIA COMPANY.

8, Taken-house Yard, Sept. 10, 1839.

GENTLEMEN.—I am still without any reply to the letters I had the honor of addressing to you on the 14th May and 3d July last. I will not pretend that I am wholly unaware of the cause of this protracted silence on your part, it would be trifling with truth if I did not admit I had good reason to believe that it has been occasioned by the different views which the consulting parties have taken of the subject of my communications.

I think it, however, my duty to inform your Honorable Court, that the time is now arrived when it is necessary the Committee appointed to carry the resolutions of the public meeting, held at the London Tavern on the 18th January last, into effect, should call another public meeting to report their proceedings; and that the whole correspondence which has taken place will be then exhibited. It would be very satisfactory to me if I could report that an answer had been received from your Honorable Court, either to sanction or reject my proposal: because, in either case, the body of persons deeply interested in the question, and whom I have the honor to represent, would know in what way to proceed. As the case at present stands, it will be manifest that if the project should be given up, the failure may be attributed to a want of discreet patience on the part of the Committee; whilst, on the other hand, the greatest anxiety prevails both in England and India to see the proposal adopted. I therefore venture once more to express my hope that your Honorable Court will be able to meet the wishes of the whole of India and a large portion of the British public, in consenting to the proposal I have submitted; on which instant steps will be taken to present to the notice of your Honorable Court, such a company, and such names as directors to it, as, I think, will not fail to give entire confidence and satisfaction.

I have adverted to the wishes of India, in corroboration of which I beg to refer your Honorable Court to the public meetings which have been held in various parts of India, to the resolutions passed in favor of the comprehensive plan by way of the Red Sea—to the powerful subscriptions already raised (that in Calcutta alone, amounting to 100,000£. and in Madras to 22,000£.); to the fact that the Governor of Madras presided at a public meeting at that city, on the same subject; and to the loudly-expressed wish of the natives of India in the interior, as well as at the ports, that this long-desired improvement should be at length granted; to which wish the natives, as an earnest, have added their subscriptions.

I further take leave to call the attention of your Honorable Court, to the contract which has lately been entered into by the Admiralty, with a prospective company, for the conveyance of the mails to and from the West Indies and Mexico, for a sum of 240,000£ per annum, for ten years; and another contract with a private individual for the mails to and from Halifax for 50,000£ per annum; I will not occupy the time of your Honorable Court, in comparing the importance of these lines with that of the great empire under your charge; but I venture humbly to suggest, that the terms proposed in my letters are far more advantageous to the Government, and your Honorable Court, than those agreed to by the Admiralty; besides which, the speech of Mr. C. Wood, the secretary of the Admiralty, the report of which, extracted from the Times of the 22d of August, I have the honour to enclose, fully bears out the view, that a service of that kind can be much better carried out by a Government. The Company with which the Admiralty made the contract had no existence until the terms of the contract were settled, I therefore trust, that the scruples, hitherto existing on the part of your Honorable Court in respect to treating with a prospective Company, will now entirely cease, and that, as you are quite aware that it only requires the fiat of your Honorable Court, in accordance with the views of the India Board, to bring an efficient Company into immediate operation, you will no longer hesitate to sanction the proposal I submitted on the 14th of May.

I have &c.

T. A. CURTIS.

In considering the estimate of passengers a smaller number is assumed than will probably take advantage of the facility of direct Steam Communication to and from India; and of course by so much will the profits increase as the number of passengers augment; and is quite within probability that in a very short time the Government and East India Company will be free of at least half the charge.

T. A. CURTIS.

The Committee on the whole are satisfied, that the cause is progressing, and stands in a more favorable situation than when the previous mail left England; they can therefore only repeat their earnest entreaty that the Indian public will patiently await the further progress of Mr. Curtis's proceedings, holding themselves in readiness to afford him all possible aid, and continuing to manifest that unanimity which, combined with perseverance, cannot fail to ensure the ultimate triumph of the cause.

By order of the Committee,

C. H. GREENLAW, Secretary.

Town Hall, Calcutta, Nov. 13, 1839.—Hulk. Nov. 18.

THE SANS SOUCI.

It gives us sincere pleasure to be able to present our readers with a most favorable report of the performances at the Sans Souci on Thursday evening. The play was Walter's Lady of Lyons, one of the most interesting little dramas that has been produced in England for the last twenty years. We do not mean to imply that it is a work of high dramatic genius, for, indeed, in our opinion, not a single play has appeared since the commencement of the present century, that exhibits any very abundant display of the dramatic faculty. We might go still farther back, and defy any unprejudiced critic to point out one great dramatic composition since the days of Elizabeth and James. We are not inclined to call every popular play a great or even a good one. No work since the period alluded to, may be looked upon as an original draught from nature by the hand of genius, in which the curtain of the human heart is lifted, and the secrets of our inner being are disclosed as by the power of a God. This was reserved for Shakespeare and his nobly gifted contemporaries. There were no such miracles before his time, and there have been none since. It is strange that Nature, who is so sparing of that peculiar endowment, the dramatic faculty, should have reserved all England's share of it, for one particular age. Since that period, we have had highly beautiful poems and romances in the conventional theatrical form, but no true drama. Even in the very elegant and touching play of Bulwer, we have not a single new creation. The characters have all a hundred prototypes in the productions of his predecessors. They are mere outlines, and are the literary property of the stage. The interest depends not upon the minute and full development of character, but the nature of the incidents. They are like the poems of Scott, that borrow almost all their charm from the story. It is not that the characters in modern plays are absolutely unnatural, but that they are too vague and general. The consequence is, that we look more to the development of the plot, than to the exhibition of the secret springs of action, and mental or moral influences. Take away from the dramatic writer of the present day his incidents and plots, and you leave him poor indeed; but we do not think so much of what happens to the persons of Shakespeare's drama, as of the nature of their hearts or intellects. Hamlet is an intensely interesting personage, without any reference whatever to his position, and equally so is Macbeth though a being of a precisely opposite character. When we are presented with such full length pictures of humanity as these, so distinct and animated, we receive an impression that can never fade but with life itself. Did any man, woman, or child, that has been introduced by Shakespeare to Hamlet, or Macbeth, or Othello, or Leir, ever happen to forget them? But he who wishes to keep up his acquaintance with the personages of the modern drama, must have a strong memory indeed, if he does not find it necessary to refresh it with occasional re-perusals.

They all wear out of us, like forms, with chalk Painted on rich men's floors, for one feast night.

We never look in the drama of the day for profound or original delineations of human nature, but we often find in it a great deal of elegant poetry, much refined thought and noble feeling, and many striking and pathetic incidents. With all these attractions, Bulwer's Lady of Lyons is richly invested.

The hero of the piece, Claude Melnotte, is a man of high ambition but humble birth, who is passionately attached to a wealthy beauty, Pauline, the Lady of Lyons. He acquires many elegant accomplishments to render himself acceptable to the object of his adoration. He becomes a musician, a painter, and a poet. Though a poor gardener's son, he is a favourite of the Muses, and pours out his passion in a flood of verse which he transmits with trembling eagerness to his idol. She rejects it with scorn, and her lackeys not only beat and insult his messenger, but threaten a similar treatment of himself. While he is thrown into a tumult of emotion bordering on frenzy, he is offered the means of securing a severe triumph over her pride. Beausant and Clatis,—the former a man of wealth and family,—burning with mortification and revenge, having themselves been rejected, offer to introduce him to Pauline's family as a foreign prince. The plot succeeds. She falls in love with, and marries him; but, on her discovery of the imposition, he releases her from her vows. In the first gust of disappointment and anger, she vehemently upbraids him for his cruelty and deceit. With her, however, love at last gets the better of her pride, and she is willing to remain with him as his wife, while with him the sense of right, and a pride in his own original nobility of nature, predominates even over the most impetuous passion. He leaves her—enters the army—gains name and wealth—and just returns in time to save her from sacrificing herself to the heartless Beausant, at the desire of her father, who being then on the eve of bankruptcy, she wished to save from ruin and disgrace. This slight and hurried outline will perhaps be sufficient to enable those of our readers who have not seen the play, to understand the remarks we are about to make upon the principal performers.

The highly interesting but very arduous part of Claude Melnotte, was undertaken by Agar, and as the first exhibition of his talent for the serious drama, it was highly creditable and satisfactory. His conception of the part was upon the whole extremely forcible and true. There were but two occasions on which he appeared to us to forsake the meaning of the author. The first was in the scene in which he woos Pauline in the character of a prince. He appeared to forget that he was not a real prince. When he objected to the lady's over-estimate of hereditary title, and talked of waving the advantages of rank, and trusting to merit alone, he seemed to feel a conscious pride in his generosity, and his countenance seemed lighted up with the thought that, with all his external or extrinsic advantages, he could afford to rest his claims on nobler ground. This we think was not the right feeling. The lady's expression of respect for rank, ought to have thrown upon his features, an air of ill-repressed anxiety or disappointment. It was not a trifling matter: all his success depended upon it. He would not at such a moment indulge in a pleasurable and generous warmth of moral speculation. It was a question of life or death with him. The other instance of apparent misconception, was his rather scornful anger when he discovers, or thinks he discovers, that it is the prince and not the man, whom Pauline loved. Considering his idolatrous reverence for her, and his sense of his own unworthiness—(acting, as he was, with unjustifiable deception) it is more reasonable to suppose, he would be subdued by profound and ill-concealed affliction, and not have a feeling that would suggest an insulting taunt! While on the subject of defects or objections we may mention that, in a long explanatory speech, (which is a sad trial of the actor's strength, and the patience of the audience, and a very bungling expedient on the part of the author; we thought our amateur a little too inclined to be oratorical or declamatory, and that there was now and then a false tone in his voice that jarred with the pathos of the situation. But perhaps this ought to be chiefly attributed to the author, who has introduced such lengthy passages as can hardly be delivered in any other style. He also occasionally trusted too much to the imagination of the audience, and did not throw into his face the strong internal emotion. He ought not to have let his features so often rest, when there was supposed to be a tempest of varying and vehement emotion within. His idea, if we understand it rightly, was possibly true; he intended, we suppose, to imply that the feeling was too intense for expression, and that the spirits, re-treated to, and concentrated about the heart. But this is a delicate stroke in acting, that must not be too frequently resorted to, and which pays a compliment to the discrimination of the audience that is not always deserved.

As, with perfect candour, we have pointed out the very few objections that have occurred to us, we may conclude with saying, that the representative of Claude Melnotte gave us the highest gratification, and that in many of the pathetic passages, his acting went directly to the heart. His delivery (if we except an occasional precision approaching to formality, and a too lavish use of emphasis) was singularly clear, musical, and graceful. The articulation was so distinct, that his lowest tones were heard with ease and pleasure in every part of the house. This is a delightful quality or accomplishment any where, but especially on the stage. We hope that now he has felt his strength, this accomplished artist will often oblige the public by his efforts in the serious drama.

We must next say a word or two respecting Mrs. Leach, with whom, in common gallantry, we ought to have commenced. This actress seems determined to spoil our trade as critics, for she leaves us scarcely anything to object to or suggest. For the sake of saying something like a qualifying circumstance, we may remark, that we were not a little disappointed at the guor and want of spirit observable in the earlier scenes; but she was reserving her power for the telling points, and made ample amends in the later ones. We may also add, that she occasionally allowed her pleasant clear voice to lose its best sounds, and fall into a girlish querulousness of tone, that was too nearly allied to sounds heard from the lips of weeping young ladies at school, and not quite suited to the dignity of tragic grief. In every other respect, her Pauline was a more powerful and finished piece of acting than she has ever yet exhibited. It was truly admirable, and many in the house paid it the unequivocal compliment of a tear. Others repressed their emotions from a false shame, but with manifest difficulty. It would not be easy to point out all the good passages in her performance, but amongst those which most deeply touched us, were, her expression of bewildering doubt, when the incident in the cottage contradicted the false pretensions of the supposed prince; and her forlorn hope that he was really what he had seemed, and that all she saw around her was but a jest, or a trial of her affection. These were given in a manner that was earnest and pathetic in the extreme, and prepared us for the shock which the full disclosure was to occasion. Then again her hysterical laughter and bitter scorn, when she reminds her husband of his gorgeous description of his palace-home—the way in which her irrepressible and true woman's love returns with double force, and breaks out from the close folds of pride—her subsequent out-gush of love and forgiveness when he is about to leave her—her appeal to the heartless Beauseant to save the father yet-pate the child—her fixed but pitiable resignation to her fate on his insulting and triumphant refusal—her begging of her father not to mention love and Beauseant together; but above all her discovery of Cécile Melnotte in the heroic and generous Col. Morier, who doubles the pecuniary offer of Beauseant—these were all points of such extraordinary merit, that we are afraid to speak of them in terms sufficiently laudatory, lest those of our readers who did not share our pleasure, should suspect us of extravagance. We know not whether Mrs. Leach ever saw the play performed in London, (we believe not,) but if the whole of her part was an original conception, it did her infinite credit, and we must call particular notice to the beauty and effect of her attitude and manner in the last mentioned passage. When she discovered Cécile Melnotte in the famous hero, she did not rush at once and precipitately into his embrace. Her feet were fixed to the ground; while with outstretched arms and sparkling eyes she looked as if her whole being was about to be absorbed into that of her long-lost, noble lover.

We must be brief in our notice of the other characters. Beauseant is a poor and disagreeable part, but it was acted to perfection by Master Modus. He certainly made the most of it. The Secretary's Colonel Damas was chequered with inequalities, but in some two or three passages he exhibited great skill and judgment. His satirical speech on woman was most effectively delivered. Nonpareil, as a peasant, had but little to do, but it was done well. Mowbray in the part of Clavis displayed a great improvement on his last performance. His anger at the loss of the valuable diamond ring, given away by the false prince, to whom he had lent it, was spiritedly expressed.

Mrs. Tomson surprised every one with her great animation and humour in the part of the vain and haughty Madame Deschappelles. We never saw her to so much advantage. Mrs. Francis, as the Widow Melnotte, the mother of Cécile, was, as usual, exceedingly correct and judicious, but she had not a great deal to do.

On the whole the Lady of Lyons was the most ambitious and most successful representation yet attempted at the Sans Souci, and we hope it will have many repetitions, and be followed up by plays of a similar kind.

Since writing the above, we have seen a very able criticism in the Englishman, which takes a different view of many parts of the performance. Who shall decide when critics disagree?—Herald, Nov. 24.

After its brief ascent into the realms of sentiment and poetry, the an Souci has again come down to its accustomed walks in the regions of mirth and humour. The tears which fell in sympathy with the distresses of the Lady of Lyons, have given place to the broad grin with which the laughter-provoking powers of Master Modus and The Secretary never fail to adorn the faces of their auditors.

The performances on Thursday evening last were pretty well attended, but there was not quite so good a house as there has been on many former occasions. The three farces provided for the night's entertainment were certainly the most laughable set that have yet been represented at the Sans Souci. The first was "Pleasant Dreams," a clever little piece, but with no great pretensions to depth or intricacy of plot. Oliver Sanguine, a young gentleman much given to the pleasant folly of indulging in dreams of future greatness, arrives, in company with his more matter-of-fact uncle, Biggs, at an inn near Cowes, in the Isle of Wight. Being pedestrians, and displaying no very particular claims to the homage of the mercenary host, Mr. Porridge, he at first treats them rather cavalierly, and with ill concealed reluctance, accedes to their request for a mutton-chop. Shortly, however, a change takes place. One of the waiters whispers something in the ear of the landlord, which operates like magic. In great perturbation he summons his establishment; orders every one to follow him with lights; hastens to the room to which the hitherto slighted Sanguine has been shewn. There he finds his guests fast asleep in an easy chair, and diversifying his nores with incoherent manderings about his castle, his noble uncle, Lady Emily, and His Royal Highness. The awe-stricken Boniface listens with breathless interest; his suspicions are confirmed, and when Oliver awakes, he sees before him a crowd of attendants, every one with one or more lights in his hand, and all bending low before the supposed great man. Sanguine begins to imagine that his dreams are realised, and forthwith assumes the air and tone of rank. The landlord does everything in his power to atone for his previous neglect. He provides a grand dinner for his distinguished guest, and when old Biggs is summoned from the circulating library, and comes in, impatient for his mutton-chop, he is astonished at the sight of the splendid repast of which he is humbly invited to partake. In the exercise of his newly acquired authority, Oliver procures the landlord's consent to a marriage between his son, Peter, and the barmaid Sally; portions the bride with fifty pounds from the pocket-book of Mr. Porridge; condescendingly bestows upon his reverential hearers, sundry pieces of good advice, and finally leaves them to felicitate in the belief that they have had the honour of entertaining—the Prince of Orange. That name and title, inscribed in his boots, a pair of misfits, which he had purchased for three crowns, has led to a mistake so profitable for Messrs. Sanguine and Biggs.

Oliver Sanguine was one of Master Modus's most highly finished pieces of acting. The character was most admirably and thoroughly sustained, without any injurious striving after effect, or catching at points. As a representation of an indolent dreamer, apathetic to all the concerns of ordinary life, but feasting on visions of imaginary greatness, it was as natural as was consistent with the rich humour of the piece. And when the visionary rises in his own estimation and that of his entertainers, the over-strained dignity and superciliousness which often distinguish the man of low origin when suddenly exalted, were most consistently displayed. The character, independent of the acting of it, was the chief support of the piece, and in the hands of Modus it was, as might have been predicated, the cause of an immense expenditure of laughter.

The Secretary's conception of the character of uncle Biggs was very good, and he made it differ considerably from those of his old men generally. There was an unusual quietness about him, that was well suited to display the matter-of-fact old fellow in strong contrast with his ardent and ambitious nephew. Hallin, as Peter, had not much to do after the first scene, but he seemed quite at home in the character—a very clever representative of a bumpkin-beau. The landlord Pordidge was acted by Mr. McKechnie, of the Fort Theatre, very much after the Secretary's style, and with considerable ability.

Mrs. Tonson, as Sally sustained the reputation which she has so recently acquired. Her representation of the bar-maid was full of spirit. The scolding which she bestows upon her quondam master when about to leave his service, was natural in the extreme, and when she flounced out of the room, she was followed with a loud burst of applause from the astonished and delighted audience. Mrs. Francis's Mrs. Pordidge was, as all that lady's representations are, a most commendable piece of acting, and she had no reason to complain of her talents not being duly appreciated by the house.

The second piece was "The Irish Lion," a farce, which though almost totally devoid of merit as a dramatic composition, is a rich bit of broad humour. The principal character is one Tom Moore, "a predestinating journey man tailor," but one who holds his own respectable calling in "most sovereign contempt." This Hibernian "jan nee," is no a "tower" of observation, and intends to write a book when he gets back to his native Tipperary. During his sojourn in the neighbourhood of Davizes, he attracts the attention of Mrs. Fizzig, a fair specimen of the species Blue-belle and very like the celebrated Mr. Leo Hunter, of the Pickwick papers. This lady mistakes the tailor for his more renowned namesake the poet, — invites him to meet a fashionable party at the house of her friend Mr. Squabbs, to whom she is on a visit. Tom goes to the conversations, arraying himself in the coat of a customer which has been left for repair a pair of "illegant blue pantaloon's" a smart wig from the barber, and his own "shucking bad hat." The company are instructed by Mrs. Fizzig in the different parts which they are to sustain in the grand interview; some are to be listeners, and call out "hush! hush!" some are to chant various notes of admiration, the chorus ending with the "demon'd fine" of the led-captain Dixon. The "Lion" arrives; his hat is exhibited to, and admired by the excited party. He enters the drawing room, and all the company crowd about him eager to catch his lightest words. Every thing he utters, however absurd, is pronounced "splendid! — beautiful! — delicious! — demon'd fine!!!" One lady produces his autograph; another steals a lock from his luxuriant wig; — in short, he is treated as "bons" must ever expect to be treated when they fall into the hands of literary ladies like Mrs. Fizzig. But his importance is not of long duration. Mr. Puffy, the gentleman whose coat he has borrowed for the occasion, appears, and exposes his real character to the party. He is unceremoniously ordered out, — shows fight, — drives his adversaries into corners by a display of his skill in the use of the shillelah; and is, finally, rescued from his troubles by the advent of a young gentleman who owes him money, and who declares himself now, both able and willing to pay his debt.

The principal characters were those of Tom Moore and Mrs. Fizzig. Mr. Cousins, of the Fort Theatre, enacted the Irish hero, a character for which, though, it is said, a Scotchman, he seemed every way qualified. But yet, though very good as whole, his representation did not give that satisfaction which was expected from it. This may be attributed to his overdoing the part, and thereby robbing it of that effect which a more natural style would have imparted to it. This injudicious attempt to increase the humour of the part, was chiefly displayed in a boisterous manner of speaking, and a too great stress upon particular words which are thought to be especially Irish. There are defects which may, it is hoped, be easily remedied; and if Mr. Cousins will, on the next repetition of the piece, display his taste and judgment by abandoning such objectionable peculiarities, he will find himself rewarded by a harvest of applause, more abundant than that which he earned on Thursday night.

Mrs. Leach's conception of the character of Mrs. Fizzig was strikingly correct, and the manner in which she carried out her idea of the part, was in accordance with her established character. It was an almost faultless picture of the lively, laughing, authoritative, patronising, lionising, "blue-stocking."

The Secretary's Mr. Squabbs was well represented; but the part did not admit any great display of the performer's peculiar talents. The other characters had very little to do, all the business of some of them being comprised in the repeated utterance of one or two words. But though apparently so insignificant, those little parts required more study and care than what appears to have been bestowed upon them; and by a few obvious improvements in tone and manner, which some of the more practised hands will be able to suggest to the new ones, they may be made infinitely more effective.

The farce of "Advice Gratis" is an ingeniously constructed and highly amusing little piece. It exhibits the mis-haps of one Mr. Odbody, an old beau, who is particularly fond of giving to all around him, the benefit of his advice. Singularly enough, this advice always pleases, and is generally acted upon. The secret of its popularity lies in its always being in accordance with the wishes of the receiver. This benevolent sage arrives on a visit at the house of his friend Mr. Eventide, the kind and amiable husband of a garrulous, but good humoured wife, who is continually annoying her spouse by imaginary dialogues between herself and other people. The lady wishes to go to a dance, the gentlemen to a whist party, neither of them will consent to the other's going, and yet neither of them is willing to hurt the feelings of the other. They separately ask Mr. Odbody's advice — he bids them go. Their son, Edmund, wishes to accompany his mother; he too is advised to do as he wishes, and in return is counselled to make love to the prettiest dancer in the ball-room: Mr. Odbody himself showing him how to do it. The servant Grimes, an independent Yankee, who thinks his master treats him, and speaks to him as if he was a "nigger" slave determines that he won't stand it any longer, asks advice, and is confirmed in his resolve. The wife goes to the ball, taking with her Miss Ellen. Mr. Odbody's youthful cousin and intended bride, Edmund accompanies them, and does credit to Mr. O's "Art of Love" by practising his instruction with Miss Ellen on their return. The parties meet again; mutual recrimination seems likely to ensue, Mr. O. is discovered to have been the adviser of all, is covered with shame and confusion, and, as an atonement, is under the necessity of giving his consent to the union of Edmund and Ellen.

Of the characters and their representatives, it is hardly necessary to say anything; a slight notice of each must therefore suffice. Master Modus, in the character of Odbody was admirable. The Secretary, as Mr. Eventide was good as usual. Edmund, was performed by an Amateur of some promise, but rather deficient in spirit. The gloomy republican "Help" Grimes, was represented by Mr. McDowell, one of corps dramatique from the Fort. He was a little too stern and solemn even for the saturnine Jonathan. Mrs. Francis and Mrs. Tonson, were Mrs. Eventide and Ellen. The first with her interminable "I should say" and "you would say" was very entertaining. The latter did not display as much animation as in her Sally of the first piece, but nevertheless acquitted herself very creditably. — Hurk, Nov. 30.

THE VALADARES' AND RYCKMANS' SOIRÉE.

Mr. and Mrs. Valadares and the Messrs. Ryckman's 5th Soirée, took place on Tuesday evening at the Trade Association Hall; it was, we are happy to say, well attended, and honoured with the presence of Sir Jasper Nicholls family.

The 1st part commenced with Winter's Overture to Timoteo, and was well played, but the band was much too weak for such a composition. Bishop's air, "Bid me Discourse," next followed, and we do not remember ever to have heard Signora Ventura sing so beautifully. It was most highly applauded. The Duett for the pianoforte and violin was not so pleasing as we could have expected. Valadares appeared to have lost his usual energy, and the pianoforte accompaniment was played too fast in one or two of the variations for the violin; we however hope the little worthy will give us something much better at the 6th Soirée. The duett by Mrs. Valadares and an Amateur Lady, was a very pleasing production and well sung. The amateur Lady's voice is very correct and sweet, but she sung so low that those who were any distance from the Orchestra could scarcely hear the subject; but we hope this will wear off when she acquires a little more confidence. The scarcity of Lady vocalists at present, must render her a valuable acquisition to the Calcutta Concerts. The Flute Solo was the next production, and with exception of a slight defect in the 3d variation, (we think in some of the lower notes of the instrument) was in every other respect, well played; we however think the Amateur's tone may yet be greatly improved, it being at present very weak, and not that firm tone the instrument is capable of producing. It was however deservedly applauded. The Trio from Il matrimonio Segreto followed, and was well sung by Signora Ventura, Mrs. Valadares, and an amateur. The amateur's voice is wanting in sweetness, and we think if he would select pieces that required less compass of voice, he would succeed much better. The first part concluded with Mons. Ryckman's Solo on the Tenor Basson, which was a truly delightful production, and played with his unequalled brilliancy and effect.

The 2d part was commenced with a Sestetto by Ries. It was by no means a pleasing specimen of composition, but no doubt it was a scientific one. It was also much too long and tedious, although the performers did it ample justice. The duett by Signora Ventura and an Amateur, from "Tancredi," was very neatly sung and highly applauded. Mr. Ryckman's Solo on the Pianoforte, was splendidly executed, and proved a great treat to the audience. It is useless to comment further on the Monsr. Ryckman's performances, as we well know, that on their respective instruments, they are at present unequalled in India. Mrs. Valadares next sang the beautiful air from Massenello, "When the sigh long suppressed" with great taste and effect. Monsr. Ryckman's Solo on the Bas Bass on, and Signora Ventura's Cavatina were treats that must give great pleasure to any person that hath "music in his soul," and the piece that concluded, was equally pleasing. We returned home highly delighted with their united exertions, and sincerely wish them success in their next Soirée.—Hurk, Nov. 14.

LANDHOLDERS' SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Committee held at the Society's Office, on Wednesday the 13th instant.

PRESENT.

Committee.—Rajah Radhacant Bahadoor; Rajah Kallykisson Bahadoor; Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore; Baboo Prosonnocomar Tagore; Baboo Radhapersand Roy; Baboo Kallynauth Roy; W. C. Hurry, Esq.; G. Vint, Esq. and T. J. Taylor, Esq.

Visitor.—Baboo Goureechurn Bhuttacharjee; Baboo Saurodaproasand Bose.

The gentlemen proposed at the last meeting were unanimously elected.

The following gentlemen were proposed members of the Society.

Proposed by G. Vint, Esq. and seconded by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore.

E. G. Dubus, Esq. of Nohatta }
Edward Dubus, Esq. of Chandpore. } Jessore.
Robert Macnair, Esq. of Joradah ... }

Read a letter from Mr. A. Rogers dated in London 16th Sept. last, on the cultivation of Flax in Bengal, suggesting that good up-country seed, if sown sufficiently thick in warm weather, would produce a beautiful crop, and that, if trials from good native seed should prove successful, it would render this country independent of foreign supplies of seed; and also informing the society that the Flax Experimental Society will dispatch a liberal supply of choice seed to Bengal for distribution, and Messrs. Hamilton and Co. will be glad to give the same to applicants.

Thanks were voted to Mr. Rogers for the above letter, and resolved that a copy of it be sent to all the members of the Society to inform them, that flax seed can be obtained on application to Messrs. Hamilton and Co.

Read the correspondence with Mr. Crawford since the last meeting.

Ordered that a further remittance be sent to him as soon as the subscriptions are collected.

Read the draft of an act, called, an act for amending the Bengal code, in regard to sales of land for arrears of revenue, and also the notes of several Members of the Society on the different clauses.

Resolved, that the secretaries be requested to prepare a memorial with their suggestions for the amendment of the proposed enactment, and submit it to government accordingly. The memorial to be published at once, in order to ascertain the public opinion on the various points discussed therein.

Resolved that a general meeting be called at the Town Hall on the 7th December next, and the notices for the same be published in the English and native languages.

BONDED WAREHOUSE ASSOCIATION.

At the Half-yearly Meeting to day of the Bonded Ware House Association—Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore having been called to the Chair—the Directors' Report was read and approved, and Mr. Martin was unanimously elected a Director. The Directors were authorized to call for the further instalment of Ten per Cent. of subscriptions from the Proprietors, in such sums, and at such times as they may find to be required: and they were ordered to take steps for realizing immediately, whatever arrears of subscription might be due.

Report by the Directors of the Bengal Bonded Warehouse Association submitted to a general Meeting of Proprietors held on the 18th November, 1839.

Dwarkanath Tagore, in the chair.

Read Directors' Report, Cash Abstract, and Sketch of By-Laws, as follows:

REPORT BY THE DIRECTORS.

	1,541	3	8

Co.'s Rs. 1,18,038 1 11

On this account we have not much to add to the information communicated in our last statement.

The present range of Warehouse is to be finished by the middle of next month. Two of the stories even will be available next week.

Where, by the approaching completion of this Building, you are on the eve of having the undertaking fairly tested, we judge it to be unnecessary for us to enter on any speculation as to the probable results. Suffice it to repeat our expectation that these will eventually be satisfactory.

The Deed of conveyance of the ground, which has been so long in the hands of the law officers, has not yet been executed: inability hitherto to procure an accurate definition of the boundaries, is assigned as the cause of the delay. The last instalment of the purchase money in consequence remains unpaid; and meanwhile the funds in hand have been applied to liquidate the claims for building. A balance of about 13,000 Rs. remains at credit; but, this being immediately needed to discharge instalments already due, you will have to authorise a further contribution. We rely on 50,000 Rs. being adequate to finish the present operations: and, the balance of the price of the premises being 53,500 Rs., we propose your sanctioning a call for 10 per Cent. from the Shareholders. This should close all further contributions, until the extension and success of the business demand enlarged accommodation, and determine you to proceed with the erection of a second range. An expenditure of about 1,25,000 Rs. has already been incurred, in providing for the ulterior measure, whenever it shall be found by the Proprietors to have become expedient.

A resolution of last General Meeting having directed us to prepare a draft of such By-Laws as we might have to propose, we submit to your consideration the sketch of a few; and by next meeting we may have additional ones to suggest. We have not deemed it advisable, in the first instance, to lay down many, thinking that it will be more judicious to wait and see what further rules experience shall recommend to be provided.

You have to elect a Director, to supply the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Cockerell. In alluding to the lamented loss of one who was always a zealous supporter of every public undertaking, without indulging in this place in any private regrets, we cannot abstain from acknowledging that we feel this Association is now bereaved of one of its best and ablest Friends.

SKETCH OF PROPOSED BY LAWS.

1. Any 3 or more Directors may, as often as they see fit, summon extraordinary general Meetings, for any special purpose, giving not less than 14 days' notice of such Meeting and of its special purpose, to be at least twice published in the Calcutta Gazette and two of the daily newspapers.

2. It shall at all times be competent for 10 or more Proprietors, entitled to vote, and possessing together not fewer than 100 shares, in writing, under their hands, to require the Directors to convoke an extraordinary Meeting of the shareholders, for the purpose which shall be set forth in such requisition, to be holden not sooner than 14 days after the date thereof, and notification of the same to be published at least twice in the Calcutta Gazette and two of the daily Newspapers. And should the Directors refuse or neglect to call such meeting, then the said 10 Proprietors, may, by public advertisement as aforesaid, summon such extraordinary Meeting to be holden not earlier than 14 days after the date which had been specified for the same in the requisition; and the proceedings of such extraordinary Meeting shall be as binding on the Directors, Proprietors and officers, as if it had been convened by the Directors.

3. It shall be competent for 3 or more Proprietors, qualified to vote, and holding together at least 50 shares, to adjourn once but not oftener, the discussion of any question brought before an ordinary General Meeting to some other day within 14 days from the adjournment. 4 days' notice whereof being inserted in the Calcutta Gazette and two of the daily newspapers, and the business then to be transacted to be confined to that for which the adjournment was demanded.

4. The Books, Deeds and Records of the Association, shall be kept at their Office, accessible to every member between the hours of 10 and 12 A. M. except on holidays.

5. The Directors shall meet once a month, or as much oftener as they may determine, for the transaction of the current business of the Association; and special Meetings may be called by one Director, notice thereof being furnished by the Secretary to the other Directors. And three Directors shall be a quorum for conducting business; and all questions shall be settled by a majority of those present, the Chairman, in addition to the privilege of voting with the other Directors, having a casting vote, whenever there happens to be an equality of votes.

6. All disbursements to which the property of the Association may from time to time become subject, shall be made by the order of the Directors.

7. The Directors may appoint whatever Bank they think proper to be Treasurers of the Association; and the funds at credit may be drawn for by cheques signed by 3 or more Directors, or by cheques signed by the Secretary under credits signed by 3 or more Directors.

8. Keeping at the Bank a sufficient sum in ready cash for the current payments of the Association, any surplus shall be converted into Government Securities in the name of the Association, to be realized or sold out as the Directors may find necessary to defray the expenditure; or, if unanimously decided by the Directors, such surplus may be invested in other approved securities.

9. The Directors, in conducting the affairs of the Association, may according to their discretion, institute legal proceedings, or stay them and compromise the subject in dispute, or refer the same to the decision of arbiters.

10. The Directors, Secretary, and other Officers, shall be indemnified against any charges or losses incident to the execution of their respective trusts, and not caused by wilful neglect or default, and none of them shall be answerable for the acts of the others, or for any persons who shall collect the monies of the Association, or for any Banker or other person with whom the monies or effects of the Association may be lodged.

11. The Receipt of 3 Directors, or of the Secretary, or of the Treasurers, for any of the monies due to the Association, shall effectually discharge the party paying the same.

12. The Directors, or a majority of them, shall have power from time to time to appoint and to remove all the officers of the Association; but their appointment and removal of the Secretary shall, nevertheless, be subject to confirmation or rejection by a General Meeting of the Proprietors.

It is not requisite at present to come to any decision touching the By-Laws, these by the provision of the Act of Incorporation, having to be submitted to two extraordinary general meetings.

The following Resolutions were carried without dissent.

On the motion of C. Tiebeck seconded by A. Porteous.

1. That the accounts of the past half year be received as correct; and the Director's Report be approved and recorded, and be published for general information.

On the motion of C. Tiebeck seconded by Major Ouseley.

2. That for the purposes indicated in their Report, the Directors be authorised to call for payment of the further instalment of 10 per cent, or 5s Rs. per share from the Proprietors, in such sums and at such times, as they shall find to be necessary.

The Directors are ordered, under the authority conferred upon them by clause XXIV. of the Act of Incorporation, to take steps to realise without delay, whatever instalments may be in arrear.

Mr. Martin is unanimously elected a Director, in the place of the late Mr. Cockerell.

The thanks of the Meeting are voted to the Chairman.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, the 2d November, 1839.

A. Kinsey Esq., proposed at the last Meeting was elected.

Dr. Wethered, of the Arracan Local Battalion, was proposed as a member by Dr. Chamberlaine seconded by Dr. Goodeve.

The following letters were read :

From S. Lullow, Esq., Superintending Surgeon, enclosing a case of Amputation of the penis, by A. Pringle, Esq., of Ferozepore.

From C. Mackinnon Esq. to the address of Mr. R. O'Shaughnessy forwarding a specimen of Salivary Calculus, which had been extracted by Mr. Mackinnon from beneath the tongue of a Native. The Calculus is as large as a filbert and weighs upwards of half an ounce.

From Sir J. Macgregor, returning thanks for the 5th and 6th Nos. of the Society's Quarterly Journals.

From D. Menzies, Esq. R. M.'s 16th Foot. to the address of Dr. W. B. O'Shaughnessy, forwarding to that gentleman for analysis, a specimen of Amalgam, which Mr. Menzies stated that he had employed with great success in stuffing decayed teeth. Dr. O'Shaughnessy stated that he found this Amalgam to be composed of 8 parts of Bismuth, 2 parts of lead and 3 parts of Tin. The Amalgam is applied in the following way. A piece of the metal is placed upon the diseased cavity, and to this is applied, steadily and with a moderate degree of pressure, a heated rod of iron of the thickness of a crow quill. The metal is shortly observed to fuse under the heat of the rod. The operation causes a slight twinge of pain. It may be necessary to apply the rod several times before the metal becomes perfectly fixed in the cavity. It may be necessary to repeat the operation, but Mr. Menzies states that he has never had occasion to do so oftener than twice, and the Enamel never falls out when once finally fixed.

Mr. Menzies received the Amalgam from a friend upon the continent.

The following communications were then presented.

A most interesting case of Fracture of the femur which had resisted all other remedies, successfully treated by the administration of itemp. by R. O'Shaughnessy, Esq.

Mr. O'Shaughnessy also exhibited to the Meeting a very curious and rare case of aneurism of the heart, which he had met with in opening the body of a Native, who died suddenly in the street, a short time since.

The aneurism, about the size of a walnut, projected downwards from the apex of the left ventricle. The coats of the sack were thin, and it was evidently formed by the lining membrane of the heart protruding through the muscular walls.

The sack had burst at its point, causing fatal hemorrhage into the pericardium. The previous history of the patient was not known.

The Proceedings of the last Meeting were confirmed.

MEMBERS ELECTED.

The Gentlemen proposed at the last Meeting were elected Members, viz.

Messrs John Storm,—M. D. Cohen,—A. T. Smith,—G. Shearwood,—L. Quantin,—John Currie,—James Hume,—Lewis Durup de Domba, and Lieut Killoe.

FOR ELECTION.

The names of the following Gentlemen were read as candidates for election :—

Dr. John Campbell, (Cawnpore),—proposed by Dr. Spry,—seconded by Mr. A. Poirous.

John Thos. Pearson, Esq. Medical Service (Darjeeling).—proposed by Dr. Spry,—seconded by Mr. Trebeck.

Longueville Clarke, Esq. (Barrister),—proposed by Dr. Spry,—seconded by Dr. Strong.

F. A. J. Elson, (Chittagong).—proposed by Mr. T. H. Gardiner,—seconded by Dr. Spry.

H. Andrew, Esq. (Kishnaghar),—proposed by Mr. Wm. Storm,—seconded by Mr. D. Andrew.

J. S. Boldero, Esq. (Civil Service, Agra).—proposed by Mr. Charles Lyall,—seconded by Dr. Spry.

Alfred Parker, Esq. (Firm of Mackenzie, Lyall and Co.).—proposed by Mr. C. K. Robinson,—seconded by the Secretary.

Robert Bluntish, Esq. (H. M. 9th Regt.),—proposed by Captain Mylius,—seconded by the Secretary.

His Highness Prince Ghulam Mahmood,—proposed by Dr. Strong,—seconded by Mr. Trebeck.

James R. Logan, Esq. (Penang).—proposed by Dr. Spry,—seconded by Mr. Wm. Storm.

PRESENTATIONS TO THE SOCIETY—LIBRARY.

1. 25 Copies of Official Papers, connected with the Cultivation of Cotton. Presented by Government.

MUSEUM.

1. Four bottles of Wood Oil, procured from the Forests of the Penasserim Provinces. Presented by Dr. Helfer.

2. A basket of ripe Oranges, received on the 10th of October, Presented by G. F. McClintock, Esq. in whose garden they were grown.

3. A second specimen of Caoutchouc Cloth Presented by Mr. Linton.

4. Three bottles, one containing red solid Celery—one Cove Coss Lettuce, and one double curled Parsley, procured in May last, from the garden at Ragby, the seat of Marquis of Hertford, and regarded as the finest variety of their respective kinds procurable in England. Presented by the Revd. W. H. Pearce.

5. A pint bottle containing the seed of a Plant that grows abundantly in Major McFarquhar's grounds at Tavoy, the leaf of which is somewhat like clover, grows either upright to the height of three or four feet, or creeps along the ground; appears to grow in any soil, and thrives in the hottest weather. Horses, Cows, Sheep, Goats, and Rabbits are fond of it. It is cut the same as lucerne, and it springs up again. Major McFarquhar does not recollect having seen it any where before, and he considers it may be useful to those who keep Cattle. Presented by Major McFarquhar.

6. Two bags containing about 160 lbs. of Cotton Seed, from Tinnevely in Southern India. Presented by Adam, Scott and Co.

7. Sample of the first specimen of Silk, made by Messrs. Watkins and Mendes. China Silk Reelers, from the Moonga Cocoons. Presented by Captain Jenkins. Referred to the Silk Committee.

8. A bottle of Rum, distilled by Mr. J. Balestier, at Singapore, from Skimming and Molasses. Mr. Balestier is desirous of having an opinion of its quality, and it was referred to a competent authority for that purpose. Presented by Dr. Huffleagle on the part of Mr. Balestier.

9. A small sample of Cotton, from Malta seed, grown in the garden of Major Ouseley, from seeds furnished by Captain Steel who obtained them from the Agricultural Society. Presented by Dr. Wallich, on the part of Major Ouseley.

10. Three small samples of Cotton, taken during the rains from Plants in his garden at Dacca. Presented by Mr. Cooke.

11. A few Dahlia seeds from plants affording every colour but dark blue—though there are blue and white amongst them. In the Valley of Dehra the flowers are as large as dwarf sunflowers. Presented by Captain Burnett.

12. A case containing 30 Penang Sugar Canes sent for the purpose of ascertaining the opinion of the Agricultural Society as to their quality compared to the Oranthe Cane. Presented by Mr. Logan of Penang.

13. A minute specimen of Caoutchouc* prepared from a climber abounding in the hills of Darjeeling, together with the stem, branches, and one or two leaves of the plant itself. Also the branch of a tree yielding an edible fruit of a red colour, and in flavor something like a currant. The capsule of the seed contains an oil, the fragrant and pungency of which is like the oil of lemons but the latter quality is more acrid. Presented on the part of Dr. Pearson by Dr. Wallich, who in transmitting them to the Society states that probably the climber is an apocynous plant which Dr. Pearson will enable him to determine hereafter, and that the tree yielding the edible fruit, is a Xanthoxylon or an Ecodin not much unlike the Budrung (Eugenia Burunga—Roxb.)

The promotion and extension of the cotton cultivation throughout India under the auspices of the Supreme Government, and application of American skill to the instruction of the natives of India in different parts of the empire in the most improved methods of cultivating, picking and cleaning of Cotton.

The subject which first engaged the attention of the Society was one of the deepest importance to the advancement of the wealth of India and related to the determination, by the Supreme Government, of undertaking at the expense of the State, to instruct the people of the country in the art of cultivating the perennial Cotton plants of the western world by the agency of duly qualified American planters. The subject, as it came before the Society, is to be found in the following communication from the Secretary to the Government of Bengal in the Revenue Department.

To the Secretary to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society.

Sir,—I am directed by the Hon'ble the deputy Governor of Bengal to forward 25 printed Copies of the documents noted in the Margin, and to request that you will take an early opportunity of bringing the subject of these communications under the consideration of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society.

2d. The subject under discussion, viz. the improved cultivation of cotton, is one confessedly, of the utmost importance. The Society will observe that the subject has attracted the attention of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors who, it will be seen from the Hon'ble Court's Dispatch, have adopted measures with the view of obtaining from America, the services of properly qualified individuals, who are to be sent out to the country, for the purpose of instructing and superintending the natives in the cultivation of the cotton, and of teaching them the proper mode of cleaning it by Machinery.

3d. The Hon'ble Court, it will also be seen are willing to hold out premia in order to promote, on the part of private individuals, the successful prosecution of the experiment which they have in view, for producing cotton of good growth—to be cleaned by Machinery.

4th. The attention of the Society is particularly invited to the Minute of the Governor General. His Lordship is anxious to obtain in furtherance of the Home Authorities, the co-operation of the Society,—under whose superintendence the Governor General thinks it would be desirable to place the workmen expected to arrive here in the month of December next. This is a point of primary importance, and the Society, if willing to undertake the duty, will be so good as to favor Government with a full exposition of the plan upon which they would wish to proceed; furnishing as far as they can, a statement or estimate of monthly expenditure together with information on all points connected with the subject in question.

5th. The Society will not fail also to take into consideration whether any and what measures should be adopted for inducing private or individual exertions towards the attainment of the object in view.

6th. The Society are requested to make the best distribution they can of the Pamphlets,—of which additional copies will be supplied, if required.

I am, &c.

REVENUE DEPARTMENT.—(No. 4 of 1839)

OUR GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

Para. 1. From the correspondence which has passed with your Government, as well as with the Governments of Madras and Bombay, you are fully sensible of the interest we have taken in the cultivation of Cotton, Sugar, and other articles of Commerce suited to the European markets.

2d. The full and interesting information which we have from time to time received from our respective Governments, has satisfied us that they are as deeply impressed with the importance of this object as ourselves, and it has been very gratifying to us to find, that the efforts which have been made in the formation of Roads, the construction of Canals, of irrigation, and the alteration in the mode of assessment, have been felt and acknowledged by the agricultural community, and have, to a considerable extent, especially in the article of Sugar, been attended with encouraging success.

3d. With regard to Cotton, although the exertions have not been less unremitting, we are aware that the success which has attended the cultivation of this article has not been so great as could be wished.

4th. With a view to extend, improve, and encourage the cultivation of Cotton, Experimental Farms, and Farms Subsidary, were established, pecuniary advances made to individuals, and rewards granted to such as evinced zeal and industry in the prosecution of the object; seed, in considerable quantities, was procured from Egypt, Barbary, the Brazils, and from North America, new Gins used with so much success in the latter country, and in the West Indies, were sent to India, and a gentleman,* who resided for some years in Georgia and New Orleans, was deputed to superintend the working of them.

5th. From the best information we have obtained from your records and from other sources, there appears no reason to doubt, although this great desideratum has not yet been obtained, that, under proper management and superintendence, India is capable of producing Cotton, in quantity, to compete with the Cotton from North America which the best Bombay Cotton (Surat) cleaned by the Ginnia often rivals, but to accomplish this, the following essential points have still to be gained, viz. more full information as to the most approved mode of culture, with reference especially to the selection of soil and climate best suited to several varieties of the plant and most genial to it.

More complete information and instruction with regard to the mode and manner of ginning the Cotton from the pod, and cleaning it by means of Machinery sufficiently rapid to produce the article in large quantities without injury to the staple.

6th. Referring to your proceedings and to the instructions which have from time to time emanated from us, and with reference especially to our despatch dated 23d March 1833, we are not aware that any further instructions for your guidance are necessary.

7th. The great importance, however, which we attach to the requirement of the knowledge, above referred to by the Native of India, and the right application of it by them to the attainment of the objects contemplated, have induced us to take into consideration the propriety of deputation persons to North America with instruction to obtain full information on the subject, and, if possible, to engage parties willing to proceed to India, and duly qualified for the purpose of instructing and superintending the Natives in the cultivation of the Cotton, and the proper mode of cleaning it by means of Machinery, and we rely on your exertions for adopting effectual measures, and affording facilities for promoting and extending throughout India, any plans which may seem best suited to the attainment of the important objects contemplated in this despatch, so soon as you may receive the necessary information.

8th. Should you be of opinion that the important objects we have in view will be further promoted by the offer of a reward at each of the Presidencies for the exhibition of a certain quantity of Cotton properly cleaned, we authorize you to offer rewards of such an amount as you may consider sufficient to stimulate parties engaged in the production to exhibit cotton of good growth and cleaned by Machinery. We are of opinion, however, that the quantity of Cotton so exhibited should not be less than 300 bales.

9th. We transmit for your information, Copies of Memorials we have recently received from the Chambers of Commerce at Glasgow and Manchester, and from the East India Association of Liverpool and Glasgow, on the subject of cultivating Cotton in India.

10th. You will perceive that many of the Statements in these Memorials have been made in the absence of correct information regarding the measures which have already been adopted; with a view to encourage the growth in India of various staple articles of Commerce including that of Cotton. We have informed the respective parties, that the subject would continue to receive our attentive consideration.

11. In the Memorial from the East India Association at Glasgow, our attention has been drawn to an improved Machine for cleaning Cotton on the principle of the Charka, three of which are about to be forwarded by the Society to Bombay. We have requested the Association to procure for us four additional Machines, two of which we propose forwarding to Bengal, and two to Madras.

12th. This Machine, it will be observed, is stated "to clean most satisfactorily the Kapas sent from Bombay." The experiment however, being as yet confined to this Country, we shall not be justified in giving the reward alluded to by the Society, until the powers of the Machine have been fully proved, by being successfully applied near of growth, as soon after the gathering of the Cotton

We are your affectionate Friends,

MINUTE BY THE RIGHT HONBLE THE GOVERNOR GENERAL

Revenue Department
Dispatch of the Hon-ble Court of March 25th. 1839, on the improved Cultivation of cotton in India

I have retained this Dispatch for some time in order that I might examine with attention the information which has been published from different quarters on the result of past proceedings in regard to the highly important subject to which it relates. All the success in introducing in India a better produce of cotton, suited for the immense manufactures of England, is fully appreciated by me, and it is fitting that renewal and special exertions being again directed to the prosecution of this national object, our measures in furtherance of them should be well considered, and be as complete and effectual as circumstances will admit. We are simultaneously laboring, with fair hopes, to secure the establishment of a profitable Tea culture in India, and it will be one fortunate consequence of the state of our Chinese relations, if, in respect to the production for the European market of two such valuable articles as Tea and Cotton, it should give, as seems probable, an active stimulus to the agriculture and commerce of this country. Into no other channel can the capital and enterprise which have at Bombay been hitherto employed on the Trade in Opium, be now turned with better prospect of advantage, than to the amelioration of the cotton produce of that Presidency, which already commands some partial sale among the English manufacturers, and affords a very promising encouragement to further persevering experiment.

2d. The authorities which I have consulted on the subject are named in the margin, (a) and they appear to supply full and accurate information on the condition of the Cotton cultivation, and of the success or failure of the attempts made for its improvement at the several presidencies.

3d. Before however, I proceed to notice the conclusions which may be deduced from those authorities, it may be convenient that I should first briefly allude to the general principles by which I think that a Government should be carefully guided in its efforts to fix in its Territories the growth of any better articles of produce of whatever interest or importance, with reference particularly to some of the propositions, which have been, and are likely to be urged upon us, by parties laudably eager for the accomplishment of the great ends in view.

4th. The following are the chief propositions of this nature which I find in the papers and publications before me.

1st. That there be an alteration in the rate and mode of taxing cotton land, the rate being erroneously supposed to be a maximum one, and the amount often taken in kind, thereby "inducing (b) the grower to produce quantity or weight without regard to quality or cleanness."

2d. That encouragement (c) or reasonable inducement, be afforded to the influx of capital, and to its application to the particular cultivation, a special mode of encouragement is indicated in "the offer (d) of a fitting bounty, either by reducing the assessment on lands on which Foreign cotton seed is grown, or by stimulating industry by large grants as prizes."

3d. That experimental farms be instituted, and rewards given for improved produce, or for improved Machines for cleaning the Cotton, this last being the great desideratum, especially as regards the Cotton of Bombay—seeds to be also procured of the best Foreign Cottons, and freely distributed.

4th. That the transport of produce be facilitated by the formation of roads, and its preservation and shipment by the erection of suitable warehouses or sheds, and of quays at the ports of dispatch.

5th. Of the first of these recommendations I need say little, as it is now the general rule and practice throughout India that the assessment on land cultivated with superior products shall be no higher than the average rate of land of similar quality, whatever the crop reared on it, and the custom of taking revenue in kind is nowhere retained. It is to be observed, however, that it is stated by Sir John Malcolm, in his work (e) before noted, that when the system of taking the revenue of cotton in kind did exist in the Gujerat Districts under the Bombay Government, its effect was not to deteriorate,

But from the steady attention given to the subject, (the Government should be taken at a valuation in proportion to the care with which it was gathered) greatly to improve the quality of the Cotton, there having been a decided falling off in cleanness since the abolition of the system. The same remark has been conveyed to me in a private communication with which I have been very recently favored by a correspondent of high authority at Bombay. "I believe (he says) that it is the general opinion that Cotton is very rarely obtained now in a state of cleanness and of fibre equal to that which long ago was received by the Hon'ble Company as revenue in the Baroach Districts. The purchases of the Merchants of Bombay are, it is added, chiefly made at that place, and the agency which is in contract with the cultivators in the interior is almost wholly that of Natives, uninstructed and thinking only of what may seem best for their immediate interests. A laudable instance is, however, mentioned in the same letter of exertions made within the last year or two for the introduction of a better system in this respect by a Parsee merchant of enterprise (named Meerwanjee Hormajee) some bales of Baroach and Surat Cotton sent home by whom last year were valued at 1s a lb. above the usual quality of good Baroach Cotton, and 1½d. above the best which had been known to have been before imported from India.

6th. In respect to the second of the recommendations also, I need not after the minutes recorded (a) by me on other occasions, dwell at any length on the conclusive objections which I feel to all artificial fosterings of the devotion of capital to particular employments by the remission of ordinary rates of assessment, or by any other system of bounties, such plans lead to improvident and unwise speculations, they make the Government in a manner responsible for the fortunes of individuals, and they are unjust to enterprise in every other Department of exertion. It will suffice to say that my objections to schemes of this description are as strong as they have always been.

7th. The third mode suggested for assisting the object, by experimental farms or other expedients of a like strictly experimental character, by a few well-arranged honorary or pecuniary rewards, and by the importation and distribution of seeds, appears to me to comprise some of the most legitimate means of a special kind which the Government can use in aid of the proceedings of private parties or associations. I have no good opinion, especially with such limited and transient agency as we possess in India, of experimental farms, where the cultivation is to be conducted entirely by Government superintendents and servants. But an experimental superintendence and encouragement, on a carefully regulated and measured plan, of the efforts of private cultivators, may doubtless, under different circumstances, be productive of important benefit. To suitable measures of the character here referred to, I would do all in my power to secure a consistent and effective support. I shall hereafter propose to consider whether any such measures are now necessary on the part of the Government in India, in addition to those previously adopted, and in advertence to those specifically referred to in the present dispatch of the Hon'ble Court.

8th. As to the fourth recommendation, I feel that the Government should be taken at a valuation in proportion to the care with which it was gathered, greatly to improve the quality of the Cotton, there having been a decided falling off in cleanness since the abolition of the system. The same remark has been conveyed to me in a private communication with which I have been very recently favored by a correspondent of high authority at Bombay. "I believe (he says) that it is the general opinion that Cotton is very rarely obtained now in a state of cleanness and of fibre equal to that which long ago was received by the Hon'ble Company as revenue in the Baroach Districts. The purchases of the Merchants of Bombay are, it is added, chiefly made at that place, and the agency which is in contract with the cultivators in the interior is almost wholly that of Natives, uninstructed and thinking only of what may seem best for their immediate interests. A laudable instance is, however, mentioned in the same letter of exertions made within the last year or two for the introduction of a better system in this respect by a Parsee merchant of enterprise (named Meerwanjee Hormajee) some bales of Baroach and Surat Cotton sent home by whom last year were valued at 1s a lb. above the usual quality of good Baroach Cotton, and 1½d. above the best which had been known to have been before imported from India.

variance at other times, are yet, during the season of the rains, nearly useless, while the expense of forming and keeping up metalled roads throughout our territories, must be so enormous, and can so little be relieved by any possibility of re-payment, as to be apparently beyond the limits of all prudent outlay on the part of the state. The main practicable facilities for communication in India, excepting as regards a few great and permanent lines of intercourse between capital cities, to which the application of a large outlay has already been sanctioned, or is contemplated, must, I fear, for a long period be principally found in general protection against violence, in the building of bridges, in the regular establishment and management of ferries, or other measures for assisting the passage of streams, in the clearing of hill or jungle passes, and in other like works of local convenience; happily however, any impediments which can arise from the want of good roads, will for the present apply only (a) partially to the detriment of our Cotton produce. For the best Indian Cotton, that of Surat and Baroach, is grown in Districts, close to the sea, while, in the Upper Provinces of Bengal the Cotton of the Doab and Humilekund can readily be transported by our great rivers. In respect to warehouses or sheds, and quays, at the ports of dispatch, they are doubtless very desirable, if not necessary; for it is remarked by Sir John Malcolm (b) that in the Gujerat Districts there is a very short period between the date of plucking, and that of shipping the Cotton for Bombay. "It is believed the erection of buildings calculated to preserve the Cotton not exported during the monsoon, would give great encouragement and increase production." But the building of warehouses seems rather the province of the private merchant than of the Government. It may, however be very proper to enquire from the Bombay Government, whether there are any local reasons which in Gujerat would render the interference of the State useful and expedient for such a purpose, as well as whether there is a want of suitable quays at any of the ports.

a The circumstances to which I have referred, in this paragraph affecting the formation of roads in India and particularly roads to the Cotton districts, appear to have been in some measure overlooked in the following remarks from the useful work entitled "Progress of the Nation" by Mr. Porter, introduced after a passage pointing out the importance of roads for the advancement of Indian Commerce.

"Good roads (he says) would be practical at all periods of the year, and in every part of the Country. This improvement is especially needed in the Cotton-yielding Districts, where the present expensive mode of conveyance upon the backs of oxen acts most injuriously."

It will at the same time, be very proper that the several Governments should be called on to state, in furnishing the reports which I shall hereafter indicate, whether there be any road to their Cotton Districts, the construction or improvement of which deserves particular consideration.

I would add on the subject of roads, that in the revenue settlement of the northwest provinces of the Central Provinces, a systematic arrangement was made by the Government to examine the state of the roads in the several Districts, and to report on the state of the roads, and to propose measures for their improvement. The result of this arrangement was a series of reports, which were presented to the Government, and which were of great value in showing the state of the roads, and in proposing measures for their improvement. The Government have since taken steps to improve the roads, and to make them more convenient for the transport of goods and passengers. The result of these measures has been a great improvement in the state of the roads, and in the convenience of the transport of goods and passengers. The Government have also taken steps to improve the roads in the other parts of the Country, and to make them more convenient for the transport of goods and passengers. The result of these measures has been a great improvement in the state of the roads, and in the convenience of the transport of goods and passengers. The Government have also taken steps to improve the roads in the other parts of the Country, and to make them more convenient for the transport of goods and passengers. The result of these measures has been a great improvement in the state of the roads, and in the convenience of the transport of goods and passengers.

9th. In the remarks in the preceding paragraph, I would by no means be understood to discourage a serious attention to the subject of the improvement of our roads generally, but rather only to lament the obstacles which are opposed to success in such undertakings. I would here, however, refer with gratification to the great facility which has been extended to all intercourse by the abolition of transit duties throughout the Presidencies of Bengal and Bombay, a boon, I trust, to be soon also conferred on the territories of Madras. From this measure we may look for the best effects in the quickening of every enterprise, which may seem to rest upon really solid foundations.

10th. I may now go on to remark the results of past endeavours to improve the quality of Indian Cotton in the several Presidencies.

11th. The Cotton of Commerce consists of two great varieties,—one the black seed, or long staple, of which description are the American Sea Island, the West India, and South American, the Bourbon, and the Egyptian ^a) Cottons, bearing a higher price in the market than other Cottons, but in comparatively restricted demand,—the other the green seed, or short staple, of which kind are the Upland Georgia and New Orleans, (these forming the main source of supply to our English manufactures), and the great bulk of the indigenous Cottons of India. Of the general value and use of these different varieties in Commerce, a paper in my possession gives the following information; “The Cotton in greatest demand for the larger portion of the manufacture in England is the bowed Georgia Cotton, which sells for 7d. to 9d. per lb. in the market. The India Cotton, which most nearly approaches to it, is that which sells in its present unclean state at about 5d., and if it could be delivered as clean as the bowed Upland Georgia Cotton, with a little improvement in the staple, it would sell in England at about 7d. per lb. to the extent of several millions sterling. Fine Cotton producing a higher price is only of limited demand.” The modes of separating the two kinds of cotton from the seed are dissimilar. The Upland Georgia and New Orleans cotton are so cleaned by the Machine called “Whitney’s Saw Gin,” which is considered to have been “hardly (b) of less importance, generally, than Arkwright’s Machinery.” This Machine appears to occasion some injury even to the short staple of these cottons, but the loss on that account is more than counterbalanced by the gain in time in the process of cleaning. To the long staple cottons, however, this instrument is destructive by the manner in which it cuts them, and other means are employed for the purpose; those cottons separating from the seed with much greater facility than the green seed species. A Machine called a Roller Gin is employed for the American Sea Island cotton, and the Egyptian cotton is described to be “separated from the seeds by means of a Machine worked by manual labour such as is made use of in South America for cleaning long staple cotton.” The Indian cotton is generally cleaned by an instrument called a “churka,” which answers the purpose sufficiently well, but is comparatively slow and expensive: (c) Whitney’s Saw Gin, so successful in America, might naturally be thought to be adapted to this short staple cotton, but it has been unfortunately found at

Bombay, from some cause, “whether (a) the method of working it, or the weakness of the fibre of the cotton,” to injure the staple seriously, and some modification of this, or an altogether new machine, appears consequently to be absolutely required. The Hon’ble court, in a dispatch to Bombay of March 6th 1832, have suggested that the Saw Gin, notwithstanding its unfitness to the indigenous cottons, might be used for cleaning cotton raised in India from American seeds. In Bengal, the Saw Gin, for cotton of a generally similar character, has been favorably (b) reported of at Calcutta and unfavourably at Calcutta. It is with the view of overcoming the difficulty occasioned by the presumed inapplicability of the Saw Gin that the East India Association of Glasgow have recommended their improved Machine for cleaning cotton (referred to in the concluding paragraphs of the Court’s present dispatch) “on the principle of the Indian Churka,” and stated to clean “most satisfactorily the kupas (c) sent from Bombay.”

12th. The total importation of cotton into England, taking the 3 years, d) 1831, 2, 3, varied from 288 to above 300 millions of pounds in each year, and of this quantity the cotton of India furnished not more in any year than 38 millions. e) of pounds, a large proportion of which was exported to the Continent where there is some sale for inferior cotton. In the years 1818 and 1819, the importation of Indian cotton into England have reached as high as 86 and 62 millions of pounds, but this may probably have proceeded from merely temporary causes.

13th. The great export of Indian cotton to England is from Bombay, to which port the cotton from Omrawuttee and the Dekkan, which was formerly brought to Calcutta via Mirzapore, is now carried. Of the Bombay cottons, those from Baroach and Surat are used, though inferior in consequence of the foul state in which they are transported in English manufactories (f) and the rest are almost entirely sent abroad again to the continental markets. The following is a general account of the Indian cottons as saleable for working (g) up in England. The Bengal (h) may be fairly considered to be out of use with the British manufacturer. Surat cotton, such as a good portion of the imports of 1817 to 1826 consisted of, (that is good, clean, bright colored stromil i) cotton, would always find a consumption to a certain extent which of course, would be increased if the staple could be a little improved by the introduction of seed from America, particularly from New Orleans. The best quality of the Bombay cottons have always been considered to be the Baroach and the Surat, which in good seasons are equal in staples to middling bowed Georgia.”

14th. The first efforts of the Home Authorities were particularly directed to the cultivation of the Bourbon cotton—but this was checked by the circumstance that (j) “the consumption of cotton having a long silky staple is very limited and that the demand of the British or Foreign Manufacture does not require a large supply of such cotton." A gentleman, named Fischer, seems to have, at a recent period, found it profitable to cultivate Bourbon cotton in the Salem District (a) of the Madras Territories, but this can only be regarded as the experience of a single speculator. Mr. Bernard Metcalfe, who was employed by the Court to conduct the experiments in the Madras Presidency in 1815, recorded some remarks which may be useful at this time: "The Georgia (b) Sea Island, the Serinam (c) and Demerara, are all grown on the border of the sea and the prime qualities only as far inland as the influence of the air and tide waters extend. In the Delta of the Sunderbans, and particularly the provinces adjacent, might perhaps be produced cottons of an equally fine texture with those abovementioned, and which in England always bear so high a price. The presumption is, the attempt would be successful, provided the black seed was procured from Demerara or Georgia."

15th. In 1828, (d) the further prosecution of experiments was urgently pressed by Lord Ellenborough, the President of the Board of Control, and was warmly entered on by the Hon'ble Court, the particular object being to see by trial "in many different parts of India, whether it might not be possible to raise some of the superior sorts of foreign cotton," while at the same time the utmost possible care should be given to procuring the best specimens of the indigenous cottons. To Bengal, (e) the Court specially pointed out that some "cotton produced in the Tenasserim Provinces was considered to be superior to any cotton that has been imported from Bengal, and it in a perfect condition would rank in the London market with very good Surat cotton, and with middling North American Upland."

16th. With the above objects in view experimental farms were instituted in the Bombay and Bengal Presidencies, rewards were authorized, and foreign seeds of different descriptions were largely imported, and distributed in different quarters.

17th. The result of these trials has certainly been attended with much encouragement. "Most (f) of the specimens which were the produce of indigenous seed" and had been carefully cleaned in the Native manner, "proved of qualities which are desirable for manufacture" in England. Some fine samples were also raised from the Foreign seeds. The favorable impression produced by the trials on the Hon'ble Court, is stated in their dispatch now before us.

18th. In Bombay an experimental farm, with some smaller ones subsidiary to it, was (g) established in Gujerat. But the Superintendent soon reported that "no improvement was to be expected from any alteration in the mode of cultivating cotton" in the Province, and the plan adopted was to let out, in the manner which I have before said that I am most disposed to approve, parts of the Government Farm to Native farmers, to be cultivated under his general direction, he reserving only a small portion of the land for the purpose of being cultivated entirely by himself with foreign seeds exclusively. The chief point of importance was soon seen to be a greater care in the first gathering of the cotton.

To this object almost alone the attention of the Government was directed in the experiments made in the Southern Mahratta Country. The Superintendent in that quarter reported (a) "The presence of the leaf which grows under the cotton pod is the main cause of the inferiority of our Indian cottons in the English market. this with other impurities gets into the mass of cotton in the act of picking in the field, and under ordinary circumstances cannot afterwards be got rid of. The radical remedy for this is to pick the cotton in the field with greater care, as is done in America, by carefully pulling the Cotton out of the pod, and not snatching at the pod itself and separating the Cotton picked into two portions, one of the first quality free from leaf and dirt, and the other such as may be entangled with the leaf and other impurities." The strongest evidence to the same effect is given by all authorities. (b) Mr. Hunt, an English dealer, says (c)—"It appears to me that the cause of the depreciation of the Surat Cotton is principally owing to the very slovenly way in which the crop is gathered from the plant, and without a thorough reform in that particular, it will be of little use introducing new seed, or increasing the expense of cultivation in other respects." This point being so material, it is especially to be regretted that the Superintendent in the Southern Mahratta Territory experienced great difficulty (d) in persuading the Royts to follow a better system respecting it. And it is remarkable that though it must have been well known at Bombay that it was by attention in (e) gathering the cotton that the Government, while it received a revenue in kind in this article in Gujerat, had so considerably improved its quality, the object appears, as has been before said, scarcely ever to have been thought worth the care of private capitalists. Mr. Lush, the Superintendent above referred to, was ultimately authorized by the Bombay Government to establish an Agency near Darwar, with a view to the purchasing, as an inducement to the Royts, their well gathered clean cotton, with what effect I have not the means of ascertaining.

19th. Details of the valuation prices both of the indigenous and foreign seed cotton, raised and sent home upon these experiments, are given in pages 272 and 280 of the Report on cotton wool, &c., and although the injury before alluded to from the Saw Gin was very considerable, it will be observed that the prices are rated generally above the 7d per lb., which in a preceding extract is mentioned as a sale value at which several millions sterling might be expected to be disposed of. Some cotton from Egyptian seed is noted as worthy of particular attention, (it added respecting this quality, that it should be well cleaned in the native manner,) and the same, as regards encouragement to produce is said of the cotton from New Orleans seed, and of some white seeded perennial cotton, grown in a small experimental farm under Mr. Lush in Darwar.

20th. A fresh supply of Egyptian seeds, and of the Machines used in that country for the cleaning the cotton, was sent to Bombay in the course of 1836, (f) but the result is not reported in the papers in my possession.

21st. It may be regarded, I think, as probable, from the foregoing summary, that, by inventions such as may be reasonably expected from European mechanical skill, the means of quickly and safely cleaning the indigenous cottons of Bombay, in so far as regards the separation from the seed after gathering, may be attained, and that, for the improvement which may be desired in staple of the Cotton of Bombay, we may look with fair hope, to the growth of the article from the best Foreign seeds.

22. In Bengal the result of the experiments made has also been encouraging, (a) though it is to be remembered regarding such results in all the Presidencies that the growth of mere specimens is far from being a test of success in attempts to rear a produce of extensive cultivation. The cotton of the Akra experimental farm, the maintenance of which did not extend beyond three years, was in England, partly by actual sale, and partly by valuation, above the specified rate of 7d. per lb., and good specimens from various kinds of seed have been also produced in different other parts of the Presidency. The conclusion arrived at in the paper of the Secretary of the Agricultural Society is, that the "Upland Georgia and Egyptian is the seed best calculated for introduction into the interior and upland parts of India, while the Peruvian, Peruvian, Sechelles, Bourbon, and Sea Island, may suit best along the line of Coast."

23d. The seed sent to Madras appears generally not to have succeeded (b) chiefly from a very unfavorable season. Yet the valuation at home of some small (c) samples of American seed cotton, raised in the Madras Districts, is satisfactory.

24th. The Hon'ble Court have now determined to procure from America, and send to India, persons duly qualified for the purpose of instructing and superintending the natives in the cultivation of the cotton, and the proper mode of cleaning it by means of machinery, and they rely "on our exertions for adopting effectual measures, and affording facilities, for promoting and extending throughout India, any plan which may seem best suited to the attainment of the important objects contemplated, as soon as we may receive the necessary information." They empower us also to "offer rewards at each of the Presidencies, of such an amount as we may consider sufficient to stimulate parties engaged in the production to exhibit cotton of good growth and cleaned by machinery—the quantity so exhibited not being less than 300 bales."

25th. It behoves us to prepare for the arrival of the individuals to be brought from America, who will be conveyed to India, if possible, by December next, and in this view, and that we may be ready to acquaint ourselves of the further responsibility imposed on us by the preceding instructions, I have endeavoured briefly to abstract what has seemed to me most material in the reports of past proceedings. I shall be glad, if I shall have succeeded (though I cannot hope to have done so, otherwise than very imperfectly,) in assisting the collection of materials which may enable the Governments in India to decide upon a proper course in regard to this important question. I would now suggest that a copy of the Court's dispatch, and of this minute, with such further observations as may occur to his Honor the President in Council, be furnished to each of the Presidencies, and that the several Governments be requested to report their opinions, on a review of the facts above detailed, and after consulting the individuals or bodies most likely to afford useful advice, as to the best means of carrying on future experiments with the aid (d) of the American workmen to be now employed, and how the knowledge is which those persons are, must be deficient, of the languages, seasons, and agricultural habits of India may best be supplied. The particular districts the most suited for their employment, should also be named, and the description of Foreign seed cultivation most likely to succeed in each district. The length of time for which an experiment should be persevered in, should likewise be well considered for such partial results as, for instance, were derived from the Akra farm near Calcutta, may not lead to any satisfactory conclusions. The several Governments should further report what amount and manner of reward they would propose to confer for cotton, well gathered and well cleaned by machinery, under the discretion which has been confided to the Government of India. The local Governments may at the same time inform us, how far the arrangements actually in force, whether by public or by private means, for disseminating the best foreign seeds throughout the country, are effective. In Bengal, I believe, this object to be well provided for by the excellent measures and admirable zeal of the Agricultural Society of India. To that Society I consider the Government and the community to be under the highest obligations, and I would here say that I would, with perfect confidence and satisfaction, entrust the employment of the expected workmen with the application of any expenditure which may be sanctioned by the Government, and the guidance of the further experiments to be now entered on, to their general superintendence. I would only to this point repeat my opinion, that experiments in the improvement of cultivation should be chiefly by instruction and assistance to a select number of native cultivators, instead of by any attempt to cultivate by Government agents, although a limited extent of Government cultivation may, perhaps, be found unavoidable with a view to the rearing of produce from Foreign seeds, to which the ryots may be unaccustomed, and the risks of which they may be unwilling to incur.

26th. Upon the details of future operations, I would only here state, that I would be inclined to appropriate, if Mr. Blundell, on a reference which should at once be made to him, should recommend the measure, a portion of the American workmen on instructors to the Tenasserim Provinces, and that I would extend the experiments beyond Bengal, (where the peculiar cottons which, as has been seen, flourish best near the Sea Coast, might continue to be tried,) to our more distant cotton Provinces, as Blundelkund and the Doab, where but little effort has yet been made by the Government to ameliorate the produce.

27th. It is in my recollection that Mr. Blundell has, in some private communication, referred to the heavy and long continued rains of the Tenasserim Coast as very prejudicial to the growth of Cotton, and I would wish that the opinion of competent persons should be taken at all the Presidencies as to the effect of a regular alteration by dry and rainy seasons on the plant and its produce.

28th. Reports should, of course, be furnished as soon as practicable from each Presidency, of the success or failure of the Machine for cleaning cotton, which has been invented by the East India Association of Glasgow, and has been before referred to in this minute. Three of these Machines are said to be coming to Bombay, two to Bengal, and two to Madras.

29th. Of the Hon'ble the Government of Bombay, I would especially request that they should submit a succinct report of the progress, and results of the experiments established for the improvement of the Cotton of that Presidency since the beginning of 1826, of which my summary has traced the summary, and that he should particularly notice the following points:

1st. The success of the measures adopted under Mr. Lush or by any successor to him, in the Southern Mah-

Ratta Country, for inducing the ryots to sell to him cleanly gathered cotton, and for the cultivation of the perennial or other kinds of cotton in his experimental farm at Seegee Hulee in Darwar.

21. The reasons which may have led to scarcely any measures being apparently taken by private capitalists for the desired improvement in the mode of gathering the cotton in the Gujerat Districts, in which on due attention being paid to this point, a good merchantable produce for the English market might with so much certainty, be expected.

3d. The result to the latest period of the introduction of the foreign seeds into the Gujerat Cotton Districts, whether the seeds obtained from plants raised in the first place from such foreign seeds, yield an equally good description of produce as the original seeds, and whether the application of the Saw Gin to produce of such growth, has any different effect from its application to the indigenous Cotton.

4th. The result from the Egyptian seed introduced in 1836, and the value of the cleaning machine sent from Egypt, for the purpose of separating the seed of cottons of a long staple.

5th. The state of the ports in Gujerat as respects warehouses and quays, and the occasions which may exist for any aid in regard to such buildings on the part of the Government.

30th. I conclude that information on the prospects of an improved cotton cultivation, is generally diffused among the commercial communities of all the presidencies. If there should be doubt on this point, it will deserve consideration (a) in what manner the Government can aid in spreading correct knowledge on the subject.

31st. I will only add that, in order to save time, it will be convenient that I should transmit direct to Bombay, a copy of the Court's Dispatch and of these remarks, and I propose accordingly to adopt that course.

At the conclusion of the perusal of these important documents, the momentous subject to which they referred was duly adverted to and the importance of the measures to be adopted for securing the success of so great a national undertaking were fully remarked on.

a I have been happy to observe, from a report of the sixteenth anniversary meeting of the Royal Asiatic Society in London, that this subject has attracted the special notice of the Committee of Commerce and Agriculture of that Body. "The first Article (it is stated) to which attention had been directed, was cotton," and after alluding to the details which had been collected and arranged on the subject, it is added—"The Committee looked forward to a time, when they should be able to place within the reach of the practical Agriculturist such information as would enable him to grow cotton in India equal to that of any part of the world."

For giving effect to the wishes of Government relative to the preparation of the estimates and other details connected with the monthly expenditure of the contemplated new establishments, and at the same time that the fullest and safest practical local experience concerning the system of agriculture, the condition of the soils, the places best suited for the location of the American Instructors, and the preparation of the wood for commercial purposes, may be insured, it was moved by Colonel McLeod, seconded by Dr. Spry, and carried unanimously,—“That the Society undertakes the duty specified in the 5th Para. of Mr. Secretary Halliday's letter under date the 22d October last, and that the following gentlemen be appointed a Committee to report to the Society on the subject—with power to add to their numbers—

Francis Curwen Smith, Robert Watson, Wm. Storm; Prossonocomar Tagore, Esqrs., Major Carter, Joseph Willis, Owen Potter, Charles Haffnagle, Willis Earle, G. U. Adam, D. B. Syers, Wm. C. Hurry, Esqrs., and Dr. Spry.—Hulk., Nov. 22.

Intelligence relative to the Fruits of Cabul; deficiency of Vegetables in Affghanistan and the facilities which the country naturally afford for sheep farming.

The Secretary informed the Meeting, that the communication which he had next to submit, was one from Lieut. Nicolson at Cabul, in which that Officer, considering that it might be interesting to some of the Members of the Society to learn something of the far-famed fruits of Affghanistan and its other natural productions—offers his first impressions on the subject and proposes to forward further observations as opportunity occur for doing so.

The fruits at present in season (August) are grapes of various kinds.

1st. The "berdana," as the name implies, is without seeds and is a small sized yellow grape.

2d. The "Kandharee," a very large blue grape of a fine mellow flavor, and destitute of the excessive lusciousness of most rich bodied grapes.

3d. The "Kaboolee," a common watery, white grape, pleasant in taste but deficient in richness.

4th. A small blue grape, more acid than any other variety. Beside these there are several other varieties which have not yet ripened.

Peaches are very plentiful—flavor exquisite and larger than English ones.

Melons are all good. The perfume and flavor of one kind is exquisite.

Pears are of two kinds the one superior to the other, but both good. Opinion is divided whether this fruit or the peach is the best of the country.

Apples, cherries, plums, greengages and mulberries are most abundant, and Lieutenant Nicolson considers that most of these fruits would do well in Hindoostan. (a)

Vegetables are very scarce. Cabbages, cauliflowers, carrots and bangons are to be had however. The horse bean is very plentiful. Lieutenant Nicolson states, that the seeds of all the English vegetables would be a great acquisition for their gardens.

The horses of the country are small hardy animals more remarkable for strength than activity, and are all capital a The same opinion is entertained by Col. Smyth. See last month's report.

beasts of burden. For the purposes of agriculture bells alone are used. From the richness of the pastures the cows yield from three to four seers of milk daily. In the valleys and on the banks of rivers where the towns and villages are always situated, the meadows produce the richest grass and clover. Lucerne too is very commonly grown as food for horses and cattle. The sheep of the country is the "doombah" breed or large-tailed sort. This stock supplies the Afghan people with mutton milk, curds, cheese, and "koorost," which constitutes their winter food, while with the skins they make their postcoats or upper garments.

By degrees Lieutenant Nicolson thinks an improvement in the nature of the wool may be effected by crossing the doombahs with the Merino breeds, and that the gradual increase of civilization and wealth will be certain to follow the residence of the English in Afghanistan, and cause the natives of the country to discover and appreciate the superiority of the wools of Great Britain, which the navigation at the Indus will bring to them. Once a demand for broad cloths is created they will be open to the conviction that it will be to their advantage to exchange the doombahs for fleeced sheep and hair of very trifling value, for wool at two shillings and sixpence a pound. The country, Lieutenant Nicolson mentions, is a capital one for sheep farming. Its extensive downs and seemingly barren hills, abound in the slight, short mosses and grass on which Merinos thrive best.

The dryness of the soil affords just grounds for anticipating freedom from rot; and water, though not plentiful, is sufficiently so far watering and washing sheep. The capabilities of the country in this line are wonderful, and Lieutenant Nicolson states, that land carriage to the banks of the Indus is far from expensive. The nomadic habits of the Afghans, who may be styled a race of sheep-farmers, the resources of their country and their beautiful climate with the absence of all jungle and beasts of prey, all point out that wool will some day prove a source of inestimable wealth to Caubul. Lieutenant Nicolson concludes his highly instructive communication by stating that all that is requisite is good Government, a powerful Police, and a little patience.

In consequence of the interesting contents of Lieutenant Nicolson's letter, Dr. Spry mentioned he had to bring to the notice of the Meeting what he might perhaps be justified in pronouncing a discovery, as he had found in the library of the Asiatic Society the manuscript memoir of Lieutenant Irwin, who accompanied Mr. Elphinstone, in the Embassy to Caubul, and to which in the preface of his work Mr. Elphinstone makes special allusion in the highest terms of commendation.

The Memoir comprises upwards of 230 pages of closely written matter in folio, and treats most fully of the empire, husbandry, and productions of the whole kingdom of Afghanistan, all of which, Mr. Elphinstone expressly states that he left nearly untouched.

At first it was thought whether these portions bearing more immediately on the Agriculture of the country could not be made available for the transactions of the Society, but Dr. O'Shaughnessy, who was present, having offered to undertake the publication of the entire volume, in parts in the Journal of the Asiatic Society, the book was made over to him with the understanding that a few copies should be furnished to the Agriculture Society.

Establishment of a Large Garden at Purulia in Chota Nagpore, to be cultivated by Prisoners in order to supply them with food.

Captain Hannington, Political Officer in charge of the district of Purulia, communicates the intelligence of the establishment of a garden at his station and writes, "this rather interesting experiment has been undertaken that the prisoners may supply themselves with vegetables. The plan has met with the sanction of the Governor-General's Agent, and will probably be tried at Hazarebagh and the other divisions of the Agency."

The great objection to the ration system of dieting prisoners, was that it did not afford sufficient change of food, and this defect Captain Hannington considers will now be obviated by the garden as regarding vegetables and fruits. These being obtained free of charge, the money thus saved will serve to purchase whatever extra indulgences may be thought needful. Under this system Captain Hannington thinks the ration system will be perfect (a)

Transmission to the Society of Letters and Packages free of postage.

The Secretary brought to the notice of the Meeting that the package of seeds and letters transmitted by Colonel Smith from Caubul, came bearing a postage of twenty odd rupees; he made application in consequence to Government for a remission of the charge, and he had the gratification of stating, this had been conceded and the following piece of intelligence imparted, as to the course to be adopted by parties who desire in future to communicate with the Society.

"General Department. Para 2. The correspondents of the Society should however be instructed to send all their letters on the business of the Society, under cover to the Secretary to Government in this Department agreeably to Section LXI. List No. 1, of the Post Office Rules of the 3d August, 1837."

Introduction of mango plants from the Northern parts of India into the Algerine territories.

The next communication made to the Meeting was one from Mr. Robison, from his brother Sir John Robison, who says that he has been urging some of his friends in the Horticultural Societies of Paris and Bordeaux to organize the means of introducing mango plants from the more elevated parts of India into the Algerine territory, or into the South of France,—and asks to know if there would be any serious difficulty in getting down a succession of plants from the vallies near Simla, where they grow beside brambles, and barbaries. Sir John Robison thinks such plants would thrive at Algiers, if not in Provence,—and that it would be the noblest present that the French Government could make to European Horticulture; and add that as Mr. Johnston, the Maire of Bordeaux, has engaged to make some efforts to begin the experiment something further will perhaps be heard on the subject.

Mr. Robison stated in reference to his brother's letter, that he had sent a copy to Sir Edward Ryan at Simla and hoped to obtain from him all the information and aid that could be procured.

Contemplated establishment of a Museum of Natural History at Darjeling and the introduction of the hive bee there.

Dr. Pearson writes from Darjeling, that should the friends of the Plantation Society admit of it and Dr. Pearson remain at the Station, he shall propose to establish a Museum of Natural History for the exchange of specimens with other Natural History Societies; and he hopes in time that something may be done in the way of cattle, sheep and so on.

"The success which has attended to experiment of this kind at Agra, will be found detailed in the Report of the Proceedings of the Society for August last."—H. H.

Dr. Pearson wishes to introduce the hive bee at Darjeling. There are myriads of flowers and shrubs of sweet smelling savour, and he is sure that the bee would thrive. Dr. Pearson is anxious to learn if the bee of the Western Hill be the same as that of Europe, that some either from this source or from England may be obtained.

Establishment of a Branch Agricultural Society and Garden at Chittagong.

The pleasing intelligence has been received of the establishment of a Branch Society at Chittagong, Mr. Sconce, Collector of the District, has undertaken to officiate as Secretary, and in his communication to the Secretary he mentions that the garden ground amounts to about twelve acres of land.

Foreign cotton seed supplied by the Parent Society have been sown.

The Seychelles and Malta seeds have sprouted, and also a few Brazilian seeds. Mr. Sconce considers that the proper season for sowing foreign cotton seed is the season for standing indigenous (a) cotton, and suggests that the despatch of seeds by the Society should be timed so as to arrive accordingly. Coffee plants are also thriving in the garden, and Mr. Sconce hopes to see all these products successfully cultivated.

Dr. Spry mentioned that he forwarded an abundant supply of Mauritius canes to Mr. Sconce.

Acclimation of the Mangoosteen Tree in Bengal.

The Secretary next submitted a communication which he had received from Mr. Chew, of Calcutta, stating that he had presented about two years ago some Mangoosteen plants to the Society, and asking to know whether they were still alive, as he had succeeded in acclimating six out of twenty which reached him from the Straits of Malacca. (b) They are now growing vigorously, and Mr. Chew states he shall soon be enabled to obtain a large quantity of trees of this most exquisite fruit.

Great value of British possessions on the Tenasserim coast for producing Wood Oil.

The Secretary submitted a very valuable paper which had been forwarded to him by Dr. Helfer, who desires to draw the attention of the Society to one of the manifold productions of the Tenasserim provinces as deserving the consideration of the European Commercial Community.

Dr. Helfer says, the article that he alludes to, is the article commonly called Wood oil, but which in fact is a balsam. According to Roxburgh, all the species of the genus Dipterocarpus yield this substance.

Some parts of the Tenasserim provinces are covered with Wood-oil trees, which attain an immense size, and form one of the principal ornaments of its majestic forests. They are more abundant towards the South. The Lebu river banks to the south of Mergal, and the banks of the Pak-char river forming the boundary between the Siam-Malay estate of the Peninsula and the British possessions, are lined with forests of these trees which have never been got touched for the purpose of extracting the balsam.

a The same opinion, is entertained also by Mr. Pearson, Deputy Collector at Deces, and for the Province of Bengal, this course probably will be found hereafter to be correct. — H. A. S.

b There are seven Mangoosteen plants at present in the Society's nursery, upon the whole in good condition. — H. H. S.

To obtain it a notch is cut into the tree not far from the ground, a receptacle like a basin is then formed where a fire is kept up until the circulation of the sap is directed by this artificial irritation towards that part, after which the liquid begins to ooze out, and continues to do so for several weeks, if the charred part is scraped away and a new wound inflicted.

The almost incredible quantity, which is obtained from one tree in the course of one season (from a full grown tree sometimes thirty even forty gallons, without materially injuring the tree it is said) is alone sufficient to draw attention upon this production, considering that many thousands of trees are available and hitherto totally unused.

The value of this substance Dr. Helfer considers, has never been properly appreciated. The natives of the provinces use it on account of its inflammability, mixed with dry putrid wood wrapped into palm leaves as torches, and it is the common substitute for oil or candles used as light by all classes of Burmans.

Besides this main purpose it is used as medicine in rheumatic diseases, or as a preservative against white ants, for which purpose the posts of the houses are smeared over with it.

The trees grow without branches, to a height of 60 to 70 feet, with a circumference of from 9 to 12 feet. The wood is very light and considered inferior, the charcoal made from this wood, however, is the best adapted for the manufacture of gun powder.

In Calcutta the wood oil is known and used, but there it is employed only for the purpose of painting ships, which, considering its value for other purposes, is truly a waste.

In extenuation of this it must, however, be considered that it is generally imported into Calcutta in a state of great impurity, a third of it being extraneous matter, mud, charcoal, chips of wood and bark, which, of course greatly deteriorate its value.

Having chemically the greatest affinity to turpentine, it can be used for the same purposes for which the fine lac varnish by oil of turpentine is employed, which throughout Europe commands such a price, that the transport of wood oil from India to Europe as a substitute would be amply repaid.

It has the property that when purified it resembles the fine varnishes; laid upon paintings, it covers them with a transparent fine coating, not liable to turn yellow, and dries quickly. How far it may improve when mixed with copal, sandarach, mastic or similar substances; Dr. Helfer has had no opportunity of deciding.

Dr. H. adds, that he cannot omit mentioning another application of this substance, in forming oil cloths, tarpaulings, &c., and it has been declared by several men who have made the experiment, that the cloth respecting durability, is preferable to the patent anti-mildew canvas made in and exported to England.

Dr. Helfer suggests that it would be perhaps not amiss to send some of it through the medium of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Calcutta to Great Britain and Ireland, to the Asiatic Society's branch of Commerce and Agriculture, which has for its particular aim the development of the resources of the British Indian Empire for practical purposes.

For all the foregoing presents and communications the thanks of the Society were accorded.

MOHA RANEE COMOLE COOMARREE—Respondent.

Upon these two cases coming on, Mr. Baillie objected, that it was not competent to the Court to pass any decision during the Holidays; it was true, that the Court was closed only on the civil side, and that it was the practice of the Judges to revise Criminal trials, during the vacation, but he submitted, that the present applications were really of a civil nature, and might be argued by pleaders, which was not the case in regular criminal trials.

Mr. Bignell said, that he was quite ready to proceed with the appeals, and as the Nizamut Adawlut was open, it was of no consequence whether the Dewanny Adawlut was closed or otherwise.

Mr. Braddon observed, that whatever might be the real nature of the question involved in these appeals, the application in both cases was to reverse an order of the Session Judge, and as such, could only be entertained on the criminal side of the Court. His colleagues agreed with him, that there could be no doubt as to the legality of their passing orders on these cases, during the vacation, inasmuch as it was the Civil Court only, that was closed. The question of inconvenience to the Pleaders was another matter, and one which the Court would have taken into its consideration, had there been any ground to suppose, that it existed in the present instance; but as Mr. Baillie and Mr. Bignell were both present, it seemed quite unnecessary to postpone the cases on that ground.

Mr. Bignell then proceeded to contend, that the jurisdiction of the Court was not barred by Reg. 24 of 1839.

Mr. Braddon observed, that it was unnecessary for Mr. Bignell to trouble himself on that point, as the Court were unanimously of opinion, that the Session Judge having passed orders upon a case not pending in appeal before him, they had the power to interfere, notwithstanding any thing to the contrary in the Regulation alluded to.

Mr. Bignell then addressed himself to the merits of the case, observing, that it was quite unnecessary in the present stage of the proceedings, to consider what might be the effect upon the civil rights of a Hindoo widow, if she chose to free herself from the restraints imposed upon her by her late husband's family.

Mr. Lee Warner remarked, that before going into the merits of the case, he wished Mr. Bignell would consider, whether the Court could pass any decision upon them. It certainly appeared to him, that although they had jurisdiction in consequence of the irregular proceedings of Mr. Wyatt, yet, in such a state of proceedings, it was not competent to them to enter into the merits of the case.

Mr. Bignell stated that if he was right in supposing, after what had fallen from the bench, that it was the inclination of the Court to quash all Mr. Wyatt's orders, as irregular, he would not trouble them any further.

Mr. Braddon said, that such was his own opinion, and he believed it to be that of his colleagues also.

Mr. Baillie observed, that if the first order of Mr. Wyatt was to be quashed, he presumed, that matters would be placed in their original position, and that the Court would order the Ranee to be sent back to the Rajbarry.

Mr. Braddon said, that he certainly had no intention to pass any order of the kind, and Mr. Lee Warner intimated his concurrence with Mr. Braddon.

Mr. Baillie then urged, that as far as his appeal was concerned, it might as well have been rejected as allowed in this way; to quash the order allowing the Ranee to leave the Rajbarry, and at the same time, to refuse to restore her to the Rajbarry was, for all practical purposes, a nullity. It did away with the shadow, but left the substance untouched.

Mr. Braddon said that he could not help that; his order would be, that the whole of the orders passed by the Judge, must be quashed for irregularity, and that the proceedings be sent back to the Magistrate, with instructions, for him to pass such orders as he might think proper; beyond this he (Mr. Braddon) declined interfering, nor would he go into the merits of the case at all.

Mr. Lee Warner stated, that he entirely concurred with the view taken by Mr. Braddon.

Mr. Dick stated, that he agreed with his colleagues as to the jurisdiction of the Court, and as to the irregularity of the orders of the Session Judge; but, in one respect, he must go beyond their decision, his opinion being, that the Ranees ought to be again placed within the Rajbarry, he begged to state, that he did not intend, any more than his colleagues, to enter into the merits of the case, and his reason for coming to the opinion he had just expressed, was the following:—He considered, that Mr. Wyatt's orders were irregular in two respects: first, because he had decided a case not pending before him on appeal; and secondly, because the case had previously been decided by Mr. Barlow, when Session Judge of Burdwan; and it was not competent for one Session Judge to reverse the order of his predecessor, Mr. Barlow's order gave the Ranees separate apartments in the Rajbarry, and certain facilities of consulting with her legal advisers. He (Mr. Dick) did not intend to pronounce any opinion, as to whether this order was right or wrong, he merely said, that as long as it remained unreversed by superior authority, it must be taken to be right, and must be acted upon as such; and that Mr. Barlow's successor had no power either to reverse or modify it. He (Mr. Dick) was therefore of opinion, that matters should be restored to precisely the same position as they were left by Mr. Barlow's order, and, consequently, that the Ranees ought to be restored to the Rajbarry upon the terms which Mr. Barlow had directed.

Mr. Bignell observed, that he thought Mr. Dick was under some misapprehension as to the nature of the question decided by Mr. Barlow, which was totally different from that now before the Court. In that case, the application was, that Mr. Hedger, the Ranees's attorney, should be allowed to communicate with the Ranees in the Rajbarry, and Mr. Barlow very properly decided, that as the Rajbarry belonged neither to Mr. Hedger or his client, the magistrate should not have granted the application, and he (Mr. Barlow) therefore reversed the order of the magistrate. In the present case, on the contrary, the Rane applied for permission to come out of the Rajbarry, and without going into the merits of the case in any way, it was sufficiently evident, that Mr. Wyatt's order did not reverse or modify the order passed by Mr. Barlow. In truth, this objection had been taken by Mr. Baillie, in his first petition of appeal, but so little did he think he could make of it, that in the long arguments which had taken place regarding this case, he had scarcely ever, if at all, alluded to it. He (Mr. Bignell) had of course no objection to Mr. Wyatt's orders being set aside for irregularity upon as many grounds as the Court might think fit to record in their judgment, but he deprecated the practical result of Mr. Dick's argument. The Rane was now out of the Rajbarry, and the opinion now expressed by a majority of the Judges, would have the effect of setting her entirely at liberty, for the second order passed by Mr. Wyatt was thereby quashed, and the burkundasses, who had been placed over her must be withdrawn; but, if Mr. Dick's opinion were to prevail, she would be again placed in the custody from which she had escaped, and in this further most embarrassing predicament, that Mr. Barlow's order having been passed in regular form, it was to say the least, very doubtful, whether under the existing law the Nizamut Adawlut could interfere with it.

Mr. Dick observed, that the Rane might institute a civil suit, or apply to the Government. The opinion he had expressed remained unaltered.

Mr. Bignell remarked, that the institution of a civil suit, with the prospect of three stages of appeal, would be no remedy at all, to a party detained in custody. The Government might, he had no doubt, in virtue of its inherent power, order the Rane's release, but he need not say, that it was on every account desirable that Government should interfere as little as possible with the decisions of the judicial authorities.

The Judges adhering to the opinions they had expressed, Mr. Braddon and Mr. Lea Warner passed their orders to the effect that the whole of Mr. Wyatt's orders should be quashed, and the proceedings, returned to the Magistrate.

Mr. Dick's order, in addition to the above, directed that the Rane should be sent back to the Rajbarry.—Hurkaru, November 9.

SUPREME COURT.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1839.

FOURTH TERM OF 1839.

Before Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Seton.

DOORGADASS MOOKERJEE V. FREEMUTTY BINDABUSSAMY DORSEE.

Mr. Turtan resumed his argument this morning, and occupied the whole day! At the close of his address, nearly 5 o'clock, the Court adjourned.

The further hearing will be resumed on Monday: after which (unless this motion should happen to take up the rest of the Term!) the business now standing over will be proceeded with.—Hurk. Nov. 2.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER. 4.

DOORGADASS MOOKERJEE V. FREEMUTTY BINDABUSSAMY DORSEE.

Mr. Cochrane was heard this morning, in opposition to the motion for a receiver.

Mr. Clarke was then heard in reply.

The argument of the above motion (which at one time threatened to occupy the whole term) was concluded at about three o'clock this day, to the manifest satisfaction of the learned Judges, whose patience throughout has been beyond all praise.

The Court intimated that they would consider the case, and pronounce judgment on both motions on a future day. Ca. adv. suit.

RYMS V. WALLACE.

Mr. Cochrane moved on a bill, that the trial of this action might be postponed. The cause had not been set down on the board.

The Court said that the motion seemed premature, as it could not be ascertained that the cause would come on at all, until the plaintiff set it down for trial. It had been so determined before.—Took nothing.

THE QUEEN V. JACOBS.

Mr. Clarke applied to the Court on behalf of the prosecutors in this case, for an order that the expenses of the prosecution might be allowed under the 52nd section of the Criminal Act. He cited Phillips on Evidence (edition by Mr. Amos) to shew that the discretion which the Court possessed in allowing the costs of the prosecution was not affected by the result. In the present case, the prisoner after pleading guilty, had escaped in consequence of a mere trivial error. The term "trivial" had been made use of by the learned Judge himself, and so reported.

Mr. Turtan observed, that some of the reporters in this Court were upon a par in point of accuracy with certain reporters of whom their Lordship had heard something in the recent argument, to wit Messrs. Bunbury, Barwardston and Co., whose reports of the self-same case differed in the trifling particular of being exactly the reverse of each other!!

The Court granted the application.

Granted.—Hurk. Nov. 5.

TUESDAY NOVEMBER 5.

IN THE MATTER OF THE PYFEN BOUNT.

This was a claim for salvage instituted by Mr. Thomas McDormond of the Company's Pilot Service, against the Captain and owners of the vessel, Pyfen Bount.

* The learned counsel added (in an undertone) that he intended specialty, to except the Hurkaru's reports! and indeed observed, that in speaking of grotesquely inaccurate reports, he had only used the term in a Pick-nickian sense, so that the reporter alluded to had no cause to feel offended.

The affidavits on both sides were read, and, as usual in such cases, they contradicted each other pretty fully.

It appears that the ship Pyeen Boun, in April last, sprung a leak on her way to Rangoon, and was compelled to put back in a dangerous condition. Off Saugor Island, the Brig Jane, in which was Mr. McDormond, fell in with the Pyeen Boun, when, according to the affidavit of the latter vessel was in a sinking state, and about to be abandoned by her Captain and crew. Mr. McDormond went on board, and, according to his account, the ship was then nearly water-logged. Part of the cargo was thrown overboard by his directions, to lighten the vessel, and he ultimately succeeded in carrying her safe to Kedgee. It was admitted on the part of the Captain (Maunder) of the Pyeen Boun, that valuable service had been rendered by McDormond, and in a letter addressed by the Captain to McDormond himself, and in another written to the Insurance Office in which the vessel had been insured the Captain admitted that the preservation of the vessel was in a great measure attributable to the exertions of McDormond; but in his affidavit he positively denied that there existed any intention of abandoning her.

The Advocate General and Mr. Prinsep for the salvor. A clear case of salvage has been made out. Here is a sinking ship, which the master and crew are about to abandon, taken in charge of from day break to noon by one, upon whose services the ship in danger had no particular claim. The Captain indeed now states that he had no intention of abandoning her; but assertions about intentions are easily made and not very capable of direct disproof. And after all, it matters little whether the Captain and crew intended to abandon her or not. It may be that the Captain intended to emulate the heroism which has sometimes been displayed by British seamen in action, and to have gone to the bottom with his sinking ship! But the question is not whether the Captain or Crew intended to remain in a sinking vessel, but whether the alleged salvor has rendered services to which the preservation of the vessel is attributable; and that the fact is so, clearly appears from the affidavits. It is immaterial whether or not the case was one of abandonment, or intended abandonment. In the case of the Ship Maria in Edwards' Admiralty Reports, a King's ship was allowed to share in the salvage, although the salvage had been already effected by two fishing smacks, the King's ship not having interfered until the saved vessel was actually taken in tow by the smacks. There could not be said to have been a derelict in that case, as far as the smacks were concerned, and the claim of the King's ship was allowed, only because the additional aid rendered by her, might have contributed to the preservation of the ship saved. It is quite clear therefore, that if the salvor had been a private vessel in the present case, the claim would be fully made out. Then the question arises whether the claim of salvage is barred because the salvor is a pilot.

GRANT J. said, that the Court had decided in the case of 'the Calcutta' that where the salvors had done no more than their ordinary duty required, no claim for salvage could be recognised.

The Advocate General and Mr. Prinsep. No doubt; but here the salvor has done much more, for he has incurred a personal risk by boarding a sinking vessel. The claim in the case of 'the Calcutta' was by a Government Steamer, and the only duty performed was towing her out of danger. If any risk was there incurred, it was rather the risk of the Enterprise Steamer herself, than of the persons who claimed salvage. The question here is a most important one. If this claim be not allowed, no Pilot will ever perform the slightest service, or incur the smallest danger, beyond that which his bare duty requires. No great amount of reward is asked, but utterly sufficient to mark the sense of the Court of the undoubted services which have been rendered in this case by the salvor.

Mr. Clarke contra. This question may once have been of great importance; but it has been set at rest by the decision of the Court in the case of 'the Calcutta' last year. [The learned Counsel here read a report of the judgment in the case.]

GRANT J. From what book are you quoting Mr. Clarke?

Mr. Clarke. From the CALCUTTA MONTHLY JOURNAL,* my Lord. I contend that the judgment in that case entirely governs the present; for the Court decided there, that where the alleged salvor was acting in the discharge of his duty, there must be very special circumstances indeed, and something of extraordinary risk incurred, to establish the claim for salvage. The service rendered here was the mere service of pilotage, and was part of the ordinary duty of the alleged salvor. If he had refused to render aid to a vessel in distress, he would have been guilty of a positive breach of duty, and he might have been discharged from the service altogether! The case of 'the Joseph Harvey' in 1 Robinson Adm. Rep. is very much in point. Lord Stowell there says: "Every body knows that in acts of pilotage, when the sea runs high, there is some degree of peril attending them; but it is not upon that account that such persons are entitled to claim as salvors. The occupation is from its nature a hazardous one, but having taken up that occupation and the hazard attached to it, they are not to come before the Court to claim extraordinary rewards as belonging to them in consequence of the common perils of that employment which they themselves have chosen." And in another part of his judgment he makes use of these emphatic expressions:—"It may be, in an extraordinary case, difficult to distinguish a case of pilotage from one of salvage, properly so called; for it is possible that the safe conduct of a ship into port under circumstances of extreme danger and personal exertion may exact a pilotage service into something of a salvage service." In the present case there are no such "extraordinary" circumstances; and although it is admitted that the services rendered by Mr. McDormond were of utility, it does not appear that he has done any thing more than his duty as a pilot required.

The Court intimated that they would consider the case. And in the meantime they wished to see the directions or instructions (if any) of Government to the Pilot Service. Cur. ado. vult.—HURK, Nov. 6.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 6.

SIR H. SEW sat alone this morning; and this being a native holiday, nothing was done.

Some discussion took place yesterday as to how far the Court had recognised native holidays, Mr. Justice GRANT remarked, that he thought the Court had never judicially recognised any of the native holidays, except the four days of the Hindoo festival of the Doorga Poojah, during which the rule of Court (26th General Rule) prohibits the execution of civil process against the person of any Hindoo. Mr. Clarke observed, that the Court had practically recognised them so far, that (except when there happened to be a very great press of business, which in these degenerate days was a most unusual occurrence!) the Court had always readily allowed common law causes to stand over, in order that the attendance of native witnesses might be dispensed with upon days when it would hurt their religious prejudices to be compelled to make oath.

* A work remarkable for the felicitous accuracy of its reports. (Hem!) R.R.

SYME V. WALLACE.

It should have been mentioned, that a point of practice was decided yesterday in this case, in which a motion to postpone the trial was made on Monday last, on behalf of the defendant, and then objected to, upon the ground that the cause was not set down on the board, and that the application seemed premature.

The Court yesterday observed, that the distinction between an application to postpone the trial made on behalf of the plaintiff, and such an application made (as in this case) on behalf of the defendant, had not been adverted to. The plaintiff could not move to put off the trial before the cause was entered on the board, because the entering it at all depended upon himself, and this had been decided in the case of Jadubehunder Seal v. Cockerell and Co. But it might very often be advisable and indeed absolutely necessary, for the defendant to make the application before the cause was set down, and as soon as he had received notice of trial. This appeared to be the practice of the Queen's Bench at home, and the Court would, therefore, grant the rule, the affidavit of ground was sufficient.

Rule nisi granted.—Hark. Nov. 27.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7.

DOORADOSS MOOKERJEE V. GREENMUTTY SINDABABANY DOSSER.

SIR J. P. GRANT delivered the judgment of the Court. This was a motion for an attachment against the Attorney and the Sheriff's officer, for alleged abuse of the process of the Court, by entering the zenana or private apartments of the defendant, and removing property seized there under a writ of sequestration. It is a great mistake to suppose that the circumstance of Hindoo females being or not being actually present, makes any difference whatever. The object of the rule is to preserve inviolate the sanctity of the zenana itself, and if the officer enter upon the mere chance of finding the premises untenanted, without any warrant or order from this Court, it is a high offence. We are also of opinion, that there is no authority for removing goods upon a writ of sequestration on mesne process, and that this proceeding therefore was illegal.

With respect to the solicitor, we wish to give further time and opportunity for him to put in a full affidavit, stating distinctly what participation he took in the proceedings of the Sheriff's officer, and for this purpose the matter will stand over. The affidavit should be filed as expeditiously as possible. Stands over.

SAME D. SAME.

The Court delivered their judgment upon the motion for a Receiver, and were of opinion, that the application should be granted, and that W. H. Smout, Esq., should be appointed Receiver accordingly.—Order accordingly.

P. M. D'SILVA V. L. F. PEREIRA.

Mr. Turton moved for further time for filing his answer. This motion had stood over so long that the answer was now sworn, and ready to be filed, and if it had stood over until next motion day, the application would have become unnecessary. He supposed his learned friend would have no objection to allow a week.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith said, that it was of importance to get the answer in as soon as possible, because there was a judgment outstanding against the Estate, which it was necessary to obtain funds from the defendant (the executor) to satisfy, and the order for this purpose could not be obtained from the Court until the answer was in. They would consent to allow time until Monday next, on payment of costs.

The Court allowed time accordingly until Monday next. Time allowed.

W. C. HURRY, ASSIGNEE, &C. V. DOORADACHURN MOOKERJEE AND OTHERS.

The Advocate-General, moved to clear contempt upon payment of costs, and for leave to file his answer. He apprehended it was a motion of course.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith were heard on the same side. The defendant was in contempt for breach of injunction, as well as for not filing his answer; but this was no objection, as the contempts were in different matters though in the same cause.

Mr. Turton and Mr. Clarke contra. This certainly looks like a motion of course, when there are three Counsel to support it! The rule is express, that no step can be taken in a cause, while the party is in contempt in the cause; and the consequence is, that contempts cannot be cleared piece meal. This was decided by this Court on a precisely similar application in June 1829, in the case of Seebnarain Ghose v. Seenuath Baboo.

The Advocate-General replied, and suggested, that the decisions of the Court, as constituted in June 1829, were not of very high authority! Suppose a party was in contempt for marrying a ward of chancery, how could he clear contempt at all? He could not be unmarried I suppose.

Mr. Turton. He could be sent to prison.

The Court said that the order for clearing the contempt and filing the answer could only be conditional, upon the party surrendering himself, or at all events giving security for the performance of such order as the Court might make relative to the breach of injunction for which he was in contempt.

Mr. Turton suggested that there should be a limit as to time. After some discussion, fifteen days were allowed. Order accordingly.

TARRAMONEY DOSSER V. UNNOOPCOORNAH DOSSER.

Mr. Turton and Mr. Leith shewed cause against a rule why judgment de bonis propriis should not be entered up in this case, instead of the judgment de bonis testatoris, or why the plaint should not be amended by striking out the words, "executor and executrix." This was an action of trover for jewels, and the defendants were misdescribed as executor and executor. The learned Counsel took several objections. In the first place, the application was too late. In the second place, there were not sufficient grounds, because it was attempted to refer to the pleadings and the record, although the record formed no part of the grounds of the rule, Howther v. Hubbersty & Dowling. And lastly, there was nothing to amend, by, and it had been decided that the Court could not so alter the judgment Burrough v. Stephens, 5 Taunton Rep.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Norton in support of the rule. The objections are only applicable where the error sought to be amended is the act of the Court. Here it is the mere clerical error of the officer. There is something to amend by; for there are the minutes of the judgment, and they do not authorize any such verdict or judgment, as a judgment de bonis testatoris. The words do not require to be struck out of the plaint, for they are mere "surplusage" in the strict sense of the word Henshall v. Roberts, 5 East.

The Court suggested that there was another objection in the form of the rule. The judgment was only de bonis propriis, where a party was sued as executor, but was held personally liable. The amendment should be that a general verdict and judgment should be entered.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Morton urged, that the judgment de bonis propriis would be in effect a general judgment, and execution would be sued out in the same manner precisely. The words were inserted in the rule merely antithetically to the words de bonis testatoris. They might be left out altogether.

The Court were satisfied that the error was a mere clerical error of the officer, in entering up judgment, and that it was not the act of the Court. They wished, therefore, to allow the plaintiff an opportunity of getting such error amended; but as the form of this rule was defective, it must be discharged without costs though without prejudice to the plaintiff's right to move again.

Rule discharged.

HULLODHUR CHOWDRY V. COLLYDOSS SINGAR.

Mr. Turton and Mr. Morton shewed cause against a rule for judgment as in case of a nonsuit for not proceeding to trial. The motion was not sustainable, because this was an action of replevin, and in replevin both parties are actors, and either may make up the issue and carry down the record for trial. The learned Counsel were proceeding to cite authorities, but,

Mr. Leith admitted that he could not support the rule. Rule discharged.—Hurk. Nov. 8.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1839.

RABOO MUTTYLOLL SEAL VERSUS J. A. CURRIE.

This was an action upon two bonds. The defendant had pleaded non est factum; but the cause was now undefended.

Mr. Turton (with whom was Mr. Leith) appeared for the plaintiff.

The execution of the bond was proved, and a verdict taken for the penalty, the judgment to be entered up for the sum actually due for principal and interest. Verdict for Rs. 1,64 000

COLLYCHURN DHUR VERSUS RUSSEY THAKOOR AND DYALCHUND MOOREJEE.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings. The plaint was in trespass for an assault to the person. One of the defendants had pleaded besides the general issue, a special plea to which the plaintiff had replied generally de injuria. The special plea was the plea technically called maliter manus impulsit, and was a justification of the assault on the ground that the plaintiff was in the house of one of the defendants, making a noise and disturbance therein, and that the other defendant, as his servant and by his command, "turned him out."

The Advocate-General stated the case. The assault, as he was instructed, was of rather a serious nature. The defendants having met the plaintiff in the street, made an attack upon him, in consequence of some previous quarrel, and threw brickbats at him, wounded him severely on different parts of the body. The case for the plaintiff was a very simple one, and easily established. What case the defendants might have, he could not say; but no doubt they would be able to produce buzar witnesses enough to swear to any thing that might be required.

A witness called, who proved the assault distinctly against both defendants, but the assault of which he spoke was committed in the street, and not in any house. In the midst of his examination,

Mr. Turton, for the defendants, rose, and said, he should take an objection at once, which appeared to him to be fatal to the case attempted to be established. This plea of a justification in a house at a certain time made time and place material; and the plaintiff ought not to have replied, but to have new assigned, if he meant to establish an assault at another place or at another time.

The Advocate General and Mr. Morton said that this objection, at present at all events, was quite premature as to the defendant who had justified, and wholly inapplicable as to the other! A new assignment was necessary only where there were two or more assaults, of which one was justifiable; but certainly nothing of that kind yet appeared. The replication de injuria traversed every material allegation in the plea, and time and place among the rest where time and place were made material by forming part of the justification. How could the plaintiff now assign "another and different" assault, if the fact were that there was but one altogether? If the defendant could shew that there were two assaults, and that one was justifiable in the mode pleaded in the plea, then he would be entitled to a verdict on the plea of justification, and the plaintiff would not be entitled to prove a different assault, unless he had new assigned. Then as to the other defendant, the objection had nothing to do with his case, because he had not justified at all, but simply denied the fact, and it would be a rather new doctrine, if the plea of one defendant were to aid his co-defendant!

Mr. Turton in reply, urged, that a new assignment might be necessary, even where only assault has actually taken place; thus excess must be new assigned. The consequence otherwise would, here, be two issues;—the plaintiff proving one assault, and the defendant proving another, with a justification as to the latter.

The Court had some doubt whether there was not something in the objection as regarded the defendant who had justified, but not as to the other. They would reserve liberty to move.

The case then proceeded.

Mr. Turton (with whom was Mr. Sandes) for the defence, addressed the Court.

Three witnesses were then called for the defence, who endeavoured to prove that there had been a quarrel and scuffle in the house of one of the defendants.

The Court found a verdict for the plaintiff on all the issues, with damages fifty rupees, liberty being reserved to the defendants to move on the point of law which had been raised.

Verdict for damages Rs. 50 with costs.

BREEMUTTY DIGOUMBERY DOBBER V. CHOYTURA DOBB.

This cause was called upon, and, no one appearing, it was,—Struck out.—Hurk. Nov. 9.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1839.

ROOPCHUND DAY VERSUS BITCHIE.

This was a demurrer to a special plea. The plaint was a common count for Rs. five thousand, had and received Zillah of Burdwan; and the defendants have pleaded that the cause of action did not accrue within six years. Upon the face of the plaint it appears, that the parties are Hindoos, and it is submitted therefore, that the plea of the English statute of limitations cannot be supported. The opinion may have formerly prevailed generally, that the Statute of limitations was applied in this Court to Hindoo and Mahomedan parties, but two modern decisions have set the question at rest for ever. In the case of Kistnoohund Seet. v. Rumdhoon Nundun, which was argued in the Court in the year 1834, it was expressly determined on demurrer, that the Statute did not apply. The action was upon a promissory note, and the defendant had pleaded non assumpsit infra sex annos. So in the case of Meenachyer Brahmenees v. Aurachella Milttee, the Supreme Court of Madras determined last year, that such a plea to an action upon a promissory note could not be sustained between Hindoo parties. There is no distinction in principle between those cases and the present. This is an action upon a judgment, indeed, and not upon a promissory note, but the form of the action is assumpsit, and the subject matter quasi ex contractu. It is submitted that upon the authority of the modern decisions the question can not now be considered res integra.

Mr. Morton in support of the plea. None of the cases decided by any of the Indian Courts upon the applicability of the statutes of limitations to Hindoo parties, touch the present case, because those decisions expressly proceeded on the ground of the cause of action being matter of contract. Let it be considered in the first place whether the statutes of limitations ought not to be applied, even where the case falls within the exception of the 21 Geo. III. ch. 70 s. 17, which provides that "questions of succession and inheritance, and matters of contract and dealing between party and party," shall be governed by Hindoo law where the parties are Hindoos, and by Mahomedan law where the parties are Mahomedans. The earlier decisions of this Court are in favour of the doctrine that the rules of limitation do apply even to Hindoos and Mahomedans; especially the case of Kissenchurn Tagore v. Remprish Dabee, (Chambers' Notes, 5th July 1791) where the replication that the parties were Gentooes and not barred by the Statute, was held bad on demurrer. A modern decision of this Court, and a decision last year in the Supreme Court, at Madras are certainly the other way. But it is questionable whether the plain distinction between questions relating to rights and questions relating to mere remedies, has been sufficiently adverted to. The statutes of limitations bar only the "remedy." Higgins v. Scott, 2 B. and Adol. where it was held that a claim more than six years old was still subsisting and might become available, though all actions in respect of it were barred by the statutes. So in Drummond v. The British Linen Company, 10 Barn. and Cress., it was held that the action on a Scotch bond was barred by the English limitation as to the mere remedy or form of action, although as the cause of action arose in Scotland it was admitted that Scotch law would have governed the question of right. So according to the practice of this Court the action of ejectment which is wholly unknown to Hindoo law, is daily adopted to try questions of succession or inheritance, because the remedy follows the English law, although the substantial question of right involved is to be decided by Hindoo law. The same principle ought to be applied to all questions of limitation, since they merely affect particular forms of action. But in the second place, it remains to be considered, whether this case falls within the exception at all; and it is submitted that it does not. This is an action upon a judgment, and it does not appear what the judgment was obtained for, whether debt upon a contract or damages for a wrong, nor indeed is this material. The question is whether a judgment can be said to come under the category of matters relating to "succession or inheritance, contract or dealing." The assumpsit is merely laid pro forma and the real subject-matter of the action is still the judgment itself, and not the supposed promise arising in respect of it. For example, "non assumpsit" would put in issue the existence of the validity of the judgment, not the fact of the promise because that is a mere fiction of pleading. If then it be admitted that the subject matter of this action does not fall within the exception in the Statute of Geo. III., there is not a shadow of authority for holding that the English law of limitations does not apply. The decisions of this Court and of the Madras Court proceeded expressly upon the exception, and upon no ground. This case would then fall within the principle of the decision in Sardasun Sain, v. Lockenanth Mullick (tried a few months ago) where the Judges unanimously held that the action of crim. con. was maintainable in this Court between Hindoo parties, although wholly unknown to the Hindoo mode, and where they in effect decided that if the statutory exception does not reach the case this Court will always apply the rules of English law without distinction of parties.

Mr. Prinsep in reply. I concede that if this case does not fall within the exception, the plea is good. But I contend that it certainly does come within the exception, and that the subject matter of this action must be considered to be "contract or dealing." The judgment states on the face of it that the money was for "principal and interest" due, and this necessarily imports that the cause of action was a debt. Even if the fact did not appear, the Court would presume it, because they will never intend criminality, which matter ex delicto certainly is. The form of the action of assumpsit imports prima facie matter ex contractu, and the Court will assume it, at all events until the presumption is rebutted. Under the general issue the question of the sufficiency of the judgment might be gone into, and it might become necessary to give evidence at the trial of the subject matter of the judgment itself. The more recent decisions in England lay it down that a foreign judgment or decree is in strictness only evidence of a debt, and although evidence prima facie of great weight is not necessarily conclusive. The old decisions of this Court upon the applicability of the Statute of Limitations to Hindoo parties in cases ex contractu, it is submitted, are altogether overruled by the modern cases in this Court and the Madras Court.

SIR J. P. GRANT, after some deliberation, delivered judgment, The Court are of opinion that it sufficiently appears on the face of the judgment (which is the subject matter of this action) that the judgment was for a debt, and that the original action therefore was ex contractu. If this had not appeared, we might have been driven to a different consideration. Since, therefore, the action in which the judgment was obtained, was ex contractu, we consider that the action upon that judgment is also ex contractu, and that upon the authority of the recent decisions the Statutes of Limitations are not applicable.—Demurrer allowed.—Hurk. Nov. 13.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 13.

The learned Judges, Mr. Justice GRANT and Mr. Justice STOW sat this morning, and the Equity Board was about to be gone into, according to the intimation given by the Court yesterday. But upon the first equity case being called on, up rose.

Mr. Turton I wish to call your Lordship's attention to the words of the rule (the 46th general Rule) regulating the course of practice, and I submit that the rule does not authorize the taking of "demurrers" and "pleas".

in Equity, on any other days during term-time than Mondays and Thursdays. I am not ready, my Lords, as I received no notice that the cases were to be taken out of their regular order, which I submit will be the case, if they are taken to day.

MR. H. SERON, Your not being prepared, Mr. Turton, is quite a sufficient reason in itself for the Court to grant the indulgence even if you should not be strictly entitled to it.

MR. TURTON. Oh, my Lord, I am quite sure of the indulgence of the Court being accorded, if I were to put it on that ground. But I wish to have your Lordship's "decision" upon the point, and I have no objection to send for my papers, and incur the risk of being called on to proceed in the argument although unprepared!

SIR J. P. GRANT said that in his opinion the words of the rule itself certainly justified the excuse that the learned counsel was not prepared, and the Court would readily postpone the arguments. But it would be convenient if the practice in future was understood to be (as it has in fact been generally understood to be) that when there are no causes remaining, demurrers, &c., both in law and equity are to be considered as "causes," and taken upon other days than Mondays and Thursdays. It was of little consequence in the present instance, as there was certainly no "press of business!" — Hurkaru, November 14.

THURSDAY, NOV. 14, 1839.

SHEEMUTTY HURROONDERY DOWRE UPON KISSA-KISSAUNT ROY BAHADOOR, AND ANOTHER.

This was a motion for a receiver which had been put off until this morning by consent.

This was the case in which an application on behalf of the Ranees was made during the vacation, to a Magistrate, upon the subject of the alleged forcible removal of Company's paper, jewels and other property to the amount of nearly 30 lakhs of rupees, belonging to the estate of the late Rajah Harreenauth Roy.

MR. TURTON, (with whom was Mr. Morton for Coar Kissaunt Roy) applied upon affidavits for a fortnight's further time to answer the affidavit, filed on behalf of the application for a receiver. The affidavits stated that the defendant, who had lately lost his wife, was at present in a state of great mental distress, and quite incapacitated from attending to matters of business. The property was in the custody of Mr. James Charles Colebrooks Sutherland.

MR. CLARKE and MR. LEITH opposed the motion, and went into the matter at great length. They endeavoured to shew, that the circumstances under which the property was obtained, were wholly illegal and unjustifiable, and that Mr. Sutherland had no sort of right to the custody. The present application was merely that the property should be deposited in the hands of the proper officer, or of such other person as the Court should appoint. To this there was no answer.

SIR J. P. GRANT said, that the Court were not now going into the merits. The only question was whether sufficient facts had been stated to support the application for further time.

MR. CLARKE and MR. LEITH. The affidavits ought to have been filed long ago. This motion stood over until this morning merely by our consent. No affidavit on this occasion has been put in by Mr. Sutherland.

SIR H. SERON said, that nothing appeared to shew that any immediate risk to the property was to be apprehended! That was the only question, and it could scarcely be in much danger in the custody of Mr. Sutherland.

MR. TURTON said that he appeared for Mr. Sutherland also, and that he was ready to offer security on behalf of his client that the boxes should not be opened, or to consent to their being sealed up with any seal which the complainants might choose.

The Court, after some discussion, granted an order for a fortnight's further time.

Time allowed.

SHEEMUTTY GOLUCKMONEY DOWRE VERSUS OBOYCHURN MOOKERJEE.

This was a motion for an injunction, which occupied the greater part of the day.

MR. TURTON and MR. LEITH for the injunction.

The Advocate-General and MR. PRINSEP contra.

At the close of the learned Advocate-General's arguments, the Court adjourned the further hearing until to-morrow. — Hurk Nov. 15.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15.

SHEEMUTTY GOLUCKMONEY DOWRE V. OBOYCHURN MOOKERJEE.

The argument on the motion for an injunction proceeded this morning.

The Court intimated that they would consider the point.

HILLS V. BURY.

This was a demurrer to a replication to the plea of the Statute of Frauds. The plea was special assumpsit for not accepting a horse according to agreement. The plea was that there was no memorandum in writing, and no acceptance within the meaning of the Statute of Frauds. Replication that there was "an acceptance within the meaning of the Statute of Frauds." To this there was a demurrer on the ground of departure and inconsistency.

MR. LEITH for the demurrer. The plea states that the defendant "did not accept," and that is the gist of the action, and in his replication that "he did accept," — a palpable repugnancy. The rule is express, that a party shall not be allowed to depart in pleading from the ground which he previously took. There is another objection, that it does not appear that the alleged compliance with the statute was prior to the breach, and therefore that there was any subsisting contract at the time of the breach declared upon.

MR. MORTON contra. The term "acceptance" is used in two entirely distinct senses in the plea and in the replication. The term has two distinct technical meanings. In the former, it is acceptance within the meaning of the contract, i. e. a complete and perfect acceptance, in the latter it is an incipient acceptance, sufficient to take the case out of the statute. The cases of Anderson versus Scott, 1 Campb. and Boulter versus Arnott, 3 Tyrwhitt, establish the distinction.

SIR J. P. GRANT. The distinction recognised by these cases appears to be only between "delivery" within the meaning of the contract, and within "statute."

MR. MORTON. And therefore between "acceptance" in the sense used in the statute and "acceptance" within the meaning of the contract, because delivery and acceptance are precisely correlative terms. The plaintiff will otherwise be tricked. If he brings his action for a horse sold and delivered, he is defeated, because although he can prove an acceptance within the Statute, he cannot prove a delivery to support the action; and

He brings his action in this form, he is defeated also on the ground of alleged departure. It is recognising a distinction in one case, and repudiating it in another. As to the second objection, it does not arise, because dates are immaterial. And there would have been nothing in it, even if the fact had been expressly rejoined because the rule is that where a voidable contract is subsequently ratified, the original contract may be declared on, and the ratification makes complete the incomplete contract, and converts the non-performance into an actionable breach. This was the usual and proper mode of declaring. Hunt v. Massey, 5 B. and A.—Mr. Leith replied.

SIR J. P. GRANT said the Court thought that the first objection was good, and they could not recognise the distinction between the word "acceptance" in its imputed different senses. The plaintiff must discontinue, and shape his action differently to avoid the objection. It does not appear of any use to give leave to amend.—Demurrer allowed.

HORNER V. VOSS.

This demurrer to the plaint was submitted to, and struck out by the plaintiff's Attorney. Struck out.—Hurkara November 16.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1839.

SIR H. SETON sat alone this morning and took of course motions.

Monday is the last day of Term. There are several contested motions standing over. The common law board is cleared, but there are two cases remaining on the equity board.—Hurkara, November 18.

MONDAY, NOV. 18, 1839.

DOORADOSA MOOKERJEE V. BREEMUTTY RINDABASSSEENY DADES.

The Court were about to deliver judgment on the application for an attachment in the above, but

Mr. Turton and Mr. Clarke requested permission to mention to their Lordship that some arrangement was pending between the parties as to the suit. And although of course no private arrangement could affect the question of the contempt, perhaps the Court would postpone judgment until this arrangement should be completed.—Stood over.

IN RE PYEN BOUN.

SIR P. GRANT delivered the judgment of the Court. This is a claim for salvage by a Master Pilot for service rendered to the Pyen Boun, whereby that vessel was saved from destruction, and brought safely into port. The affidavits shew, that the value of the ship and cargo preserved, amounted to about Co.'s Rs. 40,000; and this is uncontradicted. The general duty of Pilots may be gathered from the judgment of Lord Stowell in the cited case of the "Joseph Harve;" where his Lordship says that under circumstances of peculiar danger and personal exertion, pilotage service may be exalted into a salvage service. The difficulty is to apply the acknowledged principles to the infinite variety of circumstances which each particular case may present, and the reasons of one decision will be rarely found strictly and precisely applicable to another. The general rule is that where the pilot has undergone such a degree of danger, fatigue and exertion as exceeds the utmost limit of his duty, the Court may award him salvage; but if the risk and fatigue which he has incurred are only such as may be deemed incident to the profession, the ordinary dangers of which he has voluntarily taken upon himself, however much he may have contributed to the safety of the vessel, he cannot legally claim salvage. There is no particular rule which prevails in this respect in this country;—the pilot service here seems to be governed by the same general rules as in other parts of the British dominions. Queen's ships have been held entitled to salvage, although their duty expressly requires that they shall render all the aid in their power to British vessels in danger. The circumstances of this case were fully gone into at the time that the question was argued at the bar (His Lordship here recapitulated the leading points in the affidavits.) We consider that the circumstances disclosed in the affidavits shew a clear case of salvage and that of a meritorious description. This is a case of great commercial importance. Our decision in no degree clashes with the decision of the Court in the case of the "Calcutta," where the Court were of opinion that the Commander of the Steamer performed no more than his duty, and was therefore, on the principle already mentioned, disentitled to salvage, although the service rendered may have actually contributed to the preservation of the ship. His Lordship then read an extract from the judgment of the learned Chief Justice.) We are further of opinion, that the officers and crew of the vessel are entitled to share in the salvage to be decreed. A difficulty arises at present from the circumstance of the officers and crew not being parties to this suit. The petition may be amended by adding them as parties, and the Court will then decree the amount of salvage, and the proportions in which it is to be awarded to the different claimants. The petitioner in this case will be allowed his costs.

Salvage allowed with costs.

J. W. ALEXANDER V. CAPE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Prinsep moved for further time for putting in the answer of Major Cape, for the taking of which a commission had been sent to England in March 1837.

The Advocate General opposed the application, and said that this Court's rules would be a nullity if it were granted.

The very name of this case excited considerable merriment in Court, as this was computed to be about the 101st application for further time.

The Court said they could not assist the defendant any further. Refused.

SKINNER V. YOUNG.

Mr. Light moved to make absolute a rule for setting aside, on the ground of irregularity, the judgement signed by the plaintiff in the above action, which was an action against the Sheriff for a false return. On the 8th of November a summons under Plea Rule 7 was obtained by defendant to strike out one of the counts in the plaint, and was served on the plaintiff's attorney, to attend on the Monday following, the 11th instant. The summons came on before Mr. Justice Seton, and stood over for further consideration. It came on the next day, and the question was then referred by the learned Judge to the full Court. No final order was made, and yet the plaintiff on the 13th signed judgment for want of a plea. The learned counsel cited several cases, to shew that a summons operates as a stay of proceedings.

Mr. Turton shewed cause, and relied upon an affidavit that the learned judge on the 12th of November had discharged the summons.

SIR J. P. GRANT. The affidavit is a mistake. The learned judge had no power under Rule 7 verbally to discharge the summons, and in fact the summons is not disposed of yet. The learned judge, if he had intended to discharge the summons, would have endorsed upon it the certificate required by the rule, that he was satisfied that a distinct subject matter of complaint was intended to be established in respect of each count. The summons operates as a stay of proceedings from the period of its return until it is finally disposed of; and this judgment, therefore, having been signed during the pendency of the summons, is irregular and must be set aside.—Rule absolute.

IN THE MATTER OF LUCKHANA AIR MOOREJEE.

Mr. Turton (with whom was Mr. Clarke) moved to make absolute a rule for setting aside the award.

Mr. Morton said he had to move upon affidavit that the time for shewing cause be enlarged.

Mr. Turton apprehended, that this was inadmissible. His motion could not be met by a counter motion. His learned friend ought to have moved it before.

Mr. Morton said it was a very common practice, but at all events the objection could easily be obviated by shewing cause, not upon the merits, but upon the affidavit on which the motion for further time was intended to be made. The grounds for and against the application to set aside the award, were very voluminous, and the attorney who had been ill and absent from Calcutta, had been unable to get his grounds ready, though he had used due diligence. The attorney expected to be ready by Thursday, and the party in whose favour the award was made, was the only party who could possibly sustain injury by the delay.

The Court granted time till Monday next, upon continuation of the motion being taken as of the term.

Time granted.

MISSEUR DONNIEJEE V. RAMRUTTON ROY AND OTHERS.

This was a demurrer to a bill in Equity on the ground of want of parties, and also upon the ground of insufficient jurisdiction laid in the bill of complaint.

Mr. Princep and Mr. Leith for the demurrer. The first ground of demurrer is that certain infants who appear to be interested on the face of the bill, are not made parties. They are indeed alleged to be out of the jurisdiction of the Court, and not amenable to the process; but they ought nevertheless to be charged as defendants thereto, and process ought to be prayed against them when and so soon as they shall become subject to the jurisdiction. The case of Menes v. De Pastet, 1 Daniel Rep. is expressly in point, and is even stronger than this, because the parties in question were there actually charged as defendants, and the objection was not the mere slip in omitting to pay process. The second ground of demurrer is, that there is no sufficient jurisdiction shewn as to Ramrutton Roy. The jurisdiction clause states that he is not an inhabitant of Calcutta, but of Coimbatore, and that he is specially subject to the jurisdiction in respect of a certain judgment of this Court to which the bill of complaint relates by reason of his making use for his own benefit of such judgment and process thereon, and thereby seeking the aid of the Court. This discloses no ground of jurisdiction. It does not appear that he was any party to the proceedings in which the judgment was obtained; and there is no case in which this Court has gone so far as to hold that such allegations as these are sufficient to found special jurisdiction. The other alleged ground of jurisdiction is equally untenable. It is that the said Ramrutton Roy is specially subject to the jurisdiction in respect of the subject-matter of the bill of complaint, by reason of a certain clause or covenant of submission, entered into (not with the complainant but with T. Dickens and John Allen (two co-defendants.) It is quite a clear covenant to submit to the jurisdiction if available to no other person than the covenantee himself.

Mr. Turton and Mr. Sandes for the bill, will be heard to-morrow.

The Court adjourned the further hearing of the argument at 5 o'clock.

Adjourned.—HURHURU, November 19.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER, 19, 1839.

SITTINGS AFTER FOURTH TERM OF 1839.

(Before Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Seton.)

This was the first day of the Sittings. There are 18 causes on the common law board.

MISSEUR DONNIEJEE V. RAMRUTTON ROY.

Mr. Turton and Mr. Sandes in support of the bill, the demurrer which was argued yesterday by the counsel for the defence. Neither ground of demurrer ought to be allowed to prevail. The first objection which has been taken is, that certain interested parties though out of the jurisdiction of the Court, ought to be charged as co-defendants, and joined in the prayer of process. This is altogether contrary to the practice of this Court; and even if such a rule be adopted in England, there is no good ground for extending it here. The presumption in the superior Courts of law and equity at home, is in favour of the jurisdiction: here no such presumption exists. There is nothing to support such a rule in principle, because such a charge in the bill, with the corresponding prayer of process by anticipation, would not make it one whit the less necessary to amend the bill, if ever the parties should come within the jurisdiction, by stating the fact that they have since come within the jurisdiction and have become amenable to the process of the Court. And the only authority in favour of the doctrine contended for by the other side is the case of Menes v. De Pastet, cited from M. 8 in 1st Daniel Prac., which is directly contrary to Haddock v. Tomlinson, reported in 2 Sim. and Stu. Then as to the question whether Ramrutton Roy sufficiently appears to be subject to the jurisdiction, on the face of the bill,—it is submitted that either ground of jurisdiction laid would be sufficient. He is charged to be specially subject in respect of the "judgment" of this Court which the bill seeks to set aside, by reason of having proceeded under it, and having proceeded too in a very effectual manner, viz, by suing out execution under it. If a man may put in motion the machinery of this Court, for his own benefit and advantage, without rendering himself liable to the jurisdiction and control of the Court, so far as relates thereto, the most monstrous injustice and oppression may be the consequence. A party may thus abuse the power and process of the Court on the plea side, and shelter himself from all equitable check and control, on the ground that he is not personally amenable to the jurisdiction!—But again, the second ground of special jurisdiction is also sufficient, although its sufficiency has been so much misused by the learned counsel for the defendants. The words in the charter are that the Court "shall have power to try and determine all causes, actions and suits arising, growing, or to be brought or promoted against every other person or persons, what infants, of India residing within the provinces, upon any contract or agreement in writing entered into by any of the said inhabitants with any of His Majesty's subjects, when it shall have been agreed in the said contract; that in case of dispute the matter shall be determined in the Supreme Court." The present case falls within the very words. It is not necessary that the covenant to submit to the jurisdiction, should be with the plaintiff himself; for it has long since been held sufficient to bring the case within the terms of the charter, if the covenant is with any British subject (usually the cryer of the Court), in no way beneficially interested, and merely made a party to the instrument as trustee and for the open and avowed purpose of subjecting the parties to the Court's jurisdiction.

Mr. Prinsep replied,

The Court postponed judgment, and intimated that they wished to refer to one or two cases among the MS notes of Mr. Justice Chambers, upon the important question of jurisdiction raised.

Cur. adv. vult.

SEENMUTTY MAUNCOOMARREE DOSSEE V. PARBUTTY DOSSEE AND ANOTHER.

This was a plea and answer in equity, set down for argument by the complainant.

After the pleadings had been opened, discussion arose upon the question whether the counsel for the complainant or the counsel for the defendants ought to begin the argument.

Mr. Cochrane for the complainant said that he was quite willing to begin, and this appeared to him to be the proper course, but he believed the contrary practice had been followed in this Court.

Mr. Turton and Mr. Morton said, that if they were called upon to begin, they would have to meet objections by mere anticipation. The general rule in pleas, demurrers and the like, was for the exceptant to commence by stating his objections, and then for the other party to be heard, and the exceptant would have the reply. At present they had no notice at all of the nature of the objections intended to be urged.

The Court said that it seemed certainly more convenient for the party taking the objections to commence; and this rule might be followed on the present occasion at all events.

The argument was heard in part, when the Court Adjourned.—HURKARU, November 20.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1839.

SEENMUTTY MAUNCOOMARREE DOSSEE V. PARBUTTY DOSSEE AND ANOTHER.

The argument upon the plea was continued this morning.

Mr. Cochrane for the complainant. This is a bill for an account of certain real and personal property alleged to form a joint estate, deceased from one Herroo Shah, deceased, intestate, a representative in estate of whom the complainant claims to be. The bill charges, that the defendants took possession of the property to the exclusion of the complainant, and obtained a general release under circumstances of fraud. The defendants have pleaded as to a specific part of the bill, that the said Herroo Shah did not die intestate, but that he left a Will, (set forth verbatim in the plea) by which he bequeathed the whole of the property to the defendants, except a legacy of Rs. 2,000, which the plea avers to have been paid. The defendants have answered as to the residue of the bill, denying the circumstances of fraud in respect of the general release. Now, the first objection is, that the plea does not cover all to which it is pleaded; for the bill alleges a jointer in estates subsequent to the death of Herroo Shah, and this cannot be affected by the existence or non-existence of the Will. Again, the answer is liable to an objection, which may be stated in the alternative, viz. that it either overrules the plea, or exhibits a distinct defence; because the general release standing alone would be sufficient defence to the whole bill, and two distinct issues upon separate and distinct defences cannot be allowed; Amoth v. Jackson, 6 Ves. Jun. 12. And lastly, there are several material allegations in the bill, which are not denied either by the plea or answer, and the rule is, that everything not denied must be taken to be admitted: Milford Plead. p. 300. Of this nature are the allegations, that, certain jewels and ornaments of the complainant have been forcibly seized and appropriated by the defendants,—that no account has been rendered,—that the papers and books of account have been mutilated and falsified, and so forth. In Foley v. Hill, 3 Mylne and Craig Rep., it was decided, that charges in the bill which would destroy the legal bar which is the foundation of the plea, must be fully and specifically denied by answer.

Mr. Turton and Mr. Morton contr. The substantial subject matter of this bill is a claim for an account by the alleged representative of an alleged intestate, and also that a certain general release, stated to have been obtained under circumstances of fraud, may be delivered up to be cancelled. To the first part, the defendants have pleaded a Will, thus denying the intestacy and all its consequences, and this is clearly a bar as far as the plea extends. By the Will which is set forth in the plea itself, it appears, that the plaintiff was interested in the property to the extent of Rs. 2,000, and the plea accordingly goes on to aver, that that legacy has been paid and that the interest of the plaintiff has been altogether determined.

Per Curiam. Was it necessary to aver the payment of the legacy at all? Would it not have been sufficient to have stated the Will, without tendering two issues, the fact of the will and the fact of the payment of the legacy?

Mr. Turton and Mr. Morton. It might have been sufficient as the bill stands, to have stated merely the Will, but the payment of the legacy is averred in contemplation of amendment of the bill, in which case, it would have appeared on the face of our pleading, that the plaintiff was interested to the extent of Rs. 2,000. A plea may consist of several circumstances, if they all tend to one point. The short point here is "no title" in the plaintiff. Then as to the second objection, that the plea is overruled by the answer, or else that the answer furnishes a distinct defence,—the reply is, that the plea and answer relate to two totally distinct matters, the former to the matter of the account, and the latter to the prayer for the cancellation of the general release. If it had not been for this, there would have been but a partial defence.

Per Curiam. Would not the general release have been a sufficient defence to the whole, if it had stood alone?

Mr. Turton and Mr. Morton. No doubt, if it had been applied to the whole; but it is applied to a totally distinct part, viz. the specific prayer for its cancellation. The release is not set up as a bar. The mere circumstances of fraud charged in the bill are denied. Then, with respect to the last objection taken for the complainants, that there are allegations in the bill not specifically denied; we answer, that it was not necessary to notice them, because it is only necessary to deny allegations, which are either the foundation of the plaintiff's title, or evidence of that title. Thring v. Edgar, 2 Sim. and Sta. In the cited case of Foley v. Will, the facts not denied were evidence of the plaintiff's title, and not being denied, destroyed the anticipated legal but set up by the plea. Here the subject matter of the plea was not anticipated in any degree by the bill; and if we had denied the allegations specifically, we should have overruled our plea by discovery as to matters, in respect of which we had already denied the complainant's title, both to relief and discovery.

Mr. Cochrane in reply was not called upon.

SIR J. P. GRANT. The Court are of opinion, that the plea and answer must be considered as forming together one entire pleading, and that they must not disclose separate and distinct defences. Now, the general release which the answer here sets up would have been of itself a sufficient bar to the whole bill. The object of a plea is to reduce the defence to a single point and where this cannot be done, the defendant must rely upon his defences by way of answer. This plea must stand for an answer with liberty to except.

Mr. Tutton apprehended, the costs would be costs in the cause.

Mr. Cochrane said, that he had set down five and twenty pleas at least, and costs always had been allowed where the plea had stood for answer.

Mr. Tutton offered to bet his learned friend a gold mohur or two (if batting was allowed in a Court of Justice) that five and twenty pleas in Equity altogether had not been in Court during the experience of his learned friend!

The Court reserved the question of costs.

Plea to stand for answer with liberty to except — Hurk
Nov. 21.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21.

COSMINAATH ROSE V. DOOROOERFAUD CHOSE AND HULLODHUR CHOSE

Mr. Cochrane opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep stated the case. This was an action upon a promissory note for Rs. 1603 made by the two defendants jointly with one Debnath Ghose deceased. The three parties formed a joint Hindoo family, and the defendant Hullodhur was at the time 14 years of age. This defendant had pleaded infancy, to which the plaintiff had replied a ratification after he came of age. This was denied by the rejoinder, and was the only question in issue in the cause. Judgment by default had passed against the other defendant.

Three witnesses were called. One of them proved that he had two interviews with the defendant, Hullodhur, after he came of age, and that he said with reference to the note in question, "the money is justly due, and we shall pay it when we get certain funds outstanding." This witness and also a second witness proved an acknowledgment after action brought that the money was due.

Mr. Morton for the defence, addressed the Court for a nonsuit. The promises proved before the action brought are only conditional, and there is no proof that the condition has been satisfied: Cole v. Seiby, 3 Esp. nor is there any distinct proof of an express promise that this defendant himself would pay; and it has been held that a mere acknowledgment is not sufficient, Thrupp v. Fielder, 2 Esp. As to the promises after action brought, it is quite clear that they are insufficient; and the cases of Thurnton v. Illingworth, 2 B. and Cr. is expressly in point. There is another objection; because as the proof is of a promise to pay long after the note became due, this cannot support the promise in the plea to pay according to "the tenor and effect of the note." Per Little Dale J. in Massey v. Hunt, 5 Barn. and Adolphus.

Mr. Prinsep contra contended that the present case was wholly different from the ordinary case of ratification by an infant under English law. These were Hindoo parties, and they appeared on the face of the pleadings to form a jointly family, now very slight evidence of subsequent assent would be sufficient to bind an infant member of a family after he came of age in respect of a previously existing liability. The subsequent promise or assent was not a new contract, but a mere confirmation of a previous contract. The cases cited therefore did not apply.

Mr. Morton suggested the case of a partnership. A new partner would not be liable by merely joining the partnership, to the prior liabilities of his copartners.

Per Curiam. We do not think there is sufficient ground shewn of a nonsuit; because we are inclined to consider the case of an infant member of a joint Hindoo family in a different light from the ordinary case of an infant according to English law. The defendant may move for a nonsuit hereafter on the points of law raised.

Mr. Morton then addressed the Court on the evidence. The witnesses have given the most vague evidence that can be conceived. No time whatever is specified, so that it is quite impossible to produce evidence, direct or indirect, to contradict them. In England a statute 9 Geo. IV. commonly known as Lord Tenterden's Act, had been passed making it necessary to prove a ratification in writing. That statute did not extend to this country certainly, and it was a thousand pities that it did not.

SIR J. P. GRANT. We cannot legislate Mr. Morton;

Mr. Morton. Certainly not, my Lord; but this Court may in their discretion act according to the spirit of that statute, and consider the evidence insufficient unless it is most clear, distinct, and express, and confirmed by more than one witness. The facilities for perjury and the tendency to its commission are certainly not less in this country. Nothing can be more easily advanced than such a statement, and it is impossible to disprove it.

SIR J. P. GRANT.—We give a verdict for the plaintiff with liberty to move for a nonsuit on the points of law. I take the opportunity of stating, that I think it would be most beneficial if the provisions of Lord Tenterden's Act were extended here.

SIR H. STON. I believe that act has been considered even in England one of the most beneficial that have been ever passed.

JOSEPH BARRETT V. JOHN DARWOOD AND FRANCIS JOHN BENTLEY.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings.

The Advocate-General stated the case. This was an action of assumpsit upon a special contract for building a certain vessel called the brig Saife at Moulinein. The agreement was set forth specially in the point; and it appeared that by that agreement, the defendants contracted to complete the vessel according to a certain schedule of specification within three and a half months after a certain event, and in the event of failure to pay the sum of Rupees 2,000 as penalty for the delay. This action was brought for the penalty, the vessel not being completed in the time. The defendants had pleaded non assumpsit; and secondly, an alleged subsequent agreement by way of "accord and satisfaction." The learned Counsel apprehended that he had little more to do in the first instance than to prove the execution of the agreement, and perhaps the damage occasioned by the delay, although this indeed was fixed by the parties themselves at a stipulated sum. He could not anticipate the case which the other side might set up, and he apprehended that their own affirmative issue was upon themselves.

The case was then partly gone into; and at 5 o'clock the Court adjourned.

Mr. Turton and Mr. Sandes for the defence—Adjourned—Hurk. Nov. 22.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22.

SITTINGS AFTER FOURTH TERM OF 1839.

(Before Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Selon.)

J. BARRETT V. J. DARWOOD AND F. J. BENTLEY.

The trial of this case continued this morning.

For the plaintiff the execution of the agreement was proved, and it was shewn that the loss resulting to the plaintiff from the non-performance of the agreement to build the ship within the limited time, considerably exceeded the sum of Rs 2,000, which was the penalty stipulated by the parties. This evidence was objected to on the ground that it was evidence of special damage, and that no special damage was laid in the plaint; but this objection was overruled.

Mr. Turton (with whom was Mr. Sandes) addressed the Court for the defence.

The case for the defendants mainly was that there were interpolations in the original agreement; and a copy (or alleged duplicate) not consistent with the original instrument in its present state, as put in on behalf of the defence.

There was no evidence whatever in support of the plea of accord and satisfaction.

The Advocate-General (with whom was Mr. Morton) addressed the Court in reply. The damage had been specifically proved; and it was moreover extremely doubtful whether according to the case of Kemble v. Farren, 6 Bingham Rep., the plaintiff would not be entitled to the stipulated sum of 2,000 rupees, as a specific sum fixed by the parties without proof of actual damage at all.

The Court gave a verdict for the plaintiff, for the amount of the stipulated penalty.

Verdict for the plaintiff. Damages Co.'s Rs. 2,000.

RAM SAHA V. HURRY DORE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings.

Mr. Turton stated the case. This was an action for two assaults upon the plaintiff by the defendants on the 16th of June and the 2d of July last.

Several witnesses were called for the plaintiff, who swore to the fact of the assault was described as having been committed about noon or one o'clock.

The Advocate-General (with whom was Mr. Leith) addressed the Court for the defence.

The case for the defence consisted chiefly in proving an alibi with respect to the first assault, but there was no disproof whatever attempted as to the second. It further appeared that the first assault had been investigated at the Police, and the charge dismissed, and that it had also been the subject of an indictment which had not been found a "true bill" by the Grand Jury. Much stress was laid on the circumstance that the witnesses produced were not the same as those whose names were on the back of the indictment.

Mr. Turton in reply contended that no alibi was proved. Native witnesses specially might easily make a mistake as to time. With respect to the witnesses on the back of the indictment not being called, the matter was easily explained. There were a host of witnesses whose names had been furnished to the Prothonotary on a slip of paper and these included all but two of the names in the back of the indictment; and it was the merest accident that none of the latter were called. The plaintiff was clearly entitled to a verdict against two of the defendants on the second counts at all events.

The Court upon the whole were of opinion, that there must be a verdict for the defendants.—Hurk. Nov. 23.

MONDAY, NOV. 25, 1839.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF JAMES CULLEN AND OTHERS v. ELINOR CLARK AND OTHERS.

Mr. Leith opened the pleadings.

Mr. Turton said, that this was an ejectment for a house in Park Street, mortgaged to the lessors of the plaintiff, (the Directors of the Bengal Provident Society) by three of the defendants, executors of Mr. William Clark, deceased, to secure the loan of Rs. 40,000. Mr. W. Clark died in 1826, and his Will gave his executors a power to sell or mortgage his real property. The premises in question had been mortgaged by the Testator himself, in his lifetime, to Messrs. Colvin and Co., to secure certain monies upon payment of which the premises had been since reconveyed to his executors after his death. Defence had been taken in the name of the three executors, and four other parties, sons of the Testator, who were devisees under the Will.

Several deeds of lease and release were put in and proved. The mortgage by the Testator to Messrs. Colvin and Co., bore date in December 1825; and the reconveyance to the executors was dated 3rd September 1827. The mortgage by the executors to the lessor of the plaintiff of the premises, for which the action was brought, appeared to be the 4th of September 1827. The original probate of Mr. William Clark's will, was produced by the defendants; and it was admitted by their counsel, that the testator was in possession of the premises at the time of his death, and that the defendants in the ejectment were the present tenants in possession.

This closed the plaintiff's case.

Mr. Morton addressed the Court for the defence. The lessor of the plaintiff must recover upon the strength of his own title and not upon the weakness of the defendant's title; and according to this rule, the plaintiff had failed to make out their case. In the first place, it appeared by the will that one Mr. James Thompson was a co-executor, and yet he had not joined in the conveyance, and there was no explanation of the omission. It did not appear that he had renounced probate, or that he was dead.

The Court enquired how the plaintiffs were to get over this difficulty.

Mr. Turton.—It appears from the probate that he never proved the Will. Besides it is for the other side to shew, that he was living and ought to have joined in the conveyance. The omission is aided by the statute of 21 Hen. VIII. c. 3.

Mr. Morton.—The statute of Hen. VIII. does not aid it, according to the express authority of Dennis v. Judge, 11 East 288. The plaintiff must make out his own case, and it is not for the defendant to supply the necessary explanations. The plaintiff ought to have shewn either that he was dead, or had refused to join in the conveyance, or had renounced probate. The mere non joinder in proving the will is not a renunciation. For all that appears the contrary, these deeds of mortgage may be a fraud committed behind the back of this co-executor. But again, whether the plaintiffs rest their title upon Fergusson's Act (9 Geo. IV. c. 38) which gives executors a power to sell for the payment of debts; or rely upon the power reserved by the Will, there are conditions in both cases which ought to have been complied with, and which do not appear to have been complied with in the present instance. Executors have only a power to sell for payment of the debts of the testator, under Fergusson's Act, and the Act only extends to British subjects. It does not appear that the money was applied in this instance to the payment of debts, nor indeed does it appear distinctly that there existed any debts at all. It does not appear further that Mr. Clark was even a British subject! And it might further be urged that the statute does not authorize a mortgage at all but only a sale. But probably the plaintiffs will rely upon the power reserved by the will, if so, the conditions must be shewn to have been strictly observed. The power to sell and mortgage is here guarded by the proviso, that it shall be "advantageous to the family." Then it ought to have been shewn that the mortgage was advantageous to them; Hawkins v. Kemp, 3 East 410. Doe v. Martin, 47 R. 39. Lastly it will be found upon inspection of the title deeds, produced that all prior to the year 1827 relate to totally different premises, viz to a house and its appurtenances, not in Park Street, but in Wellesley Street? The plaintiffs might as well have produced the title deeds of premises in London! They have therefore proved nothing more than a title twelve years old; and they have not shewn any title whatever in their alienors, the executors.

Per Curiam.—Can you use the argument of "no title" on behalf of these executors, in order to defeat their own mortgage?

Mr. Morton.—When I use the argument, I use it on behalf of the other defendants, who are devisees under the will, and not bound in any way by the wrongful acts of the executors. Even if the argument of estoppel applies to the executor defendants, it cannot possibly extend to the devisee defendants.

Mr. Turton. Contra.—There is nothing in any of the objections which have been urged. It is not necessary to prove that the purchase money was applied to the payment of debts, or that any debts existed; and if it were necessary this appears sufficiently from the recitals in the mortgage deeds, which shew that there was a debt of Rs. 30,000 to Colvin and Co. with respect to the power reserved by the Will, it is clearly left to the discretion of the executors themselves to determine what shall be "advantageous to the family." I admit the general rule in ejectment to be that the lessor of the plaintiff shall recover upon the strength of his own title; but the case of an ejectment brought by mortgage against mortgagee is an exception to the rule. The mortgagee is stopped from disputing the title of the mortgagor, just as much as a tenant is stopped from denying the title of the landlord under whom he holds a lease or to whom he pays rent. It would have been sufficient for us to have shewn that the parties were in possession of the premises, and that they mortgaged the property to us, and claimed the right and title to do so under the will. It was not necessary to carry the title further back. It may be observed that we had no expectation of the case being defended; and all these objections have taken us by surprise. It is hoped if the Court should think them entitled to weight, that still the verdict shall be entered, in the meanwhile for the plaintiff reserving liberty to move.

Mr. Morton in reply. The argument of my learned friend, only touches the case of the mortgager defendants. Assuming that the estoppel extends to them, upon what ground can it be urged that it is applicable to the other defendants, and more than to the mere strangers? They are not bound by recitals in deeds to which they were no parties! With respect to them, it is clear that there is no case whatever! for a title carried back only 12 years, is not sufficient to support an ejectment.

SIR J. P. GRANT. The questions of law raised, appear to be of considerable difficulty. There will be a verdict in the meanwhile, for the plaintiffs, with liberty to the defendants to move for a nonsuit, or for a verdict for themselves, either for the whole or a part, as they may be advised.

Verdict for plaintiff with liberty to move.—Hurkaru, November 26.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER. 26,

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Selon.)

SIR EDWARD RYAN, C. J., resumed his seat in Court this morning. His Lordship appeared to be in excellent health.

ADMIRALTY SIDE.

In re the Pyen Boun,

SIR J. P. GRANT.—The Court award one-tenth of the value of the ship and cargo preserved, as the amount of salvage. The value stated in the affidavits of the salvors, (not denied by the other side) is Rs. 40,000; the amount of salvage therefore will be Rs. 4,000. Of this sum, the commander will be entitled to one moiety or half-part, and the remaining moiety is to be apportioned among the officers and crew in the ratio of their respective wages.

Decree accordingly.

EQUITY SIDE

SHREENUTTY COMOLMENTY DOSSEE V. SHREENUTTY SEEDOO BOONDERTY DOSSEE AND OTHERS.

It this case a decree was taken by consent.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith for the complainants.

Mr. Turton and Mr. Clarke for the defendants, Seebsoondery.

Mr. Natt for the defendants, Panchanund Bysack.

Mr. Morton for the defendants, Gourmoney Dossee.

The bill taken pro confesso against the remaining defendant, Radicamobun Seat.

The Court allowed the minutes of the decree which had been put in.

Decree accordingly.

J. W. ALEXANDER, ASSIGNEE, &c., v. THOMAS MORAN.

This cause came on ex parte, the bill having been taken pro confesso for want of answer.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the complainant.

The Court made a decree in terms of the prayer, and minutes of the decree put in.

Decree accordingly.

SEEDOO-BOONDERTY DOSSEE V. SEMOLAN DASPER.

This case came on for further directions. The cause had merely stood over for the consent and sanction of Government to the appointment of the Government Agent (Mr. Marnaghten) as trustee to receive the interest of certain Company's paper to be applied to the performance of certain Poojas.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Natt appeared for the complainant.

No counsel appeared for the defendant.

Final decree accordingly.

RAJAH GOPEEMOHUN DEB V. THE EAST INDIA COMPANY, AND OTHERS.

SIR EDWARD RYAN enquired whether anything had been arranged by the counsel in this cause.

Mr. Turton (who now leads for the complainants) said that he had communicated with his colleagues, and that he should have an application to make to the Court before the end of the present sittings.—Hurkaru November 27.

THURSDAY, NOV. 28, 1839.

RAJAH GOPEEMOHUN DEB V. THE EAST INDIA COMPANY AND THE LOTTERY COMMITTEE.

SIR E. RYAN said, that the Court upon consideration were disposed to anticipate an application which, from an intimation of the learned Counsel in the cause, they presumed, was intended to be made; and they would, with the consent of the Counsel on both sides, hear a re-argument of the case by one Counsel for each. The Court wished that this should be done by consent; but, if the parties did not consent, the Court would themselves direct the re-argument. His Lordship considered it right to say, that the re-argument was not considered necessary upon any supposition, that material points had been left untouched at the former hearing; because the case had certainly been argued on both sides very fully and with great ability.

Mr. Turtan, for the complainant, thanked the Court for the suggestion. He had been prepared to apply to the Court, with the consent of his colleagues, in the cause (though he scarcely knew how to shape the application) to permit a re-argument. He did not suppose, that he could add anything of great importance to what had been already advanced; but he had been the only counsel in the cause from the commencement, and in justice to his client, he had been anxious to be allowed to state his views in the Court, and take all the responsibility of the result.

The Advocate General had no objection to offer to the proposed re argument.

The second day of next term was fixed. There are now four Counsel for the complainant. (Messrs Turtan, Clarke, Leith and Morton) and three for the defendants (the Advocate General, Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Cochrane.)

The case will be argued by Mr. Turtan for the complainants, and the Advocate General, contra.

LUCKHURAIN MOOKERJEE v. JENKINS AND LOW.

This was a re-nisi to set aside an award, upon affidavits alleging irregularity in the proceedings of the arbitrators and umpire. The original arbitrators were Messrs. Henry Ford and John Lowe, and the umpire was Mr. Alexander Holmes. The submission empowered any two out of the three to make the award; and the award was made on the 30th of September last, by Mr. Lowe and Mr. Holmes, who concurred in awarding the payment of a sum of money of Jenkins and Low to Luckhurarain Mookerjee, - the other arbitrator, Mr. Ford, being of opinion, that nothing was due.

The affidavits on both sides were very voluminous.

Mr. Prinsep (with whom was Mr. Morton) shewed cause. The first alleged irregularity is in the mode of appointment of the umpire. The arbitrators were empowered, in the event of disagreement, to "appoint by writing under their hands any indifferent person as umpire;" and, accordingly, on the 21st of September, Mr. Lowe wrote a note signed with his own name, proposing Mr. Holmes, and inquiring whether Mr. Ford would consent; to which Ford wrote in reply across the note, "that he had no objection whatever," and signed such reply with his own name. This is surely a "writing under the hands" of the arbitrators; and as the appointment was afterwards ratified and recognised, no more formal appointment could possibly have been required. (The learned Counsel was then proceeding to another objection.)

Sir E. RYAN. It is better to take each objection separately; because there seem, to be a great number of questions; and of course if any one should prevail, it will be unnecessary to discuss the rest. We will now hear Mr. Morton, and then, if necessary, the Counsel on the other side.

Mr. Morton was then heard upon the same side.

Sir E. RYAN then said, that the Court would not give any opinion yet upon this point, or call upon the other side; but the second objection stated in the rule nisi appeared a serious one, and upon it they wished to hear the Counsel in support of the award.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Morton.—The second objection is that the award was made by one of the arbitrators, and, the umpire, without further notification to the dissenting arbitrator. It is true, that Mr. Ford states, that he expected to be again consulted before the final award was made; but our affidavits state, that there was an understanding expressly to the contrary; and this is borne out by the acts of Mr. Ford himself, for he expressly authorized the other arbitrator to forward all the papers and correspondence to the umpire (Mr. Holmes,) to enable him to form his opinion upon the case. Nor was it on principle necessary to notify the making of the award to the dissenting arbitrator, seeing, that the submission expressly empowered two out of the three to make a final award, and if two concurred, the concurrence of the third was superfluous. If one of the arbitrators had held private meetings with the umpire to the exclusion of the third, it would have been a different matter; Dalling v. Matchet, Willes Rep; but here the umpire formed his own unbiased judgment. Both parties were here placed on the same footing. It would have been different if one had enjoyed an advantage which was denied to the other.

Per Curiam — It does not make the case much better if neither of the arbitrators had an opportunity of stating his view of the matter to the umpire, and arguing in support of it.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Morton.—With submission, it makes all the difference in the world. The case then resolves itself into the question, whether there was sufficient evidence before the umpire to enable him to form his opinion. Now, it appears, that the only remaining point in dispute between the arbitrators, related to the liability or non liability of Jenkins and Low, to pay a certain two per cent, commission upon an admitted sum, and it further appears from the affidavits of the arbitrators, that they sent to Mr. Holmes all the papers and correspondence which they considered necessary to enable him to pronounce a judgment upon the question at issue. All questions as to the sufficiency or admissibility of evidence, are within the discretion of the arbitrators, and their opinion must be taken "for better or worse." Symes v. Goodfellow, 3 Bingham N. S.

Mr. Turtan and Mr. Clarke contra were not called upon.

Sir E. RYAN, C. J., after some deliberation, said, The Court are of opinion, that the second ground of objection must prevail;—it is not a mere formal objection. We think it clearly appears that Mr. Ford expected to have a further opportunity of stating his objections and discussing the question with the umpire, and we think upon principle, that such opportunity ought to have been allowed. This is the principle laid down in the case of Dalling v. Matchet. And it is nothing to say, of course, if that two out of the three already formed the required majority; because it is possible, that the third might have brought one of them round to concur with him in opinion. The rule therefore must be made absolute for setting aside the award.

Mr. Turtan apprehended, that the rule would be made absolute with costs.

Mr. Prinsep apprehended not. An innocent party was not to be punished for the irregularity of the arbitrators.

Sir E. RYAN. We are not prepared to give you costs Mr. Turtan. We will hear you on the point.

Mr. Turtan and Mr. Clarke. The other side ought not to have shewn cause. If they voluntarily attempt to uphold a bad award, they must pay the usual penalty of failure.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Morton said, that misconduct was charged against their client, and he had a right to come in and deny it; and the rule had been made absolute on the mere ground of "irregularity" in proceedings, not attributable to any fault whatever of his own.

Sir E. RYAN said, that as the rule was made absolute solely on the ground of the blunders committed by the arbitrators, the consequences could not be vested upon an innocent party. There were cases in which arbitrators themselves, acting improperly, had been made to pay the costs; but the question now was merely between the parties, and the Court were of opinion, that each party must pay his own costs.

Rule absolute, but without costs.—HURK. Nov. 29.

INSOLVENT COURT.

NOVEMBER 2, 1839.

(Before Sir H. W. Seton.)

W. H. GILBERT, G. W. BAXTER, and H. PULLIPS, insolvents, discharged without opposition.

IN THE MATTER OF NINA DE LIGNY, AN INSOLVENT,
An error of a name in the schedule, rendered it necessary to postpone the final settlement of this case till next Court day. Madame de Ligny is not in custody.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS, AN INSOLVENT.

Mr. Clarke, for the opposition, informed the Court, that the insolvent had filed the fourth edition of his schedule, which he, (Mr. Clarke,) was sorry to say, was less satisfactory than any of the preceding ones. It contained statements of various articles of property of which no previous mention had been made, and of which it now gave a very insufficient account. Among this property were several pianos which had been purchased from Capt. Owen. Of these, of which even the number was not stated, the only account which the new schedule gave, was that two had been sent to Madras to an Agent there, and that the rest had been sold by the insolvent himself: but when, to whom, and for what, did not appear. Mention was also made of the plate which had been in the insolvents' possession. This, it was said, had been sold by Mrs. Jacobs when her husband was away from town. The sum said to have been obtained for it, was about Rs 200, which had been used in domestic expenses. But in this case also, the person to whom the plate was sold was not mentioned, and Mrs. Jacobs professes herself entirely ignorant of his name and residence. These incomplete disclosures led the Assignee to the belief that there was still some fraud carrying on, and some property yet remaining concealed.

Mr. Leith, for the insolvent, said, that the deficiencies in the schedule on which Mr. Clarke animadverted, were very easily accounted for. The insolvent's books were lodged in the Assignee's office, and he had not free access to them. The pianos were sold in 1837, and it was not very likely that after the lapse of so long a time, the insolvent could tell, from memory, the purchaser of each, and the price it had brought. The insolvent had done all that it was possible to do under such circumstances—he had mentioned the sales of the pianos in the schedule, and there were the books lodged in the Assignee's office which might be referred to for particulars. The change of attorneys when Mr. Strettell gave up the case, and Mr. Shaw took it in hand, might also, Mr. Leith thought, account in some degree for the imperfections of the present schedule.

With regard to the plate, it was said, as was stated, when the insolvent was not in Calcutta, and without his knowledge. Mrs. Jacobs being in want of money for domestic expenditure, disposed of the plate to a person whom she did not know. It had yet to be shewn that this sale was improper; and even when it was so shewn, it would scarcely be right to make the insolvent suffer, for what had been done without his knowledge.

Mr. Clarke in reply, observed, that as to the change of the attorney spoken of, it was impossible for Mr. Strettell to conduct the insolvents' affairs for a single hour, after the petition which had been presented to the Court by the insolvent against him. He admitted, however, that if the requisite particulars were exhibited in the insolvent's books he could not press the point against him; but the insolvent must of course be remanded to amend the schedule by the assistance of those books.

Sir H. W. Seton said, that of course, the insolvent must be allowed free personal access to his books. That if he could not go to the Assignee's office for the purpose of inspecting them, they must be carried to him in the jail.

Mr. Leith suggested, that as the Insolvent was to be remanded to amend his schedule, it would be as well for Mr. Clarke to mention any other points which were unsatisfactory that they might be looked to in the interim.

Mr. Meiklejohn then addressed the Court with regard to the interest on the separate estate of H. Fowles. This was a trust fund which had been left in the hands of the insolvent for the benefit of the heirs of Mr. Fowles. The original fund was about Rs 20,000 and had been placed by the insolvent in an agency house at compound interest. From time to time the insolvent had drawn upon this fund in the way of loan until almost, if not quite, the whole had passed into his hands. For this he acknowledged compound interest was due, and these facts were stated in the present schedule. But that document merely stated the amount drawn, and that interest was payable thereon, but neither the rate nor time from which interest was payable, nor the amount now due was stated. Mr. Meiklejohn thought it would be necessary to supply these particulars, before the account could be considered full or satisfactory.

Mr. Leith said, it would not be easy to give these particulars, as neither the rate of interest, nor the time for which it was payable, had been settled. He believed it would be for the Court to decide what interest should be paid, and from what period it was to commence.

It was finally agreed, that the interest should be calculated from the time each sum was drawn, and at a rate to be settled by the Court. The insolvent was then remanded to amend his schedule.

IN THE MATTER OF BUDJOMOHUN COONDHO, AN INSOLVENT.

Mr. Lurton, for the opposition, examined the insolvent at some length, touching certain sums amounting to above Rs 17,000 due to his father. He likewise questioned him as to his connection with certain other persons who, with himself, formed a firm of banians, it being suspected that between these persons, the insolvent, and his father, there was some fraudulent collusion. The result was, that the Insolvent was remanded to amend the schedule.

IN THE MATTER OF SHAIK DOONDER, AN INSOLVENT.

Mr. Strettell opposed the discharge of the insolvent, on the ground that he had not inserted in his schedule certain of his landed property. This objection was, however, overruled by Mr. Leith, who showed that the land in question was not the property of the insolvent, but was settled upon his wife. The Insolvent was accordingly declared entitled to the benefit of the Act, and discharged forthwith.

MISCELLANEA.

CALCUTTA.

SIR H. FANE AND SIR JASPER NICOLLS.—Sir H. Fane has very coolly put Sir Jasper Nicolls on the shelf until the first of January next, by publishing his determination to hold his situation, with the sanction of the Governor-General, until the 31st of December.

SIR JASPER NICOLLS.—A Salute from the Fort on Saturday, the 7th instant announced the swearing in of Sir Jasper Nicolls as a member of Council, and as Commander-in-Chief—the latter we understand in consequence of positive orders to that effect from the Horse Guards. Thus the anomalous position in which Sir Jasper Nicolls has hitherto found himself placed, has been put an end to, and his excellency finds himself invested with full authority to act, in the high and responsible character, in which he had before a merely nominal title.

MR. THOMAS BRACKEN.—Mr. Thomas Bracken has been appointed High Sheriff of Calcutta for the ensuing year. Mr. Francis Barthe is to be Deputy Sheriff.

MR. TUNTON.—Mr. T. E. M. Tunton has been appointed by the Governor-General's Council to succeed to the appointment of Advocate-General upon the contemplated retirement of Mr. Pearson.

SIR R. Maitland.—Minute guns, from the ramparts of Fort William announced, on the evening of the 12th instant, the demise of Rear Admiral Sir Frederick Maitland, K. C. B., Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Naval Forces in India.

VACANT DIRECTORSHIPS IN THE BANK OF BENGOAL.—There were three candidates for the two vacant directorships in the Bank of Bengal, and they stood as follows in the list for election:

Mr. William Philoep,	225 votes
Mr. Jas. Sydney Stamford,	214 "
Mr. Colin Campbell	191 "

The two first named were elected in the room of Messrs Ferguson and Leach gone out by rotation.

TROOPS FOR CHINA.—It has been authentically stated, that Capt. Elliot has applied to the Singapore authorities for troops, and that a reference has been made by them on the subject to the Supreme Government here.

NEW BAKERY.—A new bakery has been established at the Strand Mills, upon an improved method, where from forty to fifty maunds of ship biscuits are daily baked.

SEVERE GALE.—It is said, that a severe gale occurred at Vizagapatam, on the 17th or 18th instant, which did much damage to the town, and drove ashore all the native craft in the roads.

BOUNTING.—This station is being fast improved, through the indefatigable exertions of Doctor Campbell and others.

EXCHANGE ON SHIPMENTS OF PRODUCE.—Government have reduced the exchange at which they advance on shipments of produce from 2s. 2d. to 2s. 1d. per Company's rupee.

THE WEATHER.—We have had smart showers of rain three days in the past week, but the weather is now fine again, and cold.

DUST-LAYING TAX.—A rumour has again been brought, that in order to get rid of the McFarlane and other nuisances, it is proposed to levy a tax on wheeled carriages.

FEVER.—Fever is very prevalent now at Balloo, a populous village about six miles from Calcutta, near Balookhau. It is fatal in its effects, and those attacked with it do not survive more than three days.

EXTRAORDINARY INSTANCE OF POLYGYNY.—A Hindoo named Gobind Chunder Gossain, an inhabitant of Balloo died lately, leaving no less than one hundred widows.

THE CALCUTTA COURIER.—It is said, that the Managers of the Orphan Society, have determined on farming out the Calcutta Courier, to Mr. Huttman, the Superintendent of the Orphan Press, on his entering into an agreement to secure them the sum of two thousand five hundred rupees per annum.

DISORDERLY CHARACTERS.—There is a blackguardly gang, composed of about twelve or fourteen young men, East Indians and Europeans, mostly all sectioners, who go about insulting and quarrelling with those who chance to fall in their way. Their head-quarters is Wellington Square.

MEDICAL COLLEGE AND HOSPITAL.—The Bombay Government have through their official organ, appointed a Committee, of which the Honorable Sir J. W. Awdry, Kt. is President, for the purpose of drawing up a scheme for the establishment of a Medical college and Hospital at that Presidency.

NEWSPAPER.—A new hebdomadal has just made its debut, entitled the "Calcutta Legal Observer," which, if well conducted, is certainly calculated to be of utility to the Members of the legal profession. The chief object of the work appears to be, to give full reports of the more important decisions of the Supreme Court; but the introductory address in the first number intimates, that its pages are intended to contain criticisms upon legal matters in general.

THE EASTERN STAR.—Mr. James Hume, a Barrister, who is known to the public as the writer of some clever articles signed Old Nicholas, and the Overland journey from England to India, contemplates the establishment of a weekly paper, to be styled the Eastern Star, and which will be chiefly composed of original articles.

EXTRAORDINARY LEGACIES.—Mr. Henry Douglas, a Civil Servant of 1779, on the Annuity list, has died at Patna, leaving 25 lacs of rupees, of which 9 is in Counties and 6 in Cockerell and Co.'s houses in England, and the rest in this Country. His will directs his property shall be divided into 40 shares, of which 8 he gives to Mr. M. Flanning; 2 to Mr. Lambert, of the Civil Service; and 2 to the Surgeon at Patna.

A MUSICAL PRODIGY.—A favourite set of quadrilles, composed by a Miss Augusta Gow Foggo, in her ninth year, and a waltz in her seventh year, have been sent out to a relative of hers in this country. Although the merits of the composition, in comparison with those of composers of maturer years, are very little, yet when the age of the composer is taken into consideration, it must appear surprising and highly pleasing to those who anticipate greater perfection with her increasing years. The gentleman to whom the music is sent out, intends giving publicity to it shortly.

THE PASSAGE OF OUR TROOPS THROUGH THE PUNJAB.—Letters from Loodianah state positively, that the promised passage through the Punjab, for our troops, on their return, had been rescinded, consequent, it is supposed, upon the late events at Lahore, which have thrown the Sovereign power into the hands of the minister Dhan Singh, who rules absolutely under the shadow of his protégé, Now Nehal Singh—the idol of the army—which is, in fact, the Sikh Nation. The passage of the elephants and camels, sent to aid the Bengal Army on its return, had actually been opposed at Hurrkee, on their attempting to cross the Sutledge.

THE MARE EQUITABLE.—The attempt to explode the wreck of the Equitable, on Thursday last, failed. No explosion took place, and it has since the attempt been discovered, that the powder had been all spoiled. (2,500 lbs.) the water having penetrated to the cylinder that contained it, owing to the breaking off of the tube which was connected with it. The experiment was tried with common fuses; but on the 14th it was again tried, and the voltaic battery, superintended by Professor O'Shaughnessy, was employed to ignite the powder: which was quite successful, the vessel having been blown to pieces. The wreck of the Equitable is not on Fulta Sand, as has been stated, but directly in the fair way of the channel in Fulta Reach, and, therefore it becomes an object of great importance to blow up this obstruction to the free course of the waters.

DEPUTY MAGISTRATES, &c.—On dit but not much to be relied on, that on the appointment of Mr. Dampier to the office of the Superintendent of the Police for the Lower Provinces, it is believed that Government will sanction the appointment of a few Deputy Superintendents of Police and Deputy Magistrates; the former on a salary of 400 rupees, and the latter 250 rupees per mensem. The districts of Behar and Parna, it is said will be selected for a trial of these situations. The Superintendent of Police will select the appropriate candidates, the Government reserving to itself the right of confirming his nominees. About 200 individuals have, we hear, already applied to the Superintendent of Police, who has ordered the names of many to be registered.

A DEAD CHINAMAN FOUND IN THE WATER TANK OF THE WATER WITCH.—On the 17th of last month, a Chinaman, named Appoo, was missing from on board the Water Witch, and it was concluded, that he had gone overboard. On Saturday, on cleaning out the tanks preparatory to refilling them, the ship being about to sail, the body of the Chinaman was discovered in one of them. It was too much decomposed to admit of being kept for the purpose of undergoing an investigation by the Coroner and, was therefore buried without any inquest being held on it. Constable Stevens went on board, and enquired into the circumstances as far as possible. The Second Mate states, that there was an evident change in the man's demeanour about ten days or a fortnight before his disappearance; he was sulky, and would not say what was the matter with him. He had not any quarrel with any one on board, and must have used some exertions to get into the tank, which had about one foot of water in it.

INDIGO PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION.—A meeting was held a few days ago, at the house of one of the most extensive and influential planters in India, at which several Indigo Planters, and others interested in the indigo cultivation attended, at which it was proposed to establish an association, which will secure to the planters a certain number of representatives located at the presidency, to receive information and aid in all measures tending to promote the interests of the planters in all matters connected with the very important manufacture in which they are engaged. A paper is now in circulation, which already bears the signatures of a number of the most respectable planters and agents, and a fund will be subscribed to meet the expenses that may be incurred in carrying into effect the objects of the Association.

MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE.—A gentleman who has lately come up the river, mentions the following melancholy occurrence. As he was tracking up in a row-boat, when about gun-shot distance from Rangafulla, a tiger was seen to rush out from the jungle hard by, and before the men who were towing the boat, had time to make their escape to the boat, the animal seized one of them and tore him to pieces,—he then placed the corpse of the unfortunate man on the ground and gazed for a short time at the boat. The trackers, had by this time entered the water and were nearly in the boat. The tiger seeing this, seemed inclined at first to make a second spring and seize those in the boat, but afterwards, finding that that was out of his power, it took up the corpse of the man it had killed, and ran off with it into the jungle. There being no fire-arms in the boat, no advantage could be taken of the animal's proximity to destroy it.

DINNER AND BALL AT DUM DUM.—On Wednesday evening last, the new Commander-in-Chief, Sir Jasper Nicolls, was entertained by the officers of the Artillery at Dum-Dum. Sir Jasper, who was accompanied by his lady and daughters, was received on his arrival at the station with a salute of seventeen guns and a guard of honour. About 130 sat down to the dinner, which was most excellent. Among the company were his honour the Deputy-Governor, the Chief Justice, and the other Judges of the Supreme Court, Sir E. Williams General Raper, Col. McLeod, the member of the Medical Board the Archdeacon and the heads of most of the departments at the presidency. After the dinner there was a ball, which was most numerously attended, the room being crowded almost to excess. Dancing was kept up with great animation and perseverance until a late hour, and all went off in the pleasantest manner imaginable.

ESTABLISHMENT OF ENGLISH AND BENGAL SCHOOLS.—An English school and a Bengallee pausalallah, were established at Barasut, on the 4th ultimo, which are entirely supported by Baboo Moy Mchudall Mitre, and Nobin Chand Mitre. The place is very populous, and already there are sixty students in the schools, and the number is daily increasing. Baboo Chander Byasack, one of Mr. David Hare's scholars, has the charge of the English department, and Mandub Chunder of the Bengallee. As the means of the supporters are inadequate to meet the increasing wants of the school, they, in conjunction with several other inhabitants of the place, intend waiting on the magistrate, for the purpose of seeking his patronage and assistance.

DACOTTY.—About twelve o'clock on the night of the 7th of November, the dwelling house of Penny Seemal, at Chomnapara, Burnagore, was stormed by a gang of dacoits, seventy or eighty in number. They had every one of them the poita or holy-thread on, so as to make themselves pass for Brahmans, and were dressed alike, each having a muslin mizai and a skull cap on. The house was entered by bursting open the street door. The proprietor of the house was threatened with death, if he did not discover where his money lay; and the poor fellow, choosing the least of two evils, pointed out the chest which contained his valuables, the whole of which the marauders took and effected their escape in the presence of the neighbours and chokeddars, who dared not offer any resistance. The police, it is said, have been trying their utmost to trace the offenders, and the property carried off; but no success has hitherto attended their exertions.

Several reports of dacoities perpetrated in the Mofussil, have also been published, in all but one case of which the villains have succeeded in deramping with their plunder unrecognized. In one instance, on the wretches torturing a poor old woman, by the application of the flames of torches, in order to extort from her a disclosure of the place in which she had secreted her treasure, the woman shrieked so violently, that the neighbours were attracted to the spot, and rescued her from the dacoits, some of whom were recognized, and for whose apprehension warrants have been issued.

PROHIBITION OF THE IMPORTATION AND SALE OF BUTCHER'S MEAT.—The following is a translation of an authentic document from Chandernagore, announcing the prohibition, by the Governor, of the importation and sale of butcher's meat.

FAMINE AT CHANDERNAGORE.

By a decree of my Lord, the Governor General of the French establishments in Bengal, resident at the Hall of Chandernagore, dated 1st November, 1839, and solemnly published by beat of tom-tom, in the absence of an Official Gazette, all the butchers have been suppressed, and forbidden for the future to kill an ox, a sheep, a kid, or goat, under pain of imprisonment and fine.

By another decree of the said Governor-General, under date the 30th of October, and registered in the Court of the said Hall of Chandernagore, the carriage of meat has likewise been forbidden, and all 'outside' butchers are inhibited setting foot within the said territory under pain of fine and imprisonment.

As a consequence of these paternal decrees, issued with the view of being agreeable to the inhabitants, the latter are all condemned to die of hunger, or to eat only of the rice drawn from the British territory,—the French possessions yielding nothing but turkies and—geese.

Several of the inhabitants, tenaciously clinging to life entered into an arrangement with a Chinsurah butcher, and bound him to deliver a certain quantity of meat daily at their houses. The contract was fulfilled uninterruptedly for a few days, but Monsieur the Governor having received intimation of the crime committing, and keeping constantly in view the good of the inhabitants, caused the bearer of the meat to be arrested as he was proceeding to the house of M. David an Advocate. The meat was confiscated for the benefit of the French Government, and the delinquent was sent to the treadmill and the stocks, and sentenced to a fine of four rupies.

THE ARIEL.—The following is an extract of a letter from on board of the Ariel: I have much pleasure in announcing the arrival here of the Ariel on the 2d October, having left Suez on the 15th September, and stopped at Ioor, to fill up our water, being the best place in the Red Sea, for that necessary article. We remained there for two days and left on the 18th, called at Jiddah on the 22d, where we remained one day, and at Mocha to land our pilot, making the passing down only 13 days under sail, or in all up and down the Red Sea, 35 days altogether, a very quick and expeditious voyage they all say here. I went over to Cairo and remained there till I heard of Mr. Tughr's departure from Alexandria. Our despatches and Mail arrived at Alexandria on the morning of the 5th September, and as an English Steamer had just arrived from Beyroot, with the Bombay Mail via Ephraïm 31 August, the steamer was despatched that evening at 5 p.m., and our despatches would arrive in England on the 19th or 20th September. Mr. Tughr did not get down to Alexandria in time for the English Steamer; he only arrived there on the 6th, and left again on the morning of the 7th, in the French one, and he would arrive in London by the 10th October, allowing for his 24 days quarantine at Malta. Therefore, there would be plenty of time, say 4 or 5 days, for the Government to send an answer to our despatch by the Mail, which closes on the 16th October, and will be at Suez by the 8th November, when the Zenobia steamer, which left this on the 18th, will bring it down here by the 12th, and I will be able to leave next day, and hope to get to China by the 20th January at the latest; but if our despatch does not come by that Mail, we will have to remain for the November one, which will not be here till the first of December, and then we cannot get to China till the middle of February. At any rate, I will make the greatest despatch when I do get it, to get to my destination, that the Ariel may continue No. 1 among the class of clippers. I was greatly rejoiced to hear of the quick passage of the Witch to Aden, but I regret extremely to tell you, that the schooner Constance which took the Mail from the Witch to Suez, was 25 days in getting up to Jiddah from Aden, and then she had the worst half of the passage to go. I am doubtful if the Berenice, which left here on the 30th September, will not arrive at Suez as soon as the Constance. We are now busy overhauling the rigging, and refitting the Ariel, as we have had no time to do any thing that way since the vessel was built. I hope by the end of the month to have the Ariel in high order and fit for any service. There is no news here at present except a report that the Arabs intend to attack the place with 2,000 men some of these nights, which has kept the troops and men of war on the qui vive for these several nights back; but I do not think the Arabs will venture, as they are too well aware that we are fully prepared for them. Jiddah is a miserable place just now, the Pacha and his delegates squeezing the Arab merchants of their all, the few troops there being 2 years in arrears of pay, and when paid get it in produce. Rice was in demand when we left, and Sp. Dec. 3, might be got for a large quantity. The same I may say of Mocha, where no coffee is to be had, as Mahomet Ali gets hold of it all and sends it to Suez. Aden is very healthy just now, and huchmate is delightful. We are all well on board. The only vessels lying here just now, are the H. C. brig-of-war Euphrates, and the Mohi schooner. The steamer that the Pacha has been buying at Suez for the navigation of the Red Sea, has been found to be too small for her engines, and she is obliged to be taken to pieces again: so much for Egyptian ship builders. The Berenice steamer arrived here last evening, and sails again to night with the Overland Mail of September 16th. No particular news."

PRIMA TO FLAX GROWERS.—Prima offered by the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce.—In the class of Colonies and Trade.—Growth of Flax in British India.

1. To the person who shall raise the greatest quantity of flax of good quality, in any of the British possessions in the East Indies, in the year 1840, being the produce of not less than five English acres;—the Gold Medal.

Certificates of the number of acres cultivated, the mode of culture, the nature of the soil and weight of the produce, together with 14 lbs. of the flax, to be forwarded to the Society, on or before the last Tuesday in April, 1841.

2. To the person who shall import into Great Britain or Ireland the greatest quantity of flax, of good quality, not less than one ton, grown in any of the British possessions in the East Indies;—the Gold Medal.

Certificates of the importation, together, with 14 lbs. of the flax to be delivered to the Society, on or before the last Tuesday in April, 1841.

3. 4. Both the above Premia are renewed for the year 1841.

THE COMPREHENSIVE AND PRECURSOR STEAM PLANS.—There is no fear of collision between the Comprehensive and Precursor, and henceforth perfect unanimity and co-operation are likely to prevail. On the 27th ult. Mr. Taiton met the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, of which he a member, and explained his views of the Precursor Scheme, and his confident expectations of its success. The Secretary of the New Bengal Steam Fund replied, and a very animated discussion ensued, which ended in an amalgamation of the two interests. No time is to be lost in starting a 1,500-ton steamer, to ply between Calcutta and Suez, touching at Madras and Ceylon.

THE PRECURSOR STEAM MEETING.—The following resolutions were adopted by the meeting of the friends to the Precursor Steam Scheme, held on the 23d instant:—

I.—That it is the opinion of this meeting, that in case the comprehensive plan shall be carried into execution, an immediate offer shall be made to its Directors, by this Association, of our vessel and engines upon equitable terms.

II.—That Col. C. Head be added to the London Committee.

III.—That a permanent Committee be appointed to consist of the following gentlemen :

W. Bruce, J. Colquhoun, J. Cullen, Dwarkanath Tagore, W. Grant, W. Fergusson, Muttu Lall Seal, W. Newcomen, Ramcomul Sen, G. F. Rennie, Ruttonjee Cowasjee, W. Turner and T. E. W. Tinton, and that Mr. Hurry be requested to continue his services as Secretary.

IV.—That the above Committee be empowered to form Rules and Regulations for the general government of the Association which shall be submitted to a general meeting of the proprietors, for the purpose of confirming such rules.

V.—That the following form as to subscription, be printed in a book, and a copy furnished to each member of the Committee, that he may receive and enter the names of subscribers, viz.

FORM.

We the undersigned agree to take the shares opposite our respective names in the Joint Stock Association, to be established on the plan printed and published in the annexed prospectus, for a direct Steam Communication between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon, and Suez. Provided, that if the whole 800 shares be not taken by the time the vessel is ready to start on her first voyage, any shareholder shall have the power to call on the Association, either to take over his share for the amount paid up by him, or to dissolve the Association by sale of the property, binding ourselves to abide by such regulations and bye-laws as shall be made by a majority of votes. The Association not to be considered as formed until four hundred shares have been taken.

Two hundred and forty-five shares were subscribed for in the room—

PROTECTION TO BRITISH SUBJECTS IN CHINA.—The following correspondence has passed between Government and the Chamber of Commerce, anent affording protection to British subjects and property in China.

H. T. PRINSEP, Esquire,

Sir.—At a special General Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, held to-day, in consequence of the account, lately received of the alarming state of affairs in China, I was instructed to solicit that the Hon'ble the President in Council, will be pleased to take measures promptly to afford sufficient protection to British subjects, and to British property of every description in that quarter there, by the hostile acts of the Chinese, having been reduced to a predicament of imminent peril.

The Chamber begs leave to represent, that the state of the dispute with China, is now changed from what it was when the Chamber, a few months ago, sought the interference of Government, hostilities having now actually, commenced, and life and property being in jeopardy.

To aid the objects in contemplation, the Chamber presumes to recommend, that the Enterprise Steamer be armed, and despatched immediately to China, there to act under the orders of H. M. Senior Naval Officer on that station.

Nov. 12, 1839. (Signed) W. LIMOND, Secretary.

TO THE BENGAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
Sect. Dept.

GENTLEMEN,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your Secretary's letter, dated the 12th instant, urging upon the Government of India the expediency of taking prompt measures to succour the British subjects, and to protect the property and interests, which, according to recent intelligence from China, are placed in much jeopardy through the conduct of the Government officers at Canton. It is specially suggested, that the Enterprise Steamer be made ready for despatch to that quarter as soon as possible.

2.—In reply I am directed to state, that the President in Council has yet received no despatches from China; but not doubting the authenticity of the intelligence which has appeared in the Singapore newspapers brought to this Presidency, his Honour in Council intends to communicate the intelligence to his Excellency the Naval Commander-in-Chief with all possible despatch.

3 I am further desired to say, that in the opinion of the President in Council, the measure suggested by you would at present be premature; but that as soon as he is made acquainted with the steps which his Excellency may propose to take, he will be prepared to support them to such extent, as, under all the circumstances of the case may appear to be necessary and proper.

(Signed) H. T. PRINSEP.

MORUSSIL.

PITTHOUGH.—A bearer, in the service of Captain Hellew, a few days since, while taking the Captain's child, a fine boy of 8 years of age, on its evening walk, stopped on the bastion of the fort overhanging the river, which is undergoing repairs. The child commenced climbing the parapet, from which he was taken by the bearer twice, but a third time as the bearer stooped to pick up one of its shoes, the child fell through an embrasure into the river, forty feet below, and running with great rapidity. The bearer without a moment's delay leaped after it, and with a desperate effort rescued his charge from a watery grave.

OUTRAGE COMMITTED ON COL. WYMER.—A serious outrage was committed a short time ago on Colonel Wymer of the 27th Regt. It appears from a friend's account, that the Colonel was travelling from Ferozpour to Ludhiana; when near Dummkol, a dozen or more fellows, with the appearance of Afghan apple-merchants stopped his palanquin. The gallant Colonel immediately dashed out the king to frighten them with a walking stick, but was knocked down and pricked with their spears. The ruffians then helped themselves to a few articles, and threw away others with contempt. They made him strip off his upper garments to see if any valuables were concealed in them, and on being told that the Ranghy petarras contained entabes, let them pass without examination. Colonel Wymer lost a good deal of blood, but was well enough in a couple of days to continue his journey towards Simla.

CUTTACK.—The local authorities of the Cuttack Province, have reported to the Sudder Board of Revenue, that in consequence of long continued drought, half of the rice crop has been destroyed, and that, therefore, the quantity of rice sold for a rupee had been diminished from forty to sixteen seers. Unless relief be speedily afforded to the district, another famine is expected, as the price of grain will soon be too high for the limited means of the peasantry.

Letters subsequently received from Cuttack state, that a good fall of rain had greatly improved the prospect of the harvest in that district. The rice on the low ground, as well as that which had been saved by irrigation, was all expected to come to maturity, and there is every prospect of a fair rubber harvest.

"The fall has had considerable effect in the price of grain; rice is now selling as follows:—

MONGHYR, 19TH NOVEMBER.—A most cruel homicide has recently been committed in this station. It appears that a Zameendar was robbed about the 8th or 9th instant, of some trifling property. This man had come to reside in the neighbourhood, and having suspected a dhanook of the village, declared his suspicions to the Darogah of the Monghyr thanah, on which, the dhanook was arrested, and in order to elicit that truth, the Darogah and his prons beat the man, or threatened to do so; but he, with a mind to escape the chastisement and ill-treatment which awaited him, said, that he had given the property to his younger brother, and desired him to conceal it. The Darogah and his gang immediately repaired to the house of the latter, who being charged with having concealed the stolen property, denied all knowledge of it. This so incensed the Darogah, that he vowed vengeance on the elder; both the brothers were accordingly ordered to be taken to the thannah—the younger was in custody outside, and the Darogah took the elder into a room, bolted the door, and commenced torturing him in various diabolical ways, which ultimately proved fatal. The poor man's cries were long and loud; his screams were heard by many residing some distance from the spot. His last words were addressed to his poor trembling brother exclaiming that he was dying from the ill treatment and torture he was then undergoing. He expired an hour after uttering the above sentence. The Darogah had almost succeeded in his attempt of concealing the murder; for he instantly bribed the younger brother with ten rupees, and desired him to say that deceased had died from an attack of cholera and to make immediate preparations to burn the corpse, he sent for the parents of the deceased giving them also one hundred rupees to allow the matter to be buried in oblivion. By all accounts it seems, that the relations had quietly acquiesced in the concealment.

However the body was taken down to the river side in charge of some confidential peons, and relatives of the deceased, and there reduced to ashes. Providentially, information reached the Magistrate's ears though it did not come officially. He did not treat it as an idle bazaar report, but promptly adopted every means to sift the matter, till the whole truth was made apparent as the noon day sun.

NATIVE STATES

YARKUND.—A kafil of merchants proceeding through this territory with merchandise, of which a considerable portion was opium, have been seized and cast into prison and the opium and other merchandise confiscated. This has evidently been done in obedience to Chinese mandate, this state being tributary to the Celestial Empire.

LAHORE.—The latest accounts from Lahore give us great reason to fear, that anarchy has commenced her reign throughout the Punjab. As much secrecy as is possible, is preserved regarding the movements of the court, but the murmurs of the chiefs cannot be stifled; they are represented as incensed at the treatment of the treasurer Bone Ran, and now, with smothered anger begin to think, that if the influence of so great a man, backed by so many powerful relations, friends, and dependents, and who has stood for so long a time unimpeached in the favour of his late and present sovereign, cannot save him from the indignities heaped upon him, that the time may not be far distant, when their own angles will be burdened with the same weight of iron, the ex treasurer is now forced to bear.

It is not likely, that the ambitious prince Now-Nehal Sing, and his ambitious and still more powerful minister Dyan Sing, each aiming to obtain their own end by the prostration of the present monarch, will long agree; indeed it is already said, that there are differences between them, the latter wishing, by means of his immense power, to play his puppet, and keep in subjection the "impetuous and headlong rage of youth," while the prince, encouraged by his party, is represented as determined on following every impulse of his unruly passions.

In the mean time the nominal Monarch of the Punjab, has been led in state by his son, now Commander-in-Chief, and his vassals to witness the ceremonies of the Dusserah at Umritsir; where, crest-fallen, and in silence, this semblance of a king sat speaking to no one, answering no questions. Some idea may be formed of the influence the murdered Chett Sing had obtained over his master, from the fact that the latter actually divided his personal estates between the favourite and his brother-in-law Mungul Sing; the two relatives, however, each wishing to get the Lion's share in the division of the property, quarrelled, and from being the best of friends, became the direst enemies, and Mungul, with fraternal affection, lent his aid to the old Minister to crush his brother-in-law. Chett Sing is represented—and from all we hear, justly—to have been a weak, vain and arrogant fellow, who, presuming upon the degree of favouritism in which he stood with the Monarch, spurned at the idea of conciliating the opposite party and instead of quietly and gradually insinuating himself, through the personal favour of his Ruler, into the power he coveted, aimed at once to displace the present powerful incumbents, and is said to have been far from "slow in speech" to those Sirdars who were not of his faction.

A vakeel has arrived at Lahore from Shah Shorjah, with the usual presents as stipulated in the treaty, the reading of which so much amused the house of Lords. The vakeels on the part of Kuruck Sing, lately in attendance at Simla, have returned to Lahore. Colonel Wade had arrived at Attock, on his return to Lahore on the 26th ultimo.

SCI DE KHELAT.—Dispatches have been received from General Willshire, announcing the fall of Khelat, after a desperate defence. The assault was made by 14, M 24 and 17th Foot, and the 31st Regiment of Bengal Native Infantry. The British loss in killed and wounded was about 150 men. Lieutenant Gravatt has been killed and Captain Lyser and Ensign Dickinson wounded, all of the Queen's 2nd Foot. The Chief of Khelat, with several of his Sirdars, it is said, were killed in the assault and the rest were permitted with the exception of a few, to retire to their homes. Our force consisted of about 1,050 rank and file.

Gurden Dewaar, Sept. 29.—In the Uighundee pass we met Captain Thompson, with some sappers and miners, on his return from Bameean. He reported the road impracticable for wheeled carriages; and the consequence was, that a letter reached us at Youatt, after we had passed the Onnai, pass, directing us to halt. Captain Thompson had reported the road to be a mere mountain pathway; and the letter stated, that, therefore, 8 guns and all the waggons were to be sent back. Whilst, for the transport of the three remaining guns, and their ammunition, elephants were to be sent. We could not halt at Youatt, there being no supplies or forage there, therefore we came on to Garden Dewaar, where Lieut. Mackenzie (in temporary charge of the Horse Artillery) and Lieut. Broadfoot, of the Engineers, went on to examine the Irak pass, some 20 miles distant, and reported it practicable, so we have received permission to advance with the whole of the Artillery belonging to the detachment. According to the native accounts, we shall find forage plentiful at Bameean—they talk of the snow lying three 8 yards deep. Whilst that is the case, of course, the grass will not be found; so we must lay in straw. I don't know where Lord is now; he started from Ootul on an endeavour to reach Kooloom by a different route from this. Should he meet with an unfriendly reception, he is ordered to fall back on us, and is empowered to take us on to Kooloom.

The army expect to commence their march back on the 15th. A detachment, consisting of a squadron of the 2nd Cavalry, the 48th N. I., and 3 guns of Capt. Abbott's Battery, marched from Cabul on the 12th towards Ghuzni. The 48th were to escort back the Dost's son.

Irak Valley, October 4.—We crossed the Irak pass yesterday, with less difficulty than we expected. But our troubles, in the way of passes, are not near over yet. Our destination is no longer Bameean, but Kooloom in Tartary. Mr. Lord has returned to Cabul, and reports that the Dost is gathering strength in Tartary. Consequently a Brigade is ordered thither, consisting of the 35th and 27th N. I. and the 4th Locals. Our detachment, that is, the Native Troop of Horse Artillery, 200 of Christie's Horse, and the Goorkah corps, wait for them at Bameean, thence we all proceed to Kooloom and there winter. We have 3 passes to surmount, the Ukrobut, Dundan Shikun, and Kara Kootul—none so high as the Irak, but the Dundan Shikun is said to be very steep. Kooloom is only 1500 feet above the sea, so we may expect a milder winter there than at Bameean. The cold is, even now, severe in the extreme—it freezes during the greater part of the 24 hours. This is an inhospitable valley—narrow, with steep wall like hills enclosing it. The sun set (to us) at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and up to this (8, A. M.) we have seen nothing of it. We found some snow (perennial) in ravines on either side of the Irak hill, and at an elevation below 12,000 feet it is so cold I can scarcely hold my pen. I'm afraid the communication will soon be cut off by the snow.

Thermometer at 7 a. m. 6 degrees below freezing.

CABUL, OCT. 6.—A few days ago, a note written in English, was put into the hands of Sir Alexander Burnes, by a Huntoo who had come from Bokkara. The note was from Colonel Stadlant, and was addressed to the British Agent at Cabul. The Colonel states, that he is a prisoner in the Bokkara jail, and that he is frequently exhibited in the Bazar there!—and he calls earnestly on the British Agent to release him, dead or alive.

Captain Nash, the late baggage master, has been placed by Sir John Keane at the disposal of the Envoy and Minister at the court of Shah Sooja, and, as I hear, to be appointed commandant of His Majesty's Body guards.

Lieutenant Sturt, of the Bengal Engineers, has been appointed Executive Engineer in the Shah's service, on a salary of 1000 Rupees a month, vice Lieut. Durand resigned. Lieutenant Durand has been re-appointed Surveyor with the Army of the Indus.

The Sappers and Miners marched this morning, under Captain Thomson, in progress to the provinces, and for the purpose of repairing the road, as they go along.

We expect the Treasure Escort, bringing 13 Lacks, in here the day after to-morrow. I hope we may not be disappointed, for there is not a rupee to be seen in Camp! The Troops have received pay up to no later period than for May last! Tell it not in Gath! Colonel Wade left this yesterday for Lakora, where it is likely he will remain as our Resident at the Court of Kurrukh Sing."

Private letters from Cabul, dated 10th October, give the following intelligence.

The Treasure party, under Captain Caulfield, had reached Cabul that morning. The amount of the Treasure was 13 Lacks of Rupees. Captain Caulfield's party escorted many thousands of gallons of rum also, which, as both Officers and men of the Indus Army, had nothing to drink in the shape of liquor, save "Bazar Shraub," for months past, must have been highly acceptable.

Sir John Keane was laid up with an attack of gout.

The following is the latest from Cabul:—Major General Sir W. Cotton moved from thence on the 16th of October with the 2nd column of the Army of the Indus; General Nott, it is thus supposed, will command the troops in Afghanistan; it is not known whether he fixes his Headquarters in Cabul or Jelallabad. Shah Soojah and Mr. W. McNughten will, it is said, march in progress to Jelallabad on the 24th or 25th October. Brigadier Roberts has refused the command of Shah Soojah's troops on a consolidated allowance of Rs. 1800 per mensem, in the room of General Simpson resigned. The Brigadier, it seems, is not desirous of the command, unless the consolidated allowance he made equal to the pay and allowance of a Brigadier of the first class. It is rumoured that a second Brigadier to the Shah's troops is to be appointed to command that portion of those troops at Candahar, but he will be junior to the Shah's Brigadier at Cabul.

Cabul, October 8.—The 3d Cavalry, escorting treasure arrived from Jelallabad this morning. The Regiment had been sent out for the express purpose of accompanying Colonel Smyth and the Officers of the Corps, by knocking up both horses and camels, the road between this and Jelallabad being worse than it is well possible to conceive, and not a particle of forage of any description.

Now that they have the means the Commander-in-Chief, Heads of Departments, 16th Lancers, 3d Light Cavalry and 4th Local Horse, will move hence for Hindoostan on the 12th instant. Sir Willoughby Cotton remains in command here, with Captains Douglas, Piton and Watt, the Deputy Assistants of the different departments.

I am happy to inform you, that the gang which so brutally murdered Colonel Herring, has either been killed or captured.

A wing of the 16th Reg N. I., from Ghuznee, got on their track and chased them into a small Fort on a hill which they surrounded. On their approaching the Fort, the fellows rushed out and came boldly down to the attack. Major McLaren had made such a judicious disposition of his Wing, as to cut off all chance of their retreating, and met them with two of his Companies, while the other two had been sent round the hill unobserved by the gang. They stood the fire some time, when they began to think it high time to be off, and just as they reached the top of the hill, (the flanks being lined by a party of Skinner's Horse) they were met by the other two Companies of the 16th. So great was their surprise that they instantly laid down their arms and gave themselves up. Every man, woman and child was taken. Several of our sepoy were killed and the Adjutant of the 16th, H. Halderston, wounded. Major McLaren has had a high complimentary order issued on the occasion. A Wing of the 35th N. I., under Capt. Cowley marched this morning for Ghuznee. They are to remain there till Major McLaren, with his Wing, returns, and then come back here with the captured Ghiljis, who are all to be put to death, at least such is the report. Major McLaren is still hunting parties of Ghiljis, and reducing their strong holds.

This morning we had a hard frost. There was ice in all the water vessels, half an inch thick. The Thermometers in my tent, after sun rise, stood at 33d. We are all busy, making up scales.

BAMEEAN.—Letters from Bameean, dated October 10th, say, that the detachment is not to proceed into Tartary at present, the season being too far advanced to admit of the practicability, or at all events, the advisability of such an expedition at such a time. The detachment will therefore winter at Bameean, and proceed after the Dost, who is collecting the signs of war in Tartary, when the snows have somewhat cleared away. We present the following extracts to our readers.

AFGHANISTAN—BAMEEAN 21st Oct.—The accounts which continue to be received of the unfortunate Mahomed, represent him to be in very distressed circumstances, as his funds are on the decline. Several of his men passed through Bameean lately on their return to Cabul. They were provided with their several discharges under the Dost's seal. Letters from others of his soldiers, from their friends in Cabul, have been intercepted at Bameean; they contained no objectionable matter and spoke of the Dost and his party being perfectly léhar. There are some rumours afloat, that the King of Bokhara has united with the ex-chief (but not in a friendly way,) or rather that he has ordered him to be sent on, from Kooloom to Bokhara. There has been no snow since the 15th of October, but the nights are bitterly cold; so are the mornings. Grain and forage were coming in very slowly. The Artillery, and part of the Gorkha corps had gone into quarters; the former are erecting stables for their horses.

We understand, that Sir Willoughby Cotton returns to Cabul, to take Command of the Forces in Afghanistan. The cause of the general's retrograde movement, is said to be the disapprobation evinced by the Governor-General at the late arrangements, which formed Cabul and Candahar into two separate commands; they will now remain as Brigadier's appointments under the general command of Sir Willoughby Cotton.

ANECDOTE OF DOST MAHOMED—A poor Coosid, in the employ of Mr. Macnaghen, was sent, some time before the Army advanced, with letters to persons of influence in Cabul. Being discovered and seized, he swallowed one of the letters to prevent its falling into the enemy's hands, but Dost Mahomed caught the unhappy man's belly to be ripped open, that he might get possession of the despatch, and afterwards had him hanged.

The following, which we have just received, in a Cabul letter, is a true and correct list of Shah Soojah's force:—

JULLALABAD.—The following is an extract of a letter, dated camp Jullalabad, 4th November 1839:—

"The 2nd Light Cavalry and 37th Regiment N. I. reached this place yesterday morning, after a distressing march of 12 days from Cabul. We had heard the road was bad, but never supposed it to be anything like what we found it, almost impassable. It is amusing to hear the sepoys remarking that they now comprehend the reason for our coming round by Shikarpoor and Candahar; and certain it is we never could have come by this route had we been opposed by a few determined troops. To give a description of the road from Cabul to this, is next to impossible, suffice it to say it is a mountain pass almost the whole way, the road, if indeed it can be called one, covered with large round river stones, sharp, broken flints, shingle, and every thing that's bad. Not a vestige of forage could we find till we reached Enteebad the day before yesterday; all that my cattle (both camels and horse) saw on the way, I brought with me from Cabul.

This place, Jullalabad, is just about as vile a hole as ever Christian cast eyes on. Facing South, we have the lofty range of Suffind Koh in our front, the tops of which are now tipped with snow; in our rear stand the noble mountains, the Hindu Koonb. At the base of the hills on the North side of the valley, is a good deal of cultivation, and in the vicinity of Julallahad a good deal of sugar cane is grown, and from what I have seen, I should say the soil is favorable to the growth of the plant. The Cabul river runs along the north side of the town, and is here a fine, deep rapid stream. The thermometer this morning at sun rise stood at 46° at noon 79°.

The Shah, escorted by a squadron of the 2nd Light Cavalry and the European Regiment, was to leave Cabul on the 28th ultimo, so that he may be expected here in all this week. The Commander-in-chief, only left this on the 29th ultimo, and Sir W. Cotton with the 2nd column on the 29th. They were detained here in consequence of the Kyberies having refused them a passage through the Kyber Pass, which they afterwards purchased with some of Honorable John's silver shot, which they have so abundantly lavished away on the Affghans.

I'll keep you acquainted with our movements and any changes which may take place. H. M. 13th Light Infantry and the 85th N. I., are to garrison Cabul. The H. U. European Regiment, 37th and 48th Regiments N. I., and the 2nd, Light Cavalry, will remain here if they can manage to subsist as large a force. Captain Watt, of the Commissariat, arrived with the Detachment yesterday. Grain is said to be scarce, and supplies not to be had for love or money."

Intelligence from the head quarters of the Governor-General, communicated in a letter from Paniput, dated 18th November, intimates that the Governor-General had issued an order from the Secret Department, announcing the arrival, within the Peshawur territory, of General Sir John Keane, with a portion of the Army of the Indus on its return to the British Provinces—and offering publicly the warmest thanks of the Governor-General to his Excellency, and to the officers and men who have served under his command, for the soldier-like spirit and conduct of all ranks, throughout the late campaign. Several officers' names are mentioned in particular, who have received the thanks of the Governor-General individually and then continues the order, "In testimony of the services of the Army of the Indus, the Governor-General is pleased to resolve that all the Corps, European and Native, in the service of East India Company, which proceeded beyond the Bolan Pass, shall have on their Regimental Colors the word 'Afghanistan' and such of them as were employed in the reduction of the Fortress of that name, the word 'Ghuznee' in addition.—In behalf of the Queen's Regiments, the Governor-General will recommend to her Majesty, through the proper channel, that the same distinction may be granted to them." Thanks are also given to Colonel Wade and the troops employed on the Peshawar frontier, for their gallant conduct during the Campaign. It was moreover determined that full batta, of field batta, should be granted to all the officers and fighting men of the Army who had advanced beyond the Bolan Pass, in compensation for the heavy losses incurred by them in the long march to Cabul.

MADRAS.

TRIAL OF THE OFFICERS OF THE LORD LOWTHER.—On the trial of the Officers of the Lord Lowther, six months ago, an objection was raised in the Court upon the question, that, whereas the indictment stated the ship to belong to the subjects of the Queen to the jury unknown, the Captain of the vessel, in his evidence, declared the names of the owners. A difference of opinion existed on the Bench, but the over-ruling voice awarded that the trial should proceed, and certain convictions were the result. The point excited some interest at the time; and an opinion on it, having been sought and obtained from home, both the Attorney and Solicitor General have pronounced the objection quite untenable, and that the convictions therefore were right.

KURNOWL.—Letters have been received from Kurnowl of the 25th. The Sappers were still busily employed in the fort collecting the stores, and parties were also there engaged in digging up the floors of various godowns, beneath which guns and howitzer, without end appear to have been buried. It was reported also that some jewels, and more treasure, had been found in the zemannah.

KURNOWL, 8th NOV.—At a place called Cumbaloor, a few miles distance from Nundial, an extensive foundry for the manufacture of shot, and the welding of iron axes and yers for gun carriages, has been discovered, containing about 1,800 iron cannon shot and 70 to 80 axes, with large quantities of tools and implements of all sorts, as also a considerable store of iron ready for use.

Near to Cumbaloor is the Nuwaub's favourite hunting residence, Cheerawul—where there is a very handsome bungalow and extensive preserves and enclosures, containing about 200 antelopes of a very fine breed; there is also a zemannah attached to it, concealed in which were found a number of pigs of English lead. From the accounts given by the natives resident in neighbourhood, it appears that this extraordinary passion for artillery preyed upon the soul of the Nuwaub to the exclusion of all other fancies and considerations. He never traveled, it seems, without the accompaniment of half a dozen of his brazen favourites, drawn by bullocks and fully equipped for service; and at Cheerawul, his chief pastime consisted in planting guns in an open space, across which his antelopes were driven in herds, while he blazed away at them with round and all sorts of shot!

The condition of the inhabitants of the country about Nundial is described as wretched in the extreme, from the heavy imposts levied by the Nuwaub's authorities upon grain of all kinds; and the contrast between the rule of the "late man" and that of the Company, is forcibly felt by the illustration, which the condition of the country people of the Cuddapah district, whose frontier touches that of Kurnowl only a few miles distant, affords. Amongst them—in the Company's territory—rice is selling at 14 seers per rupee; while—at Nundial the same quality of grain cannot be sold at a lower rate than 11 by the unfortunate dealers, in consequence of the extortions of the authorities.

THE LATE GALE.—The following are detailed accounts of the effects of the late gale along the Coromandel coast, which we briefly noticed in our last issue.

RUMALCHITAN, 18th NOV.—"This small station is now a scene of desolation. It was visited on Saturday night by one of the most severe hurricanes ever known in this part of the country. It blew from 6 o'clock in the evening till 5 o'clock the next morning, carrying away the roofs of all the thatched houses, and leaving their inmates wet and shivering in the dread of the walls falling in upon them. Happily, this was not the case, but, with the exception of the Collector and Commandant, every officer is houseless, and even theirs have been much shattered though tiled. The sepoy's huts have been totally blown to pieces, and their families taken refuge in the verandahs of the barracks. Two Native Officers with their families are occupying the solitary cells at their own request. Trees that have stood for eighty years are now blown down, even to the tamarind tree which has generally such a firm grip of the earth. A magnificent specimen of one in front of the collector's is felled. The whole country is under water, and the communication cut off from Cocanada and Angeram.

"Treasure to the amount of co.'s rs. 1,50,000 was left unguarded on the plain; but it was only for a short time, as the sentries who had been blown away managed to crawl back and throw themselves on the bags!

VIZAGAPATAM, 15TH AND 16TH NOV.—It blew hard on Saturday morning with heavy squalls of rain from N. E. to N., which continued mostly from the North during the day. The Barque "Indian Queen" put to sea in the course of the night on Friday; and in the strength of the gale on the Saturday about 11 A. M. four native craft put to sea; and two others in a most unaccountable manner having cut their cables and made sail, came on shore against the northerly gale. The gale veered back to the eastward, and blew hard during Saturday night from E. N. E. to East without much rain, and on Sunday morning it moderated a little shifting to the S. E. when it became more moderate with occasional showers, and veering to South, still more so, but continued to blow a fresh breeze from that quarter during the night. Monday morning the gale had subsided, and the wind was light and variable with squalls of rain from W. to N. W. It is said that nine hands are missing from the crews of the two vessels wrecked here, and apprehensions are entertained for the safety of the native craft that put to sea; two men were saved by the six tide waiters and their catamarans of the port.

CORINGA—We were visited on the night of the 16th instant by the most terrible gale of wind possible. Your house at Ingeram is completely unroofed, the trees, walls of the compound destroyed, and P. was very nearly drowned. All the European and native house are not inhabitable, and there is nothing to be seen from Coringa to that but a heap of ruins. The wind began to blow in the afternoon of the 16th, but was moderate till 11 o'clock in the night of the same day, when it became furious, and lasted till 4 o'clock the next Sunday. The water from the sea rushed in with such violence, that the houses at Coringa, except E's large house, and 3 or 4 other brick built houses, all the rest they say have been carried away. I have had 2½ feet of sea water in my garden, and in my room which is under my bungalow 1½ foot, they say that more than 20,000 people have perished by this terrible hurricane which lasted only 5 or 6 hours—there is nothing to be seen in every direction but dead bodies and drowned cattle. 60 native vessels which were in the roads loaded with paddy, disappeared, and they do not know what is become of them. The "Union" although she had 4 anchors and chains out, was carried away and is now laying at a short distance from the middle of the river of Nelipelly. The Catharine, which was in a mud dock, and well secured by the earth, was also carried away and fortunately got in the "Charles Dumergue" dock, which the last vessel had left a few days before. The "Charles Dumergue" was drifted in the large river of Yanam, and is now half buried in a sand island, opposite the place where the ferry boat used to cross, but no news of her. Captain, who was on board, and also of Captain P his brother-in-law, and a few other people.—They must have been all drowned, as all the country was covered by the sea. You can have an idea of it when I will tell you that I see from my house a Choolia sloop laying quite near that white Pagoda of Onpungalo, 5 miles from Coringa in the interior of land.

BOMBAY:

CONSTRUCTION OF VESSELS OF WAR.—It was stated, some time ago, that an order had come out for the construction of certain vessels of war of the largest class in the Bombay dockyard, in consequence of which very considerable alterations would require to be made. It is now said, the new slips about to be laid down for this purpose, will extend as far as the Saluting Battery, and as they will mark some of the guns of the fort, Government has determined to erect a fort on the Bunker

Rock, with a small light-house attached, which will effectually protect the harbour, at the same time doing away with the necessity of the light vessel. The Vanguard is said to be the intended model for the new ships. Mr. Allen the new Master Builder arrived by the Barenice.

COTTON.—It is said that the Court of Directors have engaged twelve Americans to proceed to this country for the purpose of improving the cultivation and cleaning of cotton, and that they may be shortly expected to arrive in Bombay.

GOVERNOR OF GOA.—It is stated, that a new Governor of Goa is expected to arrive here by the next Steamer—and that the Portuguese Man-of-War, which has arrived at Bombay, has come for the purpose of conveying him to the seat of Government.

ADJUSTMENT WITH PERSIA.—Some rumours are afloat of an adjustment likely to be soon effected with Persia, which will re-instate a British envoy in Teheran.

INCREASE OF SICKNESS IN GUJARAT.—There has been an increase of sickness for the last month among the troops at different stations in Gujarat. At Baroda, the fevers have this year been of an extremely mild description, in so much that only one man died during the season, and sickness is already rapidly on the decline, and it is expected the healthiness of the men will be completely re-established before the end of the month.

AGRICULTURAL JOINT STOCK COMPANY.—An Agricultural Joint Stock Company, has been formed at Ceylon, for the cultivation of coffee and other tropical productions.

BURMAH.

Letters from Rangoon to the 23d of October, state, that peaceful measures are in contemplation at the Court of Ava, although our representative continues to be very little noticed or regarded. It would appear that much harmony at present exists between the European and Armenian Merchants, and the local authorities. "The most interesting of our recent local occurrences," says one of our correspondents, "is that the Collector of customs had given a sumptuous dinner on the 20th inst., to all the European and Armenian Merchants of the place," which sumptuous banquet is further stated to have gone off with great eclat, the health of the Burmese Majesty, of her Britannic Majesty, of the Governor of Rangoon and his suite, and lastly, of the ladies of Rangoon, had been drunk, with enthusiasm and one cheer more.

CHINA.

It appears from the following intelligence to the 10th of September, that there is actual war in China:—HONG-KONG, 9TH SEPTEMBER, 1839.—"On the 29th of August, all the British were ordered to quit Macao on a notice of twelve hours; and with the exception of Mr. BEALE, who remains as Prussian Consul, and Mr. P. STEWART, who would not quit, his wife suffering from illness at the time, and who has sought shelter in the house of Mr. KING, the American merchant, friend of Lin, we were, all compelled to embark with so much precipitation as scarcely to find time to take along with us our account-books and clothes—a day later, and not one of us could have gone on board the ships, as H. M. Frigate Vulgar had been anchored in Macao roads. The death of a Chinese in the scuffle at Hong-Rong is the cause of this expulsion. —Lin had called upon Captain ELLIOT to surrender the homicide; but as nobody knew who that was, he issued orders to the Portuguese Government at Macao to drive out the English—although had it been certain who the offender was, he certainly would never have been delivered up. The Chinese authorities put in practice their accustomed policy by withdrawing all our Chinese servants—we then took Portuguese ones and they intercepted all provisions for the English, and would have latterly done so for all, unless we took our departure. The Governor of Macao who possesses no means of resistance, did not, it must be allowed, issue any written order for our embarkation; on the contrary, he officially gave out that he would afford us all the protection in his power—but he said in private, and insinuated by means of his friends, that he could do nothing, that the houses of the English residents were likely to be surrounded by the Chinese soldiery collected in the environs of Macao, and that serious danger impended over their persons and property. On the afternoon of the 25th August, he announced to Mr. ARTHUR, the President of the Committee of Public Safety, that, if the British residents were ready to embark next day at noon, the garrison would be under arms to protect the embarkation against the insult of the Chinese. The noon of next day, however, brought to view neither soldiers, nor a Chinese rabble to insult any one—nobody but the governor himself, in full uniform—who had come to “make secure” that the English were embarking before he went to the Senate to give in his report of the circumstance; which, the moment it was known, was communicated by that body to the Mandarins. The following day the Portuguese were thanked by LIN for having expelled the English—and he announced his intention of coming himself on the following Sunday to testify in person the satisfaction he experienced on the occasion—though he nevertheless postponed his visit for several days. The Portuguese troops marched to the Barrier to receive him, and accompanied him into Macao, where he was met by the authorities who welcomed him with sundry salutes of artillery. He did not enter the Government House, and he made but a very short visit, having returned to the Hagne, where report says another great Commissioner has arrived from Peking. The opinion of Chinese is, that LIN has caused too much “boobery”; and that the new Commissioner has been despatched to qualify his measures. Time will shew how this is—meantime British Trade to Canton is wholly at an end, and the Americans are turning this state of affairs, to account as far as they are able. Our affairs indeed, as you may well judge are in the most complete confusion, when you hear of our counting-houses being on board the boats, ships, &c. The British government must adopt severe measures against the Chinese: we can never regain our commerce and influence among them but at the point of the bayonet.

Another most afflicting occurrence has lately taken place. The Schooner Black Joke having left Macao with Mr. Moss a passenger on board, and six lascars, was compelled to anchor in the Lantau Passage, waiting for the tide. She was here surprised by three mandarin boats, and when all in her were sound asleep, these barbarians boarded her, massacred all the lascars on board, and must have thrown their bodies into the sea, as none of them were found in the boat; a child was among them who was cut in two, one of the lascars after having his ear severed from his head, jumped over board and was saved by Captain WALLACE's schooner after having been eight hours in the water. The Tin del of the boat also sprung into the water, but with great expertness, laid hold of the helm, when the hands of these ruffians, who, after committing such atrocities apparently wished to satisfy themselves that there was no one about, encountered his head in this position. He instantly dived, and by his presence of mind made his escape. The passenger, who was surprised while asleep in his berth, was almost cut to pieces, his left arm nearly severed from his body, with a wound in his head, and his ear torn off and placed between his lips in derision.

The villains then wanted to fire the boat, but seeing another vessel approach, they took to flight.

Mr. Moss dreadfully mutilated as he is, is fully expected to survive, although his life was at first considered in danger.

On the morning of the 4th instant, when all seemed for the moment quiet, Captain ELLIOT, who since the 23d of August had been at Hong-Kong, got under weigh in his cutter, in company with the schooner Pearl under command of Captain REDDIE and stood for the Bay of Coulloon, intending to procure a supply of provisions for the fleet. Having arrived at their destination and made known the object of their coming it appears that provisions were brought in abundance, which may be readily believed, as the inhabitants of that district have always shewn themselves willing to deal with Europeans. The mandarins, however, on board the war-junks, opposed the embarkation of the supplies; when CAPT. ELLIOT intimated to them, that if in the space of half an hour the provisions were not allowed to pass, he would open fire upon them; the half-hour passed and the gun was fired. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon reports of guns were heard at the anchorage, which were at first supposed to be merely salutes of the Mandarins; but the fire continuing we got under weigh from our vessel at about $\frac{1}{2}$ past four, when I could observe what passed; several other boats also got under weigh, and in turning the point of Hong-kong, we saw several boats approaching who came for supplies of ammunition, and brought orders for the frigate Volage to get under weigh. Three war-junks were endeavouring to put to sea, the Pearl and Cutter obstructing their passage out, and compelling them by a well maintained fire to seek shelter under the walls of the Coulloon fort, which returned the fire of the Cutter and Pearl, shot for shot. About 6 o'clock, the frigate being in sight, the boat of Captain DOUGLAS, who commanded in person, with 24 European seamen on board, and three other boats with lascars, made an attempt to carry the Junk by boarding, but this was found impracticable from the height of these vessels, which were provided with pikes, and boarding-nettings. Captain DOUGLAS' boat then opened a fire of musketry, to which the Chinese replied better than I expected. The result of the battle is this—we are left without provisions; and the Junks escaped from us during night!

Orders having been given to the boats to withdraw, to hold themselves ready next morning at break of day to attack and destroy both the fort and Junks, every one repaired at the appointed time to the scene of action, mustering altogether about 1,000 men. To the great surprise of all, the Frigate, Cutter and Pearl were seen towed away by their boats, having abandoned all idea of proceeding further in the matter! Captain ELLIOT's mind baid, it appears, under gone an entire change in the course of the night! Now, whether it was right in him to begin the fray or not, yet having himself struck the first blow, there seems, no doubt he ought to have brought the business to a point, and captured the junks that were putting a stop to the supply of provisions—where the only fruit of all this cannonading, which began at three o'clock in the afternoon and lasted till night-fall, is, that we have managed to compromise ourselves still further with the government of China, while we have at the same time failed to inspire them with any dread—for after what has passed, they will no doubt regard themselves as the victorious party. Their loss in killed amounts to, one Mandarin of rank, an inferior Mandarin, and four Chinese soldiers, besides seven wounded. On our side, four Europeans were wounded, of whom it is supposed that one will die. Captain DOUGLAS received a ball in his arm, but the wound is not dangerous.

Such is the present state of affairs, and I believe you will agree with me, that the time is now come when the interposition of the British Government will be found necessary to arrange matters.

A report prevails that the Chinese are preparing fire-rafts to burn the fleet, and that they have brought together a great number of war-junks; some say 50, some 80, and so on—but as Captain Smith of the Volage has taken command of the fleet, they attempt any attack upon us it will be for themselves that they set about it in a soldier like fashion.

China news to the 30th October has been received, and is of a very interesting nature. Captain Elliott, it appears, made arrangements with the Chinese under which the legal trade was to recommence outside; and all vessels were to be searched for opium, and if any was found, the parties were to be dealt with according to the late edicts; but these engagements had been violated apparently by both parties. The Rustumjee Cawasjee, Sir Edward Ryan and Red Rover had arrived; the second named had disposed of some opium at 600 dollars, and then proceeded to the East Coast. One large English vessel, the Thomas Coutts, had proceeded to Whampoa of her own accord, and immediately after the Chinese peremptorily demanded the delivery of the sailor who killed the Chinaman at Hong Kong, and the entrance of the British shipping into Whampoa, with the signature of the bond agreeing to submit capital offenders for trial by Chinese officers, or the departure of the ship from the coast, under threats of destruction. The possession of the officers and crew of the Thomas Coutts, as hostages, is supposed to have induced the Chinese to act thus with the hope of obtaining concessions from the British delegate to the honor of the nation. At Singapore little or no Opium remained, and prices would of course be high there.

ADEN.

GALLANT DEFENCE OF ADEN.—The following are the particulars of an attack on our lately acquired possession of Aden, by the ex-Sultan, the chief of the Ahallas, assisted by the Foudlee and numerous other Arab tribes.

It appears that information had been received, some time previous, by Captain Haines, the Political Resident at Aden, of a intended attack, who made every arrangement accordingly, in conjunction with the Military Authority of the place, and, notwithstanding the matter was looked upon by many as an idle threat on the part of the Arabs, every precaution seems to have been taken, to repel them.

The neck of land or rather sand, which connects the peninsula of Aden with the main land is intersected by a wall, about 1400 yards in length, both extremities of which touch the sea at high water; at either end of this wall there is a semi-circular projecting field work mounting two guns, while three other guns are placed along the wall in as many redoubts at regular intervals of 300 yards.

Early in the morning of the 11th a report was made that some 8 or 10 men were seen prowling about near the advanced sentries, but who, on being challenged, dispersed—soon after more men were seen creeping round the left field work, it being nearly low water; at about 4 A. M. of the 11th the sentry fired, and the Arabs, finding themselves discovered, raised a tremendous shout and rushed on, in three columns of about 2,000 men each,—one column upon each field work, and one on the centre, but were quickly checked by a well directed fire of grape and musketry from the works, while Lieutenant Hamilton of the Indian Navy, in the launch of the H.C. brig of war Euphrates, repeated volleys of grape from the boats 12 pounder, across their columns, with admirable judgment and precision. The centre column alone reached the wall within which about 250 of them found their way, when the remainder were obliged to retreat; those who got in, were joined by about 150 others, who had crawled along and succeeded in passing unobserved, round the left field work. Finding their retreat cut off after losing some men in attempting it they made a rush at the heights commanding the wall, but on receiving two shots and losing one of their number, they retreated and tried another part of the hills where Mr. Nott, a Midshipman the Indian Navy, was placed with party of a seaman and a gun, on receiving the first shot from which they fled in great confusion and made a desperate rush to pass outside the left field work, where Mr. Cameron of the European Regiment was placed; here the slaughter was dreadful, about thirty of their number being moved down on the spot: some made good their retreat and a few fled away into the hills, where they were either taken or shot next day.

In the meantime the firing from the artillery was kept up from the front, and by Lieut. Hamilton on the flank till only about 5 rounds of grape shot remained at the wall, when an order was given to cease firing, the enemy being at a considerable distance; on this the Arabs, taking it for granted that all the ammunition of the defenders was expended, rushed, with a loud yell, in 5 columns again to the wall within a short distance of which, they were once more fatally checked by the destructive fire of grape and musketry in front and flank.

Daylight had just broken on the scene and showed the Arabs in full retreat, in a dense mass extending from side to side of the broad part of the battlements, their numerous camels loaded with dead, those very camels, some of which carried small guns and all of which were intended to be laden, with the plunder of the English, of whose wealth they had formed most extravagant notions. The Ex-Sultan had persuaded them that "all the buttons worn by the English were of solid gold and that precious stones and valuables of all kind awaited their expected victory." It appears they were led to expect but a very feeble resistance.

One communication says, "we took 28 prisoners and buried 32 of their dead; and from the wall they were observed to load a great number of camels with dead and wounded. The garrison had but one man wounded."

PERSIA.

Advices from Karak to the 7th, and from Bushire to the 10th of October, have been received. The sickness that had prevailed, for some time, among the troops at the former place, had greatly abated, though the number in Hospital was still 53, or as one to ten, which is beyond the average of healthy stations. The prohibition to communicate with Bushire, had been taken off by the new Governor, who is represented as a resolute character, determined to keep his place, now that he has got it, whether agreeable to the Shah or not, and who has opened Bushire to the English from no love he has to them, for he professes the bitterest enmity, but because he has a great affection for their rupees. The whole of the south of Persia is in a very disturbed state. A valuable caravan passing from Bushire to Shiraz, had been plundered, the latter city itself still continued in a state of great excitement and tumult, of so alarming a character, that the Shah had been obliged to remove the Shazedah and send Ferouz Mirza as Governor in his stead. A Cavalry Force under Manacheer Khan was ordered down into the disturbed districts with the view of restoring tranquility, but it was not known what success it had had. To add to the gloomy state of affairs the Shah had lost his eldest son, the heir-apparent, and his own health was very bad.

As an offset however to this gloomy picture, the Persians still plumed themselves upon the victory they had won over the English in the Bushire affair. Throughout the whole Gulf and even as far as Mossoul, for the Arabs too had imbibed it, but one sentiment was entertained, and every where talked of, that upon the only occasion when the Persians and English had fairly met, the latter had been completely routed and forced to take refuge in flight. So industriously had this been spread among all the neighbouring People, and so firmly was it believed, that in speaking of our desire to establish friendly relations with the powerful Arab tribes on the Euphrates and Tigris, the answer often given by these people was, "what is the value of your friendship and protection, when you cannot defend yourselves?" No event of late times has done so much to lower our name and weaken our power among these nations, as the unfortunate affair referred to.

The members of the Persian Mission accompanied by the three Princes, still remain at Bagdad, awaiting the adjustment of the differences between the courts of London and Teheran. These Princes are pensioners on our Government to the tune of £2,000 a year, and one is said to be the rightful heir to the Throne. Bagdad was perfectly quiet, but had suffered greatly from the excessive inundation of the past season.

EGYPT.

The following is the latest news from Egypt:

Alexandria, 30th September, 1839.—Every thing here remains in the same unsettled state as when we last wrote you, however Mahomed Ali is pursuing a steady line of policy as regards Turkey and the Turks, and that he will not be swerved from it, either by threats or promises, is certain, from the decisive manner in which he expressed himself some days back, before the consuls general, viz. he said in the most positive terms, that he will not give up the Turkish Fleet until a complete and radical change has been effected in the present Turkish system, and that Kousroof Pasha no longer holds the reins of Government. In fact, all remains in the clouds respecting the future prospects of Turkey and Egypt. It appears as if a mist was hovering round their future destinies in the form of European intervention and diplomacy; but that Mahomed Ali is fully determined to hold his own, and not give up one iota to the interventionists, unless their decision be guided by justice to himself and heir. There is no doubt, that he is determined on crushing Russian influence in Constantinople, by the extermination of Kousroof Pasha and his colleagues. Now, it appears to all, that the only effectual means of succeeding in this, is by the strenuous and united exertions of England and France, and by their pursuing a firm and decided course in the present critical crisis, certainly, not by the miserable and unmeaning policy hitherto pursued at Constantinople, and which is but the mirror of that acted upon in Downing Street. If we but unravel the late proceeding (we cannot call it policy) at the Foreign Office, we can recognise but inefficiency, weakness, and inconsistency, in fact, a system that has, but tended to weaken us in the estimation of all nations, without any one good accruing therefrom, either in a political or mercantile point of view.

14th September. It is reported in town to day, that Mahomed Ali is seriously ill. The effect produced upon the Frank population, by this report is wonderful. A fit of apprehension, and there is no doubt there would be just cause for it, if there was any foundation for the report. The Pasha has been indisposed, but we are happy to say is speedily recovering, and that there is no ground whatever of apprehension on that score.

15th.—H. M. S. Brig Zebra arrived from London to day. She brought despatches from Marshal Soult to the French Consul General. She left the British and French squadrons off Texedda, both fleets combined making a force in all 19 sail of the line, and about 20 small craft, all in readiness to act at a moment's notice. Soult's despatches are not of the most flattering nature for the Pasha. The French Consul General (Monsieur Cochelet) having orders to demand in the most positive manner that the Turkish Fleet be given up, which he has postponed doing until the arrival of the next Courier, when it is supposed Colonel Campbell will have received similar orders from his Government. It is supposed that in case of the Pasha's refusal, the combined Fleets of England and France will make sail immediately for Alexandria. However up to this period every thing is quiet here, but commercial affairs are at a stand, nothing doing.

16th.—It is rumoured, that Jerusalem and El-Haleel are in a state of insurrection, and that it will require the presence of Ibrahim Pasha to quell it. We are induced from the reports of some travellers, lately arrived from Syria, to place but little reliance on this report, which is confined solely and wholly to a slight disturbance.

Mr. Waghorn left this city on 10th instant, for Constantinople, on a mission of great importance from Mahomed Ali. This gentleman arrived from Suez on the 9th, after a passage of 48 hours from that place to Alexandria. Much good to this country is expected to result from his political visit to Constantinople.

28th September.—Mr. Waghorn arrived at the Lazaretto yesterday, from Constantinople, having been absent only 16 days. He was only 28 hours there, having had interviews with the British Ambassador, Lord Ponsonby, and an audience of two hours, with the Grand Visier. Some of our friends, who have visited this gentleman, now in quarantine (in which he has been kept for political reasons of this place) state, that his mission and its result will materially tend to the ultimate and more speedy adjustment of the great question now on foot between these two powers, and in which the five great ones have guaranteed to maintain Turkey's integrity which integrity (we maintain, and have maintained) is gone for ever. However, the game of goose is not yet played in full. We since learn, that independent of Constantinople, Mr. Waghorn visited and landed at the following places, in the above short space of time, viz. Rhodes, Smyrna, the Castles of the Dardanelles, Constantinople and Thracia. In returning he again visited Smyrna and Rhodes, as well as Scio, Cos, Cyprus, Beirut and Gaffa. Mr. W. was received at Constantinople most graciously by its authorities, and is the bearer of important communications to Mahomed Ali from them. We regret to state that his highness is now on the Nile in very ill health; but we trust to say in our next, that he is himself again. We will endeavour to glean the full particulars of Mr. W.'s mission and its results, and, if possible, give them to you in our next month's letter. The British and French fleets were still at Texedda, inactive on the 20th instant. They numbered 19 sail of the line without Frigates, Steamers, &c. Russia and Austria had declared, that if Ibrahim Pasha marched on Constantinople, they would each send out 100,000 men to oppose him. Russia also declared, that if France or England forced their way up the Dardanelles, their fleet would also come to Constantinople, and their army would move from Sebastopol on the same point. All was in statu quo at that date (20th instant,) in Constantinople, which place was quiet. The young Sultan is a mere puppet in the hands of Kousroo Pasha (the Visier) at whose suggestion he had given a fete at the Palace of Sweet Waters to the children of Constantinople, (educated at the mosques and schools) and Turk-like crowned the whole with a most indecent exhibition of dancing men.

A fire took place at Salonica on the 14th instant which destroyed nearly the whole of the place, and property to the amount of 18,000,000 of piastres, about £750,000 sterling.

The meeting must be aware, that the attempt to open the sanatorium last season, proved a failure, and it is perhaps unnecessary here to enquire into causes which led to this result, as they are generally known, and were altogether beyond the control of your committee. The experience, however, of last season enabled your Secretary to remedy several unforeseen defects in the construction of the hotel; and pointed out the necessity of farther accommodation being provided. These details on his return from Darjeling in October, he reported to your committee as follows.

First. It was found that clay would not make a tight roof. The earthen floor proved damp and the bed rooms required ventilation. Tiles are now being substituted for the clay roofing. The floors and verandah are to be boarded. The bed rooms properly ventilated, and one wing of the building will have doors of communication for the convenience of families. By the original estimate, the hotel was to be built for Rs. 6,000. These alterations and improvements will make an additional cost of Rs. 7,150.

Second. A kitchen, large godowns and servants' accommodation, required to be provided. These have been contracted for, at an aggregate expense of Rs. 9,680.

At the time the first call of Rs. 100 per share was made, 110 shares were taken. Several persons, however, withdrew on various grounds; and when the 2d call of Rs. 100 was sanctioned, another section retired from the Association, and allowed the first call to be considered a donation, thus diminishing the number of shares to 78. The funds at the present moment, therefore, stand as under.

Amount collected.....	Rs. 16,059	10	0
Expended in furniture and buildings.	37,499	3	6
<hr/>
Leaving a deficiency of.....	Rs. 21,499	3	0

Note. About Rs. 5,000 of the above is not yet advanced; but will be paid by Messrs. Hopper, Martin and Co. on the completion of the contracts.

Your committee knows that the present meeting cannot be called on to pay more than the last instalment of Rs. 50 per share; and as this will not produce Rs. 4,000, it falls to be considered what steps can be adopted to relieve the Secretary from the heavy advance he has come under for the public benefit.

Another circumstance requires to be stated. Mr. Wilson, tenant of the hotel, who proceeded to Darjeling last March, suffered severe losses on that occasion, and in addition, had the misfortune to break his leg. In consideration of these circumstances, your committee has felt justified in granting him a new lease for 5 years, from 1st March next. The first year to be rent free, and shareholders to have a preference in applications for accommodation. In all other respects, the tenant to conduct the hotel as he finds most advantageous to himself, and the public.

Though not properly belonging to the business of the Association, your committee takes this opportunity to state for general information, that another hotel is now being built by private subscription at Karsing, the first mountain stage, at an elevation of 4,000 ft., and 24 miles distant from Darjeling. It is chiefly intended for delicate persons, who might find the climate above too cold. But a part of the accommodation will be reserved for travellers passing to and from Darjeling. This hotel has been let to a respectable tenant, and will be opened on the 1st of March next. At Mahukleram, six miles from Karsing, a bungalow is likewise being built; and another, half way on the new line towards Darjeling, will be finished in the course of next summer.

Your committee trusts these arrangements will be satisfactory to the meeting. Since the failure of last season, every exertion has been used to prevent the occurrence of a second disappointment, and from the change of circumstances this year, there is no reason to apprehend any. The bazar being now fully supplied, the road open, and natives from different quarters flocking to the station.

Before concluding this report, your committee begs to call the attention of the meeting to a correspondence which has lately taken place with Government on the subject of a new line of road from Bogwongola to Titalia, which, if carried out, would prove a great convenience to the Calcutta community. Mr. Halkett, the acting Collector at Dinagore, has already repaired the road to the limits of his district within 6 coss of Titalia, and he is desirous now to effect an extension on this side of Dinagore to Bogwongola. The Native Lady mentioned (Pun Koomar Harmince, a Resident of Rungpore) has since subscribed Rs. 10,000 for the construction of bridges on this line; an instance of liberality your committee feels happy to record, and it is to be hoped this example may not be thrown away on the zemindars through whose Estates the road is carried, and who may consequently derive much advantage from it.

(Signed,) J. W. GRANT,

Chairman of the Darjeling Committee.

[The following are the letters alluded to in the above Report.

To H. T. PRINSEP, Esq.

Secy to Government, Political Department.

SIR.—Since the last application to Government on behalf of the Committee, regarding a new line of road from Kartagola to Titalia, circumstances have come to our knowledge which I am instructed to communicate for the information and consideration of His Honor, the President in Council.

2. In former years there was an excellent road from Berhampore to Dinagore, and though now out of repair, it is so much shorter, that Native Travellers still prefer it to the more circuitous one by Mahlah.

3. If this line could now be opened to Dinagore and continued thence to Titalia, passengers by the Steamers could be dropped at the mouth of the Akhmatunda, where they would join the dawk Road, and by uniting at one point additional facilities for Travellers would soon follow.

4. Mr. Halkett, the Acting Collector at Dinagore, has already obtained the sanction of Government to employ the Prisoners at that station to a certain extent; and Dr. Wilkie reports most favorably on the effect this measure has produced on the state of their health. There appears to be no impediment therefore to these prisoners being allowed to construct so useful a work as that now recommended, and on the subject of its practicability and early completion, I take the liberty to quote an extract of a letter from Mr. Halkett, to the address of the Secretary of the Association received a few days ago. "If Government will allow me the use of the convicts, I will engage with the Rs. 7,000 I have got, to make a Buggy road from the Ganges to Titalia before the setting in of the hot winds, but to enable me to do this, no time must be lost."

5. In making the present application, the Committee by no means desire that the other Road proposed from Kartagola should be abandoned. It will undoubtedly be one of great Public utility, and must always be the best approach to Titalia for persons coming from the Western Provinces. But so far as the Darjeling Association and the Bengal Community are immediately concerned, the line now recommended would prove of infinitely greater service, and I trust, therefore, the Committee will be excused for pressing the early attention of His Honor the President in Council to the subject.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient Servant,

(Signed) J. W. GRANT,

Chairman of the Darjeling Committee.

Calcutta, 28th October, 1839.

To J. W. GRANT, Esq.

Chairman of the Darjeling Committee.

Sir.—I am directed by the Hon'ble the President in Council, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated 28th ultimo, regarding the construction of a Road from Berhampore to Dinagepore, and continued thence to Titalya.

2. In reply, I am desired to state, that the Government cannot pass any orders in respect to the construction of the road in question, until more fully informed of the nature of the funds stated by you to be at Mr. Halkett's disposal for the purpose.

3. A special reference will be made to Mr. Halkett, and a copy of this correspondence be furnished him direct for his information.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient and humble servant,

Secretary to the Government of India.

Fort William, 6th November, 1839.

The following resolutions were passed, after the reading of the report had been completed :

1.—That the Report now read be received and adopted. Moved by Mr. Deane and unanimously carried.

2. That the call for payment of the last instalment of Rs. 50 per share be now ordered. Moved by Mr. Cragg and seconded by Mr. Davidson, and carried with one dissent, who afterwards withdrew his objection.

3.—That the Committee be requested to ascertain among the present shareholders, and all others interested in the success of the Sanatorium, how many additional shares these parties are disposed to take, and to report the same to another general meeting. Moved by Capt. Bruce and seconded by Mr. Smoult, carried nem. con.

4.—That the thanks of this meeting be given to Mr. Halkett for his activity and zeal in suggesting and carrying on the repairs of the Titalya Road. Moved by Mr. Patrick and carried by acclamation.

5.—That the Committee be requested to draw the attention of Government again to the subject of the Road to Titalya, viz Bogwongola, and further to endeavour through the proper channel to have a line of bangalows constructed from Calcutta, to within a night's run of Titalya. Moved by Capt. Hannington, seconded by Capt. Clapperton, and carried by acclamation.

6.—Thanks to the chairman being proposed, was carried unanimously, and the meeting separated.—Huskara, December 18.

INDIGO PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION.

At a meeting of the Committee of the Indigo Planters' Association, held at the Town Hall, this 21st day of December, 1839.

PRESENT.

Mr. Vint in the Chair.

Messrs. Mackilligan, Richards, Brae, Colin Campbell, Chas. Oman, Watson, Clark, Bagshaw, Cragg, Dearie, R. J. R. Campbell, J. P. Wise, and George Benton.

Resolved.—On the motion of Mr. Watson, seconded by Mr. Clark.

That the chairman do address a circular letter to Indigo Planter's generally, intimating the formation of the Indigo Planters' Association, with a copy of the proceedings of the first General Meeting held at the Town Hall on the 19th instant, together with the proceedings of the Committee of this day, requesting them to state, whether they are disposed to join the Society, and if so, to intimate the same to the Committee, and to request that they will at the same time favor the Committee with any suggestions that they may deem expedient with a view to assist in framing the Rules and Regulations of the Society.

Resolved.—On the motion of Mr. Remfrey, seconded by Mr. Bruce.

That an Entrance Fee of 16 Rs. be paid by each member on his admission to this Association.

Resolved.—On the motion of Mr. Oman, seconded by Mr. R. Campbell,

That the annual subscriptions of each member of this Society be not less than 10 Rs., and not more than 16 Rs. to be determined hereafter, according to the annual expense of the Association.

Resolved.—On the motion of Mr. C. J. Richards, seconded by Mr. J. P. Wise.

That in the opinion of this Committee it is expedient to form in each Indigo District—a District Committee to correspond with the Central Committee in Calcutta, the members of these Committees Ex-Officio to be members of the Central Committee when in Calcutta.

Resolved.—On the motion of Mr. Mackilligan, seconded by Mr. Colin Campbell.

Resolved.—That the Chairman be requested to circulate a subscription book, and that the Funds when realized be deposited in the Union Bank.

Read a letter from Mr. Fell, expressing his regret that sudden illness prevents his attending the meeting, and he is under the necessity of resigning the office the Association has done him the honor of conferring upon him.

Resolved.—Upon the motion of Mr. Cragg, seconded by Mr. Wise.

That Mr. Bagshaw having consented to act as honorary Secretary till the next meeting, the Committee thankfully accept of his services.

Upon the motion of Mr. Cragg, seconded by Mr. Brae.

Mr. Conhar of Purneah is elected a Member of the Provisional Committee.

Upon the motion of Mr. Bagshaw, seconded by Mr. Barton, Mr. Pelletreau of Mirzapore is elected a member of the Provisional Committee.

Upon the motion of Mr. Brae, seconded by Mr. Dearie.

Mr. Martin of the firm of Cockerell and Co. is elected a member of the Committee in the room of Mr. Larpent who is unable to accept the office.

Resolved.—Upon the motion of Mr. Watson, seconded by Mr. Barton,

That the Provisional Committee will lay before a general meeting of the Association, to be held at the Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 15th day of January next, at 10 o'clock, the Rules and Regulations which they have been deputed to prepare, and will then be prepared to recommend a fit person as Secretary to the Association.

N. B. The members will dine together at the Town Hall in the evening, to celebrate the occasion.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

The Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, have to apprise the Subscribers and the Public at large, which they do with extreme regret, that they received by the last Overland Mail, the following letter from the Court of Directors to Mr. Curtis, which they have now the honor to publish for general information.

The publication has been delayed in consequence of some protracted but cordial discussions which it has been considered desirable to hold with the representative of the "East India Steam Navigation Company."

To T. A. CURTIS Esq.

SIR,—I have laid before the Court of Directors of the East India Company, your letters dated respectively the 14th May, the 3d July and the 10th ultimo, relating to a proposal for the conduct of the Steam Communication with India and Ceylon, by means of a private Company to be established for the purpose.

In reply, I am commanded to inform you, that the Court are duly sensible of the advantages of maintaining an efficient Steam Communication with India, and that their anxious endeavours have been and are still directed to the accomplishment of that object. To any well devised measure by which the established means of Communication may be extended, the Court would be ready to afford due encouragement; but in the present state of circumstances, they are unwilling now to enter into any arrangement affecting the measure in progress regarding the Communications between Suez and Bombay.

I am, &c.

(Signed) J. C. MELVILL.

East India House, 14th October, 1839.

The above letter was only received by Mr. Curtis just as the last mail was closing, just in time to have it copied with an intimation from that gentleman that he would immediately call a Meeting of the Committee to determine on future proceedings. In the mean time, this Committee beg to assure the subscribers and the public at large, that they are determined to continue to the utmost of their power, and with unabated zeal, that unreserved and entire support to Mr. Curtis, which that gentleman's disinterested and admirable conduct so justly entitles him to expect. The Committee, in arriving at this determination, which will, they trust, meet the unqualified support and zealous co-operation of the Subscribers, conceive that they are only fulfilling the duties which devolved upon them after the meeting of the 15th April last; and that they are stilling the wishes of the public, as expressed in the Petition to the Hon'ble the Deputy Governor of Bengal, adopted by the public meeting of the 5th October last.

By order of the Committee,

(Signed) C. B. GREENLAW, Secretary.

Town Hall, Calcutta, 27th Dec, 1839.

We publish with regret, a Communication from the Bengal Steam Committee, which includes a letter from the Secretary of the Court Directors of the East India Company, to the address of Mr. T. A. Curtis of London, giving a decided negative to the proposals of the "Comprehensive" Company. The publication of this communication, which came by the last mail, has been delayed, in consequence, it is stated, of "some protracted but cordial discussion, which it has been considered desirable to hold with the representative of the East India Steam Navigation Company," which means, we suppose, Mr. F. E. M. Furton, Chief of the Precursors.

The Committee assure the subscribers to the Steam Fund, that they are "determined to continue, to the utmost of their power, and with unabated zeal, that unreserved and entire support to Mr. Curtis, which that gentleman's disinterested and admirable conduct so justly entitles him to expect," to meet the unqualified support and zealous co-operation of the subscribers," in reference to the duties which devolved upon them after the meeting of the 15th April last, and in furtherance of the wishes expressed in the petition presented to the Deputy-Governor in October last.

Circumstances have somewhat changed since then, it is true, but yet, while hope of success remains, we ought to persevere in our attempts to obtain the full "Comprehensive" plan. When Mr. Curtis abandons hope, we of the Ditch may safely do so—but not until then. It will be wise, however, we think, to advise Mr. Curtis of the proceedings of the Precursors, and authorize him to make such arrangements as he may deem expedient with the London Agents of that body, whenever he is satisfied that his further exertions to obtain the "Comprehensive" scheme are useless. This has probably been already done by the Committee, or will be done, in due season, and we are quite sure that our very zealous Steam Secretary, will be the first and most willing man to bring into operation the next best plan, when he is satisfied that the first and best of all plans, the "Comprehensive" cannot be effected. A quarterly communication between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon and Suez, will be good—but a monthly intercourse will be better, and will satisfy both passengers and letter writers.—Hurkaru, December 28,

THE SANS SOUCI.

Though the three pieces performed on Thursday the 12th Dec. had all been acted at the Sans Souci more than once before, there was a full house to witness their repetition.

Some of the characters in "The Welch Girl" were represented by performers to whom they were quite new. Thus, in consequence of the lamented illness of Mrs. Francis, Mrs. Tomson was called upon to act old Dorcas; no doubt, a very short notice, and considering the disadvantages under which she laboured, she performed the part in a most creditable manner. In assuming the tone of an old woman, however, she made it more querulous than was necessary or pleasant, and, in fact quite overdid it. Otherwise she filled Mrs. Francis' place more ably than could have been expected, when the character was so much out of her proper line.

Another fresh hand in this piece was Mr. Mackechnie who took the part of David the steward. Mackechnie will in time be a very good actor, and be capable of taking the Secretary's parts in case a fit of bona fide gout, induced by a successful imitation of that delectable endowment, should lay "the old man" on the shelf for a while. There is, however, one bad habit which Mr. Mackechnie would do well to shake off, viz. that of indulging in incessant hem! hem! and he had got an inveterate whim. But who assigned to him the footman's costume and the ridiculous wig? How could a man in a white coat trimmed with scarlet, and shorts of the latter colour, reasonably fly into a passion with Sir Owen for calling him a footman? The character of David is a highly respectable one, and he should not have been so absurdly dressed and bewigged. The best point in Mr. Mackechnie's acting was in the reconciliation of David and Sir Owen. The kindly feelings of the old man mingling with his offended pride and just indignation, and together peaking in vent themselves in tears, were most naturally represented. The motion of the hands, in particular, was strikingly in accordance with the feelings supposed to be at work in his mind.

Sir Owen Griffiths, by the Secretary, was the same kind hearted, amorous, and vain septuagenarian represented as truly as before. Algernon, in Alfred, exhibited as much improvement upon his first attempt at the character, as might have been anticipated; but he is not great in light comic parts. Miss Leach, as Julia, was, as usual, and that is all that need be said in her praise. Her singing was delightful.

The farce of "But However" was the favourite piece of the night, if the applause it elicited may be taken as proof thereof. This honorable preference it owed as much probably, to the comic powers of Muster Mollus, as to the intrinsic comicality and wit of the piece. With Mollus for Caleb Chizzlar it could not fail to be most hoister, once applauded, not only by the smiting of palms, which might be a matter of courtesy, but by the unequivocal homage of the risible muscles. Muster Heartwell; looked and acted very well as Mr. Stanwell; much better it was thought than on the former occasion. He has a good conception of the character of an English yeoman. The Secretary should, if possible, eschew all such characters as that of young Squire Cashmere. No man is great in all things; Ne actor, &c. — Mackechnie's Gaby was natural and therefore good in the way.

Mrs. Leach, as the buxom landlady of the Three Hollies, Mrs. Juniper, was in dress, tone, and manner just the thing, though the part is not quite in her line, and must have been undertaken at a short notice. Mrs. Tomson's Julia reminded the audience of that lady's first attempts displaying the old faults, stiffness and want of feeling.

The vacancy occasioned in the piece of "One Hour" by the illness of Mrs. Francis, was ingeniously filled up by substituting an uncle for an aunt, Mr. Beau for Mrs. Beau, the Secretary for Mr. Francis. The alteration was completely successful, and, apparently, unattended by any inconvenience.

Algernon and Mrs. Leach, as the hero and heroine of the piece, especially in the scene of the one hour's interview, were almost beyond criticism, and were much applauded. Mr. Tomson's Fanny was cold and formal as her Julia of the preceding piece. Surely after doing such wonders in Maline Deschoppelles and Sally, she is not going to let her laurels wither. Mackechnie, as O'Leary, appeared to be quite at home, and represented the love-lorn Liberatorian too man in a very quiet and natural manner, without disfiguring the part, as he did his Tom Moore, by ill-judged efforts to create a laugh at the expense of all taste and consistency.

The Ball scene—quadrille, cachucha, any extravagance, must not be forgotten. The number and splendour of the costumes were greater than on former occasions, and consequently the Carnival Ball was a more like affair. The quadrille was danced to audible music supplied by the voxie orchestra, which was another great improvement. — Harkara, Dec. 16.

PUBLIC EXAMINATIONS.

PARENTAL ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.

The 6th and 7th Classes were first called up, and examined in Reading, Spelling, English Grammar, Geography, Scripture History, &c. Messrs Speed, Kirkpatrick, Revd. Mr. Boyer, and Revd. Mr. Boaz, conducted the examination.

The 5th Class was then examined in Reading, English Grammar, Geography, Lessons on things, &c.

At about 11 o'clock, the examination of the 1st Class commenced. The pupils were examined by Capt. D. L. Richardson in English Literature, in which there were nearly 100 questions proposed by that gentleman, and answered with a degree of promptness that can hardly be conceived. Capt. D. L. R. expressed himself highly satisfied with the acquirements of the students. The examination on the evidences of Christianity was conducted chiefly by Revds. Martin, Boyer, Pickance and Boaz, and the result was very satisfactory.

Latin was then called up, and the Pupils read and construed from Cicero's Orations against 2 Cæcilius Horace, 12th Ode, 1st Book and 2nd Book of Virgil. The examination, which was conducted by the Revd. Dr. Charles, the Archdeacon, Revds. Martins, and Pickance and several other Gentlemen of classical attainments, was very strict, and took up more than an hour. Dr. Charles expressed himself very favorably, with regard to the result of the examination, and was of opinion that the pupils had made considerable improvement, since he had occasion to see them last.

In Greek the pupils read from the 21 Chap. of St John's Gospel, and acquitted themselves very creditably considering the short time they had devoted themselves to that study.

They were then examined in Political economy by Dr. Charles, after which Master G. Kellner read his essay on "the beneficial effects of Christianity." Mr. Byrn, the Secretary to the Institution, examined the class in the History of India. In every branch of study, this class afforded the highest satisfaction, and all were much gratified at the readiness and correctness with which the most difficult questions were answered.

The 4th Class, which came up immediately after the 5th, was examined by Messrs. Speed and Revd. Mr. Hoaz. The first read from the History of England, and proposed a few sentences from the same Book. They were then questioned in the Histories of England and Rome, the use of the Globes, the Geography of India, and Scripture History. The result of the whole was very satisfactory.

The 3rd Class read and construed a few sentences from the 3rd Book of Euclid. The examination was chiefly conducted by Mr. Speed and Revd. Mr. Hoaz. Questions in Mechanics were then proposed. Two or three of the students were examined in Geometry, in which they have gone through the 1st Book, Histories of England and Rome, Geography and Book-keeping then followed. The examination of this class also gave general satisfaction.

The 2nd Class read and construed from the 1st and 2nd Books of Caesar, in which they acquitted themselves very satisfactorily. The Histories of Rome and England were then taken up, in which the questions were answered with promptness. The pupils were then examined on the evidences of Christianity, by the Revd. Mr. Wibrow.

About 3 o'clock, the Oorloo and the Bengalee classes were called up. The former was examined by Mr. C. Glass, an accomplished Oorloo and Persian scholar. The boys who had studied this recently introduced branch of knowledge for only 10 months, acquitted themselves very creditably; they read out of printed Oorloo Books in Persian characters, and translated what they read into English. Mr. Glass at the close of the examination, expressed himself satisfied with the result; and strongly urged upon the attention of the students the necessity and the advantages of learning the Vernacular languages.

The Bengalee class were examined by Messrs. M. Crow and J. D'Cruze, and afforded even greater satisfaction than the Oorloo. The method of examining in this was similar to that adopted in the Oorloo classes. At the close, Mr. Crow made a few suitable observations calculated to encourage the students in the prosecution of their Vernacular studies, the substance of which he explained to the Pundits in Bengali.

The second division of the third class was examined at about 4 o'clock. The examination began with Latin. The children were then examined in the Histories of England and Rome, in which they acquitted themselves creditably.

Before the distribution of the prizes, Mr. Speed addressed the Meeting in an elegant speech, the substance of which is as follows:

"I have been acquainted with this Institution since 1831, and I have paid particular attention to the examination as it has passed before me, with the view of testing a progress, and I have much pleasure in observing, that the education has attained a much higher tone than when I first became acquainted with it. When I first saw it, the Geography and the History of India were unknown. Although acquainted with most of the countries of Europe both in their Geography and History—they would not, if asked to go to Delhi, know whether to turn to the East, the West, the North or the South; you have seen that such would not be a difficulty now. Above all, you have seen how the attention so recently, as it has been told to you by another gentleman, paid to the studies of the vernacular languages when I first knew the Institution, it was not thought of; but our sons here educated are to seek here their fortunes, they are not to look to another country for their prospects, their exertions are to be bestowed on this country, the country of their birth, and where they are to look for spending the rest of their days. A wide field is opening for them in employ of a public nature; but as Deputy Collectors they would have before been useless, they can now themselves test the accuracy of their accounts and the deeds to correspondence in their Kutcheries. What would be their situation as Sudder Amcees, and in other Judicial Offices if they could not themselves test the evidences and the documents brought before them? You have seen they would not now be at a loss in these respects, and I trust, that the highest offices will ere long be open to their ambition. In conclusion, whilst hoping that the sciences and more mechanical branches of education will not be neglected, I cannot but congratulate you on the high advancement made in the last eight years, and I trust you will join me in the hope that the next eight may show equal progress."

After this, Mr. Byrn addressed the audience in a neat speech, thanking them for the interest they had taken throughout the examination. He was glad he said, to find that the general result of the examination was so satisfactory, and more particularly to know the high opinion which the examiners had expressed with regard to the extent which the pupils of the Institution displayed of their knowledge in Scripture History. He then addressed the pupils, impressing upon their minds the necessity of perseverance in their moral studies, and prominently called their attention to the necessity of sanctifying their exertions both in and out of school by a knowledge of the word of God, in which they had been strictly examined and found to be well informed.

The business of the day concluded by the distribution of Prizes to the successful candidates. These were delivered by Mr. Montague, the head Master, with suitable remarks.

A day previous to the examination, the 1st class had been strictly examined by Mr. V. L. Rees, of the Survey Department. The following is his opinion:—

To W. BYRN, Esq.

My Dear Sir,—It afforded me great pleasure to find on examining the pupils of the first class of the Parental Academic Institution, that they solved with much neatness and accuracy every question I proposed to them, either in Geometry, Algebra or Trigonometry. Having had no opportunity of being acquainted with the extent of their knowledge in the Mathematics in former years, I cannot speak of their progress in that regard, but I am happy to say that remembering the acquirements of young gentlemen of the same age of other schools, and comparing them with those under the tuition of Mr. Montague, the result is much in favor of the latter.

I would not like to distinguish Master Hollingbery for superior attainments.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) V. L. REES.

Calcutta, 12th December, 1839.

Since writing the account which appeared in yesterday's Hurkaru, we have been favored with the following letter written by Capt. Richardson, expressive of his opinion of the attainments of the pupils of the Parental Academic in general literature, &c.

MY DEAR SIR,—I must not omit to express my gratification at the manner in which the first class of the Parental Academic Institution answered the very numerous questions which I put to them in English Literature, from the time of Chaucer to the present day. I should not have volunteered this testimony to their merits if I had merely put a few questions as a visitor; but as you paid me the compliment of requesting me to undertake the task of examination, you may probably expect me to furnish you with a written report of the result.

I confess that I did not expect the students would have answered so readily the questions put to them because they implied a knowledge of the History of English Literature that is very rarely communicated to boys at School.

I cordially congratulate all concerned, both the instructors and the pupils, on the impression which this public examination must have left upon the minds of a numerous and respectable audience.

Your very truly,

Cornipore, 16th Dec., 1839. D. L. RICHARDSON.

THE HIGH SCHOOL.

The boys of the High School were examined yesterday morning, in the presence of a numerous party of ladies and gentlemen. Among the company were the Archdeacon, the Revd. Messrs Pratt, Boyce, Garstin, Morton McQueen and other clergymen.

Previous to the examination, the Rector, Mr. Graves, addressing the Archdeacon, who presided on the occasion, informed him, that since the last annual examination, the system of education followed at the school had been improved by the introduction of the vernacular languages, Hindoostani, and Bengali, into the three first classes. French had also been introduced, as it was thought it would be of much use in the prosecution of the higher branches of science, many valuable works being written in that language. Another addition to the former course of study was Logic, in the rudiments of which some of the boys had made considerable progress.

The Institution, Mr. Graves said, was now in as flourishing a state as it ever had been since the time of its establishment, and the increased number of pupils had rendered it necessary to provide two additional rooms for their accommodation.

The main object of the institution, the learned Rector observed, was the improvement of the morals of the youths educated therein. This object, he was happy to say, had been so far effected, that, although during the past year, there had occurred one or two instances of gross misconduct, their behaviour had, on the whole, been better than during last year.

In concluding his address, Mr. Graves said, that the rewards which were to be distributed to the deserving, were not given for the purpose of exciting an improper spirit of rivalry amongst the boys, but as an encouragement to those receiving them to persevere in the course by which they had rendered themselves worthy of them.

At the close of the Rector's address, which was remarkable for its elegance, and for the impressive manner in which it was delivered the examination commenced. It was chiefly conducted by the teachers of the respective classes, aided occasionally by the Archdeacon and other Revd. gentlemen. If the true object of a public examination is to ascertain the amount of knowledge really possessed by the examined, and not to present a delusive exhibition of superficial acquirements, for which the pupil is indebted to the method familiarly but emphatically called "cramming," the plan of allowing a teacher to take the principal part in the examination of the boys under his charge, is decidedly a bad one. These questions are too apt to be those which from frequent practice the pupil have acquired a most admirable glibness in answering. They will too, in all probability be leading questions and such as almost supply their own answer. They will be such as by their mere associations of words will suggest a reply which can scarcely fail to be true as an echo, and very much for the same reason. As long as the examiner is one whose interest it is that the examined should on that particular occasion display no want of readiness in their replies, whatever may be their real abilities, it must be thus in a greater or less degree. That there was in some measure the case at the examination of the High School, no one probably will attempt to deny. So long as the teacher went on with the questions which had, in all probability, been hanging in the ears of the boys for the last month or so, it was all very well, and the answers slid smoothly from their tongues. But when any out-of-the-beaten-track query was propounded by the Archdeacon or any other impartial gentleman present, it generally proved a puzzler to the majority of the youngsters. Would it not be better to eschew cramming, and to let the friends of the pupils see the true quantum of substantial knowledge which has been legitimately instilled into the minds of their young connections. Such a course would, at all events, prevent much disappointment to many a fond parent, who, relying on the deceitful promise held forth by success in one of those meretricious exhibitions, felicitates himself in the notion that his son is a prodigy of learning, and is only roused out of the pleasant dream by finding him grow up into a stupid and ignorant young man.

Scripture History seems most properly to hold a high place in the system of education at this School, and if the examination afforded any criterion, the boys are pretty well versed in its more prominent points. Questions from Roman and English History were also answered with considerable readiness and correctness.

In the languages, very creditable exhibitions were made of proficiency in Greek and Latin, as well as in the more immediately and extensively useful Bengali and Hindoostani. In the two latter tongues, the pupils read and translated easy tables, &c.

Geographical examination was almost wholly confined to a few questions about Africa, its boundaries, divisions, &c. and to pointing out on the map the towns, rivers &c. of Hindoostani. Logic and Dialectics were slightly touched upon by some of the senior boys, who betrayed no lack of acquaintance with the simpler portions of those exact sciences.

At the conclusion of the examination, the Archdeacon briefly addressed the boys, and told them that it was the opinion of himself and other gentlemen who had assisted in the examination, that the result had been to the full as satisfactory as on the previous occasion. This, he said, was all that could be hoped for, as so many changes took place during the course of the year it was impossible to ascertain with any degree of certainty the improvement which had really been effected. The Archdeacon then added a short exhortation to the boys touching their moral, conduct, telling them to make it the end and aim of their lives to exemplify the instruction which they received in that seminary.

The reward books were then distributed to the happy youths, to whom the judgment of the Rector had awarded them. The Archdeacon addressed to each successful candidate, a few words expressive of his pleasure in witnessing the improvement which each individual had made. Business was over and the company dispersed at about one o'clock.

In consequence of the premises having to undergo some repairs, it has been found necessary to make the Christmas vacation of more than the usual length of one month.

The school will re-open on the 17th January 1840. Hurkaru; Dec. 18.]

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society, Calcutta held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, on the 7th December, 1839.

T. A. Wethered, Esq., proposed at the last meeting was ballotted for and duly elected.

The following communications were presented.

From W. A. Green, Esq., of Howrah, entitled cases of Sea Scurvy or Putro Adynance Fever, of fever complicated with severe spleen disease, with remarks to point out severally a similarity in their probable causes in their nature, and in some of their symptoms.

From J. Brander, Esq., M. D. — Remarks upon Retention of Urine with an account of a novel mode of operating for the relief of the disease by that gentleman.

From J. Esdaile, Esq., M. D. of Hooghly, containing a case of Tetanus successfully treated by the administration of hemp.

The two former papers were then read and discussed.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting was held at the Society's Room, Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 11th Dec. 1839.

The Hon'ble Sir E. Ryan, President, in the Chair.
(Sixteen Members present.)

The proceedings of the last Meeting were submitted and confirmed.

MEMBERS ELECTED.

The Gentlemen proposed at the last Meeting were elected Members, viz:—

His Highness Prince Gholam Mahomed, Dr. John Campbell, Dr. John Thos. Pearson, Messrs. Longueville Clark, F. A. J. Elson, H. Andrew, J. S. Holdern, Alfred Parker, Robert Bluntish and James R. Logan.

FOR ELECTION:

The names of the following Gentlemen were read as candidates for election:

Henry Armstrong, Esq.,—(Civil Service Futteghur.) proposed by Major Carter, seconded by Colonel McLeod.

Major Thos. Robinson (Offg. Supt. of the Bhutty States.)—proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Strong.

Dr. J. M. Brander, (Medical Service),—proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Wiss.

J. S. Mendes, Esq. of Calcutta,—proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Mr. Storm.

Henry Hill, Esq. of Tirhoot,—proposed by Mr. C. J. Richards, seconded by Dr. Spry.

James Macanish, Esq. (Medical Service, Rardwan), proposed by Mr. James Colquhoun, seconded by Dr. Spry.

Arch. Drummond, Esq. of Kishnaghor — Proposed by Mr. Charles Deverinne, seconded by Dr. Spry.

James Savi, Esq. of Kishnagur,—proposed by Mr. Charles Deverinne, seconded by Dr. Spry.

PRESENTATION TO THE SOCIETY.

1.—Six copies of the Proceedings of the Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, from December 1838 to June 1839.—Presented by the Royal Asiatic Society.

2.—Twenty copies of a Pamphlet on the Culture of Flax in India. Presented by Messrs Hamilton and Co.

3.—The Cultivator: published by the New York State Agricultural Society—(four volumes folio, bound in one.)

4.—The American Gardener's Magazine of Horticulture, &c. for 1835 36 37 and 38, conducted by C. M. Harvey—four volumes octavo.

5.—The American Flower Garden Directory, by Robert Bulsh.

6.—The Young Gardener's Assistant, by T. Bridgeman.

7.—The Complete Farmer and Rural Economist, by Thos. Fesenden.

8.—Chemistry applied to Agriculture, by J. A. Chaptal.

2.—Bank of Fruits.

10.—A Manual on the Culture of Silk, &c., by J. H. Cobb.

The above American Works (Nos. 8 to 10 have been purchased by the Society through Mr. Dixwell, of Boston 11.—Three hundred copies of the second volume of the Society's own Transactions, in Bengalee, have also been received from the Serampore Press.

Museum.

1. A specimen of peculiarly fine description of Wheat, grown in the Bhutty States. Printed by Major Robinson, Superintendent of Bhutty States, and referred to the Agricultural Committee.

2. Two specimens of Coffee grown at Jumalpoore in the Sylhet District. No. 1 of last year's growth, and No. 2 of the present year's gathering. Major Garstin, who presents these specimens to the Society, states he was struck by the luxuriant growth of the Coffee trees at Jumalpoore, at present (No. 2 covered with berries nearly ripe, and from what he can learn of them he believes, the trees were planted 4 or 5 years ago; but for the last two years no particular attention has been paid to them or the preparation of the berries. Major Garstin considers that there is no doubt of the plants thriving well and affording an article of export to a large extent if properly encouraged. He has observed trees totally unprotected producing abundant crops.

3. Samples of Upland Georgia Cotton, grown on his Estates at Hanni. Presented by Colonel Skinner. A very fine specimen.

4. Samples of Cotton, both indigenous and foreign from the public garden and district of Dacca. Also a specimen of soil in which the best sorts of Dacca Cotton grows, and canes, the produce of the Dacca garden. Presented by Mr. Dearman, Deputy Collector through Mr. Wise. Referred to the Cotton Committee.

5.—Samples of Vegetable fibre from two very common weeds found growing at Tavny. No. 1, the best people make a use of; and No. 2, the Tanyers use only in making fishing lines of. Presented by Major McFarquhar. Referred to the Hemp and Flax Committee.

6. Two Cotton cleaning Machines with spare wheel, &c. Presented by Government.

7. Half a mound of Dundee Flax seed. Presented by Wm. Bladden, Jr. Esq., for distribution.

8. Six sacks of American Maize and grass seeds, an American plough, a cultivator, and a common Planter. Purchased by the Society, these seeds, which are in excellent order, are ready for distribution, and the implements may be expected as models.

9. Specimens of cotton the produce of acclimated foreign seed grown in the Puralen district, Chota Nagpore. Presented by Captain Hunwington. Referred to the Cotton Committee.

10. A small sample of Coffee from young Seedling planted in his garden at Allipore in 1836, and appropriated with shade of any kind. From 100 trees 25 seeds are expected to be obtained. Presented by Mr. Speed.

11. A specimen of Paul with a branch of the Hibiscus shrub from which it is obtained. Presented by Mr. Wilson, through Mr. Wills. Referred to the Cotton Committee.

Report of the Silk Committee on a specimen of Raw silk prepared from the Moonga Cocoon of Assam, by Messrs. Watkins and Mendes, and presented to The Agricultural and Horticultural Society by Captain Jenkins.

The Honble the President read the following Report by the Silk Committee.

Your Committee have carefully examined the specimen of Raw Silk submitted to them for inspection, and beg to offer the following report for the information of the Society.

The specimen in question may be considered as the best of several of a similar nature that have been brought to the notice of the Society, the fibre is strong and lustreous, though the thread would have been better had it been somewhat coarser; the sample may however be deemed as very promising, more especially when it is considered that it is the first specimen of this description of Silk that has been made by Messrs. Watkins and Mendes from Cocoons of very indifferent quality.

Your Committee would beg to recommend that the Manufacturers be requested to forward to the Society specimens of this Silk prepared of various degrees of fineness, from fine to coarse and very coarse, put up in style and characters as much as possible resembling the best Bengal Raw Silk, the skeins being similar in size and length of reel to those of the usual Raw Silk; and that these be accompanied with a full and particular account of the natural growth, collection, manufacture, cost, &c. of the staple.

Your Committee further recommend that the samples so prepared, should be not less than 20 skeins in the aggregate, and that the manufacturers be requested to forward the same with the least practicable delay; the Society adequately remunerating them for the expenses and trouble which this request may occasion.

Your Committee being of opinion, from the sample now brought to their notice, that this article is calculated to become of extensive and valuable use to our home manufactures, would, in conclusion, beg to suggest that on receipt of the samples above alluded to, the greater portion be transmitted to the Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, with request, that that body would be pleased to furnish the Society with reports from the most eminent silk manufacturers and dyers, in order that the fullest information may be obtained on this interesting subject.

Award of the Gold Medal of the Society to Mr. Rose, for the best sample of Silk.

Mr. Rose, having forwarded the details connected with the method adopted by him in preparing his Raw Silk, the Report of the Committee was read, and confirmed according to Mr. Rose, the Society's Gold Medal,

Report of progress made by the Society in the matter of the extension of the Cotton Cultivation.

The Hon'ble the President of the Society brought to the notice of the Meeting the circumstances connected with the progress made in forwarding the views of Government relative to the spread of the cotton cultivation throughout India. He mentioned that the Members must be aware, from what occurred at the last Meeting, that the Home Government had resolved on embarking on another experiment for the purpose of establishing the cotton cultivation throughout the empire on an improved footing; and that the Governor General, for the purpose of carrying out the intentions of the Court of Directors, had called upon the Society to suggest the mode in which the plans of the Government should be carried into effect. His absence from Calcutta, had prevented him, as he had desired, from being present at the last Meeting and from taking a part in the settlement of the preliminary steps that were necessary for considering this question; but he found that the course adopted was the one which he should have recommended; namely, in addition to the present standing Cotton Committee of the names of a few Members whose practical experience in the agricultural habits of the people of the different provinces would enable a plan to be arrived at that should be calculated to ensure the designs of Government the most perfect success; and that besides this, an application should be made to such residents in the interior whose practical knowledge would be useful. This, he said, had already been done, and he had now only to mention that as the undertaking was one of the utmost importance to the welfare of India it was desirable that the plan should not be too hastily adopted. That the papers were now before the Committee for the collection of the sentiments of the Members, and, that as the cotton cultivation was one in which he had always taken a great interest, and as active a part as far as his limited knowledge of the subject would admit, it was his intention to attend at the Meeting of the Special Committee and consider with the Members of it the facts and observations which they were collecting from all parts of India and from which he hoped a good practical scheme for the management of the great undertaking would be secured. It was for these reasons that the Committee was not prepared with their report for submission at the present Meeting.

Annual Horticultural Exhibition and Anniversary Dinner of the Society.

A resolution was passed that from the forward state of the vegetables of the season the Annual Horticultural Exhibition of the Society should be held on Thursday the 9th proximo, and that the Anniversary Dinner shall be on the evening of that day.

Members who have forfeited their rights from not paying their subscriptions.

The Hon'ble the President brought to the notice of the Meeting, that there were certain Members of the Society, who had neglected to pay up their subscriptions and who thereby had, agreeably to the 7th rule of the Society, forfeited their rights as Members; although some of them had taken the fullest advantage of the privileges allowed to Members, in obtaining the various benefits which, from time to time, are offered by the Society. Repeated application, he said, had been made to these gentlemen, but, without effect. A resolution was therefore passed that each defaulter should be addressed once more, and that the names of those who had not paid up their arrears at the time of the Anniversary Meeting next month, should be publicly announced and erased from the list.

Information in reply to the address transmitted by the Society to the Home Authorities relative to the excess of duty exacted on East India Rum and Tobacco.

The communication which was first submitted to the attention of the Meeting was an official answer to the address made by the Society in May last, on the subject of inequality of the rum and tobacco duties.

Secretary to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society.

Sir,—With reference to the representation of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors on the subject of the inequality of the duties levied in this country upon tobacco and rum, the produce of the British possessions in the East Indies; and similar articles the produce of the British possessions in America and the West Indies, I am directed to transmit to you for information the accompanying Copy of an Extract from the Proceedings of the Hon'ble the President of the Council of India in Council in the Financial Department No. 1030 dated the 27th ultimo, and to request your attention to the 2d Para. of the same.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

H. T. PRINSEP, Secy. to the Govt. of India.

Council Chamber, the 4th December, 1839.

Extract from the proceedings of the Hon'ble the President of the Council of India in Council in the Financial Department, under date the 27th November, 1839.

Our Governor-General of India in Council.

1. We have received from the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, a representation on the subject of the inequality of the duties levied in this country upon Tobacco and Rum, the produce of the British Possessions in the East Indies and similar articles, the produce of the British Possessions in America and the West Indies.

2. We desire that in reply you will inform the Society that the question has for some time past occupied our attention, but that an application to Parliament on the subject in the ensuing session is contemplated.

Signed by two Chairs and eleven Members.

London, the 11th September, 1839.

Ordered, that a copy of the foregoing Letter from the Hon'ble Court of Directors be sent to the General Department, whence the Agricultural and Horticultural Society will be informed, that their representation to the Hon'ble Court on the subject of the inequality of the duties levied in England upon Tobacco and Rum, had been under their consideration for some time past, but an application to Parliament on the subject, was contemplated in the ensuing Session.

Spread of Sugar cultivation at Penang and the Agricultural capabilities generally of the island for the production of staples of Commerce there.

Mr. Logan, who is engaged largely in conducting a sugar plantation at Glasgow, Penang, communicates two interesting documents connected with the capabilities of the island for producing sugar cane, and farinaceous details of the results of an experiment on a scale of several hundred acres made with different varieties of cane, and also notices on many of the productions of the island calculated to be useful in commerce. The paper was transferred to the Committee of papers for eventual publication in the Transactions.

On the Resources and Agricultural capabilities of the Kingdom of Travancore.

A full and valuable account of the Agricultural capabilities of the kingdom of Travancore, by Mr. Stevenson, an Officer in the employ of the Rajah, was submitted. In this document much interesting information relative to the rich and fertile lands of Travancore, is communicated, and the injurious tendency of the system of state monopoly on all the chief Agricultural products such as pepper, cardamoms, ginger, rice, and so on lucidly pointed out. This paper was also transferred to the Committee of Papers.

Hints relative to the interchange of plants between this country and England.

Mr. Cape, of Meerut, observing that the Special Committee of the Society had issued circulars, inviting information relative to the subject of an interchange of plants between India and England, has forwarded to the Secretary, the copy of a communication, the original of which was transmitted two or three years ago to Dr. Lindley, the Secretary of the Horticultural Society of London. This paper which contains many valuable suggestions was referred to the Committee specially appointed by the Society to conduct this branch of enquiry.

Discriminating Duty exacted by the United States Government on Indian Hemp and other Vegetable Fibres, the produce of the East.

The next communication submitted by the Secretary was a note received by him from Mr. Dixwell an American gentleman seeking information on the subject of the Indian Hemp called Sunn, and desiring to know the scientific name by which it is characterized. The motive for which enquiry Mr. Dixwell states to be as follows—In the United States a very heavy duty is exacted on Hemp: but Jute and Manila Hemp are allowed to be landed duty free. But Indian Hemp (Sunn) is not more applicable to purposes for which Russian Hemp is used (not being susceptible of impregnation with tar) than are Jute or Manila Hemp, yet the duty is demanded on Sunn as if it were one and the same with Russian Hemp. It is for the purpose of calling attention to this anomaly that Mr. Dixwell alludes to the circumstance, and thinks that if the United States Government were to put the fibre called Sunn on a footing with Jute and Manila Hemp, it would be the means of opening a new and lucrative market for this peculiar product.

Dr. Spry informed the Meeting, that in his reply to Mr. Dixwell, he had stated to that gentleman, that although we had the genuine hemp plant, Cannabis Sativa, in Bengal, one of the native names of which was Ganja, yet the article which was ordinarily known as Bengal hemp Sunn—was the production of a plant totally distinct from the hemp plant of the North of Europe or Asia, the Scientific name of which was Crotalaria juncea. The jute again was obtained from various species of Cochorus and the Manila hemp from the plantain tribe—the musa textilis.

Agricultural Intelligence from Swan River.

The Secretary submitted a letter which he had received from Mr. Yule, Secretary of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Swan River, in which he communicates the thanks of that Society for the supply of seeds furnished to it by the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, and begs to bring to the notice of the Society the great probability that the "Dhoob Grass" of India would be admirably adapted for the soil of Western Australia. Mr. Yule desires to communicate that the Local Government of Western Australia has come to the determination "that for the present or until private lands shall rise in price in the market, all crown lands in this Colony shall remain and be put up to auction at the minimum price of five shillings per acre."

For all the foregoing presents and communications, the thanks of the meeting were recorded.

HENRY H. SPRY, M. D., Secretary.

SUDDER DEWANNY ADAWLUT.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 11, 1839.

(Before C. Tucker Esquire.)

THE REPRESENTATIVES OF BHAYA JHA V. THE REPRESENTATIVES OF RAJAH GREENAWAYN RAO.

This application, which was postponed from last Thursday, came on this morning.

Mr. C. Reed, (the applicant) attended in person. He was accompanied by Mr. Morton his counsel.

Mr. N. B. E. Baillie attended on behalf of Rajah Beejee Govind Sing, the son and heir of Bhaya Jha. Mr. Surberland, who is the regular moottarkar of Beejee Govind Sing, was unable to attend to-day.

Mr. Reed began to address the Court in English.

Mr. TUCKER said that he could not now permit the proceedings to be in English. The Court had recently decided that all proceedings were to be in the native languages, and it was not in his (the learned Judge's) power, even if he had the inclination, to rescind the resolution of the majority.

Mr. Reed said that he was aware the Court had decided that pleaders were not to address the Court in English; but he urged that as a suitor in the Court he had a right to be heard in his own vernacular language. There was a resolution of the Sudder Court to this effect.

Mr. TUCKER said that the resolution to the contrary was the later of the two. He had no doubt that Mr. Reed could speak fluently enough in the native languages if he chose.

The petition of Mr. C. Reed was then put in. It was written in the Hindoos language and Nagas.

character, and as this character is scarcely ever used in the Court, none of the officers could read it easily.

Mr. Baillie observed that there were former petitions of Mr. Reed's on the file of the Court, which he supposed must be similar to the present. For his part, he really was unable to make out precisely what was the object of the present application. He could only gather it from the report which appeared in the Hurkary (C.) of Thursday last, (which he held in his hand) where he saw it stated that the application was to carry into effect a decree of this Court, and to take the account of the Wazilat due thereunder. Now a similar application had been already made more than once, and refused.

Mr. Tucker enquired before what Judges the application had been brought.

Mr. Baillie said that the application had been made to Mr. SAKSHAPPA and Mr. SMITH, two Judges of this Court, before the rehearing of Sreenarayn's appeal had been granted by the Privy Council, and that those Judges had passed an order refusing the application, and in effect setting aside the order of the 8th September 1817, upon which last order Mr. Reed still relied. The decision of those two Judges could not be reversed without a regular proceedings to review their decision. The case had also been before Mr. ROSE, (late Deputy Governor) when Judge of this Court, but no final order had been made by him; and it had also been before the late Mr. HUTCHINSON, and was pending before him at the time of his death. He, (Mr. Baillie,) supposed that the present application was to revive the proceedings before Mr. HUTCHINSON; but this was out of the question, because part of the prayer of the then petition was to quash the appeal to England instituted by the heirs of Sreenarayn Rao!

Mr. Reed said that what had been stated by Mr. Baillie was nothing but bores! The present application was a very simple one, viz. to carry into effect an order of the Court, which stood unquestioned to the present day. The former proceedings, which were on record, would best show what had been done.

The former proceedings were then produced and read in Court.

It appeared that on the 27th of July 1812, the Sudder Court passed a decree in favour of Bhya Jha, under which Bhya Jha, became entitled to one half of the Zemindarries then in the possession of Sreenarayn, and to the Wazilat from the year 1804. Against this decree Sreenarayn shortly afterwards appealed to the Privy Council.

On the 16th of January 1813, Bhya Jha executed in favour of Mr. C. Reed, the instrument which is the foundation of his present claim. By this agreement, after reciting the services of Mr. Reed, Bhya Jha assigned to him, 'the Zemindarries profits to the Moolkes year 1219 (which corresponds with the date of the decree of July 1812) and whatever should be recoverable from the Dukhheelkara on an account being taken,* and appointed Mr. Reed to conduct and superintend the appeal, and to take the account of the Wazilat, and to prosecute the whole suit to its close.

After the death of Bhya Jha, (who executed other instruments in favour of Mr. Reed, and nephew them to the time of his death) certain judicial proceedings were had in the Zillah Court of Poornah, and the Sudder Dowanny Adawlut, and on the 8th of September 1817, an order was passed by two Judges of the Court, upon full investigation of the case, by which it was ordered 'that the agreement of the 16th of January 1813, executed by Bhya Jha to the said Mr. Reed, be confirmed for prosecuting to a conclusion the appeal to England, and taking an account of the Wazilat or monies realized; the said gentleman (Mr. Reed) having authority in conformity with the tenor of the aforesaid agreement to appear in all Courts and prosecute the above-mentioned matters to a conclusion.'

The decision of the Privy Council confirming the decree of July 1812, was passed in 1834, and in the following year recorded in the Sudder Court. Rajah Berje Govind Sing who had been on the best terms with Mr. C. Reed, up to about the year 1831, who had repeatedly acknowledged the value of the services rendered by him, and had in January 1827 executed an instrument solemnly confirming the instruments executed by his father, suddenly turned against Mr. Reed (having been induced to do so by the influence of evil advisers) and in 1831 revoked the mooktearnamah which Mr. Reed held, and appointed Mr. J. C. C. Sutherland his mookteekar.

After the passing of the decision of the Privy Council, Mr. Reed applied to this Court to be allowed to execute the decree of the Privy Council, as the agreement of January 1813 and the order of September, 1817, expressly empowered him to take the account of the Wazilat, to a great portion of which he was beneficially entitled himself) and as that order further empowered him to appear in all Courts, and to prosecute the suit to a close. This application was opposed by Rajah Berje Govind Sing, on the ground that he had revoked the mooktearnamah previously held by Mr. Reed, since the passing of the Court's order of September 1817. It was conceded on behalf of Mr. Reed that as far as his interest was concerned, the revocation by Berje Govind Sing was mere nullity;—he had no more power to revoke, or in the slightest degree interfere with the right of Mr. Reed to take the account of Wazilat to which he was beneficially entitled under solemn instruments confirmed by the Court, than he had to cancel the deeds and writings executed by his father and himself! It appears from the recorded proceedings that legal opinions on this point were taken by Mr. Reed from the Advocate General (Pearson) and Mr. Furlon, who pronounced it clear beyond all question that 'a power coupled with an interest' was not revocable, though a bare authority might be revoked. The opinions were read to the learned Judges (Messrs. SAKSHAPPA and SMITH); but they said that they had nothing to do with the doctrines of English Law? It seemed clear however that the learned Judges felt the force of the reasoning, because so far from setting aside the agreement of January 1813, and the Sudder Court's order of September 1817, they in effect supported them, declaring that if Rajah Berje Govind Sing acted to the prejudice of Mr. Reed in taking the Wazilat, he would be liable to account to the latter. The learned Judges however concurred in refusing the application of Mr. Reed to be allowed to execute the Privy Council's decree, assigning as a reason that no specific mention was made of the Privy Council, or its decision (which had not then been passed) either in the agreement of January 1813, or in the Sudder Court's order of September 1816.

In 1836,* the Privy Council granted a re-hearing of Sreenarayn's appeal; and in the present year that appeal was re-heard, and the decree of the Sudder Court of July 1812, finally confirmed by the Privy Council. The Privy Council's decree was recorded in the Sudder in August last.

The question thus again arose, who was entitled to take the account of the Wazilat still due from the estate of Sreenarayn under the Sudder's decree; now finally confirmed, of July 27th, 1812.

Mr. Baillie in the first place took the objection that the question had been already decided by Mr. SAKSHAPPA and Mr. SMITH. They had certainly not set aside the order of September 1817, which empowered Mr. Reed to take the Wazilat, but they had expressly refused his application to be allowed to execute the decree of the Privy Council. The present application was substantially the same. This was in effect an application to execute the Privy Council's decree.

* This seems to be rather an extraordinary doctrine. Upon the same principle it might be contended that under a general legacy of house and furniture, a particular chair or table did not pass to the legatee, because not specifically named!

Mr. TUCKER. Not so. The decree of the Privy Council has nothing to do with the taking of the Wasilat. The Wasilat is taken under the decree of this Court.

Mr. REED said he had been informed since his former application was made, that executing the decree of the Privy Council related only to the costs. If so, Rajah Bejee Govind Sing was perfectly welcome to execute that decree! Of course his (Mr. R.'s) present application was to take the Wasilat under the longstanding decree of this Court. And he begged to call the learned Judge's particular attention to this,—that the reasons assigned by Messrs. SHAKESPEARE and RATTNAY were only applicable to the execution of the decree of the Privy Council, the Privy Council's decree not being specified in the agreement of January 1813, or the order of September 1817, whereas the decree of the Sudder Court was specifically mentioned in both.

Mr. BAILLIE took another objection, asserting that this Court's decree of July 1812 had been in fact already fully executed! and that the Judge would find that no Wasilat was due under it.

Mr. REED said that this assertion was absurd on the face of it. If no Wasilat was now due from the estate of Sreenarayn, why all this anxiety on the part of Rajah Bejee Govind Sing, to execute the decree himself, and prevent him (Mr. R.) from executing it? The fact was that many lakhs of rupees were still due. Fraudulent leases had been granted at an under-rent, which would materially affect the calculation of the Wasilat. This circumstance was notorious enough, as certain "Resolutions of Government" in the case of Mr. Baubin, the Judge of Moorreesah in 1809, take strong notice of the existence of these leases, and it was declared by the Sudder Court that if it could have been proved that Mr. Baubin had been cognizant of the granting of these leases, they should at once recommend his dismissal from the service. An adjustment of moone profits was made in the year 1820 by himself, & Mr. Reed) on his own behalf and on behalf of Rajah Bejee Govind Sing, with the heirs of Sreenarayn; but the other party had themselves voluntarily departed from the terms. He challenged Mr. Baillie to show that any thing had been done in execution of the decree since 1820.

Mr. TUCKER said, that he should refer it to the Sienstadar to certify whether or not the decree of 1812 had been fully executed;—not however that his certificate would be conclusive upon the point. With respect to the present petition, it was not sufficiently definite in its prayer. It would be better for Mr. Reed to file a short petition stating in a few lines the object of his application.

Mr. REED said, he should do so in a day or two.

Mr. TUCKER said, that when this petition should be filed, Mr. Baillie might file his answer, and if he contended that the decree was already fully executed, he must bring satisfactory proof of that before the Court.

Stands over.

SUPREME COURT.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 6.

ADJOURNED SITTINGS.

BONNERJEE V. RAMHUTTON ROY.

This was a demurrer to a bill in equity, raising two important questions of "jurisdiction," argued last term by Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith for the demurrer, and Mr. Turlton and Mr. Nardes contra. The case stood over for judgment.

SIR J. P. GRANT. This was a case of great importance, involving a question of jurisdiction, which was argued last term before Mr. Justice Seton and myself. We have mentioned the points to the Chief Justice, and we consider that it would be advisable to have the case re-argued by one counsel on each side. The second day of next term may be fixed for the argument.

Mr. Turlton. Unless, my Lord, it should possibly happen that Rajah Gopeemohun Deb's case should occupy the whole day!

SIR J. P. GRANT admitted the necessity for this proviso!

Re-argument directed.

ROOPCHUND DAI V. FITCHIE.

This was a demurrer to a special plea, argued last term by the Advocate General and Mr. Leith for the demurrer, and Mr. Turlton and Mr. Norton for the plea. This case stood over for judgment.

SIR J. P. GRANT. This was a point of pleading of considerable importance, argued before Mr. Justice Seton and myself; and we think it will be proper that in this case also, there should be a re-argument by one counsel. The second day of next term may be named.

SIR E. RYAN, C. J. Of course I give no opinion upon the questions raised; but I would merely suggest for the consideration of the counsel, whether it would be advisable to re-argue the case. If the circumstances stated in the plea are true, there is no doubt that there exists a defence to the action in some shape, and the question must be raised either on the record or by evidence at the trial.

Re-argument directed.

SREEMUTTY BANNEE DUREESOODNDERY DOSA V. COOAS KISSUNAATH ROY BAHADOOR AND J. C. C. SUTHERLAND.

This was a motion upon notice, that the defendants do bring in and deposit with the proper Officer of the Court, twenty-two chests or boxes containing company's paper, jewels and other valuable property, estimated at about 25 lakhs of rupees.

There was also a motion (a bill and cross-bill having been filed) for priority in the cause and cross-cause.

both bills having been filed within a few days of each other.

Mr. Turton (with whom was Mr. Morton) for the defendants, said that he was happy to inform the Court, that there would be no occasion to present this motion, as an arrangement had been agreed upon between the parties, as far as the present application was concerned, and he hoped that the whole suit (entirely a family suit) would be speedily settled. The affidavits on both sides were very voluminous, and in his (the learned counsel's) opinion, all the material facts stated in the affidavits of the complainants had been fully answered by the affidavits filed in opposition to the motion, except in so far as the defendant admitted the fact of the removal of the property in question. The present right to this property depended upon the construction of the Will of Rajah Huriyannath Roy, the father of Coor Kissenanth Roy; and the defendants were now willing to bring the property into Court, reserving the questions arising upon the will for future consideration, if necessary. The defendant, Coor Kissenanth Roy, would attain the full age of 18 years upon the 12th of February next, and upon that event he would become absolutely entitled upon every construction of the will, to the whole of the property, real and personal. It was very questionable, therefore, whether the Court would hear any thing more of the case!

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Leith) said, that he concurred (in the wish of his learned friends, that this suit should be amicably arranged. He would consent to the property in question being brought into Court, waiving the oath of the defendants, and reserving all questions as to the rights of the parties.

SIR E. RYAN, C. J., enquired whether this arrangement would affect the criminal proceedings in the case.

Mr. Turton said, he believed that the criminal proceedings had been already burked, and that the threatened movements against Messrs. Streetell, Sutherland, McCann, and Co., had been abandoned.

Order by consent.

SKINNER v. J. YOUNG, SHERIFF, &c.

This case originally came on before Mr. Justice SERON in Chambers, upon a summons under Plea Rule 7, to strike out one of the counts. The action was against the Sheriff for a false return,—the first count being that the Sheriff seized, but did not bring in the goods, and returned nulla bona;—the second count being that the Sheriff did not levy, although there were goods within the province, and that he returned nulla bona.

Mr. Leith in support of the summons contended, that these counts were clearly in violation of Plea Rule 6, because they were obviously founded upon one and the same principal subject-matter of complaint (i. e. the false return) varied only in statement, description and circumstance. The question simply was, "were there two returns of nulla bona?" If the plaintiff undertook to say that there were two returns, no doubt he was entitled to two counts, and the Judge upon his undertaking would certify by indorsement upon the summons, that he was satisfied that two distinct subject matters of complaint were intended to be established in respect of each. The pleadings themselves furnished no test, because in trespass (for example) there might be two counts verbatim the same, and yet allowable, being for distinct trespasses at different times or in different places, though laid pro forma at the same time and place.

Mr. Sandes contra, contended the two causes of action distinctly appeared on the face of the plea, and cited James Bourne v. Bingham & Bingham's new cases. He further urged, that the present motion was irregular, and that it ought to have been upon a rule nisi drawn up on reading the declaration, or else upon affidavit.

Upon the latter point of practice, some discussion took place. In the case of Smith versus Bird, 3 Dowling's cases, it appears, that the question as to striking out a count was argued before the full Court without any rule nisi upon a mere reference for the opinion of the Court, made by the Judge before whom the matter was first brought in Chambers upon summons (as in the present case); but in all the recent cases a rule nisi was first applied for, and the rule was drawn up on "reading the declaration," or upon affidavit, that the plaintiff contained counts prima facie in violation of the rule. In the latter case, the Court of course disposed of it as a regular motion; but in the former case no order was made by the Court, and they merely intimated their opinion to the Judge in Chambers, who made his order alone, and might be guided or not by the opinion intimated by the Court.

SIR E. RYAN, C. J. With respect to the point of practice we are of opinion, that the more convenient and regular practice is to move for an order nisi, whenever the Judge in Chambers either makes an order upon the summons, with which the party is dissatisfied, or declines making any order at all and refers the question for the opinion of the Court. Let it be understood, that this is to be the practice in future. In the present case, we will either direct (with the consent of both parties,) a rule nisi to be drawn up now, or else we will follow the practice in the case of Smith v. Bird, and intimate our private opinions to Mr. Justice SERON.

Mr. Leith said, he should be quite satisfied with the latter course.

SIR E. RYAN then inquired, whether the counsel for the plaintiff would undertake (in the words of the rule) "that some distinct subject matter of complaint was bona fide intended to be established in respect of each Count?"

Mr. Sandes said, that the acts of the Sheriff were not within the plaintiff's knowledge, and he could not undertake to say that there would appear two substantially distinct causes of action.

SIR H. W. SERON (after communicating with the other learned Judges) said, that he could not certify under Rule 7, and that therefore there was no alternative, but to strike out one of the Counts.

A discussion then arose as to costs.

SIR H. W. SERON regretted to say, that the rule seemed to allow no discretion as to costs, though it appeared to him there should be some discretion in cases of doubt and difficulty.

Summons absolute with costs.—HURK. DEC. 7.

* There seems to be the true and simple test in all cases where several counts (or pleas,) prima facie involve the same subject matter of complaint (or defence.) The undertaking may be safely accepted as conclusive; because the Judge then indorses his certificate accordingly under Rule 7, and Rule 6 provides a penalty for default.

SUPREME COURT FOURTH SESSIONS.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1839.

The fourth quarterly Sessions of the current year was commenced with the usual formalities, at noon yesterday. Present: the Chief Justice, Sir E. Ryan and the Puisne Judges, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Seton. The following gentlemen were sworn in to form the Grand Jury:

WM DANFIER Esq., Chairman.

Rajah Debe Kissen.	N. Mackenzie, Esq.
George Dougal, Esq.	Jas. Crooke, Esq.
P. A. Cavorke, Esq.	H. M. Low, Esq.
Bahoo Ramamouth Tagore.	Frank Hampson, Esq.
John Willis, Esq.	Thos. Leach, Esq.
John Allen, Esq.	Robt. Campbell, Esq.
Bahoo Obaychurn Bose.	Wm. Martin, Esq.
W. B. Lackersteen, Esq.	R. H. Snell, Esq.
Wm. Carr, Esq.	Bahoo Hurischunder Bose.
Wm. Bracken, Esq.	John Lackersteen, Esq.
	Rajah Kaleeki-sen.
	G. U. Adam Esq.

MR EDWARD RYAN'S CHARGE.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE addressed the Grand Jury, as far as we could collect, to the following effect:—

Gentlemen of the Grand Jury. There are, I believe, about thirty or forty cases for your consideration, at the present Sessions, but after an attentive perusal of the depositions, I think there are none of such a nature as to render it necessary for me to trouble you with any observations on them; I will not, therefore, occupy your time by any remarks; but, of course, if referred to, on any particular point, I shall have much pleasure in answering any question you may think it necessary to put, and to give you any advice you may require.

But though I think it unnecessary to trouble you with any remarks on the business in which you are more immediately engaged, I wish to address to you a few observations on one or two of the Acts passed by the Legislative Council since you were last assembled.

The first of these acts to which I would call your attention is the Act XXXI. of 1839. It is called "An Act for the trial of prisoners charged with the commission of certain petty offences in the Town of Calcutta and on the river Hooghly."

It may, perhaps, be in the recollection of some of the gentlemen whom I now address, that at the last Sessions of last year there were about a hundred cases on the list for trial. Many of these were cases of petty theft, such as the stealing of lotahs and other articles which, though of importance to the poor persons who owned them, were intrinsically of little value. It may be remembered, that I stated to the Grand Jury on that occasion, that the circumstance of there being so many cases of that description now arose from the Magistrates conceiving that they had no power of dealing with them in a summary manner. And in truth they had not authority so to dispose of them, and could not have done so without exceeding the powers given to them. I took occasion, then, to observe, the great public inconvenience arising from the necessity of trying all those cases in this Court. The convenience or inconvenience of the Judges, or the time they might be occupied with such enquiries I did not stop to consider; but the serious evil of calling so many persons from their houses I did observe upon; there were no fewer than 370 witnesses subpoenaed on the various trials at that Session. The trouble and inconvenience to witnesses and to petty jurors, who were taken from their houses and from their occupations, and kept in attendance at the Court, I thought deserved the consideration of the regulation. Lastly, but not least perhaps in importance, was the loss of time to the gentlemen of the Grand Jury, who had in the first instance to investigate all these cases.

At the close of the Sessions referred to an address was presented to me by the Grand Jury, suggesting, that if the Magistrates did not already possess the power of disposing of such petty cases, it would be advisable to extend their jurisdiction. The address was forwarded by me to the proper quarter. At the April Sessions of this year, another address was presented on the same subject to my learned brother Mr. Justice Grant. That address I now have in my hand.

The Chief Justice here read the following extract :

"The Grand Jury beg leave to present to this honorable Court the extreme loss of time to many persons occasioned by the present practice of the Magistrates of sending all petty offenders to be tried by the Supreme Court. The Grand Jury, though very willing to give up their time to important public duties, submit respectfully to this honorable Court that the ends of justice would be more effectually attained by the summary punishment of such petty offenders, either by the Police Magistrates or by an improved regulation of Quarter Sessions, besides being a very great saving of expense to the public."

I took occasion to mention at the December Sessions of 1838, that even if these cases were to be tried at the Quarter Sessions of the Magistrates provided they were revived, it would be no saving of time or trouble. It would be no remedy for the inconvenience complained of, for there would necessarily be a Grand Jury and a Petty Jury as at present, and the same attendance of witnesses.

Since that time the Legislative Council has thought fit to pass the Act to which I am about to call your attention. To this Act is prefixed a preamble. It is the purpose of a preamble to set forth the general scope and intention of the Act to which it is prefixed. This preamble states, that "It is expedient to make further provision in regard to such charges of felony as have been usually determined by Justices of the Peace, under the authority of the Bye Laws for the Town of Calcutta; by preventing, as far as is consistent with the attainment of justice, any delay of trial or inconvenience to prosecutors, witnesses and Jurymen, by limiting the powers heretofore exercised by such Justices, and by subjecting their proceedings, upon conviction for felony, to more regular control and revision; and it is also expedient to provide the like remedy in cases of assaults committed on certain parts of the River Hooghly, without the limits of the town of Calcutta, as hath been provided in cases of assaults committed within such limits." A perusal of the various clauses of this Act will show how the Legislative Council has endeavoured to attain the object set forth in the preamble.

The second section repeals the Regulation of 1814 under which the Magistrates exercised a wide jurisdiction. Under that regulation, they exercised jurisdiction over cases of felony. That regulation has now been repealed.

The third section specifies what shall, in future, be the jurisdiction of the Magistrates. It provides that all cases of simple larceny where the value of the article stolen does not exceed twenty rupees, shall be tried by the Magistrates. The offence over which they have jurisdiction must, however, be simple larceny. I have reason to believe that among the Magistrates themselves there has been some misconception as to the powers which they have to exercise under the new Act, and I would take this opportunity of explaining to them, as some of them are present, the extent of those powers.

Simple larceny at Common Law is, when the theft is not committed from the person of another, nor in a dwelling house, at night time, under such circumstances as would constitute burglary. But there are a number of cases not of simple, but of Compound Larceny, to which the jurisdiction given by the new Act does not extend, such as thefts from the person, or from a dwelling house in the day time, and with violence. Simple Larceny, according to this Act, must be taken to mean such theft as receives, under the Statute Law, no peculiar punishment on account of the circumstances under which it is committed, thus, for example, the jurisdiction of a Justice of the Peace under this Act, does not extend,

1.—To Robbery or stealing from the person,

2.—To obtaining money by threatening to accuse a party of an infamous crime,

3.—To the sending of letters threatening to accuse a person of an infamous crime for the purpose of extorting money.

4.—To Larceny by Clerks and servants from their master,

5.—To Burglary.

6.—To stealing in a dwelling house with violence,

7.—Or to the value of 50 Company's rupees.

8.—Or to the breaking into a house and stealing to any amount.

9.—Or to breaking into a shop, ware-house or counting house, and stealing to any amount.

10.—Or to stealing goods from a vessel in port or on a river or canal.

11.—Or to stealing goods from any dock, wharf, or quay adjacent to such port.

Or to any other thefts to which the Act 9 Geo. 4 c. 74 or the Act of the Legislative Council of India No XXXI of 1838, has annexed peculiar punishments on account of the circumstances under which they are committed. Over such cases as these, the Magistrates have no jurisdiction. But it is hardly necessary that I should say that theft by persons having the custody of goods but not being servants, remain under the jurisdiction of the Magistrates; or that stealing property within a dwelling house in cases which do not come within the statutes to which I have alluded, remain simple Larceny at Common Law.

Gentlemen, I have pointed out these things, because I have reason to believe that the Act has not been clearly understood. It is certain that the Magistrates have decided many cases as if they still possessed the jurisdiction granted them by the Regulation of 1814. It is certain too, that they have sent up to this Court cases over which they had jurisdiction, and which they might have disposed of in a summary manner. You will find before you in the present Sessions, several cases which it would have been better if they had disposed of without referring them to you. Such, for instance, as the stealing of a tolak in a dwelling house, not being in the night, or attended with any breaking or violence; or where the article is under the value of 50 Rs.; or the stealing from a shop, in like manner, without breaking or violence; in cases of this description the Magistrate has a discretionary power either to try or to commit; they may be classed under the head of Simple Larceny at Common Law.

Gentlemen, I have been thus particular on these points for the purpose of defining and settling what seems to me have been subject of some doubt. The great object of this Act was to dispose of cases of simple larceny without inflicting undue punishment upon the offenders. For this purpose it has extended the jurisdiction of the magistrates in that particular. But it has also limited the jurisdiction in many cases to which it formerly extended. The practical result will be, that more cases will now be sent for trial to this Court, than before. But this will relieve from many trivial cases, which might be easily left to the decision of the magistrate; and many of greater importance, which have been hitherto disposed of by the magistrate, will not be referred to this Court. It would not do, to fritter away the severity of justice due to grave offences, by leaving the offenders to be dealt with by those whose power of inflicting punishment is so limited. It would not do to leave to a justice of the peace the interpretation of difficult statutes or the investigation of complicated facts; these must be disposed of by a higher tribunal, and in cases where there is no appeal their jurisdiction ought to cease where the law, or facts are likely to be complicated.

The 7th section of the Act provides, that all examinations and depositions upon which any trial is founded, shall be reduced to writing and signed by the Magistrate, and they shall be forwarded to this Court. I would recommend that this should be done with great care and exactness, because parties, if convicted, have the power under the new Act, of removing by writ of certiorari, their cases into this Court. Therefore it will be necessary that the depositions should be taken down with much exactness and care. This appears to have been the case generally hitherto, but in some cases sufficient attention has not been paid to this matter. For example, there have been instances when the examination of three prisoners has been included in one examination. This I need scarcely say ought not to be repeated, for on his trial in this Court, every man stands separate from and independent of his presumed accomplices, and must be judged of by the facts as they relate to himself individually, and not in connection with others.

The last clause of the Act is so far important as it gives to the Magistrate jurisdiction to try cases of assault on board ships in the river, or in the mouth thereof. This is an alteration of the law which does not call for any particular remark from me.

The other Act to which I would direct your attention, is the Act No. XXII of 1839, an Act for allowing persons accused of felony to make their defence by speech of counsel. You must be aware that in England in cases of felony, counsel is now allowed to speak in defence of the accused. This practice was introduced after much discussion in both houses of Parliament. It was recommended by the report of the Commissioners of Criminal Law. It had been opposed by many eminent lawyers, most of whom eventually became convinced of the propriety of the measure, and argued strongly in favour of it. The question could not be put more forcibly than it was by a dignitary of the Church, whose opinion was cited by a learned and noble Lord (Lyndhurst) when the bill was before the House of Lords. I believe the words were quoted from a pamphlet on the question, published at the time "We have often blushed for English humanity when we have heard the reply—'Your counsel cannot speak for you, you must speak for yourself.' And this is the reply given to a poor girl of fifteen—to a foreigner—to a deaf man—to a stammerer—to the feeble—to the old—to the most abject and ignorant of human beings. How often have we seen a poor wretch struggling against the agonies of his spirit, and the rudeness of his conception, and his awe,—speaking in the presence of learned men and the shame of the accusation brought against him,—in the sight of his parents, or his children gazing at him in Court, perhaps for the last time—the Mariner singing in the waves does not want a helping hand more than this poor wretch. But the rule is applied alike to all, to the old and young, the feeble and the strong, age cannot have it, nor ignorance, nor the modesty of youth,—one hard, uncharitable rule silences all defence of those wretched beings, and at the bitterest of human moments mercy is blotted out from the ways of man." Gentlemen, it may strike you with considerable force, as it will strike all who are not conversant with the proceedings of Criminal Courts that it is strange that such a rule should have been allowed to exist so long, or that there could be found any one adverse to its extinction. It may seem anomalous to you; but if you had much practical experience of proceedings in the Criminal Courts in England, you would not be so much surprised; the apparent evil is to a certain degree met by the course pursued by the Judges, they taking care that nothing should be pressed improperly against the prisoner—that no evidence should be improperly elicited, and the Counsel for the prosecutor strictly confining themselves to the statement of facts, and always stating these facts, which were in favor, as well as those that told against the prisoner. Strange, therefore, as it may seem to those who have better experience in such matters, in practice, the not allowing the speech of Counsel for prisoners charged with felony, was not so injurious to the accused as it may seem in theory.

It had long been the practice in the colonies to allow defence by speech of Counsel to accused persons, and it was in evidence before the Commissioners, that the plan had worked well in the United States of America; where it had long been in practice, and where the propriety of the indulgence was universally allowed. At length a Bill was introduced into the British Legislature, for enabling accused persons to make their defence by Counsel. It was as first proposed by many eminent Lawyers and others, but most of them afterwards became converts to the cause, and with few dissenting voices the Act (6 and 7 Will: 4th) was carried. It has now, in accordance with the plan of rendering the practice of this Court as similar as possible to that of England, been introduced into this country, and as long as this Court administers the law of England it is desirable that all beneficial alterations should be extended here.

Gentlemen, I have no further remarks to make to you at present, I will therefore trespass on your time no longer but to repeat my assurance, that on any point on which you may need my advice or assistance, I shall be most happy to give it.—Hark. Dec 12.

THE QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF COCKE, v. J. JAGGERS.

It may be in the recollection of our readers, that at the last Session the Defendant pleaded guilty, but owing to a want of permission as to dates, the conviction was quashed. Mr. Clarke this day moved that the plaintiffs costs be paid from the funds in Court to Mr. Burkin-Young, his constituted attorney. It was ruled accordingly.

Jagdechunder, charged with stealing from the house of Hurlall Mookerges 2 glass shades, value 3 rupees, was tried and found guilty, and sentenced to hard labour, in the house of correction, for three months. After passing sentence his Lordship remarked, that this was a case, which in his opinion, might with great propriety have been adjudicated at the Police. The prisoner had been since the 10th September last in Jail, waiting his trial, just half the period which the Act allowed a Magistrate to sentence, any offender to, and he could not help remarking, that the ends of public justice would have been much better served had it never been sent to this Court for trial. He had sent to the Magistrate, to enquire what particular circumstances induced him to send it to this Court.

Russoo, a female charged with stealing a silver chain, the property of Ventura Diego, valued at 2 rupees, was found guilty, and having been a servant to the prosecutor, was sentenced to hard labour for one year.

Setul, charged with stealing from the dwelling of Soodamoney, in Patureah Ghat, two brass lotas and a brass tumbler, value rupee 1-13 annas, was found guilty and sentenced to hard labour in the house of correction for six months. His Lordship remarked, that this was a case which might have been judged at the Police, but the offence having been committed previous to the passing of the act, the case was necessarily sent up to the Supreme Court for trial.

Lutchman, charged with stealing from the person of Shamali, a pair of silver Bujoolund, value 8 rupees, was found guilty and sentenced to hard labour in the House of Correction for one year.—Hurkaru, Dec. 10.

TUESDAY, DEC. 10, 1839.

● THE QUEEN V. CORINAUTH SORCA.

This was an indictment for larceny. The Grand Jury referred the case to the Court, before they found a true bill, as they were doubtful whether the evidence for the prosecution shewed anything more than a breach of contract, the prisoner having actually bargained for the chattel, and taken it away by permission of the prosecutor. The Chief Justice said, that if the prisoner only went upon pretence of purchasing, and had no real intention of paying the price, the Grand Jury should return a true bill.

The Grand Jury afterwards returned a true bill.

Mr. Morton appeared as counsel for the prosecution. The prisoner was not defended by counsel.

It appeared in evidence, that the prisoner went to the shop of the prosecutor in September last, and enquired if the prosecutor (who was a dealer in gold and silver articles,) had any gold to dispose of. The prosecutor weighed out about six sicca weight, and the price was fixed at Rs 95. The prisoner then said, that he had not the money with him; and the prosecutor allowed him to take the gold away, only upon condition that a person was to accompany him and receive the money immediately. The son in law of the prosecutor accordingly accompanied the prisoner, and when they reached the shop of the latter, the prisoner desired the prosecutor's son in law to sit down and wait until he had shewn the gold to a customer of his. The prisoner then went away, and did not return. Two days afterwards he was arrested, and he then denied all knowledge of the transaction. The prosecutor swore he would not have parted with the goods except for ready money. In his defence, the prisoner endeavoured to establish an alibi, and called several witnesses; but this evidence wholly failed.

RYAN C. J. after having summed up the evidence thus laid down the law:—"If you are of opinion upon the facts stated by the witnesses for the prosecution, that the prisoner went to the shop not for the purpose of buying the property, but with the intention of playing off this trick or artifice, and thus getting possession of the property without paying for it, I am bound to tell you that the case amounts in law to larceny. If indeed a man goes to a shop, and takes articles which he bona fide intends at the time to purchase, the subsequent non-payment is of course a breach of contract only; but if otherwise if he had really no intention whatever of purchasing, the question is whether there was the fraud, as it is expressed, from the very first.

The prosecutor swears that he would not have parted with the goods except upon ready-money terms; and the circumstances of the case (if you believe them) bear him out, because he sends a person to receive the price. It would have been very different if this had been a credit transaction. Again the prisoner's defence, both when he was arrested and upon the present occasion of his trial, is not that he intended to purchase the gold, but a disclaimer of all knowledge of the transaction, and an attempt to prove an alibi."

The jury after some deliberation returned a verdict of Guilty—and the prisoner was sentenced to hard labour in the house of correction, for two years.

Hussen Raicu, charged with stealing from a Seapoy's guard room in Fort William, a gold neck chain, value 112 rupees, the property of Shank Masom Jemadar, was found guilty and sentenced to imprisonment and hard labour in the house of correction for one year.

Leopersaud and Karramut, were charged with stealing from the dwelling of William Hawkesworth, a silver watch, chain and seals, value 109 rupees. The prosecutor, an Assistant to Burn and Co, builders, swore that to cure a cough with which he had been afflicted, he drank a few glasses of brandy and water, which occasioned intoxication; that he went to sleep on the terrace of his house, and when he awoke next morning, found himself minus the watch, which he stated to have been purchased at Twentymen and Co's., by a former employer, Mr. Burn, and presented to him, the prosecutor. The first prisoner was the prosecutor's durwan, and took advantage of his master's intoxication to effect the robbery, and the second was the receiver of the stolen watch. Both prisoners were found guilty and sentenced to hard labour in the house of correction for two years.—Hurkaru, December 11.

WEDNESDAY, DEC 11, 1839.

THE QUEEN V. HULLODHUR BYRART

Mr. Morton moved, that the Clerk of the Crown do attend before the grand Jury, with the original information and deposition of the defendant, Hullodhur Byrart taken before C. K. Robinson Esquire, one of the Magistrates of Calcutta.

SIR E. RYAN, C. J. said, that the Court had no objection to allow deposition to be taken before the Grand Jury, but in such case it might be necessary to caution the Grand Jury, as they might otherwise return a bill upon evidence inadmissible in law.

Mr. Morton said, this was an indictment for perjury, and that the perjury had been assigned upon the information and complaint of the defendant against the prosecutor before the Magistrate, taken down in writing.

SIR E. RYAN. Put the original deposition is not evidence alone. It is not necessarily the best evidence of what the defendant said before the Magistrate.

Mr. Morton said, that the Magistrate himself, and also the interpreter who had explained the written deposition to the defendant, had been subpoenaed to attend.

SIR E. RYAN. That will be sufficient of course.

Granted.

Moodousoodun Ghose, charged with burglariously entering the dwelling of Mohen Shaw, in Baug Hazzar, and stealing therefrom wearing apparel and silver ornaments, value 3 rupees 8 annas, was found guilty, and it having been proved after conviction, that he was an old offender, and on two different former occasions confined in the House of Correction, he was for this offence sentenced to be transported for the period of seven years.

Lutchmuneah, a female, charged with stealing from the dwelling of Ragoobersaund, at Tautollah, gold and silver ornaments, wearing apparel and coin, value 252 rupees, was found not guilty, and discharged.

Modon Tates alias Lechan, charged with burglariously entering the dwelling of Guberlun, in Soba Bazar, and stealing therefrom various articles of value, was found guilty, and having been convicted on three several former occasions, and sent each time to the House of Correction, was for this offence sentenced to be transported for seven years.

Bhogahurry, charged with stealing from the dwelling of Shaum Baugly, in Sookas Lane, a brass lotah, value 1 rupee 2 annas, was found guilty. The Judge remarked, that this was a case only of larceny, and may be adjudged at the Police; but the offender having been repeatedly convicted before that tribunal, and sentenced upon several occasions to hard labour during the last ten years, the Magistrate may very properly exercise the discretion which the act allow by sending the case to the superior tribunal, where a heavier punishment might be awarded on so notorious an offender. He therefore sentenced the prisoner to be transported for the term of seven years.

Collychurn Ghose, charged with stealing from the dwelling of Soodamoney, in Baunstallah Lane, various silver articles value 21 rupees and 2 annas, was found guilty, and being of the same class of notorious offenders as were tried to day, was sentenced to be transported for seven years.—Hurk, Dec 12.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1839.

(Before Sir Edward Ryan.)

Issore Chatterjee, charged with feloniously stealing from the house of Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, two cashmere Shawls value 4 rupees, was found guilty, and sentenced to imprisonment and hard labour in the house of correction for 6 calendar months.

Bissamber Bose, charged with burglariously entering the dwelling of Ramdhan Dacca, in Shaum bazar, and stealing therefrom wearing apparel and brass utensils of value, was found guilty, and sentenced to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for 2 years.

Ulloka Raur, a female, charged with feloniously stealing from the dwelling of Bangseedur Bose, in whose service she was, 100 rupees in coin, gold and silver ornaments valued at 70 rupees, was found not guilty, and discharged.

Ram Mangos, Ramchunder Dandee, Moodnosuden Dandee, Soodaram Dandee, Kallachund Bose, Mudeen Doss and Rum Doss, were charged with stealing from the Custom House Ghaut, a bag of Putchuck, value 30 rupees, the property of Jamsetjee Jeejee boy and Sons—then in the custody of their Agent, Messrs. Colvin, Ainslie and Co. were found not guilty, and discharged.

The Grand Jury were discharged yesterday.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1839.

Meudee, charged with having feloniously stabbed Ruffail, with a knife on the left side of his chest and on his left forearm, with intent to disable him, was found guilty and sentenced to hard labour in the house of correction for one year.

Gungaram Dorah, Cossy Mullick and Tonno Sirdar, charged with burglariously entering the dwelling of Degumber, and stealing therefrom 31 pieces of cotton cloth, value 100 rupees, the two first were found guilty and sentenced to one year's hard labour in the house of correction. The Tonno Sirdar, not guilty, and discharged.

Jullum Manjee, Cullamodeen Dandee and Bisse Dandee, charged with having on board a boat, at Jackson's Ghat, feloniously stolen from the person of one James Smith, current coin value Rs. 29 4 and a pair of shoes value Rs. 4, were found not guilty and discharged.—Hurkara, December 14.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1839.

(Before Sir Henry W. Seton.)

Kisto Doss, charged with burglariously entering the dwelling of Hurrow in Sustetolah, and stealing therefrom several pieces of wearing apparel and brass articles of value, was found guilty and sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour in the house of correction for 2 years. The prisoner begged that any other punishment may be inflicted on him rather than to be sent to the house of correction, a request which his Lordship did not feel inclined to comply with, while he took occasion to remark, that he could not have a better proof of the correct management of the house of correction, than such a request as the present one.

Champa Ram and Motee oolah, charged with stealing from the house of Shark Hingun, in Jura Bazar, various gold ornaments value Rs. 265 8, were found guilty, and the first prisoner having been recommended to the merciful consideration of the Court, was sentenced to hard labour for six, and the second for twelve months, in the house of correction.

Hullothur Doss, charged with breaking into the shop of Mothermohun Day in Jorasanko, and stealing therefrom various brass articles, of value Rs. 4-7, found guilty and sentenced to hard labour for 12 months.

Gunganarain Doss, charged with stealing from the dwelling of Bookna Raur in Jorasanko, value Rs. 129-2, was found not guilty and discharged.—Hurkara, Dec. 16.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1839.

Bonamally, charged with stealing from the dwelling of Kiteemohone Mitter, and three others, several pieces of wearing apparel value Rs. 18, was found guilty, and being an old offender, was sentenced to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour in the house of correction for 12 calendar months.

Bannoo and Pessun, charged, the first with stealing from the dwelling of Beebee Montee, at Cullingah, a gold paunchlauree value 80 rupees, the second, with receiving the same knowing it to be stolen, were found, the first guilty, and in consideration of her extreme youth recommended to mercy, the second was found not guilty.

Binnon was sentenced to be imprisoned in the common jail for three months.

Nubboo Cassaree, Adoores and Jugroo.—The first charged with stealing from the Mission House in Cornwallis Square, a McCabe's clock, value 150 rupees, the property of the Assembly's Institution. The two last, with having received the same, knowing it to be stolen; the first was found guilty, and sentenced to hard labour for twelve months. Adoores and Jugroo were acquitted and discharged.

In this case Mr. Ewart, of the Assembly's Institution was called to identify the property, but owing to religious scruples, as to the superstitious habits of kissing the Holy Scriptures in oath-taking, as practised in English Courts, he begged to be allowed to substitute a solemn affirmation to speak the truth. The Judge on reference to the act, found that it provided for the substitution of a solemn affirmation, in cases where natives of this country, Moravians or Quakers objected to be sworn, but in no other, and not having the power to sympathize with the gentleman's abhorrence of superstitious habits, ordered him to kiss the book.

Gonvouchurn Komdon, charged with breaking into the shop of Maudubchunder Dutt, and stealing therefrom vermilion, carlamun, sallap misserie, wax candles and beetle-nuts, value three rupees, was found guilty and sentenced to hard labour for twelve months.

Mr. L. Clarke, has been appointed Company's standing Counsel protem, vice Mr. Cochrane resigned.—Hurk. Dec. 17.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1839.

Copee Doss, alias Gobiudo, Muddun Sing, Baghud Doss and Sunpooee, charged the first with stealing from the dwelling of Rada Beebee, gold ornaments, gold and silver coin and promissory notes, value Rs. 1,050 and the three last with receiving the same, were found severally guilty, and sentenced to hard labour in the House of Correction for 2 years each.—Hurk. Dec. 18

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1839

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir H. W. Seton.)

Chintamoney Law was charged with having feloniously received two Notes of the Union Bank for 1,000 rupees each, well knowing, the same to have been stolen.

This was the first case in which a prisoner has taken advantage of the new act allowing counsel to speak for the defence. The prosecution was conducted by Mr. Clarke, and Mr. Turtan argued the case for the accused with all his usual acuteness and eloquence.

Mr. Clarke stated the case to the Jury and called.

Biruser Dutt, the Gomasta of Bhuggobin Roy and Chintahuron Pyne, &c. Merchants, residing at Salasore. The witness was their Agent in Calcutta, and has a place of business in Susteetollah. On the morning of the 20th of June last, as the witness and one Panchoo Ghose were sleeping in a room adjoining that in which the treasure belonging to their employers was kept, the witness heard a noise in the latter room, and on going, accompanied by his companion, to see what was the matter, found the door locked on the inside, and having opened it and entered the room, perceived that the chest which contained the property was open, and a small box usually kept in the large one, and which contained the property, was gone. There was a hole in the wall of the room large enough for a man to enter. Among other valuable property the stolen box contained two rolls of notes containing together twenty-four. One roll consisted of notes of the Union Bank to the amount of Rs. 4,450, being four notes of 1,000 Rs. each and some small ones. The 1,000 Rs. notes had been received from Messrs. W. Storm and Co. by Panchoo Ghose and the witness, on behalf of their employers, on the 15th June. The witness here produced a list of the notes which had been received from Mr. Storm on the day mentioned. The memorandum had been made on the day the notes were taken. The two notes which formed the subject of the trial, Nos. 173 and 56, were among them. The witness gave information of the robbery at the Police, and also at the Union Bank.

Cross examined by Mr. Turtan—The witness is chief manager of his employers' mercantile affairs, receives their dues and pays their debts. No other Gomasta has any thing to do with the payments or receipts. Panchoo is under him and usually writes down receipts and payments, but the list of notes produced is entirely in witness's hand writing. The witness often goes out to look after his employers business, and on such occasions the house is locked up. He had seen the notes every day between the time of their receipt and the robbery. He saw them last on the day before the robbery. The bundle of which the notes produced formed part, contained twelve notes amounting together to Rs. 4,450. The other bundle also contained twelve small notes received in the course of business. Panchoo Ghose had absconded to avoid taking the oath. Witness was not specially employed as monktear or conductor of causes for his employers, but it would be part of his duty so to act.

At a subsequent stage of the proceedings, his deposition at the Police was read, in which he described himself as monktear, and said that he had nothing to do with the mercantile affairs of the firm.

Mr. McCann and the Thanadar of Susteetollah, described the appearance of the premises after the burglary. There was a hole in the lower story and another in the upper. Mr. McCann said that Mr. McFarlan, the Chief Magistrate, was unable through sickness to attend the trial. In his absence Mr. Grant, his clerk, was permitted to attest the correctness of the depositions as taken at the Police Office.

Joy Hurry Dutt, a sirkar in the office of Mr. Storm, stated, that he was present at the time the notes were paid by another sirkar, who was absent through illness. The notes were entered at the time of payment in the book which the witness produced. The witness could not vouch for the correctness of the entry not having compared it with the notes.

Mr. J. C. Tixer, at present in charge of estates in the Sunderbuns, but formerly in the service of Carr, Tagore and Co. Has known the prisoner, and had pecuniary transactions with him since 1835. Has borrowed money from him on security. The prisoner came to him about the end of May or the beginning of June last, with three notes, of which he allowed him to see only the backs, and which he witnessed him (witness) to endorse. The prisoner said they were three notes of 1,000 Rs. each, which he being a native had some difficulty in getting cashed at the Union Bank. The witness expressed his suspicions that something was wrong and that the notes must be stolen ones. The prisoner then said that the notes were some which had been lost and which had been passed upon him. After being frequently importuned to endorse the notes, the witness went to the Union Bank and made certain enquiries of Ramnauth Tagore, who gave him a list of some notes. After this Baboo Narain Chunder Koondoo called upon witness and had some conversation with him respecting the notes. After this interview with Narain, the prisoner called again, and witness told him to bring the notes and he would endorse them. The next morning Narain called to wait for the prisoner's arrival, but he did not come. Next day Narain called again, and witness made him remain in an empty house next door. Shortly after the prisoner came with the notes. He seemed agitated. He brought the receipt for the money witness had borrowed from him. He proposed that witness should make out a sham mortgage of jewels, &c. to the value of about Rs. 2,000. This the witness did, and put his name to it, but spelling it in a different manner. The prisoner then offered him the receipts and wanted him to write on the back paid, by two Union Bank Notes No. 173 and 56. The witness questioned him as to the third note, and he said that it had been passed to Tulloch and Co. After some hesitation he gave the notes to witness to sign, when the latter seized them and walked out into the verandah followed by the prisoner. Narain then came in accompanied by the witness's brother who had been sent for by him. Narain questioned the prisoner as to the notes, and he replied that they were notes, which he had received from his house. He then suddenly snatched up his shoes and papers, and ran out of the house. In taking the notes to the police and Ramnauth Tagore, the witness found that the prisoner had been there before him, and had presented a petition against him, but he never appeared to prosecute. It was on the 5th September he applied to the police, the transaction took place on the 2nd.

Mr. Turton cross-examined this witness at some length, for the purpose of displaying the nature of the transaction between him and the prisoner, and to show that the witness had continued to receive loans from the prisoner long after he had suspected him of having stolen notes in his possession.

Narain Chunder Koondoo corroborated the evidence of the last witness, so far as he himself was concerned. He further stated that Biresur and Panchoo came to the Union Bank the day after the robbery, to give the number of the notes. Panchoo is the head Gumsatah and Biresur is under him.

Sumichurn Chuckerbutty, an examiner in the Union Bank, produced a register of lost and stolen notes, including those produced. Some of those stolen at the same time had been traced.

Mr. W. H. Grant, clerk to the Chief Magistrate, had explained the prisoners examination to him. The prisoner on his examination at the Police Office, produced a book to show how he had received the notes. The entry was dated in Bengali and English, but by mistake the English date was made July instead of June, as it ought to have been, and as was on the pages preceding and following that on which the entry stood. The wrong date commenced the day before that on which the notes were entered. This mistake was not discovered by, or pointed out to the Chief Magistrate, until about a week after the first examination, when Mr. Shaw attended on behalf of the prisoner.

The prisoner's examination at the Police Office was then read. It stated that on the morning of the 8th of June, 21st of June, at about half past 8, a man named Chalschund Mookerjee, had brought the notes to be cashed. That he had procured the money to cash them by borrowing from his neighbours, Rupees, 500.

from one, 500 from another, and so on. That the man had endorsed them with his name, and taken away the money, and that he had never seen him since. About two hours after this transaction, he took one of the notes to one of the parties from whom he had borrowed part of the money, and requested him to take from it the sum owing to him, and to give the prisoner the balance. The man refusing to accept the note, informing the prisoner that it was a stolen one. Other parties told him the same. He then took them to Mr. Tiver, who also said that they were stolen and drove him away.

The petition which the prisoner had presented against Mr. Tiver at the Police, is set forth that Mr. Tiver owed the petitioner money, to the amount of Rupees, 2,000. That he had paid the sum, in two notes, which, when the petitioner asked him to endorse, he had snatched away, and had abused and beat the petitioner.

This being the case for the prosecution, Mr. Turton addressed the jury for the defence. The main object of his address appeared to be to impugn the testimony of the witness, Tiver and Biresur Dutt, and to show that the prisoner although after the receipt of the notes might have been aware of their having been stolen, he was not acquainted with the fact at the time he received them. At the conclusion of his address, Mr. Turton proceeded to call witnesses to prove that the prisoner had received the notes in the same manner, and at the time set forth in his examination at the Police. The first witness was an assistant in the prisoner's shop.

Gopal Chunder. He described the manner in which the notes had come into his employer's possession and the way in which the money given in exchange for them had been raised. This account was substantially the same as that given by the prisoner. The witness himself had fetched part of the money, and the remainder was fetched by one Kistno Doss. The transaction took place at about 8 or 8¹⁵ past 8 in the morning of a holiday. It is usual for shroffs to open house shops very early in the morning and to keep them open late at night.

Buddinath Chunder, an assistant to Moodosuddun Day, a shroff, deposed, that he let Gopal Chunder have 500 rupees for the prisoner. The prisoner bears a good character as a shopkeeper.

Moodosuddun Day, corroborated the evidence of his assistant, to Sibchunder Sain a shroff, gave the prisoner a good character, and deposed that he, on behalf of his employer, let the prisoner have 400 rupees on the day referred to. The money was taken by Prawnkisto Doss, who is a hawker by trade, but is frequently at the prisoner's shop, and was well known to witness. No receipt was taken. The prisoner came the same morning, and offered a note of the Union Bank in payment of the sum borrowed. It was however refused in consequence of the witness having been to the Barra Bazar, and having there obtained a list which a sircar circulating of notes had lost. Did not hear of their being stolen till two days after, when they were proclaimed by beat of tom-tom. He applied to the prisoner for payment; but had never received it. Did not tell him that he had heard the note was a stolen one, as he supposed the whole bazar must have been aware of it, after it was proclaimed.

CASSENATH MULLICK, Assistant to Petumber Seal, another shroff, had sent to the prisoner 600 rupees by his gumsata. The prisoner did not come back to repay the money; but the witness did not hear of the robbery that day. The prisoner bears a good character, and witness has known him six or seven years.

Premkishna Doss, the man who had obtained part of the money, wherewith the prisoner had cashed the notes, described the manner in which the prisoner became possessed of them. Witness had fetched from the shop of Sibekunder Sen Rs. 400 for the prisoner, who heard on the afternoon of that day, that the notes were stolen ones. He had it from the prisoner himself.

The witness's deposition at the Police was read; it contained no mention of his having procured the 400 rupees. The witness maintained that he had mentioned the circumstances at the Police, and that it must have been omitted, and that when the deposition was read to him he had through inattention allowed the omission to pass unnoticed.

After some opposition from the counsel for the prosecution, Mr. Turton was allowed to put in the prisoner's account book as evidence in his defence. The entry of the receipt of the notes stated that he had received them from one Baboo Pennoolall, through Callachand Mookopadys, residing in Sebro Thakoor's Lane. [Enquiries had been made for this person, but he was not forthcoming.] There was another entry of the cash paid for the notes, all entered in a regular manner except as to the mistake previously mentioned.

Mr. Clarke then replied to Mr. Turton's defence, and laboured to clear the witness Tiver and Biresur Dutt from the imputations which Mr. Turton had endeavoured to cast upon their characters. He also enlarged upon the conduct of the prisoner towards Tiver, in the matter of the petition, of which nothing further had been said.

At the close of Mr. Clarke's address, Sir Edward Ryan summed up the evidence at considerable length and in a most lucid manner. About 7 o'clock the jury retired and did not return till after 9, when they brought in a verdict of GUILTY.

This trial occupied the whole day.—Hurkaru, December 30.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1839.

COSMINAETH DUTT, was charged with having, whilst a servant of the Bank of Bengal, embezzled the sum of Co.'s Rs. 4,290-15, the property of the proprietors of the said Bank.

The Advocate General and Mr. Prinsep, for the prosecution and Mr. Turton for the defence.

The principal evidence against the prisoner was that Thakoor Doss Sen, is an assistant cash-keeper in the Bank. It went to show that the prisoner, who was a podar in the Bank and whose duty it was to pay and receive coin, had at the close of business on Saturday the 7th of September last signed down to the witness by the hands of Goluck Ghose the dufture, a bag supposed to contain the balance of his receipts and disbursements during the day. It was the witness's duty to deliver to the prisoner each morning such sum of money as might be necessary for the service of the day and to receive an account of it from him every evening. These accounts were kept in the prisoner's hand writing. On the evening in question, however, the prisoner on coming down stairs, after ascertaining that the witness had received the bag, said, that having had a very hard day's work, he felt too much fatigued to render his account then, but would come on Monday morning and do it. The witness immediately on receiving the bag by Goluck Ghose, who usually brought it to him, and after Goluck had picked it in the chest, locked it up in the treasure room.

On Monday morning, the treasure room which was secured with three padlocks, the keys of which were with different people and guarded by nepoys, was opened by the witness. The bag was found in the same state as when it had been deposited there, and the witness went up stairs to the payment room by Goluck Ghose. Shortly after, Goluck came down and informed the witness that Cosminauth (the prisoner) had not yet come. The witness went up stairs, and the bag was opened in his presence by Gobindo Dutt, the podar, who had undertaken the duties of the absentee. The witness made an entry of its contents in the prisoner's book; and it was by comparing that entry with the memorandum of sums entered by the prisoner himself, as having been received on Saturday, that the deficiency became apparent. The cash in the bag on Monday morning was 1698 whole rupees in half and quarter rupees 261 8 and 9 annas 9 pie in copper. What had been received by the prisoner on Saturday morning the witness could not tell, except by reference to the prisoner's own account, and on the supposition that it was correct. The only sum as to which the witness could speak was that of 451 gold mohurs, which he had himself given into charge of the prisoner on the Saturday morning. The rest of the money was in the prisoner's charge, but locked up in possession of the witness. The deficiency, as found by comparing the prisoner's receipts and disbursements as set forth in his own book and in his own writing, with what was found in the bag on Monday morning, was rupees 4290-15 0.

The prisoner did not come to the Bank either on Monday or Tuesday. On the evening of the former day witness went to the house in which the prisoner had formerly resided, in Hautkollah, and was informed that he had removed to Sreetollah. The next evening accompanied by a punka wallah named Debee, who undertook to direct him, he went to the house in Sreetollah, but did not see the prisoner there, and never saw him again until he saw him at the Police ten or fifteen days after.

The witness was cross-examined at some length by Mr. Turton, and re-examined by Mr. Prinsep, but nothing was elicited varying much from his previous statement. It was however discovered at an early stage of his cross-examination, that the charge of embezzlement could not be sustained. The question was raised by Mr. Turton on the ground that to come within the legal definition of embezzlement, the crime must be that of receiving monies from a third party in the name and on behalf of an employer, and without duly accounting for the same. In the present case there was no evidence to show that the prisoner had received money from any one but his employer, and even that could only be ascertained from his own showing. Sir Edward Ryan agreed with Mr. Turton, and the counsel for the prosecution were necessitated to drop the charge of embezzlement, and try upon a subsequent count in the indictment, which charged the prisoner with larceny.

It appeared however on examination of Gobindo Dutt, the podar, who had acted for the prisoner, that there was a considerable discrepancy between the accounts of Thakoor Doss and that of this witness. The former stated that Gobindo had opened the bag and counted its contents and that he (Thakoor Doss) had written it down; and that there were 1,698 whole rupees. On the other hand Gobindo stated, that being pressed for time he did not count the entire contents of the bag, but knew that there were only 88 whole rupees and a quantity of half and quarter rupees.

Ram Comul Sen, the Dewan of the Bank, and Raj Pearae Sen, were examined, but their evidence did not tend to throw much light on the subject.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1889.

In consequence of these defects and deficiencies in the evidence, it was found impossible to proceed with the case, and accordingly, by the direction of the Chief Justice, the Jury acquitted the prisoner, who was immediately discharged.—Hurk., Dec. 21.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1889.

(Before Sir E. Ryan and Sir H. W. Seton.)

Alexander and William Henry Haley, brothers, were charged, the former with stabbing Henry Owens and Hugh Rolandson, two English sailors, and the latter with attempting to stab another sailor named Richard Robinson.

The prisoners were American mulattoes, and came on here as cook and steward of the General Scott. Their appearance and demeanour when placed on their trial, were highly respectable, and the character which they received from Mr. King of the Jail, was particularly good.

The affairs out of which the trial arose, took place on the 27th September last. At about eleven o'clock that night, the prosecutors, while on their way along Cuamm Gully, were annoyed by some natives, who hovered about them offering their services as guides to places where the rats did not wish to go. One of them, Owens, lingered a little behind his comrades endeavouring in a good humour, to drive away the "coolie boys," when Rolandson "lunged out" to him, and bid him come along as he did not wish to be annoyed by these "black rascals." Just as Owens in obedience to the call of his friend, joined his party the Haleys rushed upon them suddenly, as if from the road-side or from a house, and asked angrily whom they called black rascals, thinking, apparently, that a remark on personal was directed at them. Owens, who saw at once that there was some misapprehension on the part of their new acquaintances, "stewed" round, and placing his hand on the shoulder of one of them, said, in a most soothing and pacificatory tone, "my dear man we did not mean you; I can assure you we didn't." This, however, did not appear to satisfy the coloured gentlemen, for the one addressed immediately stepped back, and kicked Owens under the chin, in a most dexterous and unexpected manner. Rolandson coming up, was treated in the same novel manner. He, however, was not disposed to submit to such treatment, and as the assailant made a second kick at him, struck him a blow with his fist. While Robinson and his antagonist were "engaging" each other, Alexander Haley ran up to Owens and said angrily and tauntingly, "you black rascals, eh?" accompanied his words with a sweeping blow which took effect on the epigastric region. At the moment the blow was inflicted, Owens perceived by the light of the moon, something white and glittering in the hands of his assailant, and as he found that he was stabbed, he concluded that this was a knife or dagger. Owens, in receiving the wound, ran off to the station house at the end of the lane, where he found Constable Garvey, who, on hearing of the affair, set off to the scene of action. After stabbing Owens, Alexander Haley attacked Rolandson and stabbed him on the arm, the hip and the thigh. The other Haley was at the same time in contest with Robinson at whom he made a shot, which happily had no other effect than to rip open his shirt just above the waistband of his trousers.

The wounded men were sent to hospital, where they continued some time before they were able to give evidence at the Police Office.

Mr. Clarke appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Morton conducted the case on behalf of the prisoners. The prisoners were tried separately, and the respective juries, after a short consultation pronounced them both guilty.

Thomas Leonard, a young man, formerly an assistant to Messrs. R. S. Thomson and Co., Druggists, was accused of having, while in their service, stolen from their dwelling house a medicine chest value Rs. 120, a Pyke's Hydrometer value Rs. 120, and a spirit lamp value Rs. 4, the property of the said R. S. Thomson and Co.

Mr. Clarke was for the prosecution, and Mr. Morton for the defence.

Mr. R. S. Thomson identified the stolen property as that of himself and his partner, Dr. Alexander McGowan. The prisoner had been in their service as a compounder for about 16 months, and left them in September last. Mr. Thomson had begun some time before that to suspect that large quantities of their property had been stolen, but had no reason to impute the theft to the prisoner. Leonard was dismissed in consequence of certain aspersions on his character, which his employer wished to have cleared of before he could return to their service. Mr. Thomson's first intimation that the prisoner was the thief, was when he heard on his return from a trip to the Sand-Heads, that some of their missing property had been found in Leonard's lodging, and was then lying at the police office.

Dr. Alexander McGowan corroborated the evidence of Mr. Thomson.

The prisoner's examination taken at the police office, after being attested by the Chief Magistrate, was read. It stated that the medicine chest was the property of Mr. J. W. Gonsalves, formerly an assistant to Messrs. R. S. Thomson and Co.; that the hydrometer had been bought by the prisoner himself for 65 rupees from a sircar, at the door of Jenkins, Low and Co.; and that the lamp had been brought away by the prisoner from Messrs. Thomson and Co's, without their knowledge. The prisoner's counsel had been instructed, that, at the police the prisoner had said that the lamp was brought away by mistake, along with his own property. The Chief Magistrate, however, called the witnesses who had been present at the examination, who denied that any thing had been then said about the mistake.

Several notes which had been written by Leonard when in the Town-guard, to a friend of his, of the name of John Campbell, were read. In one of them Campbell is told to say, if asked, that he had lent to Leonard Rs. 250 and to instruct a certain "Johnny" to say that he had lent Rs. 100. This was for the purpose of accounting for the money which had been found in the prisoner's possession. Another friend named "Paddy," was to be invited to become a witness on the prisoner's behalf, and taught what he was to say. In another note Gonsalves through Campbell, is told to lay claim to the medicine chest, and taught how to get out the scrape into which an avowal of ownership might bring him. Thomson and Gowan, the writer said, did not wish to swear to the chest. The last note read concluded with an injunction to give Mr. Leonard's "salam to Johnny, and ask him how he is off for beer and sweet Miss B."

The effect of these notes was, as may be supposed, peculiarly unfortunate for the cause of the accused, as they amounted almost to positive acknowledgement of guilt. How they were attended to by the persons whose aid was sought, will appear from the further evidence.

J. W. Gonsalves was formerly in the service of Messrs. R. S. Thomson and Co, but is now in the Discharge department at the Custom House. He never had a medicine chest, and consequently never gave one to the prisoner, either absolutely, or for the purpose of being replenished with medicines. The prisoner, however, the last time Mr. Gonsalves met him, which was about a fortnight before the matter came on at the police, had informed the witness, that he had a prime medicine chest on hand, and if he would like to see it, it should be sent to the residence of their mutual friend Mr. Campbell, from whence it might be forwarded to the house of Mr. Gonsalves. The witness, however, declined the offer, and the chest was never sent.

John Campbell gloried in being "nothing at all," but acknowledged that he had formerly been apprentice on board a ship. He received from Leonard the notes previously mentioned. He showed them to Mr. Fitzgerald, and gave them to Gonsalves, but the rest he took to the police office and gave them up there.

Constable Thus. Wzars had searched the prisoner's rooms, under the authority of a search warrant. He there found the medicine chest, standing exposed, the tops of a chest of drawers; the hydrometer was in a box under the drawers; and the lamp was in an almirah. The chest the prisoner told him, belonged to Gonsalves, and had been entrusted to him to be replenished; the hydrometer he had bought at Jenkins. Low and Co's, and the lamp was his own. The witness took the property and the prisoner to the police.

After Mr. Morton had spoken for the defence, and Sir Edward Ryan had summed up the evidence; the jury, after a brief consultation, returned a verdict of Guilty.—Hark, Dec. 23.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1839.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, and Sir H. W. Seton.)

MATTHEW JOHNSTON, Deputy Collector of Calcutta, was charged with having, in his examination touching the affairs of James Jacobs, an Insolvent, committed wilful and corrupt perjury.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Barwell appeared as counsel for the prosecution, and Mr. Tutton and Mr. Liech for the defence.

The case had been traversed from the last sessions, and the defendant had been admitted to bail. When the Jury was about to be impannelled, the defendant challenged many of the parties whose names were called. Not less than seven or eight were thus objected to. The jury when impannelled consisted of the following gentlemen.

Messrs. N. Baillie.	Messrs. John Andrew.
" W. Hunter.	" John. Moss.
" Thos. Gregory.	" J. R. Hayes.
" John. Wall.	" Jas. Crouch.
" Jas. Williams.	" W. Grant, and
" Sanil. Potter,	Baboo Peary Mohan Day.

Mr. Clarke in stating the case, complimented the jury on the well known impartiality and integrity of Calcutta juries, and added to his own testimony on that head, that of Mr. Ogilvie, who, on his trial, had refused to demand a special jury, and had with full confidence relied upon the petty jury impannelled in the usual form. He then detailed the grounds of the charge against the defendant, stating that it was brought under the authority of the 72nd clause of the Insolvent Act, which made it penal for any one giving evidence before a tribunal constituted by that Act, to commit perjury. He next entered into a detail of the case of Jacobs, the Insolvent, and of the evidence which the defendant had given in that case. It appeared that before Jacobs went to jail three organs and another musical instrument called a seraphine, Jacobs's property, were placed in the custody of the defendant. On his examination first on the 9th of February last before the Examiner, on a reference, and latterly before the Insolvent Court on the 6th of July, the defendant gave two different and contrary accounts of the reason of their being so placed in his custody. On his first examination the defendant stated that these instruments had been given up to him with a view to his becoming security for Jacobs to Messrs. Burking-young, but that the negotiation not being completed they were given up again. At his subsequent examination, he said that the organs and the seraphine were pledged to him, he having become security for the Insolvent to Moore, Hickey and Co., who had offered to take his guarantee for a sum of about 1,000 or 1,200 rupees. In his first examination he had also stated that the property was given up to Jacobs in or about May 1838, before the Insolvent set out upon a trip up the river, and that he (the Insolvent) had taken them with him as he had said, he had sold them while absent from Calcutta. At the last examination, however, he admitted that this property had not been given up till after Jacobs went to jail, which was on the 25th August 1838, when it was restored to Mrs. Jacobs, who asked for it on the ground that her husband was about to make some arrangement with his creditors. The money for which this property was deposited as security, had not been repaid, and it was given up through mere friendship for the Insolvent and his family. These were the contradictions on which the indictment was founded, and to which the evidence would be principally confined. There were, however, others of minor importance of which no notice was taken.

Mr. John D'Arcy, an assistant in the office of the Chief Clerk of the Insolvent Court, produced the order of reference to the Examiner, dated 5th January 1838, under which the defendant had been first examined. He also produced the Insolvent's original and additional schedules of the 2nd September and the 29th December 1838 respectively.

P. O. Hanlon, Esq. Examiner of the Insolvent Court, deposed, that the defendant was examined before him on the 9th of February last, and that he (Mr. O'H.) took down his evidence in writing; that each page of this examination was signed with the initials of the defendant, and that the full signature was on the last page. The defendant, when examined, betrayed no emotion or embarrassment. He requested of the witness that, as from his being attached to a public office, the public interests would suffer from his detention, he might be examined the first and he was so examined. The examination was in three parts, and each was signed by the defendant. When a party is examined before the witness, his examination, as written down, is given to him to read before he is asked to put his name to it. The witness believed this course was adopted in the defendant's case. The witness produced defendant's examination at the Insolvent Court on the 6th of July, which was signed in like manner as the former one. Of the particulars of these examinations he had no distinct recollection. He remembered the Insolvent's cash book being produced before him (the witness) on the 9th of February, and recollected the entries on pages 840 and 1,200 on which erasures had been made.

Cross examined by Mr. Tutton—Believed that the book mentioned was got from the Chief Clerk's office. It was not produced during the defendant's examination nor was he examined upon it. It was customary to give to the party examined, examination to read before he signs it, but deponent had no distinct recollection of this having been done in the defendant's case, neither could he say positively that the defendant had read it, even supposing it to have been given to him for the purpose—the defendant alone could tell that. He believed that no questions were put to the Insolvent or others between the several parts of the defendant's examination on the 9th February. Did not remember telling the defendant when the first part of his examination was completed, that he must remain to be further examined, but believed he told him he might go, and supposed that he went as soon as released. The defendant attended merely for the purpose of giving evidence as to certain settlements deeds, and was not aware that he would be examined on other matters. Did not recollect that there was anything irregular in the manner of the defendant's examination, or that questions were put promiscuously by different parties. Believed that if such had been the case, or if there had been so much of conversation as to interrupt the proceedings, he should have checked such irregularities. Did not recollect stopping or interrupting the defendant. It is usual when the examination is conducted by one party, to put the name of that party at the head of it; but he believed that this omission in the present instance, was not owing to the defendant's having been questioned by several attorneys or counsel. The witness in taking down an examination, writes the precise words as near as possible, but he stated that all written examinations are defective in their nature from the practice of blending the question and the answer when writing them down. Believed he did not ask the defendant if he was not the book-keeper and partner of the Insolvent. Could not undertake to say that he put down all that part, but can swear that he did put down all that could be considered evidence. Did not recollect that he had put down his pen and refused to take down matters of evidence. Did not recollect that the defendant brought with him a great number of papers, or that he had referred him to Mr. Burkin- young. Told him that he must leave the papers and deeds which he had brought, in his (witness's) hands, and on his asking for it, had given him a receipt. Did not know whether the defendant went away immediately after his examination. The time occupied by a reference is usually two hours.

Re-examined by Mr. Clarke.—The defendant could not very well have remained in witness's office without his seeing him. He could not recollect particulars of the same, but by reading it over he could refresh his memory. After reading it he said, that he had no doubt those were the statements made. In reference to that part of the defendant's examination which he states that Jacobus when he went on the river took the organs, &c. with him, the witness said that he did not understand the defendant to say that he had seen them embarked or that he knew positively that they were so taken; his expression was a more doubtful one.

W. W. Burkin- young Esq., attorney to the assignee and to the prosecution, put in the jurat which the defendant had sworn to in the usual manner before Sir H. W. Selton the 9th of Feb., in Mr. Burkin- young's presence.

Mr. Arlet, interpreter at the Insolvent Court, administered the oath of the defendant in the usual manner before Sir H. W. Selton on the 6th July last.

Robert Bartlett, a carver and gilder, was never an apprentice or assistant to the Insolvent Jacobs, but was living in his house for about a year, from May 1838. He knew of G. machine organs and a seraphine having been the property and in the possession of the Insolvent. About April or May 1838, they were removed from his premises. Two of the organs were sent to Mr. Aldwell's and the others, a large and two small ones, with the seraphine, were sent to the defendant Johnston's. Thought that this was before Jacobs went on the river. The instruments remained at Johnston's some months and were removed, the witness believes in October; when Jacobs was in Jail. They were removed one night after gunfire, the witness believed, for he remembered waiting till the moon went down. Mrs. Jacobs asked him (witness) to accompany her and he went. He believed that Mrs. Jacobs's two daughters, Emma and Rachel, and another young lady, Miss Philpot, went with them. They walked to Johnston's house; but the witness did not go in, as Mr. J. and he were not on speaking terms. The instruments were brought out and carried away by coolies, and when they had gone, Johnston came out and walked with the party to the house of Mr. Philpot in Creek Row, the coolies with the property preceding them. Mrs. Jacobs went into Mr. Philpot's with the things, and afterwards the whole party went to Mrs. Jacobs's house. The Insolvent's account-book was shewn to the witness, and he stated that the writing upon the erasures was that of young Jacobs.

Cross-examined by Mr. Leith.—The witness was examined in the Insolvent Court, Mr. Burkin- young had told him that he would indict him (witness) but he did not know what for. Heard that Mrs. Jacobs and young Jacobs were also to be indicted, but did not know that the indictment was prepared and ready for presentation. Mr. Burkin- young did not tell witness that it gave evidence the indictment against him should not be preferred he had no communication with, or from Messrs. Burkin- young and Barwell; only they had told him to peak the truth this time.

They had told him this, because on his first examination, having been told by Jacobs's family, that if he told all he would bring both them and himself into trouble, he had not spoken the truth. He was engaged in removing the Insolvent's property, knowing that it was for the purpose of concealment. He was told to take a house and remove the goods to it, and he did so. When examined about this in the Insolvent Court, he denied all knowledge of it because they told him to do so. Was examined a second time at the Insolvent Court, and did not then state it was untrue. On the second examination he did say that Johnston accompanied the party to the house in Creek Row, because he never was asked. Neither, for the same reason, did he state that Mrs. Jacobs accompanied him to defendant's house.

An objection was here made by Mr. Clarke, and allowed by the Court, to the witness being examined as to his former evidence without having that evidence put into his hands.

Cross-examination resumed.—Told Mr. Philpot to day in the verandah of the Court House, that Johnston accompanied the party to the house in Creek Row, Philpot asked if Johnston went, and witness told him yes, but told him nothing else. Philpot was not at home when the things were taken to his house, he was at Jacobs's. He must have known that the things were going there. As the party left his house they met him in Creek Row, and he turned back with them to Jacobs's and there he remained about half an hour. The witness was in the house all the time he was there. This removal took place, the witness believed, in October, after the Duigah Pojah. It was at night after the moon had gone down. The witness might have said before to-day that he knew of the removal of the property. He might have said so to Mr. Smith, the person with whom he lives. Know Gould, they were partners before witness went to Jacobs's house to live. The plate was not removed from Jacobs's for the purpose of establishing witness in business. The only plate he knew of, that of Mr. Christiana, and that was not given to him for the purpose mentioned. Witness took care of it when Mr. C. went to jail. Kept it about a month. It was when witness was in partnership with Gould and Gould had charge of it from witness. Did not know that Mr. Christiana took the benefit of the Act. Mr. C. and witness had quarrelled about some money. Mr. C. owed money to Jacobs, and Jacobs owed money to witness, and witness wanted Mr. C. to pay him. Gould and witness were partners for two or three months, beginning in April 1838. The partnership was dissolved when witness went to live at Jacobs's. Gould must have been aware of the removal of goods from Jacobs's house, and must have known of the house in Fenwick Bazar. Gould and witness had just joined partnership when the goods were removed. Mrs. Jacobs removed the plate where the witness did not know. A clock was removed to the house of Mr. Master, of St. James's School. Gould must have known of that, for he was in the habit of visiting there. Gould had 2 organs, some metallic plates and wires for pianos in his possession, concealing them for the insolvent. They were kept in his shop and were given up when the Assignee advertised for them. Mr. Gould and Mr. Philpot are on very intimate terms—they were intimate before witness joined Gould. Before the examination in the Insolvent Court, Mr. Burkinyoung offered witness a reward if he would tell where the property was, it was before the subpoena was served. Believes he spoke of thousands of rupees, and promised not to tell where he had got his information. Witness, however, did not tell him. Witness's father had turned him out of his house, not on account of his bad character but for bad conduct—they could not agree. That was about two years ago.

Mrs. Caroline Jacobs, the wife of the insolvent, knew that her husband had several organs in April 1838, but not being frequently in the shop, could not tell particulars of them or whether he had a seraphine. She believed some of them were removed in April or May, but knows that when her husband left Calcutta they were not in the shop. Some were removed to Mr. Johnston's as pledge, long before her husband left town. Johnston was about to stand security for Jacobs, who was much annoyed by his creditors, the chief of whom was Mr. Burkinyoung, who, she believed, applied on behalf of Bruce, Shand and Co. There was a large and two small organs and a seraphine, and they were removed from Johnston's after Jacob's went to prison, and a few days before his petition was filed.

Cross-examined by Mr. Turton.—A Piano was sent to Mr. Johnston's for inspection, and after it had been some time with him he returned it. It was a piano. This was before Jacobs went on the river. Johnston stood security for Jacobs on several occasions—the last was to Moore, Hickey and Co. Johnston paid above 1,000 Rs to them, and has not, she believed, been repaid. The Organs and the Seraphine were at Johnston's at the time the Piano was returned, and that was before Jacobs went on the river. Defendant was absent from Calcutta during the Doorgah Poojah Holidays in 1838. Johnston delivered up the property at witnesses request, her husband having asked her to apply for it. Defendant knew nothing of the removal of any other property. He was not present at the removal of property from his house. Witness never went for it or sent Bartlett. Her daughter's did not go. She sent Coolies for it. Some of these Coolies were known to her. She used to spend the evening with her husband in the Jail, and before she went she gave her orders to the coolies to fetch the things. Johnston did not know of the property having been removed to Philpot's; she never mentioned it to him till just before it was delivered up to the Assignee. Witness never walked out on the night the property was removed. Never asked Bartlett to fetch it. It was not likely she would, knowing that Johnston and he were not on good terms. Has no recollection of meeting Philpot that night. Was not sure. She did not go out that night after returning from jail. Bartlett and Gould took Jacob's place on the 1st April 1838, and they separated before Jacobs went to Jail. Bartlett then came to live in witness's house. He was taken in because he said Gould had turned him out without notice, and he had no place to lie in. The defendant's object in giving up the property, was to benefit the family; he might have detained it.

Re-examined by Mr. Clarke.—Never informed Johnston of goods going to Philpot's, Johnston never advised in her husband's affairs. She was not aware that he took an active part in the direction of her husband's affairs, but understood that they were under the management of Mr. Strettell. Mr. Johnston was at her house daily after Jacobs went to jail, Philpot was at her house every evening. Did not know, whether on the night of removal he came there with Johnston, Bartlett and her daughters. Did not remember seeing him with Philpot on that night. Did not know that Bartlett was at Johnston's that night. She sent no note with the coolies for she had told Johnston some time previous that she would send coolies for the goods. She did not know whether her daughters were at Johnston's or not; but they were in the habit of going out for a walk in the evening.

Mr. Thomas Philpot.—Remembered the night on which the Organs were removed from Johnston's house. He was at Jacobs's house that evening and met the family there. That was soon after 5 o'clock. Did not know where Johnston was that evening, but saw him about an hour after midnight. Witness was returning home about 12 or 1/2 past 12, when he met a party consisting of his daughter, the two Misses Jacobs, and Bartlett, no one else he believed, in Creek Row. He returned with them and went to Jacobs's, and there he saw Johnston. Witness had some conversation with Johnston a day or two before the examination on the 17th Nov., when witness told him how he was situated with regard to the Organs, and defendant replied that he knew nothing of them and did not wish to hear anything about them. Several months after the first examination Johnston, on witness mentioning in his presence his fears with regard to the Organs, &c., said they were quite safe at his (Johnston's) place.

Cross-examined by Mr. Laith.—Bartlett told him to day, that such and such people were of the party that accompanied the Organs to his (witness's) house. Witness told him to speak the truth and he said that Emma and Rachel and himself were of the party. Did not know that he mentioned others.

C. G. Strettell Esq.—Was formerly attorney for the insolvent Jacobs. Filed his first and second Schedules. Remembered the defendant's examination on the 9th of February. Was at the Insolvent Court on the 5th of January, when the order for reference to the examiner was obtained. Saw Johnston in Court that day. He was present during the whole of Jacobs's examination. Jacobs account book (the one previously mentioned) was produced at that examination, and the insolvent was examined as to the entries. Witness, after the examination, had some conversation with the defendant in the verandah of the Court, and defendant said he believed that the circumstance of the sale of Organs on the river, was correctly stated. It admitted of explanation, and he was surprised that witness had put questions to elicit an explanation. Johnston was the first witness on the 9th of February. Had been summoned for 11 o'clock, and stated the inconvenience that would attend his detention, as a reason for wishing to be examined first. He did not go away when his examination was over, but waited till the reference concluded. The whole reference lasted about two hours, of which Johnston's examination occupied about an hour and a half, therefore he must have waited about half an hour. No one but the insolvent was examined after Johnston. Johnston was very cool and collected, so much so, that Mr. O'Hanlon noticed it. He said to witness, that he expected to have been opposed by Mr. Clarke, and that he had quite put Barwell down. Johnston though intimate with Jacobs, took no part in conducting his case, but had advised in certain matters. The creditors had proposed to give Jacobs a letter of license, but their proposition was not carried into effect. This was known to the defendant.

Mr. John King deposed, that Jacobs went to Jail on the 25th August 1838. Mr. Christiana was in jail, but was not discharged by the Insolvent Court.

IV W. Burkingyoung, Esq. re-called. Remembered the proceedings in the Insolvent Court on the 5th January, when Jacobs was examined. Jacobs's book was produced, and he was examined as to the erasures. It had previously been in the Assignee's office. Remembered the examination on the 9th February. Johnston was the first witness examined. Did not go away immediately after, but waited until all was over. Believe that the examination altogether lasted about three hours, and thought that the defendant must have staid two hours after he was released. Examination as to erasures took place that day, and defendant was present. The defendant gave his evidence with very great deliberation and calmness,—more so, the witness thought that most people would have shown. This examination was taken down by the Examiner, but witness could not say that he (defendant) had read it afterwards. Considerable property was discovered. Offered a reward for its discovery to a Mr. Master and also to Bartlett. Told the latter that he (witness) knew he was aware of the place of its concealment, and only wanted him to point out the house.

Cross examined by Mr. Turton. Bartlett was included in an indictment for fraudulent concealment. Gould was not. Did not think it possible he could have mentioned a reward of thousands when he never contemplated giving more than two or three hundred rupees. Has heard that it was proposed to the defendant through Mr. Morgan, of the Assignee's office, that if he could procure the amount of Rs. 80,000, the opposition to the Insolvent should be withdrawn. The debts amounted to 65,000 Rs. This was not the Assignee's prosecution but that of the witness, if they chose so to call it. No one paid him for it. Mr. Robert Coxé keeps a music shop in London; he is the nominal prosecutor. Witness did not go round among the agency houses to get some of them to lend their names as prosecutor. In Jacobs's trial he had called on Bruce and Co. and on Macintyre and Co., who were creditors. There had been some angry correspondence between the defendant and the witness him, as to the trust and possession of the former. The letters were signed by Mr. Bartwell on behalf of himself and his partner the witness. When he served the defendant with the notice he believed that he knew he was to give evidence. The subpoena was served in December. Defendant was not examined on the 5th of January. The usual time occupied by a reference is two hours. On the 9th Feb. the examination commenced a little after 12. Gould swear it lasted longer than till 2: it was after 3 when witness left Examiner's office that day. Took the defendant down to the Examiner's office that day. Had no recollection of his saying as they went, that they had given him but a short notice to procure his papers and deeds, but he believed, that defendant had made that complaint to witness in a letter. There was a negotiation going on preparatory to defendants becoming security for the Insolvent to witness on behalf of Mr. Coxé. Johnston went to witness's office to confer with him about it. The negotiation was as to the exchange at which the debt was to be paid. Defendant undertook, that if that were settled he would guarantee payment. The treaty was broken off witness could not say why.

Re-examined by Mr. Clarke.—Witness did not authorise Mr. Morgan to make the offer to the defendant, but had heard it talked of. It was not made through him or his office. Coxé is the largest creditor except one. Witness is Coxé's constituted attorney in this country. Bartlett and Mrs. Jacobs and young Jacobs, were struck out of the indictment on legal grounds. As to Bartlett there was no other reason, though there was as to Mrs. Jacobs.

This was the case for the prosecution.

Mr. Turton then addressed the jury on behalf of the defendant. His speech lasted for nearly two hours, and was a most eloquent and impressive one. He began by endeavouring to prove an objection as to the grounds on which the indictment was based, and to show that the prosecution could not be sustained under the clause in the Insolvent Act, on which it was grounded. In this however, he was overruled by the Court.

To amount to the penal crime of perjury, Mr. Turton said, a falsehood must be one that is material to the case in which it occurs, and must be known to be false by the person uttering it at the time he so utters it. He endeavoured to show that in the present instance, the contradictions on which the indictment was grounded, were not of importance in the case, and that they were such as the defendant had no interest whatever in uttering, and in short that they were merely accidental mistakes. The defendant having at the time he was first examined confounded the transaction of the piano, which was returned at that time with the transaction of the organs and seraphine.

He further commented on the impossibility of giving in a written document, the exact meaning of the person examined, and showed from the evidence of the Examiner himself, that in the present case his client's true meaning had not been given.

He then addressed himself to the facts, and analyzed the evidence that had been given on behalf of the prosecution.

He dwelt upon the circumstance of his client's having been totally unprepared for his first examination, in the form which it assumed, when he only attended to speak as to certain deeds. It was, he thought, very easy for a man so situated to fall into mistake. But that that mistake was not wilful, he thought must be evident from the cool and composed manner in which his evidence was delivered, and which he could not have assumed if conscious that he was leaving his character at the mercy of such men as the witness Bartlett, with whom he had been at enmity for a twelvemonth, and the man Gould, who though on the back of the indictment, was with two other witnesses also on the back of the indictment omitted to be called, and whom the prosecutor dare not call, for if he had, Gould must have shown himself worse perjured, if possible, than even Bartlett. The defendant when he so gave evidence, had his character, had all to lose and nothing to gain, and had he really known he was speaking falsely, he could not have assumed the coolness and propriety of demeanor that all had spoken to. He pointed out the manifold contradictions of some of the witnesses, and the extraordinary disclosures of others, and dwelt upon them with much severity and with most convincing effect.

Mr. Turton called no witnesses for the defence, except as to the character of his client. These were Messrs. H. M. Parker, W. R. Young, J. Trotter, and S. G. Palmer. The character which they gave the defendant, was a flattering one. His talent and his integrity as a public servant, were much dwelt upon by all.

SIR EDWARD RYAN then went over the evidence at length, and in the clearest manner pointing out to the jury the weak points in the evidence, and the contradictions of the witnesses in the clearest possible manner. When he had finished, the jury retired for about ten minutes, and returned with a verdict of NOT GUILTY.

The announcement was hailed with a burst of applause which expression of feeling, so out of the way in a Court of Justice, was very properly checked by the presiding Judge.—Hurk. Dec. 26.

INSOLVENT COURT.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1839

(Before Sir H. W. Selon.)

IN THE MATTER OF NINA DELIGNY, AN INSOLVENT.

There being no opposition, this Insolvent, who was not in custody, was declared entitled to the benefit of the Act.

IN THE MATTER OF M. M. MANUE, AN INSOLVENT.

Mr. Turtan applied for a rule nisi, to set aside the adjudication of insolvency, on the grounds that the Insolvent had for some time before the declaration resided at Cussicore, beyond the jurisdiction of the Court; and that he had not so resided with any intention to defraud, or cause delay to his creditors. Rule granted.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS, AN INSOLVENT.

No amended schedule had been filed by the Insolvent. The reason alledged was, that he had not yet obtained access of his books, which were in the custody of the Examiner. It was expected that the production of the books was to be at the expense of the estate, but to this Mr. Clarke, on behalf of the creditors, objected. Sir H. W. Selon, after hearing both sides said, that nothing further was necessary for the purpose, than an intimation from himself to the Examiner, of the necessity for the Insolvent's being allowed to inspect his books.

The Insolvent was examined by Mr. Clarke, who stated that a letter had been received from Mr. Fowler, containing a list of property not given up, which was said to be concealed, and in the possession of Mr. Master. The Insolvent knew Mr. Fowler, and recognised his signature to the letter. Believing the property in question was put into the possession of Mr. Master some time in or before April 1839. There was not a pearl necklace amongst it; neither he (the Insolvent) nor his wife ever had one. There was no jewellery of any kind. There was a palankeen carriage which had subsequently been given up to the Assignee. Mr. Clarke then showed the list to the Insolvent, and asked him if any of the property there enumerated had been in the possession of Mr. Master. In reply, the Insolvent said, that the treatment he had received, had destroyed both his intellect and his digestion; he had told them all that he could, and what more did they want from him. He could not distinctly recollect about the property. Some of the articles were mortgaged to Mr. Mr. Master, who had lent him Rs. 300. Some, he believed all, of the property had been received back by his wife, Master had now none of the property in his possession; he was not quite certain of that but he believed it was so. He was not aware that any other person, other than those whose names he had given, had property of his in their possession at the present time. He had received from Mr. Chappel of Madras no other money than the rupees 611 put down in the schedule. This sum must have been in payment for a mina-forte, which had been sent to him among other things. All the other articles so consigned, must yet be in the possession of Mr. Chappel.

Mr. Edward Master. Had property of the Insolvent in his possession in April 1838. There was a clock, some silver plate and a few trinkets; but not a pearl-necklace. These articles were sent to him by Mrs. Jacobs who asked him, as a favour, to keep them for her. They were all returned to Mrs. J., but at what time he could not tell exactly. It must have been about 8 or 10 months ago. It was, he believed, after the Insolvent went to prison. The property was put in his possession by Mrs. Jacobs to keep for her, and not as a mortgage. He had lent money to Mrs. Jacobs about five or six months ago, after he had returned the property to her. The clock, he thought, had been given up to the Assignee, but the plate had, he believed, been sold. He had no idea of the value of the property which had been in his possession. He had not seen Mrs. Jacobs since he received his subpoena, but he saw her on Wednesday last. He recollected Mr. Jacobs going up on the river in the hot weather of 1838.

Mr. Clarke said, that the examination was so far important as it showed that the property had been delivered up to Mrs. Jacobs. It could not at present, however, be traced further, as, though a subpoena had been issued for Mrs. J., she had concealed herself, so that the subpoena could not be served otherwise than upon her durwan. Such conduct, Mr. Clarke observed would have any thing but a good effect upon the Insolvent's cause.

It was finally settled, that, upon affidavit being filed, the service of the subpoena, upon the durwan should be considered good service, and that an order should issue for the appearance of Mrs. Jacobs next Court day. The Insolvent was, of course, remanded.—Hurk. Dec. 9.

MISCELLANEA.

CALCUTTA.

THE LORD BISHOP.—A letter from Benares mentions, that the Lord Bishop arrived at that station on the 12th instant, and preached there twice. The writer describes the feeling of the congregation to be one of disappointment. His Lordship's odities, personal allusions, and continual references to the titles of the great men in this country, afford rather too much diversion.

MR. LONGURVILLE CLARKE.—The President in Council on the 16th instant appointed Mr. Longueville Clarke to be standing Council to the East India Company in the room of Mr. Cochrane, who has resigned that office. The appointment is, however, provisional, subject to the approval of the Governor-General and the Court of Directors. The President was compelled to make an immediate appointment, as the Government could not wait for a reference to Head Quarters.

THE HON'BLE COL. MORISON, C. B.—The Seringapatam, with the Hon'ble Colonel Morison, C. B., on board, left the Sandheads on the 23d of November.

SIR JOHN KEANE.—The Bombay Gazette put forth a rumour of the death of Sir John Keane, on the 10th of December. Intelligence has reached Calcutta of His Excellency being perfectly well on the 20th of that month.

DR. D. STEWART.—Dr. Duncan Stewart, the Superintendent of vaccination, is to succeed Doctor Martin as Presidency Surgeon.

CAPT. WM. LUDLOW.—Capt. Wm. Ludlow has been selected to succeed to the appointment at Jubbulpore, which became vacant by the resignation of Major Malcolm Nicholson.

CAPTAIN OUTRAM.—Captain Outram has been appointed to succeed Colonel Pottinger, as Political Agent in Seinde.

MR. SMOULT.—Mr. W. H. Smoult has been appointed to officiate as Clerk of the Peace in room of Col. James Young, resigned.

MAJOR-GENERAL FRAZER.—Major-General Frazer, 46th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, is appointed Resident of Hyderabad, in the room of Lieutenant-Colonel Stewart, who has proceeded to Europe.

MR. CURNIN.—Mr. James Curnin, who has been officiating in the room of Mr. James Prinsep, as Asst. Master of the Mint and Secretary to the Mint Committee, has been appointed to those situations, during the absence of Mr. Prinsep, who has been admitted to furlough by the Court of Directors.

MR. PRINGLE.—The Pringle trial, after having occupied the time of two Special Commissioners for about fifteen months, is at last brought to a close, though its result is not published. The prosecutor, it appears, has petitioned Government and the Sudder Court upon the subject of the many indignities which, he states, to have been heaped upon him by one of the Special Commissioners during the investigation.

MR. BIGGELL.—It is said, that the Court of Directors acting upon their favorite principle of excluding unenvied officers of whatever degree of ability, from any employment in the coveted line, have, in a recent despatch, expressed their high disapprobation of Mr.

Bignell's having been allowed, though only for a few weeks, to officiate for the Secretary to the Revenue Board. They have added thereto, that if he be still in the office, he should be removed at once.

CHOLERA.—This dreadful malady is now very prevalent in Calcutta.

THE LEEVEE.—The first levee was held by Sir Jaspér Nicolls on the 13th instant, and was very numerously attended.

SALE OF GOVERNMENT BILLS.—A sale of Government bills on the Supreme Government, at 30 days sight, to the extent of 5 lacks of rupees, will take place at the General Treasury, on Thursday the 28th instant, at 1 P. M.

THE BERENICE.—The departure of the Berenice for Suez, has been deferred, for the completion of her repairs, until Thursday, the 28th instant.

LAYING THE DUST.—It is said, that Messrs. Cook and Co. and Hunter and Co., have generously resolved to save the denizens of Durrumtollah from being choked by the dust, by employing their water carts to lay it.

DACOITIES.—Dacoities are again becoming of very frequent occurrence. Many have been reported during the month also, in all but one of which the perpetrators of the robberies, carried off property to a large amount with impunity.

MR. CHARLES FRESCOTT.—Mr. Charles Prescott, of the Bombay Civil Service, in a fit of mental derangement, sprang over board from the Zenobia on the 8th instant, and was drowned.

EXTORTIONS.—Some parties who have for a length of time been extorting a species of black-mail from the residents of Bursuah, have, during the week, been apprehended by the Magistrate of the Twenty-four Pergunahs, and put in confinement.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S INSTITUTION.—The pupils of this institution were examined on the 3d instant, and developed very considerable improvement. Their knowledge of mathematics was astonishing, and the only defect observed, was in their enunciation.

THE SANS SOUCI.—Catherine and Petruchio, The Mid. de Temple, and Forty and Fifty, were performed at the Sans Souci on the second instant, with great success and to a very crowded house.

ATTEMPT TO RESCUE A PRISONER.—Mr. E. K. Hume and an officer of the Cameronians, have been brought up before the Chief Magistrate for attempting to rescue Lt. Drabey, a prisoner, from the great jail, and have been held to bail to take their trial in a week before the Chief Magistrate.

RESUMPTIONS.—It is said that there are about to be some changes effected in regard to the mode of making Resumptions, owing to the Law Member of the Council being of opinion, that the Resumption Officers have hitherto been acting in contravention to the Regulations.

THE MADAGASCAR STEAMER.—The Government have purchased the Madagascar steamer for two lacks of rupees. The vessel is cheap at that price, for she stands the proprietors now in 2,10,000 rupees and several parties who have visited her, say that she is a splendid vessel in every respect.

THE GANGES STEAMER.—The Ganges steamer arrived on the 23d ultimo, at Rangoon, in a damaged state; her paddle boxes being shivered and broken, and other parts of the vessel injured. She met, it seems, with the hurricane which raged with such awful violence all along the Madras coast, on the 16th November.

APPEAL IN BEHALF OF MRS. DAVIOT.—An appeal has been made, during the week, in behalf of Mrs. Daviot, the widow of an industrious and worthy indigo planter, who drowned himself in a fit of insanity. Subscriptions will be most thankfully received by the bereaved widow, who is well deserving of them.

APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. F. Wells was to succeed Mr. Dorin at the Treasury, and Mr. J. P. Grant to the situation vacated by the former at Agra; but, in consequence of Mr. Wells being disinclined to serve at the presidency, Mr. J. P. Grant will succeed Mr. Dorin.

ESCAPE OF CONVICTS AND MURDER.—The ship Virginia, with convicts on board, was proceeding to the Straits, and when off Pangoore, the convicts rose against the crew, murdered the Captain and Chief mate of the vessel, and escaped ashore.

PARENTAL ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.—Some correspondence has appeared during the week in the Hurkarn, respecting this institution. A writer has attributed mal-practices to the managing committee of the institution, and Mr. Byrn, its Secretary, has successfully attacked and rebutted the allegations of the writer, who, it appears, was not actuated by the heat of motives, in indicting his communication.

LA MARTINIÈRE.—There were upwards of two hundred applicants for admission on the foundation of the Martinière on the 1st instant. The Governors, after enquiring into the age and circumstances of each of the candidates, have elected ten, whose situation in life entitles them to the benefit of the Martinière charity.

NEW FREE SCHOOL.—A morning school has been opened at the house of the Rev. Krishna Mohana Monerjee, adjoining Christ's Church, Cornwalis Square, where native youths desirous of receiving the benefits of a gratuitous instruction, may find a ready admittance. The school at present contains a limited number of boys, owing, perhaps, to the existence of three other schools in the same neighbourhood.

PUBLIC FEMINARIES.—The pupils of the Parental Academy, the High School, the College of St. Xavier and other public Seminaries, have been examined during the past month; and the result has been most favorable to those of the Parental Academy, who developed a greater amount of knowledge than the rest, and seemed to have been less crammed for the occasion than all but the pupils of St. Xavier's College. This last is a new institution and promises to turn out well.

ROBBERY.—The Baptist Chapel at Howrah was robbed on the night of the 10th instant, of its chandeliers, wall-shades &cetera. It seems that divine worship, was suspended at the Chapel in the evening, and therefore the shades, lamps, &cetera, were put away in baskets. Some thieves came in through a window, and made away with the articles.

DORJELING.—The subscription to the Dorjeling line of Bungalows, falls short of the sum required by one thousand rupees. It is expected the Supreme Council will be held in Dorjeling next hot weather. The Secretary to the Dorjeling Garden Society, has advertised liability to distribute Dorjeling forest and fruit seeds to subscribers applying for them.

The works progress rapidly at Dorjeling, and his delightful retreat from the hot weather, will soon be quite ready for the convenience of parties who may be inclined to visit it.

A letter states, "the buildings, &c., there were being rapidly constructed, and every thing there and in the approaches to it seems progressing favourably, and as quickly as could be expected. The road is already carried up two and a half miles above Pankahbarie, practicable for loaded bullocks and for wheeled carriages with ponies. Next hot weather, the station will be fit for to receive invalids, and provide them with comforts.

MIDNAPUR CROPS.—The accounts from this station agree in complaining of the draught. The following is an extract of a letter. "It is a pitiful sight to behold the burnt-up state of the paddy fields and in fact grain of all description. The poor, miserable cultivators are rendered tenfold more miserable by the sad prospects before them. The crops are all dying away for want of rain.

HORRID CRUELTY.—Whilst constable Hamilton was returning from his round, between eleven and twelve o'clock at night, he perceived a female on the Doomtollah road, in a recumbent posture, almost half dead, with a child only six weeks old in her arms. On enquiry he learnt that she was the lawful wife of a Mr. Hutton, residing at Doomtollah, who had just assaulted her in a most cruel manner and turned her out of doors. Hamilton took her to his house and gave her shelter for the night.

STATE OF HEALTH.—Sickness is at present more prevalent amongst our native fellow inhabitants of the town than it has usually been about this time of previous years; numbers are daily attacked with colds and fever; and many cases of the latter have already proved fatal. The European portion of the inhabitants have not escaped the scourge. Sudden and rapid deaths have occurred of late among us.

THE PILGRIM TAX.—After the relinquishment of the Pilgrim tax, it became a question whether the munificent contribution of Government of a thousand rupees a month towards the Native Hospital, was to be continued or not, as the grant used to be made from the proceeds of the government's connection with idolatry. This question has been decided, and it has been determined by the Government not to withdraw their support from the institution in the question, and the monthly contribution, to the same amount as before, is to continue to be paid from the general treasury.

THE PHAM SUICIDE.—A young East Indian, named Oliver, employed in the Secret and Political Department, attempted to commit self-destruction two or three days ago. He swallowed a quantity of laudanum which would have proved fatal, but for immediate Medical assistance. The cause which led the young man to determine upon the rash step was, that he was about to lead a young lady to the altar, and the two first bans had been published, when his father, who was against the marriage, put a stop to its taking place, by prohibiting the solemnization of the third bans.

It has since transpired that the young man who was reported to have swallowed a dose of laudanum, with a view to terminate his existence, in consequence of having been prevented by his father from marrying the girl of his heart, did nothing of the sort. On old Oliver's preventing the marriage, the young one, who seems to be a "wide-awake chap," to extort the old man's consent, swallowed—not a dose of laudanum, but, what for a time passed for it—a dose of eau de luce and water. This rumour, as already stated, had the desired effect—the old gentleman, becoming alarmed at the desperation of his son, gave his reluctant consent, and the young gentleman led to the altar his blushing bride.

CAPTURE OF A THUG.—Mr. H. C. Metcalfe, the recently appointed Magistrate of Burdwan, has apprehended a Thug, who, for the last three years, has been employed in the indigo factory of a highly respected gentleman, at whose residence Mr. Metcalfe called on his way. It appears that the Thug was recognised by two of his old associates, who, as approvers, or Queen's evidence, were travelling in Mr. Metcalfe's train in custody of sepoy, in search of other members of their law gang. The new captive confessed to thirty-five or thirty-six murders.

BRINGING IN THE NEW YEAR.—Of all the welcomes which this promising young year of grace 1840 received in or near the Palaced City, that accorded to it by the jolly tars on the flood, was beyond all question the most enthusiastic and noisy. The tolling bell of the Cathedral clock had scarce boomed forth the requiem of the departed year, when its echoes were drowned in the clangour of about a hundred sharp-tuned bells on the river, rung as if with intent to burst them. Cannon pealed along the line of ships, and were answered by the hearty hurrahs of the joyous Jacks, whose voices were heard above all the clamour. Rockets whizzed and exploded in the clear sky; blue lights spread their unnatural glare over the scene, and for about ten minutes the whole length of the harbour presented a complete chaos of noise, smoke, and flame.

CREDITORS' INTEREST ACT.—An Act (No. XXXII. of 1839) allowing under certain circumstances, interest to creditors upon the debt owing to them, has been passed. The tradesmen of Calcutta, some time since, agreed to insist upon having interest upon debts standing beyond a certain number of months, but it is one thing for such a resolution to be made, but quite another whether the law as it then stood, would enforce the resolution. The Act just passed has placed the question beyond doubt, by providing that a creditor shall be entitled to interest at the current rate on the debt owing to him "from the time when demand of payment shall have been made in writing, so as such demand shall give notice to the debtor that interest will be claimed from the date of such demand until the term of payment."

THE CALCUTTA COURIER.—Mr. Johnson, barrister at law, of editorial borrowing celebrity, has, it is said, assumed charge of the editorial management of the Calcutta Courier. We doubt not, that, profiting by past experience, Mr. Johnson will conduct the Courier better than he did the Englishman.

FIRE, &c.—Account of fires in Calcutta and its vicinity, in the year 1839, taken from the Police Report book.

Nine hundred and forty-eight tiled and straw houses have been destroyed by fire during the last year, twenty-three puckah golowns, and one puckah upper-roomed house. Only one life has been lost.

MR. LINTON'S ORATORIC.—Some over-zealous clerical and lay gentlemen, during the month uttered a protest against the performance of selections from the Oratorio of the Messiah, by Mr. Linton, at the Town Hall, on the 23d instant. Such performances, have been sanctioned by the most pious of our clergy, and the gentlemen who suddenly started up to oppose the advertised performance, to the detriment of the worthy individual for whose benefit it was enacted, appear to us to be a great deal too fastidious. Some trimming vocalists, who had promised to assist him, and who could not plead "conscientious scruples" as an excuse for their conduct, as they had taken part in similar performances before, being frightened by the protest, deserted Mr. Linton on the occasion. But in spite of all the opposition, the oratorio was quite successful, both with respect to the performance and the company assembled, the former being the grandest and best performed musical entertainment we have had in this city, and the company, as numerous, if not more so, than any assembled on any previous occasion of the sort. So the ill judged and unfair attack made by the parsons, actually benefitted Mr. Linton, and obtained for him a greater number of subscribers, than he would, perhaps, have got, had they not opposed him.

FLORISSANT.—The dull monotony of the Keruanee circles, has been broken by a recent case of elopement. The Adonis of the case is a young man, named Chingree Fleming, an ardent votary of Orpheus and Terpsichore, with a soul teeming with love and poetry; the lady is the daughter of a first-rate "whip." After having effected the possession of his "existence jewel," Fleming went to a dissenting minister to have the knot of hymen tied, but the divine was up to snuff and refused. The gentleman now finds himself in a "funk," and is at a loss what to do, particularly as the mother of the lady has taken her back, and her relations have bruised Fleming pretty severely for taking her away.

SUDDEN DEATH.—On the 28th of December, a gentleman and his wife rose very early, and were making preparations to go and witness the races, when the latter changed her mind, and went back to bed. The gentleman sallied out, and returned about 8 o'clock, and found that his wife was not yet up. Thinking that she must be fatigued by having kept up the preceding night to an unusually late hour, and consequently needed rest, he did not wish to disturb her. At 10 o'clock he sent his daughter to go and awake her, thinking that she had slept sufficiently long. The girl went and was horrified to find her mother a corpse. It is supposed that the lady died from an apoplectic fit.

MEETING OF THE DISTRICT CHARITABLE SOCIETY.—The Central Committee of the District Charitable Society, assembled as usual, on the 31st of December. The attendance was very small. The usual grants to make up the deficiencies of the different district Committees, were made, and the cases of some applicants who applied for relief, were disposed of. Among the latter was the family of the late Mr. D'Moulin, Principal Sudder Ameer, who died insolvent, and was not in circumstances even to subscribe to the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund, by which a recourse to charity would have been effectually avoided by his family. A report of the Committee for erecting a general alms house, on a similar plan to that existing in England, was brought up, and it was unanimously resolved, that it be printed, in order to give the public a full view of the subject, and excite as much discussion on it as possible, before the plan was finally adopted.

MEETING OF THE MEMBERS OF THE CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND.—A Meeting of the Members of the Civil Service Annuity Fund, was held on the 1st instant, at the Town Hall, and was very numerously attended. The accounts, as briefly published in the papers, were duly passed. The Secretary, Mr. J. P. Grant, then announced his intended resignation of the office, in consequence of his being about to assume the office of the Accountant-General of the N. W. Provinces. The Meeting proceeded to elect five Managers in the place of those of the past year, and after some discussion as to the mode of procedure, it was resolved that each gentleman present should write down the names of the five whom he wished to vote for. Scrutineers were chosen, who reported that the majority of votes were in favor of Messrs. Lewis, Halliday, Fowler, Moore and Bracken. The five gentlemen were then duly elected. Mr. Parker proposed, that whoever might be chosen to fill the office of Secretary, should, subject to the approbation of the Civil Fund, discharge gratuitously the duties of the Secretary to that fund also, which proposition was duly seconded and carried. A vote of thanks to Mr. J. P. Grant, for his late valuable services, was unanimously carried, and after the usual thanks to the Chairman, the Meeting separated.

MR. SPEED'S LECTURE.—Mr. Speed on the 11th instant delivered his lecture on Agriculture and its Mechanics, at a Meeting of upwards of a hundred Members of the Mechanics' Institution. He explained what was meant by agriculture, considered apart from gardening. From this proposition he demonstrated the importance of agriculture as a study for Mechanics, as it might be considered the parent of Mechanical arts, the progenitor of manufactures; the science which most tends to bring men to civilization. He then alluded to the ancient history of his subject, and compared the agriculture of Egypt with that of India. He described the various ancient implements of husbandry, and compared them with those now used in India, which were shown by models and drawings. He gave a description of the various ploughs in use in this country, and made some appropriate and able remarks on its agricultural interests. The loud plaudits of the audience evinced the deep interest and gratification the able lecturer had excited.

EFFICIENCY OF THE CALCUTTA POLICE.—On last Wednesday night some of the crew of a vessel anchored in the middle of the stream, between Durmah Ghat and Meerbhul's Ghat, landed about three or four bags of smuggled salt at the former Ghat. The burkandaz doing duty at the spot, interrupted the progress of the smugglers, who were about four in number, and got a few sound kicks for the conscientious discharge of duty. He gave the alarm, and a few more burkandazes came to his assistance, when a scuffle ensued between both parties, and the burkandazes got the worst of it—no less than about four having been stabbed. By this time the guard stationed at Meerbhul's Ghat got the alarm, but before they could come up, the smugglers, with the bags of salt, made their escape, and it remains a problem if they will ever be traced or taken. The burkandazes have been severely wounded, and are at present in the hospital.

GRAMMATICAL CONTROVERSY.—The two principal daily journals, have been engaged, during the week, in a grammatical controversy!! the Englishman maintaining, that weariful, misdeedful, molestful, complainful and invenful, are properly derived words; and the Harkaru denying the correctness of this allegation, and stating that the Englishman might as well state that tryful, vexful, aspersful, snarlful, bespatterful, distortful, misrepresentful, thinkful, provaricateful, throwawayful, employful, convinceful, saintlyful are proper words. There can be but one opinion on the subject among those capable of deciding on the merits of the question, and that is, that the Englishman is quite wrong. The past week, indeed, has been an unfortunate one for the Englishman, for even the "small fry" of the press, have been stripping him of his literary plumes, and exposing some gross grammatical blunders in his writings. In a critique on Nicholas Nickleby the Englishman stated, that a work popular in any age, would be popular in every age! He might as well have asserted, that calves heads, if the popular food in our age, would for ever be the popular food. The dictum is absurd—quite preposterous.

RENOVAL BANK.—Mr. Udny has applied to be relieved of the Secretaryship of the Bank of Bengal, and the Directors have passed a resolution to the effect of intimating to Lord Auckland, that they would proceed, in virtue of the powers conferred on them by the Charter, to elect a new Secretary on the 15th proximo, and requesting to know if the appointment be given to a person out of the service, whether the Government will continue to pay their proportion of the present salary. This proportion is now paid out of the dividends received by Government for its shares in the Bank. The Directors were almost unanimous in their preference of Mr. Bracken, over all the other candidates; Mr. Plutche, the Acting Secretary, will continue to perform the duties of Secretary, until the appointment be filled up on the 15th proximo.

WRECK OF THE EQUITABLE.—A large party of gentlemen went down the river on to witness the second attempt to blow up the wreck of the Equitable, which was quite successful. The wreck was exploded at low water, or rather a few minutes after the turn, (exactly at 3 p. m.) Very little shock was felt on shore, or in boats half a mile distant, and the report was a dull, distant sound, like that of a muffled drum;—but the column of water flung up was estimated at the least at one hundred and fifty feet in height, by thirty in diameter, rising from a circular wave probably twenty feet high. The column was of dazzling whiteness, and rose slowly, and then opened in every direction, disclosing the spars and fragments of the wreck, some of which were seen distinctly at its very summit. After the explosion, the river was literally covered with wax candles, rice, pieces of furniture, barrels of rum and the disjecta membra of the wreck. The stump of the main-mast was seen floating past, torn as if by chain shot, and the stern frame was also observed. The cylinder was exploded by means of a small battery placed in a dinghy immediately over the wreck, the communication being made at the time desired, by a little self-acting apparatus, moved by an old watch, which could be set to any time required. Fourteen minutes were given, and exactly at the time expected, the explosion took place. The battery was arranged by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, who set the watch just before quitting the wreck. Two Lieutenants of Engineers and Captains Rowman and Fitzgerald, aided in the operations; the latter very materially, in filling and rendering the canister impervious to water.

Professor O'Shaughnessy has been again requested to proceed to Follah Point, to blow up the remaining portion of the wreck, as the first experiment, though completely successful as far as it was intended, could not explode the whole.

MR. DEMAS'S PICTURES.—Mr. Demas, a highly talented artist, has been exhibiting a number of very highly finished and excellent portraits at the Town Hall during the past month. There is a capital likeness in the collection of Rustomjee Cowasjee, and another equally good of Mr. Cameron, of the Law Commission. This last requires to be viewed from a considerable distance, or the mingled expression of good nature and acuteness in the eyes, is not immediately recognized. There is also a literally correct, but by no means a pleasing, portrait of Professor Goodeve, whom the artist seems determined not to flatter, and in this resolution has fallen into the opposite error. A similar remark may be applied to the portrait of Mr. James Colbrook Sutherland, of whom the artist presents a likeness that is not easy to be mistaken, while at the same time it is the reverse of complimentary. There are several other familiar faces in this exhibition. Some of them are admirable as works of art, besides being very faithful to the originals. A portrait of a handsome native, dressed in a very richly embroidered garment, is remarkable for the ingenuity displayed in the representation of gold and silver ornaments. And equally striking is the whole of the silk drapery, which is as glossy and as stiff as the costly material which it imitates. There is no mechanical trickery in this. The face also is excellently painted, and this is of more importance than even a miracle in the execution of the more accessories.

CORONER'S INQUEST—MURDER.—On the 14th instant, an inquest was held on the body of an unknown native, found dead in the premises of Rajah Badinsuth Roy, and the Raja's two sons were brought up on strong suspicion of having caused the death of the deceased. Several Police Officers deposed, that they had gone to the residence of the Rajah on hearing a noise issued from it, and had seen the deceased, apparently quite well, but as if under the influence of liquor, in the custody of the Rajah's sentry, who said that he had captured the man on his issuing from the female apartments of the house. Shortly after the Rajah's two sons, Kallykissen and Rajkissen, came up to the deceased, seized him by the hair of his head, beat him with a stick about an inch in diameter, and dragging him into an inner apartment, expelled all strangers, including the Police peons, to whom the young Rajahs said, that they would be sent for after the deceased had been interrogated by them. Shortly after, a noise was heard to issue from the part of the residence in which the man had been dragged; and the next morning the Police authorities were called in to view the body of the deceased, whose ribs, shoulder blades and skull were fractured, and who, Rajkissen and Kallykissen Roy, and their servants then said, had died in consequence of having fallen from the top of a house, while endeavouring to effect his escape, on being detected in his attempt to steal property from the house. The Rajah's sons were aided by Mr. Clarke, who examined the deponents in the case. After an absence of a quarter of an hour, the jury returned a verdict of "Willful murder against some person or persons unknown, committed on the body of a native unknown, in the premises of Rajah Buddinath Roy."

The Rajah's sons were consequently released from custody; but the Police have taken up the matter, and bound them in two sureties of five thousand rupees each, to appear from time to time at the Police, until the case has been finally disposed of.

Old mail's stakes of 30 gold mohurs for all maidens, Arabs, was won by Mr. Bacon's Balsac.

The Sweepstakes of 30 gold mohurs each, R. C. Handicaps, was won by Mr. Smalleu's Selook.

TWO INCONSIDERABLE RIOTERS CAPTURED.—It appears, that two of the several rioters who have lately earned for themselves an enviable notoriety, by their attempts to rival the Marquess of Waterford in his nocturnal exploits, (and one of which two was so singularly fortunate as to be invited to appear before the worshipful magistracy of Calcutta, to answer to no less a charge than lampstealing) have lately been deterred, though severely, punished at flowrah. A few nights ago these worthies entered the private dwelling house of some maiden ladies, living in the quiet retirement befitting their advanced age, and availing themselves of their unprotected condition, indulged in extremely violent and obscene language, which so terrified the inmates, as to make them shriek for assistance, when a gentleman came to their assistance, who soon called upon the rioters for an explanation of their disorderly behavior; but finding them little inclined to enter into an exposition of their views, proceeded at once to resort to the infliction of summary chastisement; but was unfortunately overpowered by the allied forces. He, however, retained his grasp of one of the party, until the opportune arrival of a friend relieved him of one of his assailants who trusted to the nimbleness of his feet to escape punishment. The new auxiliary, however, left the party first in the field to balance accounts with his now terrified opponent, who was soon laid hors de combat, and proceeded in quest of the flying foe, whom he met in a grove named Love Atley, creeping stealthily along, equipped with a formidable looking stick, when despite of the scamp's indignant attempts at defence, his pursuer captured him, and took him triumphantly to the site of riot, somewhat expediting his progress by an occasional peal of application to that part of his body, commonly called the seat of honor.

The victors placed the rioters in durance, vile until the following morning, when their relations entered into securities for their appearance whenever called on to take their trial for trespass in the Supreme Court, where, it is believed, the case will ultimately find its way. The vanquished, when released, were in a deplorable plight, their faces bedaubed with blood and their countenances quite disfigured from bruises and the loss of one or two front teeth.

THE CASE OF THE RANEE HUSSEIN COMAREE AND KUMOLE COMAREE.—The Mookias of Moha Ranee Komole Comaree, presented a petition to Mr. T. W. Hunt, Session Judge of Burdwan, stating that on the 28th of November last, the Magistrate had issued a perwannah directing to their client, intimating to her that the Sudder Nazimut had reversed certain orders passed by the Session Judge of Burdwan, dated the 16th and 23d days of March last, and referring the proceedings back to the Magistrate to pass such orders as should be consistent with law and justice, and that the Magistrate had passed an order to the effect that the Ranee Hussein Comaree might go and reside wherever she pleased, and that the guard placed over her by the order of the 23d of March, should be removed; but that in case the Ranee should immediately remove herself, and the superior authority be of opinion that she ought not to be allowed to do so, there would be great difficulty in getting the Rancee back, and the Magistrate therefore ordered the Rancee not to remove from her present residency for the space of ten days, in order that the other party might appeal to the Judge. The Petitioner further stated, that the Petitioner had not been able to obtain a copy of the Magistrate's roobacarry, in consequence of his being at Cutwah; but that the original perwannah was annexed, and the petition prayed, that the Rancee Bussunt Comaree might be ordered to be sent back to the Rajbarry and be placed in the same situation as she was before she was removed.

The Judge passed an order that the Magistrate should suspend so much of his order of the 26th of November last, as gave Rancee Bussunt Comaree liberty to go and reside wherever she pleased, until the further orders of the Court, and that the Magistrate should send all the papers of the case to the Judge's Court.

SUPPRESSION OF SLAVERY.—Four Maritime Arab Chiefs have entered into an engagement with the British Government for the suppression of the slave trade, by which they agree to concede to British ships the right of search, and of confiscating such vessels belonging to themselves or their subjects, as shall within certain limits, be found carrying slaves. By this agreement, it is further provided, that the selling individuals of the Soomalin tribe, who are "hoor," or free, under the Mahomedan law, shall be considered and punished as piracy.

At a meeting held by the indigo planters on the 19th instant, the following resolutions were passed.

1st. That in the opinion of this meeting the formation of an association of planters, for the purpose of watching over and protecting their interests as a body, is highly desirable. That this meeting do resolve itself into an association to be styled the Indigo Planter's Association.

2nd. That the following gentlemen form a committee to draw up a code of rules and regulations for the Association, and to recommend a fit person as Secretary:—Mr. H. Watson of Calcutta, Mr. Thomas Brae of Jessore, Mr. John Russell of Pubna, Mr. Henry Hill of Firohott, Mr. Charles Mackinnon of Firohott, Mr. Clarke of Bhugwongolloh, Mr. R. H. Matthews of Shahabad, Mr. James Hill of Kishnagar, Mr. A. A. Dunlop of Furreedpore, Mr. John Oman of Bhongulpore, Mr. George Barman of Calparaah, Mr. R. J. R. Campbell of Bhongulpore, Mr. Charles Oman of Jessore, Muddendary, Mr. J. P. Wise of Dacca, Mr. Vint, Chairman of the Committee.

3rd. That the following gentlemen be added to the Committee.

Mr. Bagshaw, Mr. Collin Campbell, Mr. Mackilligan, Mr. Laipent, Mr. Cragg, Mr. Humfray, Mr. C. Richards, and Mr. W. Prinsep.

4th. That Mr. H. H. Fell, of Shahabad, Indigo Planter, be appointed Honorary Secretary to the Provisional Committee.

PROTEST OF THE PASSENGERS OF THE SULTANA.—The undermentioned gentlemen have uttered the following protest against the conduct of the Captain and Pilot of the Sultana.

Ship Sultana 11th December 1839. — We the undersigned passengers on board the ship Sultana, from China and Singapore, hereby enter our solemn protest against the following proceedings on the part of her commander, John Page, and her pilot, S. Reason.

HADJI ESEN, Supercargo of the Sultana, G. A. ABIE-TICK, R. H. HARVEY, J. P. CRYDEN, SIMON ELLIAS, JAMES ANDREW, Junior, W. CRAGO, Junior, G. A. McCOWAN, GEORGE HILL, G. F. DAVIDSON,

Yesterday at 10 a. m. the pilot came on board, and the ship worked up channel till 1 p. m., when she came to an anchor with the Southern light vessel half down to the Southward. At 6½ p. m. weighed again and worked up channel with the flood, and a fine working breeze, till midnight, when Captain Page left the ship in her cutter with the gunner and eleven of the best lascars. The ship was immediately kept away before the wind and run to the Southward till 4 a. m. this morning. At day-light this morning, we were surprised to find the vessel so far down channel again, as to have the tower or Southern light vessel, bearing West by South.

Against these proceedings we enter our protest, as they hinder our proceeding to Calcutta, where some of us have business of very considerable consequence to transact, depending in a great degree upon expedition. We also protest against this uncalled for and very unnecessary delay, as some of us have goods on board the Sultana, which may suffer from loss of market. One or two of us are also in indifferent health, and in consequence very anxious to get up to town.

Further, two fishing boats came along side the vessel last night at 12, which some of our party would have been glad to hire for the purpose of going to Calcutta, but they were ordered from the vessel, thus depriving us of a fair chance of getting on with our business. We calculate the distance run back last night at eighteen or twenty miles, which, with these northerly winds, is a very considerable delay.

A SALLON GIRL!—The annul which is so apt to beset even the most agreeably circumstanced passengers in the tedium of a long voyage, was, in the case of those of the Robert Small, while on her way hither, most pleasantly and completely dispelled for a time, by the discovery that that good ship numbered among her crew, one of those rare, romantic and imprudent characters, a female sailor. The young lady had managed to keep up her disguise until the vessel reached "the Line," when certain ceremonies attendant on the passage of that important though imaginary boundary, tended to elicit a disclosure of her sex. Mary Ann Arnold, the sailor girl, states, that she is the daughter of the late Lieut. Arnold, of the Bengal Navy, who served on board of the Prince Regent and Ganges; his, being a man of dissipated character, was reduced, and lost his commission.—Mary Ann Arnold was born at Greenwich and brought up by her mother at Sheerness. Her father, by the intercession of some friends, got admitted into Greenwich Hospital, where he died in 1835. Mrs. Arnold supported herself and children by manual labour, and lost her life from over-exertion in the harvest field, which brought on bilious fever. Miss Arnold being thus bereft of both her parents, and entirely without means of support for herself and infant sister, continued at Sheerness for a time, with some neighbours of her mother's, and worked in the fields and rope yards, or in running errands; she used to go on board vessels occasionally, and became acquainted with the rate of wages which boys earned at sea, and having changed her clothes, and cut off her hair, she offered her services to the Captain of the brig Williams, of Sutherland, then lying at anchor off Sheerness. He accepted them, and she served in this vessel in the coal trade as a boy, from July 1836 to October 1838, doing all the duties of a boy. She was then in her 11th year. She next entered on board the brig Annie, of South Shields, and bound to Quebec. She returned to London in the same vessel, having done her duty as the other boys, and then went to Shields in the same vessel for a cargo of coals, and returned to London, where the vessel took in ballast and sailed for Danzig. She remained two months at Danzig the vessel being frozen in, and then sailed for Hull, and when off Eltham, was exposed to a gale of wind for 8 days, and was in great danger of going ashore. She went aloft the same as any of the crew, and occasionally took the helm. They arrived safe at Hull, discharged the cargo, and proceeded in ballast for Shields, where they took in coals for London. When off Cromer, during hazy weather and a stiff breeze, the vessel grounded on the Sherringham shoal, and bumped there for 20 minutes starting her stern post and taking in much water. The master would not accept assistance, so all the crew except himself left the vessel in a smack. When they left she had 9 feet of water in her hold, and the sea was running clear over her. The boats being adrift and stove in, she afterwards ran ashore on the flats south of the bar, and was totally wrecked. The crew, with Mary Ann Arnold, landed at Blakeney, and from thence she returned to Shields, the agent of the Annie having paid for her passage. She then worked her passage to London in the Irish Chieftain, where she arrived on the 25th of July 1839, and having determined to take a long voyage, she entered on board the Robert Small, Capt. J. P. Scott, on the 30th of the same month, which ship was bound to Calcutta. During her servitude in this ship, she went aloft in all weather, furling the royals, and rigging out studding sail booms, and has often furlled the mizen royal by herself.

At sea, on the 19th of September, the suspicion of her being a female was reported to Captain Scott, whereupon a personal examination was immediately made by Mr. Thornton, the Surgeon, who confirmed it. The Capt then ordered her to be dressed in woman's clothes, and to be put in a cabin along with the English female servants. The lady passengers of the ship acted very kindly towards her, furnishing her with abundance of clothes, and all other necessities. She underwent the usual ceremonies with the rest of the crew on crossing the line. She is now 15 years of age.

Mr. Bagshaw read the Report of the Fifth Annual Meeting of the Court of Proprietors, held in London, on the 8th May, 1839, which was voted highly encouraging and satisfactory, as shewing a gradually progressive increase in its business.

Mr. Charles R. Prinscp and Mr. John Berber, who went out of the direction by rotation, were unanimously re-elected.

Upon the motion of Mr G. J. Gordon, seconded by Mr. Jenkins, it was resolved unanimously:—That the meeting could not but express its regret, that the Court of Directors have thought it expedient to prohibit gentlemen in their civil and military Services, largely as they are interested in this Society, from taking part in the management of its affairs in this country, and as the gentlemen belonging to those services, who have hitherto given their valuable assistance to the Society, have found it necessary, in consequence, to resign their seats in the Direction, the Meeting took the opportunity of tendering to Messrs. Patile, F. Macnaghten, Col. Dunlop, Major Steel, Capt. F. W. Birch, and Dr. Grant, its best thanks, for the zealous and efficient manner in which they have contributed to the Society's affairs.

Thanks were voted to Dr. Grant for his able conduct in the chair.

SEIZURE OF PROPERTY.—It is said that the Bench of Magistrates have submitted to Government a measure, the object of which is to facilitate the seizure, in the houses of Natives, of property, which has been removed from the reach of process of distress.

The Magistrates argue, that there ought to be no obstacle to the due realization of the taxes, founded on the sanctity attached by the higher class of Natives to the female apartments of their families, and propose that the provisions of the Supreme Court process [Sec. LXXXV. of Rules and Orders, Plea Side] should, by analogy, be enforced by the Police; and in cases where the Collector has reason to believe that property is removed beyond the reach of ordinary distress in the zemannah, there ought to be no difficulty in taking the European constable's affidavit of the fact, and authorizing the entry of such apartments by distraining officers.

In lieu of the summons to pay, usually issued by the Collector in the first instance, and, if in vain, by the Magistrate ultimately, they recommend that it would be sufficient for the collecting officers to make one demand only from the rate payer, and if not effectual, to swear to the said demand before a Magistrate, and thus obtain immediate warrant of distress. By this course, the delay of double summons would be avoided. The party would know that immediate compulsion awaited him under heavy costs, and the sum would be at once discharged. The following form of notice was recommended.

"Take notice, that I, this day, demanded of you, the owner or occupier of House, No. —, the sum of Rs. —, being the assessment due for the above premises for —."

Personal demand, the Magistrates suggested, would not be necessary if the party was not found at his house, but a printed form could be filled up by the sircar, and left with a servant or known resident on the premises, if such are found. If the house be empty, the notice could be fixed to the door or gate. A duplicate of the printed form could be sworn to before the Magistrate.

Such are the outlines of the proposed measure, and Government have intimated in reply to it, that the legislative Council will take the Magistrates' recommendation into consideration.

NOTES.

NAGPORE.—Two English schools have been established in the Cole country by Government, one at Chota Nagpore and the other at Singbhoon, in the former of which there are already about twenty-five Cole boys.

PATNA.—The Lord Bishop of Calcutta reached Patna in safety, and, with his chaplain, and amid the shouts of the populace and showers of rain, was whisked in an Ek ka (a one horse native carriage) to the residence of Mr. Trotter, the opium agent at Bankipore, where his Lordship alighted with no further damage than a few fundamental bruises.

ASAM.—Letters from Asam mention, that every thing is quiet in that quarter at present. The troops had been after the Kamptes, but they had fled, and it is supposed, left the country for good. The Chiefs of Tenja Peri Singhphos have succumbed to our authorities, and paid in some money, &c., as a mark of their allegiance. Brigadier Little passed Nagong late in November, on his way to Suchyah. The cholera was still doing great mischief in the district. Nagong and Gamlahm city had suffered much, though the new station in the farmers had escaped. In some villages one hundred and forty persons are said to have died from its effects; and in addition to the high inundations and the murrains amongst the cattle, a falling off in the Broomer may be anticipated.

AGRA.—The Right Honorable the Governor-General arrived at Agra on the morning of the 17th of December, under the usual honors. His Lordship's levee afterwards, was attended by nearly all the residents. On the 20th of December, the Governor-General received a visit of ceremony from His Highness the Ranah of Dholpoor, conducted with all the pride, pomp, circumstances, dust and annoyance of such matters in India. After the reception, at which he presented a Nuzzar of 51 Gold Mohurs, and received a return, his chess Highness resumed his seat upon his elephant, and the Durbar closed.

It is under His Lordship's consideration, whether the Allahabad Courts shall be removed to Agra or not. The influence of an influential member of one of them is, it is said, opposed to the removal.

At a meeting of the shareholders of the Agra Bank, held agreeably to public notice, Mr. W. Campbell in the Chair, the Resolution of the Delhi Requisitionists as follow, were read:—

No. 1.—Carried unanimously.

No. 2.—Carried unanimously.

No. 3.—Amendment proposed by Mr. Mansel and seconded by Sir W. Richards.

That with the view to discuss the merits of Mr. Stowell's address, and generally to sift the present system of the Bank as a safe and productive means of investment, the Delhi Requisitionists be invited to form themselves into a Committee to communicate with the Directors; and that by as early a day as possible a joint report be presented by them to the Shareholders in respect to any modifications of the constitution or actual working of the Bank that may be deemed desirable.

No. 4.—This measure having been adopted—Resolved that it is unnecessary to put it to the vote.

No. 5.—Carried unanimously, that the Directors do report on the relative advantages of the two plans.

No. 6.—Carried unanimously.

No. 7.—Carried unanimously.

No. 8.—Carried unanimously.

NATIVE STATES.

JODHPUR.—Colonel Sutherland has met with unexpected obstacles in his negotiations with Maun Sing, so much so, that people begin to think another campaign in Marwar, will be necessary to settle matters.

NEPAUL.—A correspondent of the Harkara who resides on the Nepaul frontier, intimates, that a large quantity of sulphur and musket-balls have been lately carried, in a secret manner, from our provinces into the Nepaul territories; and from the circumstance of the Nepalese Government having prohibited the exportation of elephants from their country, and being engaged in collecting them, he concludes, that the Nepalese are secretly preparing for war with us.

SCINDS.—A letter from Kurrachee, dated the 19th instant, confirms the accounts formerly given of the extreme unfitness of Tutta for a Military station. The writer describes it as being more like a "Plague city" than any thing else. There are only two officers remaining in the cantonment, the rest having been compelled, by sickness, to proceed to Kurrachee, where they remain, till very ill. There are not sufficient men to relieve the guards, only three of the volunteers are out of hospital, and 450 of the 26th Regiment are sick.

KURASH.—Dispatches have been received from General Willshire, announcing the fall of Khelat, after a desperate defence. The assault was made by H. M. 2d and 17th Foot, and the 31st Regiment of Bengal Native Infantry. The British loss in killed and wounded was about 150 men. Lieutenant Gravatt has been killed and Captain Lyster and Ensign Dickinson wounded, all of the Queen's 2nd Foot. The Chief of Khelat, with several of his Sardars, it is stated, were killed in the assault—and the rest were permitted, with the exception of a few, to retire to their homes. Our force consisted of about 1,050 rank and file.

It is reported, that prize property to the amount of ten lacs of rupees, has been found in Khelat. Sir John Keane's share of this prize amounts to sixty thousand rupees.

AFGHAN.—Lieutenant Conolly has returned safe to Peshawur from Seistan. He was well received by all the chiefs, and it is believed has succeeded in the objects of his mission.

STATE PRISONERS.—The two state prisoners, Prince Hyder Khan and Hajire Khan Khakur, now accompanying the Second column of the Army of the Indus, will be sent to the station of Loodianah, and kept in "open arrest" there.

HERAT.—A letter from Candahar, of the 28th of October, states, that an express had arrived there from Herat bringing intelligence that Yar Mahomed, the prime minister, had threatened to kill Todd, and the whole of the British there, if they did not take themselves off forthwith. As the Yar is said to be king of acts, and does just as he pleases with the old set Kamran, this threat of his may be more than mere bravado; especially as he has finished it off with declaring that he does not care for our three lacs a year, for that the Russians will give him twelve.

CABOOL.—A letter from Cabool of the 23d November, says:—"The State prisoners at Gluznee, I have just heard, have escaped, but how it does not appear. Two were shot in the attempt to get away, and the rest, sixteen in number, got off. All was quiet in Cabool city—not a guard necessary for Ferigues protection."

The latest accounts from Cabul state positively, that both Russian and Persian Armies are advancing, the former upon Khiva, and the latter upon Herat. From intercepted letters it has been discovered, that the Persians have been incited to make this attack by pressing invitations from Kamran's Vizier.

PESHAWAR.—Mr. Macnaghten was at Peshawar on the 28th of November, and had satisfactorily arranged the misunderstandings previously existing with the Khyber Chiefs. Sir J. Keane's column left Peshawar on the 22d ultimo, and reached Attock on the 26th. The second column arrived on the 27th ultimo. It is said that an offer of thirty thousand rupees per annum has been made to each of the Khyber Chiefs to induce them to keep the passage open. Dost Mahomed only gave them 12,000 Rs. and they were glad enough to get it.

The following is an extract of a letter dated Peshawar, 17th December, 1839:—

"On the 2d instant, Major-General Sir W. Cotton, K. C. B. and K. C. H., re-assumed the command of the troops in Afghanistan, and has this morning taken his departure for Camp under a salute from the Sikh guns.

Last evening between 6 and 7 p. m., Mrs. Macnaghten, accompanied by Lieut John Conolly and Dr. Perwick, Surgeon to the mission, arrived safely at the Governor's mansion, where the Envoy has been staying since his arrival here.

Lieut. Pontinger, the hero of Herat, left us yesterday for Hindoostan, and expects to reach Ferozepore in ten days.

The troops now here will break ground, and move towards Jullahabad on the 12th instant, taking with them seven hundred rupees, Mr. and Mrs. Macnaghten, and the officers of the Mission.

During the last few days the weather has been very warm and flies extremely troublesome. A few days ago, two sepoy of the detachment, 27th N. I., now stationed at Ali Musjid, were severely wounded by some Khybersees, whilst collecting fuel for the purpose of cooking their rations.

Captain Burn, of the 1st N. I., is busily employed in raising a corps of Khybersees. May good luck attend him. Captain Ferris accompanies the Envoy to Jullahabad.

BOORHAN.—Accounts from Boorhan mention the arrival of Sir John Keane's column there on the 29th ultimo. A Mr. Joseph was in camp, selling supplies, on the part of Mr. Arratoon. Both columns of the Indus Army expected to reach Ferozepore on the 5th of January next, where the famous sword of Prince Hyder Khan, captured at Ghizni, will be sold by public auction, to the highest bidder, on the 7th of the same month. At Cabul this sword was valued, by some as high as ten thousand, and by others at six thousand rupees. It is to be sold for the benefit of the captives.

The bridge of boats over the Indus, at Attock, where the current is the centre of the river runs at least seven miles an hour, is a splendid one, and does great credit to Kurrukh Sing's Engineers. The famed Fort of Attock (in which there is but one gun mounted!) is represented to be a place of no strength whatever!

The European Regiment were encamped five miles from Peshawar. They got through the pass without the slightest molestation, and were to escort treasure back to Jellalabad on the 11th December.

The 2nd Cavalry, who marched to Dakhur, the western extremity of the Khyber Pass on the 4th instant, were expected at Jellalabad on the 12th instant. On their return an expedition against Kooner, a place about fifty miles north of Jellalabad, is in contemplation. The object is to restore the legitimate chief, Syud Booddean, on the throne, from which he was driven by Dost Mahomed, for carrying on a secret correspondence with Shah Shoojah at Shikarpore. The expedition will consist of the 2nd Cavalry, Captain Abbott's half battery, and a detachment of Sappers under Lieutenant Pigou and Capt. Craigie's corps of Infantry.
